By the ſtat. 19 Hen. 7. c. 7. it is enacted, That no ordinance ſhall be made in diminution, or to the diſinheritance of the prerogative of the king, nor againſt the common profit of the people, unleſs they are examined and approved by the Chancellor, Treaſurer of England, Chief Juſtices of either Bench, or three of them, or both Juſtices of Aſſiſe in their circuit, where the ordinance is, &c. nor ſhall reſtrain any to ſue to the king againſt ſuch ordinance. See 1 Roll. Abr. 363. 5 Co. 63. Comb. 222.

The inhabitants of a town, without any cuſtom, may make by-laws for the repair of their church, highways, or ſuch other things which is for the publick good; and in ſuch caſe, the greater part, without any cuſtom, ſhall bind all. 5 Co. 63. Mo. 579. Brownl. 288. Hob. 212. 1 Mod. 194.

If there be a corporation made, and incorporated by the name of mayor and commonalty, and by the charter the mayor is appointed to be choſen by the commonalty, and in the ſaid charter there is a power given to them to make by-laws for the better order and government of the ſaid corporation, they may make a by-law that a ſelect number of the commonalty ſhall be choſen, by whom the mayor ſhall be choſen, for avoidance of popular confuſion. 4 Co. 78. Jenk. Rep. 273, S. C.

If a by-law is made by the company of vintners in London, that every freeman of the ſaid company, who ſhall be choſen and admitted to be a liveryman, ſhall pay 31 l. 13 s. 4 d. &c. this is a good by-law; for this being a degree of pre-eminence to which men of ſubſtance only are raiſed; and there being a neceſſity for money to ſupport the honour and reputation of the company, were the ſum more or leſs, it could not make the by-law void, while it binds only the members of the corporation; for when a man doth agree to be of a company, he doth thereby ſubmit himſelf to the laws thereof. Raym. 446. Comb. 221.

A by-law made in London, that no freeman choſen ſheriff, &c. ſhall be excuſed, unleſs he voluntarily ſwears he is not worth 10,000 l. and bring ſix other citizens to vouch in like manner, on their oaths, that they believe it to be true; if he openly refuſe to take the office, then to forfeit the ſum of 500 l. viz. 400 l. to the city, and 100*l.* to the next man that ſhall hold the office; held a good by-law. 1 Salk. 142. Carth. 480. S. C.

A new corporation, not having any preſcription to appropriate to themſelves, and exclude others, cannot make a by-law to exclude all perſons from uſing an art or trade in their town to which they were not apprentices in the ſame town, though they have ſerved as apprentices to it in another place. 1 Rol. Abr. 364. Hob. 211, 212.

Therefore if a corporation make a by-law, that none ſhall uſe the art of weaving within the corporation, who has not ſerved ſeven years as an apprentice there, or who has not exerciſed that trade there for five years before the making of the by-law, nor unleſs he be allowed and approved of by the wardens of the company, this is a void by-law; for any perſon may lawfully follow what trade he pleaſes, and where he pleaſes, unleſs prohibited by the general law of the land. Hob. 211. Hut. 6. S. C. Moor 869. S. C.

So where a corporation of taylors in Ipſwich made a by-law, that none ſhould exerciſe the trade of a taylor in Ipſwich, qui non fuerit allocatus per legale warrantum authoritate datum by the ſaid corporation, or three of the maſters and wardens; nor ſhould ſet up any ſhop for this art, nor exerciſe it until they preſented themſelves to the maſter, &c. or three of them, or proved that they had ſerved in this trade as apprentices for ſeven years. 11 Co. 53, 54.

So where the town of Bedford made a by-law, that none except freemen ſhould exerciſe any art or myſtery within the corporation; which not being founded on any cuſtom they had of excluding foreigners, was held void. 1 Lutw. 562.

If the merchant taylors of London, by virtue of their charter, make a by-law that no merchant ſhall put his cloth to be dreſſed, but to a clothworker of their company, this is a void by-law; for it is againſt reaſon and the general liberty of the ſubject to be reſtrained from putting his work to whom he pleaſes. 1 Rol. Abr. 364.

So a by-law in London, that none ſhall bring any ſand, nor ſell nor uſe any within the city or ſuburbs, but only that which is taken out of the river Thames, &c. is void; becauſe it is againſt reaſon that a freeman ſhould be reſtrained from merchandizing and ſelling; and this may concern the inheritance of ſome who may have ſands in their land. Godb. 106, 107.

If the city of London make a by-law, that no perſon ſhall follow the profeſſion of a dancing-maſter within the city, who is not a freeman of the company of muſicians, this is a void by-law; for if he be free of any other company, it is ſufficient; and the obliging a man to be free of a particular company, when he has no remedy to compel the company to admit him, is creating a kind of monopoly in ſuch company, and putting a certain number of men under the final juriſdiction and power of others. 5 Mod. 104.

But if an ordinance be made in London by the common-council (who have power by cuſtom, which is among other cuſtoms confirmed by act of parliament, by general words) that if a freeman, citizen, or ſtranger within the city ſhall put any broad cloth to ſale within the city of London, before it be brought to Blackwell Hall to be viewed and ſearched, ſo that it may appear to be ſaleable, and the hallage be paid for it, ſcilicet one penny for every cloth, that he ſhall forfeit for every cloth 6 s. 8 d. this is a good ordinance, as well to bind ſtrangers as freemen, becauſe it is made to prevent fraud and falſity in cloth, and for the better execution of the ſtatutes without deceit; and the one penny for hallage is but a reaſonable recompence of charge for the benefit which the ſubject hath by it. 5 Co. 62. 1 Rol. Abr. 365. S. C.

If in London there is an act of common-council made, that the bricklayers ſhall not plaiſter with lime and hair, but with lime and ſand only, and that plaiſtering with lime and hair ſhall belong to the plaiſterers, under the penalty of, &c. (admitting this before to have been part of the trade of a bricklayer) the by-law is void; for though they have regimen perſonarum in their manufactures, yet this power extends only to their demeanor in their trade, and not to annex that to one trade which before belonged to another. Palm. 395.

But if a by-law is made by the corporation of throwſters in London, that none ſhall have above ſuch a number of ſpindles in one week, this is a good by-law, for it is not in reſtraint of trade, but to make a more equal diſtribution of it. 1 Lev. 229.

If the company of horners of London, being incorporated by letters patent, and impowered to make by-laws for the better government of their corporation, make a by-law, that two men by them appointed ſhall buy rough horns for the ſaid company, and bring them to the hall, there to be diſtributed every month by the maſter, &c. for the uſe of the company; and that no member of the company ſhall buy rough horns within 24 miles of London, but only of thoſe two men appointed, under the penalty, &c. this is no good by-law; for they being a company incorporated in the city of London, have no juriſdiction elſewhere, and may as well extend their power over England, as for 24 Miles. 3 Mod. 159.

A by-law, that all ſtrangers coming into the port of London ſhould employ city porters to carry their goods, &c. is naught; but they may make a by-law, that none but freemen ſhall be porters; but to confine ſtrangers to none but ſuch as are city porters is unreaſonable; for if the city will appoint no porters, they have no remedy againſt the city; alſo ſtrangers cannot know who are city porters, nor compel them to ſerve them. 1 Salk. 143. See 1 Salk. 192, 193.

By-laws are uſually made with certain penalties, which regularly are to be recovered by action of debt, or may be levied by diſtreſs. 5 Co. 64.

But a by-law with a penalty of impriſonment, or forfeiture of goods and chattels, is void: for by the general law of the kingdom, no man is to be impriſoned or diſpoſſeſſed of his goods and chattels, niſi per legale judicium parium ſuorum vel per legem terræ; and were by-laws with ſuch penalties allowed, it would be enabling corporations to ſet up private particular laws in contradiction to the laws of the land; which would be againſt the very nature and eſſence of a by-law, which, though it may be præter the general law of the realm, it cannot be contra. 5 Co. 64. 8 Co. 127. 2 Inſt. 54. Moor 411. S. P.

If the company of taylors in the city of Exeter, being incorporated by letters patent of Ed. 4. and having thereby power given them to make by-laws, make a by-law under a certain penalty, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of the offender's goods, this is no good by-law; for the forfeiture cannot be levied by ſale of the offender's goods. 1 Vent. 182.

If in London a by-law is made, that if any freeman takes the ſon of an alien to be his apprentice, the bond and covenants ſhall be void, this is no good by-law; for though the common-council might have inflicted a fine or other puniſhment upon ſuch maſter, yet they cannot make the bond and covenants void. Moor 411.

Calendar. Stat. 24 Geo. 2. cap. 23. ſect. 1. Throughout all his majeſty's dominions in Europe, Aſia, Africa, and America, ſubject to the crown of Great Britain, the ſupputation, according to which the year of our Lord beginneth on the 25th of March, ſhall not be made uſe of after the laſt day of December 1751, and the firſt of January next following the ſaid laſt day of December ſhall be deemed the firſt day of the year of our Lord 1752, and ſo on, the firſt day of January in every year ſhall be deemed the firſt day of the year. And after the ſaid firſt of January 1752, the days of each month ſhall be reckoned in the ſame order; and the feaſt of Eaſter, and other moveable feaſts thereon depending, be aſcertained according to the ſame method as they now are, until the ſecond of September in the ſaid year 1752 incluſive; and the natural day next immediately following the ſaid ſecond of September ſhall be called the 14th day of September, omitting for that time only the eleven intermediate nominal days of the common calendar; and the natural days following the ſaid 14th of September ſhall be numbered forwards in numerical order from the ſaid 14th of September, according to the order now uſed in the preſent calendar; and all acts, deeds, writings, notes, and other inſtruments executed or ſigned, upon or after the ſaid firſt of January 1752, ſhall bear date according to the ſaid new method of ſupputation; and the two fixed terms of St. Hillary and St. Michael in England, and the courts of great ſeſſions in the counties palatine, and in Wales, and the courts of the general quarter-ſeſſions and general ſeſſions of the peace, and all other courts, and all meetings of any bodies politic, which by law or uſage within this kingdom, or the dominions ſubject to the crown of Great-Britain, are to be holden on any fixed day of any month, or on any day depending upon any certain day of any month (except ſuch courts as are uſually holden with fairs or marts) ſhall, after the ſaid ſecond of September, be holden upon the ſame reſpective nominal days, whereon or according to which the ſame are now to be holden; but which ſhall be computed according to the new method.

Sect. 2. The years one thouſand eight hundred, one thouſand nine hundred, two thouſand one hundred, two thouſand two hundred, two thouſand three hundred, or any other hundredth years of our Lord, except only every fourth hundredth year, whereof the year two thouſand ſhall be the firſt, ſhall not be biſſextile or leap-years, but ſhall be common years, conſiſting of 365 days, and no more; and the years of our Lord two thouſand, two thouſand four hundred, two thouſand eight hundred, and every other fourth hundredth year of our Lord, which by the preſent ſupputation are biſſextile or leap-years, ſhall be biſſextile or leap years, conſiſting of 366 days.

Sect. 3. The feaſt of Eaſter, or any of the moveable feaſts thereon depending, ſhall be no longer obſerved in England, or the dominions belonging to the crown of Great Britain, according to the method of ſupputation now uſed, or to the table prefixed to the book of Common Prayer; and the ſaid table, and alſo the column of golden numbers as they are now prefixed to the reſpective days of the month, ſhall be left out in future editions of the book of Common Prayer; and the new calendar, table, and rules hereunto annexed ſhall be prefixed to all ſuch future editions of the ſaid book: and all the fixed feaſt-days, holy-days, and faſt-days now obſerved by the church of England, and alſo the ſeveral ſolemn days of thankſgiving and of faſting and humiliation, which by virtue of any act of parliament now in being are to be obſerved, ſhall be obſerved on the reſpective days marked for the celebration of the ſame in the new calendar; that is to ſay, on the ſame nominal days on which they are now obſerved, but which according to the alteration by this act made will happen eleven days ſooner than they now do. And the feaſt of Eaſter, and all other moveable feaſts thereon depending, ſhall be obſerved according to the new calendar, tables, and rules hereunto annexed, in England, and the dominions aforeſaid, wherein the liturgy of the church of England now is or hereafter ſhall be uſed: and the two moveable terms of Eaſter and Trinity, and all courts, and all meetings of any bodies politick, and all markets, ſuits, and marts, and courts thereunto belonging, which are uſed to be holden at any moveable times depending upon Eaſter, or any other moveable feaſt, ſhall be holden on ſuch days whereon the ſame happen, according to the falling of Eaſter, or ſuch other moveable feaſts, to be computed according to the new calendar.

Sect. 4. The meetings of the court of ſeſſion, and terms fixed for the court of Exchequer in Scotland, the April meeting of the Governor, Bailiffs, and Commonalty of the Company of Conſervators of the great level of the fens, and the holding of all markets, fairs and marts, either fixed to certain nominal days of the month, or depending upon the beginning or any certain day of any month; and all courts belonging to ſuch fairs or marts ſhall not be continued according to the nominal days of the month, computed according to the new calendar, but ſhall be holden upon or according to the ſame natural days according to which they ſhould have been holden in caſe this act had not been made.

Sect. 5. This act ſhall not accelerate the days for opening, incloſing, or ſhutting of any lands for common of paſture and other purpoſes, or the days on which any temporary or diſtinct right in any lands is to commence; but all ſuch lands ſhall be opened, incloſed, or ſhut up, and ſuch temporary and diſtinct right commence upon the ſame natural days on which the ſame ſhould have been ſo reſpectively opened, incloſed, or ſhut up, or would have commenced in caſe this act had not been made.

Sect. 6. This act ſhall not accelerate the time of payment of any rent, annuity or ſum payable by virtue of any cuſtom, deed, or agreement, or of any act of parliament made before the ſaid 14th day of September, or the time of doing any thing directed by any ſuch act, or accelerate the payment of, or increaſe the intereſt of any ſum payable as aforeſaid; or accelerate the time of the delivery of any goods or other things, or the time of the commencement or determination of any leaſe of lands or hereditaments, or of any other agreement, or of the accepting, ſurrendering, or delivering up poſſeſſion of any lands or hereditaments; or the commencement or determination of any annuity or rent; or of any grant for any term of years, or the time of attaining the age of one and twenty years; or any other age requiſite by any law, cuſtom, deed, will, or writing, by any perſon born before the ſaid 14th of September, or the time of the expiration of any apprenticeſhip or other ſervice.

The calendar, tables, and rules mentioned in the act are annexed to it, and are prefixed to all the editions of the common prayer-book 1752.

Stat. 25 Geo. 2. cap. 30. ſect. 2. The reſpective times for opening, uſing, incloſing, and ſhutting up lands uſed for common of paſture or other purpoſes, for the paying of rents or other payments, and for the doing of other things, if ſuch times are depending on any moveable feaſt, ſhall be computed according to the new calendar.

Sect. 3. Nothing in this act ſhall extend to the abridging, enlarging, confirming, or altering the title of any perſon or body politick to any ſuch lands, except as to the new computation of time, when the enjoyment of ſuch right ſhall commence.

If any perſon be proſecuted for wearing any cambricks or French lawns, and diſcover upon oath before any juſtice of peace the perſon who ſold ſuch cambricks or French lawns, ſuch perſon ſo diſcovering ſhall be diſcharged of all penalties for wearing ſuch cambricks or French lawns, and the perſon ſo ſelling ſuch cambricks or French lawns ſhall be liable to the penalties.

Sect. 4. No cambricks or French lawns ſhall be admitted to be imported into Great Britain, until after proof upon oath by the importer, or if a quaker by affirmation, at the time of entering the ſame, before the proper officer of the cuſtoms at the port of importation, either that the ſame are the ſole property of the importer, or of ſome other of his Majeſty's ſubjects, and that no alien hath any property therein; or if any alien hath any intereſt therein, then proof ſhall be given by the importer, to the ſatisfaction of the aforeſaid officers of the cuſtoms, that the ſame were bona fide ſhipped for direct importation into Great Britain on or before the 10th of May 1745.

Sect. 5. It ſhall not be lawful for any perſon to import into Great Britain any foreign cambricks or French lawns, unleſs bills of loading be produced for the ſame, or ſuch other proof given to the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, or to the chief officers of the cuſtoms at the port of importation, as they think ſufficient, that the ſaid cambricks or French lawns were bona fide ſhipped for direct importation, on or before the 1ſt of Auguſt 1745.

Sect. 6. It ſhall be lawful to import into Great Britain, after the 1ſt of Auguſt 1746, any cambricks, French lawns, or other linen of the kind uſually entered under the denomination of cambricks, upon the importer making oath, or if a quaker affirmation, that they are intended for exportation only, and that they are bona fide the property of the importer, or of ſome other of his Majeſty's ſubjects, and that no alien hath any intereſt therein; and alſo giving bond to the ſatisfaction of the commiſſioners, or the chief officer thereof at the port of importation, in double the value of the goods imported, to be aſcertained by the oath or affirmation of the importer, for payment of 5 l. for every piece of ſuch cambricks and French lawns which ſhall not be exported within three years after the entry of the ſame.

Sect. 7. In caſe any pieces of cambrick or lawn ſo imported ſhall, by fire or other unavoidable accident, be loſt or deſtroyed, upon proof of ſuch loſs to the ſatisfaction of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, or of the chief officer thereof at the port of importation; they ſhall remit the ſaid penalty of 5 l. payable for each piece not ſo exported as aforeſaid.

Stat. 21. Geo. 2. cap. 26. ſect. 2. If any wearer of cambrick or French lawn, who purchaſed the ſame after the 24th of June 1748, be proſecuted, and diſcover the ſeller, and that the ſame was ſold after the 24th of June 1748, ſo as ſuch ſeller be convicted, and become liable to the penalties of 18 Geo. 2. cap. 36. then and not otherwiſe, ſuch wearer ſhall be diſcharged from any penalty inflicted by the ſaid act.

Sect. 3. Whenever any perſon informed againſt for wearing ſuch cambrick or French lawn is excuſed from the penalty by diſcovering the ſeller, the penalty on ſuch ſeller ſhall go to the perſon who informed againſt the wearer.

Sect. 4. Where the offender at the time of the offence, or the time of conviction, be a feme-covert living with her huſband, the penalties ſhall be levied on the goods of her huſband.

Sect. 5. Any milliner, ſempſtreſs, or other perſon, who for hire, after the 24th of June 1748, makes up any cambrick or French lawn for any wearing apparel, ſhall be liable to the like penalties as the ſellers of cambrick or French lawn are liable to, by 18 Geo. 2. cap. 26. to be levied and applied as is directed by this or the ſaid act.

Sect. 6. Where by this act an oath is required, the ſolemn affirmation of a quaker ſhall be taken in lieu thereof; and every inſtance of wilful and corrupt falſe affirmation ſhall ſubject ſuch perſon to the ſame penalties as he would have been liable to if the ſame matter had been declared upon oath.

Stat. 32 Geo. 2. cap. 32. ſect 1. No cambricks, French lawns, or other linens of the kind uſually entered under the denomination of cambricks, ſhall be imported into any place within Great Britain, unleſs the ſame be packed in bales, caſes, or boxes, covered with ſackcloth or canvas, each of which contains one hundred whole pieces, or two hundred half pieces.

Sect. 2. In caſe any cambricks or French lawns be imported in any other manner, or in leſs quantity than before-mentioned, the cambricks or French lawns ſo imported, or found on board any veſſel in this kingdom ſhall be forfeited, and may be ſeized by any officer of the cuſtoms.

Sect. 3. Cambricks and French lawns ſhall be imported for exportation only, and be lodged in ſuch warehouſe belonging to his Majeſty as the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, or three of them appoint; and ſhall not be delivered out of ſuch warehouſe, but under the like ſecurity and reſtrictions as Eaſt-India goods prohibited to be conſumed in Great Britain are now liable to.

Sect. 4. There ſhall be no duties paid or ſecured for any cambricks or French lawns imported and depoſited in ſuch warehouſe, other than one half of the old ſubſidy, which is to remain after the goods are exported again.

Sect. 5. Every perſon having in their cuſtody any cambricks or French lawns imported before the firſt of Auguſt 1759, for the importation whereof bond has been given, ſhall before the firſt of Auguſt next depoſite all ſuch cambricks and French lawns in ſuch warehouſe as aforeſaid; and upon depoſiting ſuch goods the bonds for exportation thereof ſhall be delivered up, and the perſon who gave the ſame ſhall receive from the collector of the cuſtoms at the port where ſuch bond was given, all the duties which ſuch goods would be intitled to draw back upon exportation; and ſuch goods ſhall not be again delivered out of the ſaid warehouſe but for exportation: If in any caſe any perſon ſell or expoſe to ſale, or have in his poſſeſſion for that purpoſe, any cambricks or French lawns (other than in ſuch warehouſe as aforeſaid) the ſame ſhall be forfeited, and ſhall be liable to be ſearched for and ſeized as other prohibited and unaccuſtomed goods are; and every ſuch perſon ſhall forfeit two hundred pounds, over and above all other penalties inflicted by any former act.

Sect. 6. If any doubt arise with respect to the species or quality of the goods seized by virtue of this act, or where the same were manufactured, the proof shall lie on the owner.

Sect. 7. All the goods seized by virtue of this act, or any other cause of forfeiture, shall upon seizure be carried to the next custom-house, and after condemnation shall not be used in this kingdom, but exported; and shall not be sold or delivered out of such warehouse, otherwise than on condition to be exported, nor until the buyer have given security for the exportation thereof, and observing all the regulations prescribed for the exportation of East India goods prohibited to be used in Great Britain.

Sect. 8. All the penalties and forfeitures by this act imposed may be recovered in any court of record at Westminster, or in the court of Exchequer at Edinburgh, by action, &c. in the name of his Majesty's attorney-general, or in the name of his Majesty's advocate in Scotland, or in the name of some officer of the customs; and one moiety shall be to his Majesty, and the other moiety to such officer who shall seize, inform, or prosecute.

Sect. 9. Upon every action, &c. for any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, a capias in the first process shall issue, specifying the sum of the penalty sued for; and the defendant shall be obliged to give bail by natural-born subjects or denisons, to appear in the court out of which such capias issues, at the return of such writ to answer such suit, and shall at the time of such appearance give bail in the said court, to answer and pay all the penalties incurred for such offence in case he be convicted, or to yield his body to prison.

Sect. 10. If any action be commenced for any thing done in pursuance of this act, the defendant may plead the general issue; and if the plaintiff be nonsuited, &c. the defendant shall recover treble costs.

Stat. 4 Geo. 3. c. 37. [Intituled, An act for the better establishing a manufactory of cambricks and lawns, or goods of the kind usually known under these denominations, now carrying on at Winchelsea, in the county of Sussex; and for improving, regulating, and extending the manufacture of cambricks and lawns, or goods of the kind usually known under those denominations, in that part of Great Britain called England.]

Sect. 1. It shall be lawful for any person to make and sell cambricks and lawns in this kingdom.

Sect. 2. The King may incorporate the persons herein named (the present subscribers) by the name of the English linen company, with such power of revocation as to his Majesty shall seem meet: they may choose directors, &c. and purchase lands, &c. not exceeding the value of 500 l. per annum; and they may sue and be sued.

Sect. 3. They may raise a capital, not exceeding 100,000 l.—Subscribers intitled to a share of capital in proportion to their subscriptions, and to be members of the corporation.—Subscriptions to be entered, signed, and attested.

Sect. 4. The King may grant power to enlarge the capital.

Sect. 5. Subscribers to pay a fourth at the time of subscribing, and the remainder at such calls as the directors shall appoint.—Ten days notice of every call to be published in the London Gazette—On neglect of first payment, subscription to be void; and on neglect of subsequent payments, one half of the first to be forfeited, &c.

Sect. 6. Directors may appoint a house in or near London or Westminster to transact their business.—Directors to be a court, and nominate all officers and servants; and to take apprentices.

Sect. 7. A general annual court to be held the first Wednesday in March for electing directors.

Sect. 8. Qualification of a director to be 500 l. capital stock; and the qualification of a person intitled to vote shall be 200 l. capital stock.

Sect. 9. Members voting to swear their qualifications, if required—Officers and servants to be sworn according to the form approved by a general court; and if officers and servants refuse or neglect to take such oath for ten days, their election shall be void.

Sect. 10. General courts to be called on demand of certain subscribers; and on refusal, they may call such court themselves.—General court may displace directors.

Sect. 11. No member shall be liable to any debt of the corporation further than his share in the capital.

Sect. 12. If the corporate debts shall exceed the value of the capital undivided, or if they reduce their capital so that their stock shall not be sufficient to pay their debts; persons receiving any dividend by which the capital shall be reduced, are to be personally liable to make good such deficiency, so far as the dividends they shall have received shall extend.

Sect. 13. Members not liable to bankruptcy, nor the effects of the company, or any member's share liable to foreign attachment.

Sect. 14. Shares to be assignable; but not till seven years from the constitution of the corporation, unless in case of death or bankruptcy.—Members shares, &c. to be personal estates.

Sect. 15. Forging the seal, &c. of the corporation, felony.

Sect. 16. Breaking into a shop, &c. with intent to steal or destroy, &c. any materials or implements, declared to be felony.

Sect. 17. Cambricks and lawns made in England after the 10th day of May 1764, to be sealed at both ends.

Sect. 18. Commissioners of excise, upon request, to provide seals, and appoint officers to mark the goods; who are to be paid for marking, &c. such goods before taken out of the loom.

Sect. 19. Manufacturer to give notice to officer of the finishing of every piece, who is to mark the ends before taken out of the loom.—Penalty on taking any piece out of the loom without giving such notice, and having the ends marked, 5 l. and loss of the goods.

Sect. 20. Officer, on notice of the finishing any pieces of such goods, shall forthwith mark the beginning and ends, and set a number on each piece before taken out of the loom; and shall make a true entry of the numbers, lengths, and the number of threads in the warp of each piece, on forfeiture of 10 l.

Sect. 21. Officers marking cambricks or lawns not made in England, or marking such goods after taken out of the loom, to forfeit 50 l. and be incapacitated.

Sect. 22. Penalty of 100 l. on bribing officers.

Sect. 23. Officers to transmit to the commissioners of excise an annual account of all goods they shall stamp, and a copy of all entries relating thereto.—Officers, &c. to deliver up seals, &c. to commissioners of excise, on demand, on penalty of 200 l.

Sect. 24. Cambricks and lawns made in England after the 10th of May 1764, found unstamped, may be seized. Persons exposing to sale, or having in their custody for sale, such goods unstamped, to forfeit 200 l.

Sect. 25. Goods condemned by virtue of this act not to be worn here, but sold for exportation, and the buyers to give security.

Sect. 26. Persons counterfeiting the seal, &c. or selling goods with a counterfeit seal, &c. guilty of felony.

Sect. 27. Cambricks or lawns made or begun in England before the commencement of this act, to be sealed.

Sect. 28. Forfeitures and penalties to be recovered in any court of Record at Westminster, one half to the King, and the other to the prosecutor.

Sect. 29. A capias to issue for the penalties in the first process.—Defendants to give bail.

Sect. 30. Action to be brought in twelve months. Defendant may plead the general issue, and shall recover treble costs, if judgment against the plaintiff.

Sect. 31. The onus probandi shall lie on the claimer.

Sect. 32. This act not to extend to Scotland or Ireland.

Sect. 33. This act shall be a publick act.

Canon, Is a law or ordinance of the church; and the Greek word canon, from which is derived the canon law, ſignifies a rule, becauſe it leads a man ſtraight, neither drawing him from one ſide or the other, but rather correcting him. The canon law conſiſts partly of certain rules taken out of the Scripture; partly of the writings of the ancient fathers of the church; partly of the ordinances of general and provincial councils; and partly of the decrees of the popes in former ages. And it is contained in two principal parts, the decrees and decretals. The decrees are eccleſiaſtical conſtitutions made by the pope and cardinals, and were firſt collected by Ivo biſhop of Carnot, who lived about the year 1114, but afterwards perfected by Gratian, a Benedictine monk, in the year 1149, and allowed by pope Eugenius to be read in ſchools, and alledged for law. They are the moſt ancient, as having their beginning from the time of Conſtantine the Great, the firſt Chriſtian Emperor of Rome. The decretals are canonical, epiſtles written by the pope, or by the pope and cardinals, at the ſuit of one or more perſons, for the ordering and determining of ſome matter of controverſy, and have the authority of a law; and of theſe are three volumes, the firſt whereof was compiled by Rymandus Barcinius, chaplain to Gregory the ninth, and at his command, about the year 1231. The ſecond volume is the work of Boniface the Eighth, collected in the year 1298, and the third volume, called Clementines, were made by pope Clement the Fifth, and publiſhed by him in the council of Vienna, about the year 1308. And to theſe may be added ſome novel conſtitutions of John the Twenty-ſecond and ſome other biſhops of Rome. As the decrees ſet out the origin of the canon law, and the rights, dignities, and degrees of eccleſiaſtical perſons, with their manner of election, ordination, &c. ſo the decretals contain the law to be uſed in the eccleſiaſtical courts; and the firſt title in every of them is the title of the Bleſſed Trinity, and of the catholic faith, which is followed with conſtitutions and cuſtoms, judgments and determinations, in ſuch matters and cauſes as are liable to eccleſiaſtical cognizance, the lives and converſation of the clergy, of matrimony and divorces, inquiſition of criminal matters, purgation, penance, excommunication, &c. But ſome of the titles of the canon law are now out of uſe, and belong to the common law; and others are introduced, ſuch as the trials of wills, baſtardy, defamation, &c. Trials of tithes were anciently in all caſes had by the eccleſiaſtical law, though at this time this law only takes place in ſome particular caſes. See Duck de Jure Civil. Romanor. Ridley's View of the Civil and Eccleſ. Law. Ayliff's Parergon.

Stat. 25 Hen. 8. cap. 19. ſ. 1. enacts, The clergy ſhall not preſume to claim, or put in ure, any conſtitutions or canons; nor ſhall enact, promulge, or execute any ſuch canons or ordinances in their convocations (which always ſhall be aſſembled by authority of the King's writ) unleſs the clergy may have the King's royal aſſent and licence to make, promulge, and execute ſuch canons and ordinances; upon pain of every one of the clergy, doing contrary, and being thereof convict, to ſuffer impriſonment, and make fine at the King's will.

Sect. 2. No canons ſhall be made or put in execution within this realm by authority of the convocation, which ſhall be repugnant to the King's prerogative, or the cuſtoms, laws, or ſtatutes of this realm.

The King, without parliament, may make orders and conſtitutions to bind the clergy, and may deprive them if they obey not; but they cannot make any conſtitutions without the King. Cro. J. 37. per omnes J. &c. Trin. 2 Jac. in pl. 13.

Reſolved, that the canons of the church made by the convocation and the King, without parliament, ſhall bind in matters eccleſiaſtical as well as an act of parliament; for they ſay, that by the Common law every biſhop in his dioceſe, archbiſhop in his province, and convocation-houſe in the nation, may make canons to bind within their limits. When the convocation makes canons of things appertaining to them, and the King confirms them, they ſhall bind all the realm. Mo. 783. pl. 1083. Trin. 4 Jac. in Canc. with the aſſiſtance of the two chief juſtices and chief baron. Bird v. Smith.

Canons made by the pope and allowed here, yet unleſs they were allowed by parliament were not good. Arg. Rol. 454. per Dr. Martin, Hill. 14 Jac. in the Exchequer-Chamber.

Where there is a ſpecial cuſtom for the chuſing churchwardens (viz. that the parſon ſhall have the election of one) the canons cannot alter it, eſpecially in London, where the parſon and churchwardens are a corporation to purchaſe lands and demiſe their lands. Cro. J. 532. pl. 15. Paſch. 17 Ja. B. R. Warner's caſe.

The canons are the eccleſiaſtical laws of the land, but ſhall not bind here unleſs received, as appears by ſtat. 25 Hen. 8. 21. and the ſtat. De Bigamis, and the ſtat. of Merton, as to one born before marriage, tho' by the canon law he was legitimate, yet by our law he is not; per cur. Jo. 160. Trin. 3 Cur. B. R.

The canons made 1571, in Queen Elizabeth's time, and the 21 Jac. being confirmed by Q. Eliz. and K. Jac. are good, by the ſtat. 25 Hen. 8. as long as they do not impugn the Common law or prerogative of the King, and before the 25 Hen. 8. 19. the eccleſiaſticks might make canons without the King, but are by that ſtatute reſtrained; but ſince that ſtatute they may make canons with the aſſent of the King, ſo long as they are not contrary to the laws of the land, or derogatory of the King's prerogative. 2 Lev. 222. Trin. 30. Car. 2. *B. Eccleſiaſtical perſons are ſubject to the canons. Thoſe of 1640 have been queſtioned, but no doubt was ever made as to thoſe of 1603; per cur. 1 Salk. 134. Paſch. 11 W. 3. B. B. The Biſhop of St. David's v. Lucy.

All the clergy are bound by the canons confirmed only by the King; but they muſt be confirmed by the parliament to bind the laity; per cur. Carth. 485. 11 W. 3. B. R. The Biſhop of St. David's v. Lucy.

In the primitive church the laity were preſent at all ſynods. When the empire became Chriſtian, no canon was made without the Emperor's conſent. The Emperor's conſent included that of the people, he having in himſelf the whole legiſlative power, which our Kings have not; therefore if the King and clergy make a canon, it binds the clergy in re eccleſiaſtica; but it does not bind laymen; they are not repreſented in convocation; their conſent is neither aſked nor given. 2 Salk. 412. pl. 2. Hill. 1 *Ann. Canonium, Chelmsford in Eſſex.

Canon Religioſorum, A book wherein the religious of every greater convent had a fair tranſcript of the rules of their order frequently read among them as their local ſtatutes; which book was therefore called Regula, and Canon. The public books of the religious were theſe four: 1. Miſſale, which contained all the offices of devotion. 2. Martyrologium, a regiſter of their peculiar ſaints and martyrs, with the place and time of paſſion. 3. Canon or Regula, the inſtitution and rules of their order. 4. Necrologium or Obituarium, in which they entered the death of their founders and benefactors, to obſerve the days of commemoration for them. But as the two firſt, ſo likewiſe the two latter were ſometimes joined in the ſame volume.——Kennet's Gloſſary.

Cantel, (Cantellum, velut quantillum) Is that which is added above meaſure. Nullum genus bladi vendatur per cumulum ſeu cantellum, præter avenum, braſium & farinam. Stat. de Piſtor. cap. 9. It ſeems alſo ſometimes to ſignify the ſame with that we now call lump. See Polton, Temps H. 3. Ed. 1. or Ed. 2. cap. 4. & 9. It ſignifies alſo a piece of any thing, as a cantel of bread, cheeſe, and the like.

Canterbury. See Dozobernia.

Cantred, or rather Cantref (Cantredus) Signifies an hundred villages, being a Britiſh word compounded of the adjective cant. i. e. an hundred, and tret, a town or village. In Wales, the counties are divided into cantreds, as in England into hundreds. The word is uſed anno 28 H. 8. cap. 3. See Commote. See alſo Mr. Kennet's Gloſſary, in verbo Cantredum.

Capacity (Capacitas) An ability or fitneſs to contain or receive. In law it ſignifies, when a man, or body politick, is able to give or take lands, or other things, or to ſue actions. As an alien born hath a ſufficient capacity to ſue in any perſonal action; but in a real action it is a good plea to ſay, he is an alien born; and pray, if he ſhall be anſwered. Dyer, f. 3. pla. 8. If a man enfeoffs an alien and another man, to the uſe of themſelves, or, &c. it ſeems that the King ſhall have the moiety of the land for ever, by reaſon of the incapacity of the alien. Dyer, fol. 383. pla. 31. By the Common law, no man hath capacity to take tithes but ſpiritual perſons, and the King, who is a perſon mixt; our law allowing him two capacities, a natural, and a politick. In the firſt he may purchaſe lands to him and his heirs; in the latter, to him and his ſucceſſors; and a parſon hath the like: but a layman, who is not capable of taking tithes, was yet capable to diſcharge tithes at the Common law in his own land, as well well as a ſpiritual perſon. See Co. lib. 2. fol 44. Perſons attainted of treaſon or felony, idiots, lunaticks, infants, feme coverts without their huſbands, &c. are not capable to make any deed of gift, grant, or conveyance, unleſs it be in ſome ſpecial caſes. But all other perſons void of impediments are capable of making grants and conveyances, and to ſue and be ſued, being twenty-one years of age; and at fourteen, their age of diſcretion, they are capable by law to marry, be a witneſs, &c. See Co. Lit. ſect. 259, 402, 403.

Caparo, A hood, cap, or covering for the head. It is mentioned in Mat. Paris, anno 1227, viz. Concedant eis pannos probationis, videlicet duas tunicas ſine capucio, & cingulum & braccas & caparonem uſque ad cingulum. Blount, edit. 1717.

Cape, Is a writ judicial touching plea of lands or tenements; ſo termed (as moſt writs are) of that word in itſelf, which imports the chiefeſt end and intention thereof. And this is divided into cape magnum, and cape parvum, both which take hold of things immoveable, and ſeem to differ between themſelves in theſe points: Firſt, Becauſe cape magnum, or the grand cape, lieth before appearance, and cape parvum afterwards. Secondly, The cape magnum ſummoneth the tenant to anſwer to the default, and over to the demandant. Cape parvum ſummoneth the tenant to anſwer the default only; and therefore is called cape parvum, or in the French Engliſh petit cape, Old Nat. Brev. fol. 161, 162. Yet Ingham ſaith, that it is called petit cape, not becauſe it is of a ſmall force, but for that it conſiſteth of few words. Cape magnum, in the Old Nat. Brev. is thus defined; this is a judicial writ, and lieth where a man hath brought a præcipe quod reddat of a thing that toucheth plea of land, and the tenant makes default at the day to him given in the writ original, then this writ ſhall go for the King to take the land into the King's hands, and if he comes not at the day given him by the grand cape, he has loſt his land, &c. A precedent and form of this writ you may ſee in the Regiſter Judicial, f. 2. b, it ſeemeth after a ſort to contain in it the effect of miſſionis in poſſeſſionem, & primo et ſecundo decreto among the Civilians: for as the firſt decree ſeizeth the thing, and the ſecond giveth it from him that the ſecond time defaulteth in his appearance; ſo this cape both ſeizeth the land, and alſo aſſigneth to the party a farther day of appearance; at which, if he come not in, the land is forfeited; yet is there a difference between theſe two courſes of the Civil and Canon law. Firſt, For that miſſio in poſſeſſionem toucheth both moveable and immoveable goods, whereas cape is extended only to immoveable. Secondly, That the party being ſatisfied of his demand, the remanet is reſtored to him that defaulted; but by the cape all is ſeized without reſtitution. Thirdly, miſſio in poſſeſſ. is to the uſe of the party agent, the cape is to the uſe of the King. Of this writ, and the explication of the true force and effect thereof, read Bracton, lib. 5. tract. 3. ca. 1. n. 4, 5, 6. See Cape ad valentiam.

Cape parvum, In the Old Nat. Brev. fol. 162, is thus defined: This writ lieth in caſe where the tenant is ſummoned in plea of land, and cometh at the ſummons, and his appearance is of record, and after he maketh default at the day that is given to him, then ſhall go this writ for the King, &c. The difference between the grand cape and petit cape (which in effect or conſequence are alike) is that the grand cape is awarded upon the defendant or tenant's not appearing or demanding the view in ſuch real actions, where the original writ does not mention the parcels or particulars demanded; and the petit cape after appearance or view is granted. Of this likewiſe you may ſee the form in the Regiſter Judicial, fol. 2. Of both theſe writs read Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 24. ſect. magnum & ſect. Cowell.

Cape ad valentiam, Is a ſpecies of cape magnum, ſo called of the end whereunto it tendeth. In the Old Nat. Brev. fol. 161, 162. it is thus deſcribed: This writ lieth where any is impleaded of certain lands, and I vouch to warrant another, againſt whom the ſummons ad warrantizandum hath been awarded, and the ſheriff cometh not at the day given; then if the demandant recover againſt me, I ſhall have this writ againſt the vouchee, and ſhall recover ſo much in value of the land of the vouchee, if he have ſo much; and if he have not ſo much, then I ſhall have execution of ſuch lands and tenements as deſcend to him in fee-ſimple; or if he purchaſe afterward, I ſhall have againſt him a re-ſummons; and if he can ſay nothing, I ſhall recover the value. Here note, that this writ lieth before appearance. Of theſe writs and their divers uſes, ſee the table of the Reg. Judicial, verbo Cape. Cowell.

Capella, Before the word chapel was reſtrained to an oratory, or depending place of divine worſhip, it was uſed for any ſort of cheſt, cabinet, or other repoſitory of precious things, eſpecially of religious relicks.——Regnante Stephano, Nigellus Epiſc. Elienſis, *pro imminenti ſibi negotio auxilium dominæ Imperatricis, & ſuorum colloquium requirendum putavit. Capias, Is a writ of two ſorts; one whereof is called capias ad reſpondendum, before judgment, where an original is ſued out, &c. to take the defendant, and make him anſwer the plaintiff; and the other a writ of execution, after judgment, being of divers kinds, as capias ad ſatisfaciendum, capias utlagatum, &c. Cowell. See The Attorney's Practice in the Court of Common Pleas, vol. 1. p. 63, &c. See alſo The Attorney's Practice in the Court of King's Bench, vol. 1. page 304.

Form of a Writ of Capias in C. B. in Treſpaſs.

GEORGE the Third, &c. to the ſheriff of Middleſex, greeting. We command you, that you take A. B. late of the pariſh of ——— in your county, ———, if he ſhall be found in your bailiwick, and keep him ſafely, ſo that you have his body before our juſtices at Weſtminſter on the octave of St. Hillary, to anſwer W. P. in a plea, wherefore with force and arms he broke the cloſe of the ſaid W. at Weſtminſter, and did other injuries to him, to his great damage, and againſt our peace; and have there this writ. Witneſs Sir Charles Prat, knight, at Weſtminſter, the ——— day of ——— in the ——— year of our reign.

Capias ad ſatisfaciendum, Is a writ of execution after judgment, lying where a man recovers in an action perſonal, as for debt or damages, or detinue in the King's court; and he againſt whom the debt is recovered hath no lands nor tenements, nor ſufficient goods, whereof the debt may be levied. For in this caſe, he that recovereth ſhall have this writ to the ſheriff, commanding him that he take the body of him againſt whom the debt is recovered, and he ſhall be put in priſon, until ſatisfaction made. Cowell.

This writ was by the Common law only in treſpaſſes, quare vi & armis, being direct and wilful wrongs; but now by the ſtatute 25 Ed. 3. may iſſue in other caſes. It is deemed a full execution, and in the law ſufficient for the whole debt; for corpus humanum non recipit æſtimationem: and where the body is taken on a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, no other execution can be had againſt the defendant's lands or goods. But in caſe the defendant dies in execution, the plaintiff, his executors or adminiſtrators may, by ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 24. ſue forth execution againſt the lands and tenements, goods and chattels of the defendant ſo dying in execution, in like manner as if the deceaſed defendant had never been taken in execution; in this caſe the judgment muſt be revived by ſcire facias. Attorn. Pract. in C. of Common Pleas, vol. 1. p. 222, 223.

If two be bound jointly and ſeverally to me, and I ſue them jointly, I may have a capias againſt them both, and the death or eſcape of one ſhall not diſcharge the other; but I cannot have a capias againſt the one, and another kind of execution againſt the other, becauſe though they be two ſeveral perſons, yet they make but one debtor when I ſue them jointly; but if I ſue them ſeverally, I may ſever them in their kinds of execution; though if once ſatisfaction be had of one, or againſt the ſheriff for an eſcape of one, the reſt may be relieved upon an audita querela. Hob. 59.

GEORGE the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. to the ſheriffs of London, greeting. We command you, that you take W. B. late of London, cabinet-maker, otherwiſe called W. B. late of the pariſh of in the county of Middleſex, cabinet-maker, if he be found in your bailiwick, and keep him ſafely, ſo that you may have his body before our Juſtices at Weſtminſter on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, to ſatisfy R. R. as well of a certain debt of fifty pounds, which the ſaid R. in our court before our Juſtices at Weſtminſter recovered againſt him, as of ſixty-three ſhillings, which in our ſaid court were adjudged to the ſaid R. for his damages, which he had by occaſion of the detaining the debt, whereof the ſaid W. is convicted; and have there this writ. Witneſs Sir Charles Prat, knight, at Weſtminſter, the day of in the year of our reign.

Capias conductos ad proficiſcendum, Is an original writ, which lies by the Common law againſt any ſoldier that hath covenanted to ſerve the King in his wars, and appears not at the time and place appointed, directed to two of the King's ſerjeants at arms, to arreſt and take him whereſoever he may be found, and to bring him coram concilio noſtro; with a clauſe of aſſiſtance. 4 Inſt. fol. 128.

Capias ad ſatisfaciendum infinite (22 & 23 Car. 2. Act for relief of ſoldiers.)

Capias in Withernamium de Averiis, Is a writ lying for cattle in Withernam. Reg. of writs, fol. 82. & 83. See Withernam.

Capias in Withernamium de Homine, Is a writ that lies for a ſervant in Withernam. Reg. fol. 79. & 80. See Withernam.

Capias pro fine, Is where one, being by judgment fined to the King upon ſome offence committed againſt a ſtatute, does not diſcharge it according to the judgment. By this therefore his body is to be taken, and committed to priſon until he pay the fine. Coke, lib. 3. fol. 12. or where, upon a non eſt factum pleaded, his plea is by evidence, or his own ſubſequent acknowledgment, not made out or verified, and the like.

Capias utlagatum, Is a writ which lies againſt him who is outlawed upon any action, perſonal or criminal; by which the ſheriff apprehends the party outlawed for not appearing upon the exigent, and keeps him in ſafe cuſtody till the day of return, and then preſents him to the court, there farther to be ordered for his contempt, who (if in the Common Pleas) was in former times to be committed to the Fleet, there to remain till he had ſued out the King's charter of pardon, and appeared to the action. At preſent, in the King's Bench, the outlawry cannot be reverſed, unleſs the defendant appear in perſon, and by a preſent of gloves to the judges obtain their favour to reverſe it. And in the Common Pleas, the defendant (not being an executor or adminiſtrator) is now to give good bail (which he is allowed to do by attorney) to anſwer the action, if the debt or damage demanded be 20 l. or above, and to pay the plaintiff's charges, before the outlawry be reverſed. And by a ſpecial capias utlagatum in the ſame writ, the ſheriff is commanded, and may ſeize all the defendant's lands, goods, and chattels for the contempt to the King; and the plaintiff may (after an inquiſition taken thereupon, and returned into the Exchequer) obtain a leaſe of the lands extended, and a grant of the goods, whereby to compel the defendant to appear; which, when he ſhall have ſo done, and reverſe the outlawry, are to be reſtored to him. See Old Nat. Brev. fol. 154. and Table of Reg. Judic. verbo Capias. Cowell, edit. 1727. See Outlawry.

Capiatur pro fine, Taken away, and other proviſions in lieu thereof, 5 Will. & Mar. c. 12.

Capita Baroniarum, The chief ſeats of barons. Bracton.

Capitagium. See Chevage.

Capitale, The thing which is ſtolen, or the value of it. It is mentioned in Leg. H. 1. cap. 59. viz. Si furtum redimendum, capitale redimentis conjectent; i. e. if the theft be redeemed, let the thing ſtolen, or the value of it, be returned.

Capitale vivens, Live cattle. In Leg. Æthelſtani. Reddam de meo proprio decimas Deo, tam in vivente capitali, quam in mortuis fructibus terræ.

Capite, From caput, the head; and ſo tenure in capite, is to hold of the King, the head of the commonwealth. It is a tenure that holds immediately of the King, as of his crown, be it by knight-ſervice or ſocage, and not of any honour, caſtle, or manor, and for this it is called a tenure, which holds merely of the King; for as the crown is a corporation, a ſeigniory in groſs, ſo the King, who poſſeſſes the crown, is in the eye of the law perpetually King, never in his minority. F. N. B. fol. 5. Yet a man may hold of the King, and not in capite; that is, not immediately of the crown in groſs, but by means of ſome honour, caſtle, or manor belonging to the crown. Of this Kitchin, fol. 129. ſaith well, that a man may hold of the King by knight-ſervice, and not in capite; becauſe that is in the King's hands, by deſcent from his anceſtors, and not immediately of the King, as of his crown. And this tenure in capite is otherwiſe called, tenure holding of the perſon of the King. Dyer, fol. 41. Broke, tit. Tenure, nu. 65, 99. But this tenure is now aboliſhed, and by 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. all tenures are turned into free and common ſocage. The ancient tenure in capite was of two ſorts, the one principal and general, which is of the King; as caput regni, & caput generaliſſimum omnium feodorum, the fountain whence all feuds and tenures have their main original; the other ſpecial and ſubaltern, which was of a particular ſubject, as caput feudi, ſeu terræ illius; ſo called, becauſe he was the firſt that created and granted that feud or land in ſuch manner of tenure: he was thereupon called Capitalis Dominus, & Caput terræ illius; among the Feudiſts, Capitaneus Feudi illius. Vide Spelman of Feuds, cap. 4.

Capitilitium. See Chevage. It is what we now call poll-money.

Improba Romani poſcunt a Rege tributa,
Cujus ad arbitrium diſponitur omne tributum,
Et capitalitium cogunt appendere ſummam. Du Freſne.

Capititium, A covering for the head; ſometimes it ſignifies a collar of a coat. It is mentioned in the ſtatute H. 4. anno 1. Quod ſi aliquis miles, vel aliqua perſona minoris ſtatus, det aliquam liberatam panni vel capititiorum contra formam ſtatuti, &c.

Capituli Agri, The had-lands, or head-lands, that lie at the head, or upper end of the lands or furrows.—Canonici (Burceſter) conceſſerunt hominibus de Wrechwike duas acras prati pro capitibus ſuarum croftarum tenus rivulum hm verſus molendinum, &c. Mr. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. 137. See Havedelond.

Capitula Ruralia, Clerical aſſemblies, or chapters held by the rural dean, and parochial clergy within the precinct of every diſtinct deanery; at firſt every three weeks, then once a month, and more ſolemnly once a quarter, of which ſee the practice at large in Mr. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. 640.

Caps. See Hats.

Captain (Capitaneus) Is one that leadeth, or hath command of a company of ſoldiers; and is either general, as he that hath the governance of the whole hoſt; or ſpecial, as he that leads but one band. There is another ſort of captains, qui urbium præfecti ſunt, quibus plebs ab aliquo ſuperiorum gubernanda committitur. So we have captains of caſtles here in England, as of Dover, the iſles of Jerſey, Guernſey, Wight, &c. Cowell, edit. 1727. See Soldiers.

Captale. It is mentioned in Leg. Inæ, cap. 42. apud Brompton; and it ſignifies cattle, viz. Ruſtici curtillum debet eſſe clauſum æſtate ſimul & hyeme; ſi diſclauſum ſit & introeat alicujus vicini ſui captale, &c. nihil inde recipiat. See Capitale.

Caption (Captio) When a commiſſion is executed, and the commiſſioners names ſubſcribed to a certificate, declaring when and where the commiſſion was executed, that is called the caption, which commonly begins thus:—By virtue of this commiſſion, we, &c. or, the execution of this commiſſion appears in a certain ſchedule hereunto annexed, &c.

Captives. An act made for relief of captives taken by Turkiſh, Mooriſh, and other pirates, and to prevent taking of others in time to come. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 24.

Capture (Captura) the taking of a prey, an arreſt, or ſeizure; and it particularly relates to prizes taken by privateers in time of war, which are to be divided between the captors, &c.

Caputagium,—In cujus facti memoriam etiam quatuor denarios de caputagio meo, ſicut mos eſt ſecularibus talibus facere, ſuper altare dominicum prædicti loci gratanter imponens. Dugdale Warwickſh. f. 193. a. Some think it may ſignify head or poll-money, or the payment of it.—But it is indeed the ſame with chevagium, chevage.

Caput anni, New-year's-day; upon which of old was obſerved the feſtum ſtultorum. So caput kalendarum Maii, May-day.

Caput baronіae, Is the caſtle or chief ſeat of a nobleman, which is not to be divided among daughters (if there be no ſon) but muſt deſcend to the eldeſt daughter, cæteris filiabus aliunde ſatisfactis.

Caputia (from caput, the head) Is uſed for the head, or hade of any land:——Cum caputiis & ſidlingis prati. See Buttum terrae.

Caput jejunii, Aſh-Wedneſday, being the head, the beginning or firſt day of the quadrageſimal, or Lent faſt. Some annual payments were aſſigned to be made in capite jejunii. Mr. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. pag. 132.

Caput loci, The end of any place. Ad caput villæ, at the end of the town; the end or upper head.

Car, and Char, The names of places beginning with car and char ſignify a city; from the Brit. caer, i. e. civitas; as Carliſle, and many others.

Caravana, A caravan, or joint company of travellers in the Eaſtern countries, for mutual conduct and defence: —Egreſſa caravana noſtra de Joppa verſus exercitum veniebat onuſta victualibus & aliis clitellis neceſſariis.——— Gaufrid. Vineſauf. Richardi Regis Iter Hieroſol, lib. 5. cap. 52.

Carcan, Is ſometimes expounded for a pillory.

Carcannum, A priſon. LL. Canuti regis.

Carcatus, Loaden; as a ſhip with her freight.——— De corpore cujuſlibet magnæ navis carcatæ cum rebus venalibus. 4 denar. Pat. 10 R. 2. par. 1. m. 30.

Carcellage, The fees paid to a gaoler when the priſoner is diſcharged.

Carriers. All perſons carrying goods for hire, as a maſter and owners of ſhips, lightermen, ſtage-coachmen, &c. come under the denomination of common carriers, and are chargeable on the general cuſtom of the realm for their faults and miſcarriages. Co. Lit. 89. 1 Rol. Abr. 2,338. And if a perſon, who is no common carrier, takes upon himſelf to carry my goods, though I promiſe him no reward, yet if my goods are loſt or damaged by his default, I ſhall have an action againſt him. See title Bailment.

But the maſter of a ſtage-coach who only carries paſſengers for hire, ſhall not be liable for the goods of his paſſengers that are loſt; and therefore, where A. delivered a trunk to the driver or ſervant, who loſt it out of his poſſeſſion, it was held, that the maſter was not liable in an action upon the caſe on the cuſtom of the realm; for though the ſervant received money for it, yet that was but a gratuity, and the maſter ſhall not be chargeable with the acts of his ſervant, otherwiſe than he acts in execution of the authority given him. See 2 Show. Rep. 128. 1 Salk. 282.

1. In what caſes carriers are chargeable for goods delivered to them.

2. How carriers are regulated by acts of parliament.

1. In what caſes carriers are chargeable for goods delivered to them.

If a man delivers goods to a common carrier, to carry them to a certain place, if he loſes them, an action upon the caſe lies againſt him; for by the common cuſtom of the realm, he ought to carry them ſafely. 1 Rol. Abr. 2. Hob. 17. Cro. Jac. 262.

Alſo if a common carrier, who is offered his hire, and who has convenience, refuſes to carry goods, he is liable to an action in the ſame manner as an inn-keeper who refuſes to entertain a gueſt, or a ſmith who refuſes to ſhoe a horſe. 2 Show. Rep. 327.

If a man delivers goods to a common hoyman, who is a common carrier of goods, to carry them to a certain place, and pays him according to the cuſtom for the carriage of them, and after, for default of good keeping, they are loſt, an action upon the caſe lies againſt him; for by the common cuſtom of the realm, he ought to have kept and carried them ſafely. Cro. Jac. 330. Hob. 17.

If a man delivers goods to ſuch common hoyman to carry to a place, and after delivers them (being of good value) to another to keep ſafely in the boat, and does not diſcharge the hoyman, and after they are loſt through negligence, an action on the caſe lies againſt him. 1 Rol. Abr. 2. Hob. 17. Cro. Jac. 330.

If A. delivers goods at York to B. (who is a water carrier between Hull and London) though the agreement is to carry the goods from Hull to London, and no mention is made of the carriage to Hull, yet if the goods are loſt, B. ſhall anſwer for them; for upon his general receipt of them at York, he is liable. 1 Sid. 36. 2 Show. 129. See 1 Rol. Abr. 338.

If a merchant lades goods aboard a ſhip, to be tranſported at a reaſonable reward of freight to be paid to the owners, and in the night-time, while the ſhip rides in the river Thames, notwithſtanding a competent number of men are left aboard for the guard of the ſhip and goods, yet ſeveral perſons, under the pretence of preſſing ſeamen, ſeize on the men aboard, and take away the goods; an action will lie againſt the maſter, for in effect he is paid by the merchant, for the merchant pays the owners, and the owners pay the maſter; ſo that the money of the merchant is but handed over by them to the maſter; adjudged, and ſaid, that though by the admiral law, the maſter is not chargeable pro damno fatali, as in caſe of pirates, ſtorm, &c. where there is no negligence in him; yet becauſe this ſhip was infra corpus comitatus, this caſe muſt not be meaſured by the rules of that law. 1 Vent. 190, 223.

If A. and ſeveral others take their paſſage in a ferry-boat, and being upon the water a tempeſt ariſes, ſo that they are in danger of being drowned; upon which, to preſerve their lives, ſeveral of the goods were caſt over board, among which a pack of goods of A.'s of great value is thrown over; A. ſhall have no action againſt the bargemen. 2 Bulſt. 280.

It is clearly reſolved, that if a carrier be robbed he ſhall forfeit the value of the goods, for he hath his hire, which implies an undertaking for the ſafe cuſtody and delivery of them, which charges him at all events, and this political inſtitution was introduced the better to ſecure people in their dealings, and to prevent carriers, who are often intruſted with things of the greateſt value, from confederating with robbers, &c. Co. Lit. 89. 4 Co. 84. Owen 57. 8 Co. 84. 1 Rol. Abr. 2, 124. 2 Rol. Abr. 367.

So if A. delivers a box to a carrier to carry, and he aſks what is in it, and A. tells him, a book and tobacco, and in truth there is 100 l. beſides, yet if the carrier is robbed, he ſhall anſwer for the money; for A. was not bound to tell him all the particulars in the box, and it was the buſineſs of the carrier to have made a ſpecial acceptance. Ruled by Roll, at the niſi prius at Guildhall; but in regard of the intended cheat to the carrier, he told the jury, they might conſider of it in damages; but yet the jury gave the plaintiff 97 l. damages, abating 3 l. only for carriage; quod durum videbatur circumſtantibus, Allen 93.

But if A. being a common carrier, receives by his book-keeper, from the ſervant of B. two bags of money ſealed up, containing, as was told him, 200 l. and the book-keeper gives a receipt for his maſter to this effect, Received of, &c. two bags of money ſealed up, ſaid to contain 200 l. which I promiſe to deliver on ſuch a day at at Exeter, unto ——— he to pay 10 s. per cent for carriage and riſque; though the bags contained 450 l. and the carrier is robbed, he ſhall be anſwerable only for 200 l. for this is a particular undertaking; and as it is by reaſon of the reward that the carrier is liable, which when the plaintiff endeavours to defraud him of, it is but reaſonable he ſhould be barred of that remedy, which is only founded on the reward. Carth. 485.

It

It hath been holden, that a carrier imbezilling goods which he has received to carry to a certain place, is not guilty of felony, becauſe there was not a felonious taking; but is liable only to a civil action. 1 Hawk. 89, 90. But it has been reſolved, that if a carrier open a pack, and take out part of the goods, with intent to ſteal it, he may be guilty of felony; in which caſe it may be ſaid, not only that ſuch poſſeſſion of a part diſtinct from the whole, was gained by wrong, and not delivered by the owner; but alſo that it was obtained baſely, fraudulently, and clandeſtinely, in hopes to prevent its being diſcovered at all, or fixed upon any one when diſcovered. 1 Hawk. 90.

Stat. 3. Car. 1. c. 1. No carrier with any horſe or horſes, nor waggon-man, car-man, or wain-man, with their reſpective carriages, ſhall by themſelves, or any other, travel on the Lord's day; on pain of 20*s.* on conviction in ſix months, before one juſtice or the mayor, on view, confeſſion, or oath of two witneſſes, to be levied by the conſtable or churchwardens by diſtreſs to the uſe of the poor; but the juſtice may reward the informer with any ſum not exceeding a third part.

Stat. 3. W. & M. c. 12. ſect. 24. The juſtices in Eaſter ſeſſions yearly, ſhall rate the prices of all land carriage of goods to be brought into any place within their juriſdiction, by any common waggoner or carrier; and ſhall certify the rates ſo made to the mayors and other chief officers of the ſeveral market-towns within their juriſdiction, to be hung up in ſome publick place to which all perſons may reſort: and no ſuch common waggoner or carrier ſhall take for carriage above the rates ſo ſet, on pain of five pounds by diſtreſs, by warrant of two juſtices where ſuch waggoner or carrier ſhall reſide, to the uſe of the party grieved.

Stat. 21 Geo. 2. c. 28. ſect. 3. If any common waggoner or carrier ſhall demand and take any greater price for bringing goods to London, or to any place within the bills of mortality, than is allowed and ſettled by the juſtices for the place from whence the ſame is brought for the carrying of goods from London, to the ſaid place, he ſhall forfeit five pounds to the party grieved, to be recovered as by the ſaid act of 3 W. & M. or by diſtreſs and ſale of his goods, by warrant from two juſtices of Middleſex, Surry, London, or Weſtminſter; and the clerk of the peace for every county and place ſhall, immediately after Eaſter ſeſſions, yearly, certify to the lord mayor of London, and to the reſpective clerks of the peace for Middleſex, Surry, and Weſtminſter, the rates made for the carriage of goods in their reſpective counties and places; which certificate, or any atteſted copy thereof, ſigned by the officer to whom the ſame ſhall be tranſmitted, ſhall be ſufficient evidence of the prices ſo ſet.

Sect. 4. And every common waggoner or carrier ſhall have his chriſtian and ſurname and place of abode, in large or capital letters, placed upon ſome conſpicuous part of his carriage, before he ſhall drive the ſame; on pain of twenty ſhillings, to be levied and recovered as aforeſaid.

Carvage, Carvagium. Carucata.

Caruca, (French Charrue) A plough; from the old Gallic carr, a plough, which is the preſent Iriſh for any ſort of wheeled carriage. From whence the Sax. ceorl, a ploughman, the northern kurl, our ſouthern churl, and in corruption of places charl, as Charlton, Charlbury, &c. Carl in the modern Welſh, is a ruſtick or clown.

Carucage, (Carucagium) Was a tribute impoſed on every plough for the public ſervice. Regi conceſſum eſt per totam Angliam carucagium de qualibet caruca duo ſolidi argenti. As hidage was a taxation by hides of land, ſo carucage was by carucats of land, which at firſt was but 4*d.* for every plough.———Dederunt S. Edmundo de qualibet carucata terræ in toto epiſcopatu quatuor denarios annuos, quod uſque modo, ea de cauſa, carucagium eſt appellatum. Mon. Angl. 1 par. fol. 294, a.

Carucate, or Carve of land, (Carucata terræ) A plough-land, Domeſday. It is a certain quantity of land by which the ſubjects have been ſometimes taxed; whereupon the tribute levied upon a carve of land, was called carucagium. Bracton, lib. 2. cap. 26. n. 8. & cap. 17. It may contain houſes, mills, paſture, meadow, wood, &c. Co. on Litt. ſect. 119. It is ſometimes uſed for a cart-load, as una carucata ligni in foreſta noſtra. Mon. Angl. 2 par. f. 311. Littleton, cap. Tenure in ſocage ſaith, that ſoca idem eſt quod caruca: yet Stow in his Annals, pag. 271. ſaith, the ſame King Henry took carvage; that is to ſay, two marks of ſilver of every knight's fee towards the marriage of his ſiſter Iſabella to the emperor, where carvage cannot be taken for a plough-land, except there were ſome other further diviſion, whereby to raiſe of every plough-land ſo much, and ſo conſequently of every knight's fee, that is, of every 680 acres, two marks of ſilver. Raſtal, in his Expoſition of Words, ſaith, that to be quit of carvage is a privilege whereby a man is exempted, if the King ſhall tax all the land by carves. Skene de verb ſignif. verb. Carucata terræ, deriveth it from the French charrow (more truly charrue) a plough, and ſaith, that it contains as great a portion of land as may be tilled and laboured in a year and a day with one plough; which alſo is called hilda, or hida terræ, a word very frequently uſed in the Britiſh laws. Lambard among his precedents, towards the end of his Eirenarcha, tranſlates carucatam terræ, a plough-land. The word carve is mentioned in the ſtatute of wards and reliefs, made 28 Ed. 1. and in Magna Charta, cap. 5. See Co. on Littl. fol. 69. a. See Mr. Kennet's Gloſſary, in voce Carucata.

Carucata boum, A team or draught of oxen for drawing or ploughing, which in ſome weſtern parts of England is ſtill called a plough of oxen. Gilbert Baſſet, founder of Burceſter priory, grants to it————Paſturam in mea dominica paſtura ad tres carucatas boum trahentium una cum bobus meis trahentibus. Paroch. Antiquit. p. 135. They are called boves de caruca, in a charter of Aubery de Vere to the abbey of Noteley. Ibid. p. 155.

Caſſena. See Drugs.

Caſſia fiſtula, Is a tree that beareth black round and long cods, wherein is contained a pulp, ſoft and pleaſantly ſweet, ſerving for many uſes in phyſick. The fruit is mentioned in the ſtat. 1 Jac. cap. 19. among the drugs and ſpices to be garbled.

Caſſia lignea, Is a ſweet wood, not unlike the cinnamon, and comprized among merchandize to be garbled.

Caſſidile, A little ſack, purſe, or pocket: Protulit in caſſidili toxicum mellitum. Matt. Weſtm.

Caſſii, The hundred of Caiſhow, in Hertfordſhire.

Caſſiterides. The iſles of Scylly.

Caſtel, or Caſtle, Caſtellum, Is well known. In the time of Henry the Second there were in England 1115 caſtles, every caſtle contains a manor; ſo that the conſtable of a caſtle is the conſtable of a manor. 2 Part. Inſt. fol. 31.

Caſtellam, (French Chaſtellain) The lord, owner, or captain of a caſtle, and ſometimes the conſtable of a caſtle, or fortified houſe. Bracton, lib. 5. tract. 2. cap. 16. and lib. 2. cap. 32. num. 2. and is uſed in like ſenſe 3 Ed. 1. cap. 7. Inſt. fol.* 31. Manwood, part 1. pag. 113. ſaith, there was an officer of the foreſt called caſtellanus, who had the command of all or part of the foreſt. Of the uſe and extent of this officer in France, ſee Cotgrave's Dictionary, verbo Chaſtellain.

Caſtellarium, (Caſtellarium & Caſtellatus.)———Et unum toftum juxta caſtellarium. Mon. Angl. 2 par. fol. 402. a. Comes Alanus habet in ſuo caſtellatu 200 maneria. Domeſday. The precinct or juriſdiction of a caſtle.

Caſtellatio, This was the building any caſtle without the leave of the king; which it was unlawful to do. Hæc mittant hominem in miſericordia regis, viz. Infractio pacis, infidelitas & proditio, deſpectus de eo, caſtellatio ſine licentia. Du Freſne.

Caſtellorum operatio, Caſtle-work, or ſervice and labour done by inferior tenants, for the building and upholding caſtles and public places of defence; toward which ſome gave their perſonal aſſiſtance, and others paid their contribution. This was one of the three neceſſary charges to which all lands among our Saxon anceſtors were expreſsly ſubject——Liberi ab omni ſervitio, excepta trinoda neceſſitate——pontis & arcis conſtructione & expeditione contra hoſtem. After the conqueſt, an immunity from this burden was ſometimes granted: ſo King John, to the nunnery of St. Catherine without the city of Exeter ——Quietos eſſe de operationibus caſtellorum & pontium. Mon. Angl. tom. 1. f. 503. b. So King Hen. 2. to the tenants within the honour of Wallingford,——Ut quieti ſint de operationibus caſtellorum. Paroch. Antiq. p. 114.

Caſter and Cheſter, The names of places ending in caſter and cheſter are derived from the Sax. ceaſter, which ſignifies a city, town, or caſtle; or rather from the Latin caſtrum: for the names which end with this termination, were given by the Romans to thoſe places where they built caſtles.

Caſtle. See Caſtel.

Caſtle-guard rents, Are rents paid to thoſe that dwell within the precincts of any caſtle, towards the maintenance of ſuch as watch and ward the ſame. Act for ſettling certain rents in truſtees, 22 & 23 Car. 2.

Caſtleward (Caſtleguardium, vel wardum caſtri) Is an impoſition laid upon ſuch of the king's ſubjects as dwell within a certain compaſs of any caſtle, towards the maintenance of ſuch as do watch and ward the caſtle. Mag. Chart. cap. 20. and 32 H. 8. cap. 48. It is uſed ſometimes for the very circuit itſelf, which is inhabited by ſuch as are ſubject to this ſervice; as in Stow's Annals, pa. 632. Et capere ibidem caſtleward, viz. De qualibet diſtrictione infra feodum ipſius ducis ad caſtellum de Halton ducti, & ibidem una de cauſa, ſi per totam noctem pernoctaverit, quatuor denarios. Pl. apud Ceſtr. 31 Ed. 3. Caſu conſimili, Is a writ of entry granted where the tenant by curteſy, or tenant for term of life, or for the life of another, doth alien in fee or in tail, or for term of another's life, and it hath this name; for that the clerks of Chancery did by their common conſent frame it to the likeneſs of the writ called In caſu proviſo, according to the authority given them by the ſtat. Weſt. 2. cap. 24. which, as often as there chanceth any new caſe in Chancery ſomething like to a former caſe, and yet not eſpecially fitted by any writ, licenſeth them to frame a new form anſwerable to the new caſe, and as like ſome former caſe as they may. And this writ is granted to him in the reverſion againſt the party to whom the ſaid tenant ſo alienateth to his prejudice, and in the life-time of the ſaid tenant. The form and effect whereof read more at large in F. N. B. fol. 206.

Caſula, A certain garment belonging to the prieſts, quaſi minor caſa; becauſe it covered him over. Sometimes it is taken for cuculla; for both have the ſame ſignification; cucullam nos eſſe dicimus quam alio nomine caſulam vocamus. And from hence we call it a caſſock:

———Caſulaque capax a forſice forma
Poſt longas habitura plicas contracta miniſtris.

Caſu proviſo, Is a writ of entry given by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, cap. 7. in caſe where a tenant in dower alieneth in fee; or for term of life, or in tail, and lieth for him in reverſion againſt the alienee, whereof read F. N. B. fol. 205.

Cattle. Stat. 28 Hen. 8. cap. 13. For the encouragement of tillage, and to prevent the ingroſſing of farms in a few hands, no man ſhall keep above 2000 ſheep, at ſix ſcore to the hundred, over and above what is neceſſary for his houſhold, except it be upon his own proper eſtate, on pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* for every ſheep above that number; half to the king, and half to him that ſhall ſue for the ſame in any court of record.

Sect. 2. Provided that lambs ſhall not be accounted ſheep, ſo long as they be under the age of a year.

Stat. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. cap. 19. ſect. 1. No perſon ſhall buy any ox, ſteer, runt, cow, heifer, or calf, and ſell the ſame again alive in the ſame market or fair, on pain of forfeiting double value, half to the king, and half to him who ſhall ſue.

Continued indefinitely by 3 Car. 1. cap. 4. and 16 Car. 1. c. 4.

Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 14. ſect. 9. If any perſon ſhall buy any ox, runt, ſteer, cow, heifer, calf, ſheep, lamb, goat, or kid living, and ſell the ſame again alive, unleſs he keep and feed the ſame for five weeks, he ſhall forfeit double value, half to the king, and half to him that ſhall ſue in any court of record.

Sect. 10. The juſtices of the peace in ſeſſions may determine the ſame by inquiſition, preſentment, bill, or information, and by examination of two witneſſes, and make proceſs thereupon as upon indictments; and make eſtreats for the king's moiety, and award execution of the other moiety for the complainant by fieri facias or capias, as the courts at Weſtminſter may do.

Sect. 16. Provided, that it ſhall be lawful to any perſon known for a common drover, being licenſed, authorized, and allowed in writing by three juſtices of the peace (whereof one to be of the quorum) of the county where ſuch drover ſhall be moſt abiding and dwelling, to buy cattle in any ſuch counties, where drovers have been wont in times paſt accuſtomably to buy cattle at their free liberty and pleaſure, and to ſell the ſame at reaſonable prices in common fairs and markets, diſtant from the place where he bought the ſame forty miles at the leaſt, ſo that they be not bought by foreſtalling.

Sect. 17. Such licence ſhall not endure above one year.

Stat. 2 & 3 P. & M. cap. 3. ſect. 2. Every perſon who ſhall keep above ſix-ſcore ſheep, above what is for his houſhold, ſhall for every three-ſcore ſhear ſheep keep one milch cow, and bring up yearly for every ſix-ſcore ſhear-ſheeep one calf; upon pain of forfeiting 20*s.* a month.

Sect. 3. And every perſon who ſhall keep above twenty oxen, runts, ſhrubs, ſteers, heifers, or kine, ſhall for every ten of them keep one milch cow yearly, and rear one calf for the ſpace of one year (unleſs it die in the mean time) for every ſuch two milch cows, on pain of forfeiting 20*s.* a month; one half of which ſaid forfeiture ſhall be to the king, and the other half to him who ſhall ſue in the ſeſſions or other court of record.

Made perpetual by 13 Eliz. cap. 2. ſect 6.

Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 12. ſect. 4. No drover of cattle ſhall be licenſed but in the ſeſſions of the county where he dwells, and hath dwelt for three years laſt paſt; nor unleſs he be or have been a married man, and he be an houſholder, and not a houſhold ſervant, or retainer to any perſon, and of the age of thirty years at the leaſt: and ſuch licence ſhall be good only for one year.

Stat. 5. Which licence ſhall bear date of the day and place where the ſeſſions ſhall be holden; and ſhall be ſigned and ſealed by three juſtices preſent (whereof one to be of the quorum); on pain that every perſon who ſhall take any licence otherwiſe ſhall forfeit 5*l.* and the licence to be void.

Sect. 6. And the ſeſſions may take bond and ſurety by recognizance, that they ſhall not foreſtal or ingroſs, or do any thing contrary to this act, and the above act of 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 14. which licence ſhall be made and written by the clerk of the peace; for which he ſhall have one ſhilling, and for the recognizance eight-pence, and for regiſtering the ſame four-pence; for which ſaid fee he ſhall keep a regiſter-book of the names and dwelling-places of the perſons licenſed, with an entry of the day, time, and place where the licence was granted; which book he ſhall have at the ſeſſions.

Stat. 13 Eliz. cap. 5. ſect. 10. No perſon ſhall be licenſed to be a buyer of cattle otherwiſe than by 5 Eliz. cap. 12.

Stat. 7 Jac. 1. cap. 8. ſect. 2. The ſtat. 2 & 3 P. & M. cap. 3. ſhall extend to all grounds apt for milch kine, and not to be laid open common at any time of the year.

Stat. 3 Car. 1. cap. 1. No drover with any cattle ſhall travel on the Lord's day on pain of 20 s. which may be levied by the conſtable or churchwardens, by warrant of one juſtice, on conviction, on his view, or by confeſſion, or the oath of two witneſſes; one third to the informer, and two thirds to the poor.

Stat. 18 Car. 2. cap. 2. ſect. 1. Importation of cattle from Ireland and other places beyond the ſea, is a public nuiſance, and ſhall be ſo adjudged; and if any cattle ſhall be imported, it ſhall be lawful for any conſtable, tithingman, headborough, churchwarden, or overſeers of the poor to ſeize and keep the ſame 48 hours in ſome public place where ſuch ſeizure ſhall be made; within which time, if the owners or any of them ſhall make it appear unto ſome juſtice of the peace, by oath of two witneſſes, that the ſame were not imported from beyond the ſeas, the ſame ſhall be delivered; but in default of ſuch proof the ſame to be forfeited; one half to the uſe of the poor of the pariſh, the other to his uſe that ſhall ſeize the ſame.

Sect. 3. This act not to extend to the Iſle of Man, ſo as the number to be imported ſhall not exceed ſix hundred head yearly.

Made perpetual by 32 Car. 2. ſect. 2.

Stat. 20 Car. 2. cap. 7. ſect. 3. Any inhabitant of the place where importation of cattle ſhall be, may take the cattle ſo imported, and after ſeizure ſhall deliver them to the conſtable, tithingman, headborough, churchwardens, or overſeers of the poor, to be kept and diſpoſed in the manner in this act, and in the act 18 Car. 2. cap. 2. mentioned.

Sect. 4. If no ſeizure ſhall be made by the officers or inhabitants where ſuch cattle ſhall be firſt imported, then ſuch place ſhall forfeit 100 l. to the uſe of the houſe of correction.

Sect. 5. And the ſhips bringing cattle ſhall be forfeited, and any perſon may ſeize and ſell them; half to the poor, and half to himſelf. And a juſtice of peace may by warrant apprehend the ſeamen, and all others concerned, and commit them to gaol for three months.

Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 7. ſect. 2. If any perſon ſhall in the night-time maliciouſly, unlawfully, and willingly kill or deſtroy any horſes, ſheep, or other cattle, he ſhall be guilty of felony.

Sect.

Sect. 3. But no attainder on this act ſhall make or work any corruption of blood, or loſs of dower.

Sect. 4. And to avoid judgment of death, or execution thereupon, the offender may chuſe to be tranſported to ſome of the plantations, to be mentioned in the judgment, for ſeven years.

Sect. 5. And if any perſon ſhall in the night-time maliciouſly, unlawfully, and wilfully maim, wound, or otherwiſe hurt any horſes, ſheep, or other cattle, whereby the ſame ſhall not be killed or utterly deſtroyed, he ſhall forfeit treble damages, by action of treſpaſs, or upon the caſe.

And three juſtices (one whereof to be of the quorum) may inquire by a jury and witneſſes; and may iſſue warrants for ſummoning jurors, and for apprehending perſons ſuſpected, and take their examination, and cauſe witneſſes to come before them to give information on oath, ſo as no perſon to be examined ſhall be proceeded againſt for any offence concerning which he is examined as a witneſs, and ſhall make a true diſcovery: and if ſuch witneſs, being ſummoned, refuſe to appear, they may commit him till he ſubmit to be examined upon oath.

Stat. 32 Car. 2. cap. 2. ſect. 3. Any perſon may ſeize cattle imported contrary to the ſtatute 18 Car. 2. cap. 2.

Sect. 5. And the ſeizor, within ſix days after conviction and forfeiture, ſhall cauſe ſome to be killed; and the hide and tallow ſhall be to the uſe of the ſeizor, and the remainder ſhall be diſtributed amongſt the poor of the pariſh by the churchwardens and overſeers, upon notice to be given them by the ſeizor.

Sect. 6. And the ſeizors, churchwardens, or overſeers neglecting their duty herein ſhall forfeit 40 s. for every one of the great cattle, and 10 s. for ſheep and ſwine; half to the poor, and half to the informer, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of goods by warrant of a juſtice of peace where the offence ſhall be committed, upon confeſſion of the party, view of the juſtice, or oath of one witneſs; and for want of diſtreſs, the offenders to be committed to the common gaol for three months without bail.

Stat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 22. See Black act.

Stat. 14 Geo. 2. cap. 6. ſect. 1. If any perſon ſhall feloniouſly drive away, or in any other manner feloniouſly ſteal, one or more ſheep or other cattle, with a felonious intent to ſteal the whole carcaſe or carcaſes, or any part or parts of the carcaſe or carcaſes of any one or more ſheep or other cattle that ſhall be ſo killed, or ſhall aſſiſt or aid any perſon or perſons to commit any ſuch offence or offences, he ſhall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.

Stat. 15 Geo. 2. cap. 34. Whereas it is doubtful to what ſorts of cattle beſides ſheep the ſaid act (14 Geo. 2. cap. 6.) was meant to extend; it is therefore enacted, &c. That the ſaid act was made and intended, and ſhall be conſtrued, deemed, and taken to extend to any bull, cow, ox, ſteer, bullock, heifer, calf, and lamb, as well as ſheep, and no other cattle whatſoever.

Stat. 31 Geo. 2. cap. 40. ſect. 4. No ſaleſman or other broker or factor, imployed to buy or ſell cattle for others by commiſſion or reward, ſhall by himſelf, or any ſervant or agent, directly or indirectly, on his own account, buy any live ox, bull, cow, ſteer, bullock, heifer, calf, ſheep, lamb, or ſwine in London, or within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, or at any place whilſt any ſuch cattle ſhall be upon the road, or be coming up to be offered to ſale in London, or within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality (other than ſuch cattle which ſuch ſaleſman, &c. ſhall purchaſe for the proviſion of his family, and ſhall uſe accordingly) and no ſuch ſaleſman, &c. ſhall ſell or offer to ſale on his own account in London, or within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, by himſelf, or his ſervant or agent, any live ox, &c. upon pain that every perſon who ſhall ſo offend ſhall, every time he be convicted, forfeit double the value of any live cattle which he ſhall ſo buy or ſell, on his own account, contrary to this act.

Sect. 15. On complaint on oath to any juſtice of peace of any offence againſt this act within his juriſdiction, ſuch juſtice is to iſſue his ſummons to convene the perſon charged, and any witneſſes for any of the parties, at a time and place in ſuch ſummons ſpecified; and if any one ſo ſummoned ſhall not appear, or offer ſome reaſonable excuſe for the default, then ſuch juſtice ſhall iſſue his warrant for apprehending the party ſo making default within the juriſdiction of ſuch juſtice; and upon the party complained againſt appearing or being brought before ſuch juſtice on his warrant, or in caſe the party complained againſt ſhall not appear on ſuch ſummons being ſerved on him, or left at his uſual place of abode, and proof be made thereof by oath before ſuch juſtice, then ſuch juſtice is to make inquiry touching the matters complained of by the oaths of any perſons requiſite, and to determine ſuch complaint; and, upon confeſſion or proof of one witneſs upon oath, to convict on acquit the party againſt whom complaint is made; and if the money forfeited be not paid on conviction, ſuch juſtice ſhall iſſue his warrant for levying thereof within his juriſdiction by diſtreſs on the goods of ſuch offender, and to cauſe ſale to be made of ſuch goods in caſe the money forfeited with the charges be not paid within five days after ſuch diſtreſs, rendering the overplus to the owner after deducting the charges of diſtreſs and ſale; and if any ſuch offender have not goods within the juriſdiction of ſuch juſtice, any juſtice within whoſe juriſdiction ſuch offender ſhall be, ſhall iſſue a warrant on the application of any informer to apprehend ſuch offender, and ſo commit him to ſome public priſon or houſe of correction of the county or place in which ſuch offence is committed, for any time not exceeding one calendar month, nor leſs than ten days, unleſs ſuch offender ſooner pay the money forfeited: and if any witneſs refuſe to be examined, he may be committed by ſuch juſtice to ſome priſon of the county, &c. where ſuch witneſs ſo makes a default, for any time not exceeding ten days.

Sect. 16. If any perſon convicted of any offence puniſhable by this act, or for ſelling any truſs of hay of leſs weight than the ſame ought to be, think himſelf aggrieved by the judgment of any juſtice, ſuch perſon may appeal to the general or quarter ſeſſions of the peace of the county or place in which ſuch conviction is made, next after ſuch conviction, unleſs ſuch next ſeſſions be held within ſix days after ſuch conviction, and then ſuch perſon may appeal to the ſecond general or quarter ſeſſions next after ſuch conviction; but the party ſo appealing, ſhall, before ſuch appeal be received, enter into a recognizance with two ſureties before ſuch juſtice, in double the ſum which ſuch perſon is adjudged to forfeit, to proſecute ſuch appeal with effect, and to abide the judgment of the ſeſſions, and ſhall alſo give three days notice in writing of ſuch appeal to, or leave the ſame at the uſual place of abode of, the perſon who proſecuted to conviction the party ſo appealing; and the juſtices at ſuch ſeſſions are finally to determine ſuch appeal, and to make ſuch order, and award ſuch coſts, as they deem meet; and the determination of ſuch ſeſſions on every ſuch appeal ſhall be final: and no certiorari ſhall be allowed to remove any ſuch proceedings or determination.

Sect. 17. One moiety of all money forfeited by this act ſhall be paid to the perſon proſecuting to conviction any offender, and the other moiety to the uſe of the poor of the pariſh where the offence is committed.

Sect. 18. Any inhabitant of the pariſh or place in which any offence is committed againſt this act, ſhall be a competent witneſs.

Sect. 19. If any action be commenced for any thing done in purſuance of this act, the ſame ſhall be commenced within ſix months after the offence committed, and ſhall be laid in the county or city where the offence is committed; and the defendant may plead the general iſſue; and if a verdict be found for the defendant, &c. the defendant ſhall recover treble coſts.

Caveat, Is a caution entered in the ſpiritual court, to ſtop probates, adminiſtrations, licences, diſpenſations, faculties, inſtitutions, and ſuch like, from being granted without the knowledge of the party that enters it: And a caveat is of ſuch validity by the Canon law, that if an inſtitution, adminiſtration, or the like, be granted pending ſuch caveat, the ſame is void. Ayl. Par. 145, 146. 1 Lev. 157. Owen 50. But not ſo by the Common law. For by the Common law, an admiſſion, inſtitution, probate, adminiſtration, or the like, contrary to a caveat entered, ſhall ſtand good; in the eye of which law, the caveat is ſaid to be only a caution for the information of the court (like a caveat entered in Chancery againſt the paſſing of a patent, or in the Common Pleas againſt the levying of a fine); but that it doth not preſerve the right untouched, ſo as to null all ſubſequent proceedings, becauſe it doth not come from any ſuperior; nor hath it ever been determined, that a Biſhop became a diſturber, by giving inſtitution without regard to a caveat; on the contrary, it was ſaid by Coke and Doderidge, in the caſe of Hutchins and Glover, Hil. 14 Jac. that they have nothing to do with a caveat in the Common law. Gibſ. 778. 2 Bac. Abr. 404. Ayl. Par. 145, 146.

When a church becomes void, and a caveat is entered with the regiſter of the biſhop of the dioceſe, that none be inſtituted to that church until he be made privy thereto, and the biſhop, before he hath notice of the caveat, doth inſtitute a clerk, ſuch inſtitution is void in the ſpiritual law; becauſe the regiſter ought to give notice to the biſhop that a caveat was entered, and his negligence ſhall not prejudice him who entered; but if the biſhop hath notice of the caveat, and gives a day to him who put it in, and before that day he inſtitutes another, the entering a Caveat is a ſuperſedeas in our law. Goldſ. 146. in the lord Zouch's caſe.

The King was patron of the church of C. and one who pretended to a right of preſentation entered a caveat in the life-time of the incumbent, who was then very ſick, and ſoon after died; then a ſtranger preſented his clerk, who was inſtituted and inducted, and he who entered the caveat preſented his clerk who was likewiſe inſtituted; and it being a queſtion in the ſpiritual court, which of theſe clerks, had a good title, it was referred to a trial at law, in which the leſſee of the preſentee of the King, was plaintiff in ejectment; and it was adjudged, that the caveat was void, it being entered in the life-time of the incumbent; that the church was full by inſtitution againſt all perſons but the King; that the preſentation of him who entered the caveat was void, by reaſon of the ſuper-inſtitution of the clerk of the ſtranger, and ſo the preſentation of the King was good. Poph. 113. Morgan verſus Roan.

Where any controverſy may ariſe concerning the probate of a will, or the right of any adminiſtration may come in queſtion, it is uſual for one of the parties to enter a caveat in the ſpiritual court, which, as a doctor of the Civil law affirmed in Hitchins's and Glover's caſe, ſtands in force for three months. 2 Roll. Rep. 6.

The entering a caveat, being at the inſtance of the party, is only for the benefit of the ordinary, that he may do no wrong; it is a cautionary act for his better information, to which the temporal courts have no manner of regard; therefore, if after a caveat entered, the ordinary ſhould grant adminiſtration or probate of a will, it is not void by our law; it is true, it is void by the Canon law; but our law takes no notice of a caveat. 1 Rol. Rep. 191. Hitchins verſus Glover.

Certificate, (Certificatorium) Is uſed for a writing made in any court, to give notice to another court of any thing done therein: as for example; a certificate of the cauſe of attaint is a tranſcript made briefly, and in few words, by the clerk of the crown, clerk of the peace, or clerk of aſſize, to the court of the King's Bench, containing the tenor and effect of every indictment, outlawry, or conviction, and clerk attainted, made or pronounced in any other court. 34 H. 8. 14. Certification of aſſiſe of novel diſſeiſin (Certificatio aſſiſæ novæ diſſeiſinæ) Is a writ granted for the re-examining or review of a matter paſſed by aſſiſe before any juſtices, and is called certificatio novæ diſſeiſinæ. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 181. Of this ſee alſo Reg. Orig. fol. 200. and the New Book of Entries, verb. Certificate of aſſiſe. This word hath uſe, where a man appearing by his bailiff to an aſſiſe brought by another, hath loſt the day, and having ſomething more to plead for himſelf, as a deed of releaſe, &c. which the bailiff did not, or might not plead for him, deſireth a farther examination of the cauſe, either before the ſame juſtices or others, and obtaineth letters patent patent to them to that effect. The form of these letters patent you may see F. N. B. f. 181. and that done, bringeth a writ to the sheriff, to call both the party for whom the assise passed, and the jury that was impanelled upon the same, before the said justices at a certain day and place. And it is called a certificate, because in it there is mention made to the sheriff, that upon the parties complaint of the defective examination, or doubts yet remaining upon the assise passed, the King hath directed his letters patent to the justices, for the better certifying of themselves, whether all points of the said assise were duly examined. See farther, Old Nat. Brev. and F. N. B. ubi supra. Of this you may also read Bract. lib. 4. c. 19. n. 4. in fine, & 5, 6. where he discusseth the reason of this point very learnedly. And lastly, Horne in his Mirror of Just. lib. 3. cap. final. sect. En Ayde des Memoyres, &c.

Certiorari. The writ of certiorari is an original writ, and issueth sometimes out of the Chancery, and sometimes out of the King's Bench, and lieth where the King would be certified of any record which is in the Treasury, or in the Common Pleas, or in any court of record, or before the sheriff and coroners, or of a record before the commissioners, or before the escheator; then the King may send that writ to any of the said courts or officers, to certify such record before him in banco, or in the Chancery, or before other justices, where the King pleaseth to have the same certified. And he or they to whom or who the certiorari is directed, ought to send the same record according to the tenor of the writ, and as the writ doth command him; and if he or they fail so to do, then an alias shall be awarded, and afterwards a pluries, vel causam nobis significes, and after an attachment, if a good cause be not returned upon the pluries, wherefore they do not send the record. F. N. B. 245.

Also the King might by such writ of certiorari send for the tenor of the record, or for the tenor of the tenor of the record, at his election; and those writs ought to be obeyed, and the records sent, as the writ commandeth them to do. F. N. B. 245.

1. Out of what court a certiorari ought to issue, and in what cases grantable.

2. In what cases the court of King's Bench is restrained from granting a certiorari by acts of parliament.

3. What the party, who applies for a certiorari, must do before it is granted and allowed.

1. Out of what court a certiorari ought to issue, and in what cases grantable.

The court of King's Bench has a superintendency over all courts of an inferior criminal jurisdiction, and may, by the plenitude of its power, award a certiorari to have an indictment removed and brought before itself; and where such certiorari is allowable, ought of right to award it at the instance of the King, because every indictment is the suit of the King, and he has a prerogative of suing in what court he pleases. 1 Vent. 63. 1 Mod. 4. 2 Hawk. P. C. 287.

But though the court is to grant it at the suit of the King, yet it has a discretionary power in granting or refusing it at the suit of the defendant, and agreeable hereto it is laid down as a general rule, that the court will never grant it for the removal of an indictment before justices of gaol-delivery, without some special cause; as where there is just reason to apprehend that the court below may be unreasonably prejudiced against the defendant; or where there is so much difficulty in the case, that the judge below desires that it may be determined in the King's Bench; or where the King himself gives special direction that the cause shall be removed; or where the prosecution appears to be for a cause not properly criminal. 2 Hawk. P. C. 287. 1 Salk. 144, 149, 150, 151. 1 Keb. 4.

Neither will the court of King's Bench ordinarily, at the prayer of the defendant, grant a certiorari for the removal of an indictment of perjury, or forgery, or other heinous misdemeanor; for such crimes deserve all possible discountenance, and the certiorari might delay, if not wholly discourage their prosecution. 1 Sid. 54. 2 Hawk. P. C. 287.

Nor will the court of King's Bench grant it for a conviction of recusancy on a default at the sessions, because by the statute such convictions are to be removed into the Exchequer, and process on them is to go from thence. 2 Hawk, P. C. 287, 288. 2 Salk. 145.

Also it is said to be a good objection against granting a certiorari, that issue is joined, and a venire awarded for the trial in the court below. 2 Hawk. P. C. 288.

A certiorari shall not be granted to remove an indictment or appeal after a conviction, unless for some special cause; as where the judge below is in doubt what judgment to give. 1 Salk. 149. 6 Mod. 17.

An indictment was removed into the court of King's Bench by certiorari, after conviction, and before judgment; upon which a doubt arose, what the court could do, the certiorari being brought before judgment; and this court not being apprized of the circumstances of the offence, could not tell what judgment to give: and in Carth. 6. it is said, they cannot give judgment. A rule therefore was made, to shew cause why the certiorari should not be quashed, so as to remit it back to the sessions; which was afterwards made absolute. Stra. 1227.

The court has refused to grant a certiorari to remove a recognizance of appearance before justices of oyer and terminer, &c. because the court below is most proper to judge upon the whole circumstances of the case, which are equitably to be considered, whether it ought to be estreated or not. 2 Hawk. P. C. 288.

By a rule of the King's Bench, no order of commissioners of sewers is to be filed without notice to the parties concerned; neither will the court suffer the return of a certiorari for such order to be filed, without hearing affidavits of the facts; whereon, if the matter appear doubtful, it is usual to order a trial of feigned issues, and after such trial, either to file the return, or supersede the certiorari, and grant a procedendo, and give costs, &c. as shall appear reasonable. 2 Hawk. P. C. 288. See 2 Keb. 500.

The courts of Chancery and King's Bench may award a certiorari to remove the proceeding from any inferior courts, whether they be of ancient or newly created jurisdiction, unless the statute or charter, which creates them, exempts them from such jurisdiction. S. P. C. 70. 1 Salk. 144. pl. 3. 2. Lev. 86. 1 Lev. 312. Cro. Car. 265. 3 Mod. 93.

And therefore it is agreed, That the King's Bench may award such certiorari to justices in eyre, or of gaol-delivery, or of a county palatine, and to the college of physicians, having a special power by statute to impose fines, &c. and to justices of the peace, &c. even in such cases, which they are empowered by statute finally to hear and determine; and to commissioners of sewers, for the clause in 13 Eliz. cap. 9. That such commissioners shall not be compelled to make any return of their ordinances, had been construed to intend only to exempt them from returning their order into Chancery, as by the statute of H. 8. they were obliged to do. 1 Bac. Abr. 351.

Also it seems settled at present, that a certiorari lies to the courts of Cinque ports, to remove an indictment from those courts, and that the privilege of the Cinque ports, which they have enjoyed time out of mind, that the King's writs do not run there, is to be intended only of civil causes between party and party. Cro. Car. 252, 291. 1 Rol. Abr. 395.

Also a certiorari lies from the King's Bench to the courts of grand sessions, and to other courts in Wales, whether in the old Welch counties, or in the lordships marches; and whether such indictments be for inferior crimes or for felony. 2 Hawk. P. C. 287.

2. In what caſes the court of King's Bench is reſtrained from granting a certiorari by acts of parliament.

By ſtat. 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13. it is enacted, That no writs of habeas corpus, or certiorari, ſhall be granted to remove any priſoner out of any gaol, or to remove any recognizance, except the ſame writs be ſigned with the proper hands of the Chief Juſtice, or in his abſence, of one of the Juſtices of the court out of which the ſame writ ſhall be awarded or made; upon pain, that he that writeth any ſuch writs, not being ſigned, as is aforeſaid, to forfeit for every ſuch writ five pounds.

If a certiorari be taken out of the vacation and teſted of the precedent term, the fiat for it muſt be ſigned by ſome judge of the court ſome time before the eſſoin day of the ſubſequent term; otherwiſe it is irregular; and the court, upon motion, will order a procedendo; but it is ſaid, that there is no need for any judge to ſign the writ of certiorari itſelf, but only in ſuch caſes wherein it is required by ſtatute. 1 Salk. 150.

And by ſtat. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 11. "No certiorari in term-time, at the proſecution of the defendant, ſhall be granted out of the King's Bench, to remove any indictment or preſentment from any general or quarter-ſeſſions before trial, but on motion and rule in open court; but in vacation ſuch writ may be granted by any judge of the ſaid court, whoſe name ſhall be indorſed thereon, and alſo the party's name at whoſe inſtance it is granted.

It is enacted by ſtat. 22 Car. 2. c. 12. "That all defects of repairs of cauſeways, pavements, highways, or bridges, ſhall be preſented in the county only where ſuch cauſeways, &c. lie, and not elſewhere; and that no indictment or preſentment ſhall be removed by certiorari or otherwiſe out of the ſaid county, till ſuch indictment or preſentment ſhall be traverſed, and judgment thereupon given." And it is farther enacted by 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 11. "That all matters concerning highways, &c. ſhall be determined in the county where they lie, and not elſewhere; and no preſentment, indictment, or order made by virtue of that act, ſhall be removed by certiorari." But it is enacted by the 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 11. "That if the right or title to repair ſuch cauſeways, &c. may come in queſtion, upon ſuggeſtion and affidavit of the truth thereof, a certiorari may be granted to remove ſuch indictment or preſentment into the King's Bench.

By the 7 & 8 W. & M. cap. 6. made for the recovery of ſmall tithes before juſtices of the peace, it is enacted, "That no proceedings, or judgment by virtue thereof, ſhall be removed or ſuperſeded by any writ of certiorari out of any court whatſoever, unleſs the title of the tithes, &c. ſhall come in queſtion. If the party inſiſts on any matter of law before the juſtice of peace, which is any way doubtful, as on a queſtion in a pariſh to be diſcharged of a certain kind of tithe, &c. the order may be removed, within the intent of the ſtatute. 2 Hawk. P. C. 289.

Certiorari ſhall not be granted to ſuperſede proceedings of juſtices on exciſe laws, 12 Car. 2. c. 23. ſ. 36. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 5. ſect. 14. 6 Geo. 1. c. 21. ſect. 21, 22. 5 Will. & M. c. 5. ſect. 17.

3. What the party who applies for a certiorari muſt do before it is granted and allowed.

Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 8. ſect. 5 & 6. Whereas indictments of riot, forcible entry, or aſſault and battery found at the quarter-ſeſſions, are often removed by certiorari; all ſuch writs of certiorari ſhall be delivered at ſome quarter-ſeſſions in open court; and the parties indicted ſhall before allowance of ſuch certiorari become bound unto the proſecutors in ten pounds, with ſuch ſureties as the juſtices ſhall think fit, with condition to pay to the proſecutors, within one month after the conviction, ſuch coſts as the juſtices of peace ſhall allow; and in default thereof it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices to proceed to trial. And the like recognizance in the ſum of 40 l. is required by ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 6. on certiorari's for indictments on that ſtatute concerning the highways.

Theſe ſtatutes do not extend to all indictments at ſeſſions in general, but only to thoſe particular ones therein mentioned; but this defect was in a great meaſure ſupplied by the rules of the court of King's Bench, which, upon the removal of an indictment from London to Middleſex, required a recognizance from the defendant, to carry down the record to trial the ſame term on which the certiorari was returnable, or the ſittings after, and, on the removal of an indictment from other counties, required ſuch recognizanee for a trial at the next aſſizes. 2 Hawk. P. C. 291.

Stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 11. ſect. 2. In term time no certiorari at the proſecution of any perſon indicted ſhall be granted out of the court of King's Bench, to remove any indictment or preſentment of treſpaſs or miſdemeanor before trial from the quarter-seſſions, unleſs upon motion of counſel and rule of court; and the parties proſecuting ſuch certiorari ſhall find two manucaptors before one or two juſtices of the county in 20 l. with condition to plead to the Indictment in the King's Bench, and at their own charges to procure the Iſſue to be tried at the next aſſizes for the county, if not in London, Weſtminſter, or Middleſex; and if in the ſaid cities or county, then to be tried the next term, or at the ſitting after the ſaid term, if the King's Bench ſhall not appoint any other time; and if any other time, then at ſuch other time, and to give due notice of trial to the proſecutor; and the ſaid recognizance and certiorari ſhall be certified into the King's Bench, and there filed, and the name of the proſecutor indorſed; and if the party proſecuting ſuch certiorari, being the defendant, ſhall not, before allowance thereof, procure ſuch manucaptors, the juſtices of peace may try the indictment at the ſeſſions, notwithſtanding ſuch certiorari.

Sect. 3. If the defendant proſecuting ſuch certiorari be convicted, the King's Bench ſhall give coſts to the proſecutor, if he be the party grieved, or any civil officer who ſhall proſecute upon account of any fact that concerned him as officer; and within ten days after demand upon oath and refuſal, he ſhall have an attachment againſt the defendant for contempt; and the recognizance ſhall not be diſcharged till the coſts be paid.

Sect. 4. In the vacation writs of certiorari, may be granted by any of the judges of the King's Bench, whoſe names ſhall be indorſed, and the name of the party at whoſe inſtance it is granted; and before the allowance of ſuch writ the party indicted proſecuting ſuch certiorari ſhall find ſureties as before-mentioned.

Sect. 5. Upon every certiorari granted within Cheſter, Lancaſter or Durham to remove indictments, the parties indicted proſecuting ſuch certiorari ſhall find ſureties to try the ſaid indictment at the next aſſizes or general gaol-delivery; and if convicted, ſhall be liable to like coſts.

Sect. 6. If any indictment be againſt any perſon for not repairing highways, cauſeways, pavements, or bridges, and the title to repair the ſame may come in queſtion; upon which ſuggeſtion, and affidavit made thereof, a certiorari may be granted to remove the ſame into the King's Bench; provided, that the parties proſecuting ſuch certiorari ſhall find rwo manucaptors to be bound in a recognizance, with condition as aforeſaid.

Made perpetual by 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 33.

Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 33. ſect. 2. The party proſecuting any certiorari to remove an indictment from the quarter-ſeſſions, may find two manucaptors to enter into a recognizance before any of the juſtices of the King's Bench, in the ſame ſum, and under the ſame condition, as is required by the act 5 & 6 W. & M. cap. 11. whereof mention ſhall be made on the back of the writ, under the hand of the juſtice who took the ſame, which ſhall be as effectual to ſtay proceedings, as if taken before a juſtice of peace in the county; and it ſhall be added to the condition of the recognizance, that the party ſhall appear from day to day in the King's Bench, and not depart till diſcharged by the court.

In the conſtruction of theſe ſtatutes, the following points ſeem moſt remarkable.

That notwithſtanding the expreſs words are, That juſtices may proceed to trial, &c. if a proper recognizance be not given, notwithſtanding ſuch certiorari, yet they will be in contempt if they make no return to it, for all writs muſt be obeyed, unleſs good cauſe ſhewn to the contrary. 1 Keb. 225. 1 Sid. 70. 2 Hawk. P. C. 292.

That theſe ſtatutes extend only to certiorari's procured by defendants, and therefore thoſe procured by proſecutors remain as they were at Common law. 6 Mod. 246,

That theſe ſtatutes being in the affirmative, as to the recognizances, do not take away the power which the juſtices of the King's Bench had before; and therefore if ſuch a juſtice take a recognizance variant from the form preſcribed by the ſtatute, it will be as effectual as before; but it is ſaid, that in ſuch caſe the certiorari, if procured by the defendant, will be no ſuperſedeas, becauſe the ſtatutes ſeem to be expreſs, that the ſeſſions may proceed notwithſtanding any certiorari procured by a defendant, whereon ſuch recognizance is not given as is preſcribed. 1 Hawk. P. C. 292. 1 Salk. 564.

That if the perſons offering to be ſureties appear to be worth 20 l. the juſtices cannot refuſe them. March 27. 2 Hawk. P. C. 292.

That if there be ſeveral defendants, and ſome find ſureties, and others not, the indictment ſhall be removed as to thoſe at leaſt who find ſureties, becauſe they ſhall not be prejudiced by the fault of others; and as ſome ſay, it ſhall be removed as to all. 2 Hawk. P. C. 292. March 27.

That in taxing the coſts, thoſe only are to be conſidered that were ſubſequent to the certiorari. 1 Salk. 55.

That the proſecutor, by accepting the coſts, ſo taxed is not reſtrained from aggravating the fine, becauſe he has a right to them by the expreſs words of the ſtatute; but in other caſes, if a proſecutor accept coſts from a defendant, he cannot afterwards aggravate the fine, becauſe having no right to the coſts, if he take them at all, he muſt take them in ſatisfaction of the wrong, after which it is unreaſonable for him to harraſs the defendant. 2 Hawk. P. C. 292.

That notwithſtanding the condition of the recognizance be, that the defendant ſhall procure a new trial at the next aſſizes, yet the recognizance ſhall not be forfeited, unleſs the proſecutor gives rules, &c. 1 Salk. 370.

That after the recognizance is forfeited for not procuring a trial, &c. no motion ſhall be made to quaſh the indictment. 1 Salk. 380. 2 Hawk. P. C. 293.

By ſtat. 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 10. againſt deer ſtealers it is enacted, That no certiorari ſhall be allowed to remove any proceedings on that act, unleſs the party convict ſhall become bound with good ſureties in 5 l. to pay full coſts and damages within one month after the conviction ſhall be confirmed, or a procedendo granted.

Stat. 5. Geo. 2. c. 19 ſ. 1. Upon appeal to the general ſeſſions for any county or precinct within England againſt orders made by juſtices of peace, ſuch juſtices aſſembled at any general ſeſſions ſhall cauſe any defects of form in ſuch orders to be amended without coſts, and proceed to hear the merits of ſuch orders, and to make ſuch determinations thereupon, as by law they ought in caſe there had not been ſuch defect of form.

Sect. 2. No certiorari ſhall be allowed to remove any order, unleſs the party proſecuting ſhall enter into a recognizance with ſureties before one juſtice of peace, where ſuch order ſhall have been made, or before one of his Majeſty's juſtices of the King's Bench, in the ſum of 50 l. with condition to proſecute without wilful delay, and to pay the party, in whoſe favour that order was made, within one month after the ſaid order ſhall be confirmed, their coſts to be taxed; and in caſe the party proſecuting ſuch certiorari ſhall not enter into ſuch recognizance, or ſhall not perform the conditions aforeſaid, it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices to proceed, and make further orders, as if no certiorari had been granted.

Sect. 3. The recognizance to be taken as aforeſaid ſhall be certified into the King's Bench, and filed with the certiorari, and order removed thereby; and if the order ſhall be confirmed, the perſons intitled to ſuch coſts, within ten days after demand made, upon oath made of the making ſuch demand and refuſal of payment, ſhall have an attachment for contempt, and the recognizance ſhall not be diſcharged until the coſts ſhall be paid, and the order complied with.

Stat. 13 Geo. 2. cap. 18. ſect. 5. For the better preventing vexatious delays and expence occaſioned by the ſuing forth writs of certiorari, no certiorari ſhall be granted to remove any conviction, judgment, order, or other proceedings, before any juſtice of the peace, or quarter-ſeſſions, unleſs it be applied for in ſix calendar months after ſuch proceedings had or made, and unleſs it be duly proved upon oath, and notice thereof in writing, to the juſtice or juſtices, or two of them (if ſo many there be) before whom ſuch proceedings have been, to the end that ſuch juſtices, or the parties therein concerned, may ſhew cauſe, if they ſo think fit, againſt the iſſuing the certiorari.

Cert-money, (Quaſi, certain money) Head money, or common fine, paid yearly by the reſiants of ſeveral manors to the lords thereof, pro certo letæ, for the certain keeping of the leet; and ſometimes to the hundred. As the manor of Hook in Dorſetſhire pays cert-money to the hundred of Egerton. This in ancient records is called certum letæ. See Common fine.

Cervisarii, The Saxons had a duty called drincelean or drinkelean, i. e. Dona potationis honoraria, quibus ſcilicet prædiorum dominus a vaſſallo honoratur & excipitur. Whence thoſe tenants were in Domeſday called cervisarii, from cervisia, ale, their chief drink; though cervisarius vulgarly ſignifies a beer or ale brewer.

Cerura, A mound, fence, or incloſure——Willielmus de Lucey, miles, dedit Thomæ miniſtro domus de Theleſford licentiam domos & portas levare, ædificare, & cum ceruris & muris includere viam quæ ducit ad eccleſiam de Thelesford, ſicut per muros dictorum miniſtri & fratrum juxta pontem extenditur. Cart. prioratus de Thelesford, M. S. Though poſſibly cerura is here for ferrura, and is to ſignify a water-lock.

Ceſſavit, Is a writ that lies in divers caſes, as appears by Fitz. Nat. Br. fol. 280. Upon this general ground, i. e. that he againſt whom it is brought hath for two years neglected to perform ſuch ſervice, or to pay ſuch rent as he is tied to by his tenure, and hath not upon his lands or tenements ſufficient goods or cattle to be diſtrained. See Fleta, lib. 5. cap. 34. ſect. Viſa ſunt. See Ceſſavit de cantaria, Ceſſavit de feodi firma, Ceſſavit per biennium, in Reg. of Writs, f. 237, 238. and New Book of Entries, verbo Ceſſavit. It lies not but for annual ſervice, rent, and ſuch like, not for homage or fealty. Cowell. Ceſſavit granted againſt tenant in fee farm, St. Glouc. 6 Ed. 1. c 4. And for the ceſſer of any ſervices, and ſhall paſs to the heirs, St. Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 21. for ceſſer of performing alms, St. Weſtm. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 41.

Ceſſes. By 22 H. 8. cap. 3. it ſeems to ſignify aſſeſſment or taxes: ceſſe or ceaſſe in Ireland is an exaction of victuals, at a certain rate, for the deputy's family, and the ſoldiers in garriſon. See The Earl of Straffora's trial.

Ceſſion (Ceſſio), A ceaſing, yielding up, or giving over. Si un parſon ou dean en Angliterre priſt un Everſquery en Ireland, ceo fait le primier Eſgliſe void per ceſſion Latch's Rep. f. 234.——Ratione vacationis prioratus prædicti, per ceſſionem patris Rogeri de Wellington, ultimi prioris, &c. Chauſ. 13 Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 38. Ceſſion is alſo where an eccleſiaſtical perſon is created biſhop, or when a parſon of a parſonage takes another benefice without diſpenſation, or otherwiſe not qualified, &c. in both caſes their firſt benefices are become void, and are ſaid to become void by ceſſion: and to thoſe that he had who was created biſhop, the King ſhall preſent for that time, whoever is patron of them; and in the other caſe the patron may preſent. See Avoidance.

Ceſſor, (Lat.) A loiterer or idle fellow; but we uſe it for him that ceaſeth or neglecteth ſo long to perform a duty belonging unto him, as that by his ceſſe or ceſſing, he incurreth the danger of law, and hath or may have the writ ceſſavit brought againſt him. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 136. And note, that where it is ſaid in divers places, the tenant ceſſeth, without any more words, that is to be underſtood, the tenant ceaſeth to do what he might, or is bound to do by the tenure of land or tenement.

Ceſſure, or Ceſſer, Is likewiſe to ſignify a giving over, or giving of place. Weſt. 2. cap. 41.

Ceſtui qui vie, Is in true French ceſtui à vie de qui, that is, he for whoſe life any land or tenement is granted. Perkins, Grants 97.

Ceſtui qui uſe, (Ille cujus uſui, vel ad cujus uſum) Is broken French, and this may be better modelled (ceſtui à l'uſe de qui). It is an ordinary ſpeech among lawyers, ſignifying him to whoſe uſe any other man is enfeoffed in any lands or tenements. See the New Book of Entries, verbo Uſes; and in Replevin, f. 508. col. 3. verbo Treſpaſs, fol. 606. & 123. col. 3. num. 7. And ſee 1 R. 3. cap. 1. and Co. lib. 1. 133. An. 12 Car. 2. cap. 30.

Ceſtui qui truſt, Is he who hath a truſt in lands or tenements committed to him, for the benefit of another. 12 Car. 2. cap. 30.

Chacea, The way through which cattle are drove to paſture, commonly called in ſome places a droveway. Ut ſi quis omnino viam obſtruat vel chaceam per quam ingredi ſolet paſturæ. Bracton, lib. 4. c. 44. It is alſo taken for a chaſe, or ſtation of game, more extended than a park, and leſs than a foreſt. Chacea is ſometimes taken for the liberty of chaſing, or hunting within ſuch a diſtrict. Boſcum in quo abbates Glaſtoniæ chaceam ſuam canibus ſuis & procurſum ſuum cum porcis ſuis habebant.——Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. MS. fol. 70. b.——Donec amicabili compoſitione chaſſiam & communiam, quam dictus abbas & anteceſſores ſui in boſcis habuerant, quietum clamavit. Ibid.

Chaceare, Ad lepores vel vulpes, To hunt hare or fox. ——Licet abbatis & ſuis chaceare ad lepores & vulpes, in mancrio ſuo de Donham. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. MS. f. 87.

Chacurus, (Fr. Chaſſeur) A horſe for the chace, or a hunter, unleſs poſſibly it rather ſignifies a ſwift dog, or fleet hound.——Willielmus de Breoſa dedit regi octingentas marcas, tres dextrarios, quinque chacuros, quatuor cenſas, & decem leporarios, anno 7 Joh.——Tenures, p. 134. See Dextrarius.

Chafewa, Is an officer in Chancery that fitteth the wax for the ſealing of the writs, and ſuch other inſtruments as are there made to be ſent out. This officer is borrowed from the French; for there Calefactores ceræ ſunt qui regiis litteris in cancellaria ceram imprimunt. Coraſius.

Chaffers, Seem to ſignify wares or merchandize, 3 Ed. 4. 4. and we yet uſe chaffering for buying and ſelling.

Chairs. See Coaches.

Chaldron, or Chalder of coals, Contains thirty-ſix buſhels of coals heaped up, and according to the ſealed buſhel kept at Guildhall, London, for that purpoſe, 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 2. It is written chawdren, 9 H. 5. 10. And in Pat. 10 R. 2, pag. 1. m. 13. chaldre. It ſhould weigh 2000 lb. weight.

Chalking. The merchants of the ſtaple require to be eaſed of divers new impoſitions, as chalking, ironage, wharfage, &c.. Rot. Parl. 50 Ed. 3.

Challenge, (Calumnia) Cometh of the French word chalenger, that is, ſibi aſſerere; and in a legal ſenſe ſignifies an exception, taken either againſt perſons or things: perſons, as in aſſiſe to the jurors, or any one or more of them; or in a caſe of felony, by a priſoner at the bar. Smith, de Rep. Angl. lib. 2. cap. 11. Britton, ca. 52. Bracton, lib. 2. tract. 2. c. 22. Againſt things, as a declaration. Old Nat. Brev. f. 76. Challenge made to the jurors, is either made to the array, or to the polls: Challenge to the array is when the whole number is excepted againſt as partially impanelled: Challenge to or by the polls is when ſome one or more are excepted againſt as not indifferent. Terms de la Ley. Challenge to the jurors is alſo divided into challenge principal, and challenge pur cauſe; that is, upon cauſe or reaſon. Challenge principal (otherwiſe by Staundf. Plac. Cor. fol. 157, 158. called peremptory) is that which the law allows without cauſe alledged, or farther examination, Lamb. Eiren. lib. 4. cap. 14. as a priſoner at the bar, arraigned upon felony, may peremptorily challenge to the number of 20, one after another, of the jury impanelled upon him, alledging no cauſe but his own diſlike, and they ſhall be ſtill put off, and new jurors taken in their places. But in caſe of high treaſon, no challenge peremptory is allowed. 33 Hen. 8. 35. Forteſcue ſaith, that a priſoner in this caſe may challenge thirty-five men, cap. 27. But that law was abridged by 25 Hen. 8. c. 3. And here obſerve, that there is ſome difference between challenge principal and challenge peremptory; peremptory being uſed only in matters matters crim'nal, and alledged without other cauſe than barely the priſoner's fancy. Staundf. Pl. Cor. f. 124. But principal, in civil actions for the moſt part, and with aſſigning ſome ſuch cauſe of exception, as being found true, the law alloweth, without farther ſcanning: for example, if either party ſay, that one of the jurors is the ſon, brother, couſin, or tenant to the other, or eſpouſed his daughter; this exception is good, and ſtrong enough, if it be true, without farther examination of the party's credit: and how far this challenge upon kindred reacheth, you have a notable example in Plowden, in the caſe of Vernon againſt Manors, fol. 425. Alſo in the plea of the death of a man, and in every action real, as every action perſonal, where the debt or damages amount to 40 marks, it is a good challenge to any man, that he cannot diſpend forty ſhillings by the year of freehold. 11 H. 7. c. 21. The ground of this challenge you may ſee farther in Fleta, lib. 4. cap. 8. Challenge upon reaſon or cauſe is when the party doth alledge ſome ſuch exception againſt one or more of the jurors, as is not forthwith ſufficient upon acknowledgment of the truth thereof, but rather arbitrable and conſiderable by the reſt of the jurors; as for example, if the ſon of a juror have eſpouſed the daughter of the adverſe party. Terms de la Ley, verbo Challenge. This challenge pur cauſe ſeems by Kitchin, fol. 92. to be termed challenge for favor; or rather, challenge for favor is ſaid there to be one ſpecies of challenge pur cauſe, where you may read what challenges are commonly only accounted principal, and what not. See the New Book of Entries, verbo Challenge, and the Old Nat. Brev. fol. 158, 159. That this word challenge is turned into Lat. by the word calumnia, appeareth by Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 18. & lib. 4. tract. 3. cap. 6. & lib. 5. cap. 6. See farther Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 32. Co. on Litt. 156, 157, &c. See Jury, Chamberdekins, or Chamberdakins, Were Iriſh beggars, who by the ſtatute of 1 H. 5. cap. 8. were by a certain time, within the ſtatute limited, to depart this land. Terms de la Ley, fol. 114. Obſerve this deſcription of them: Anno 1413. Univerſitatem Oxonienſem vexabant flagitioſi quidam Chamberdekyns dicti, qui non alii erant, quam mendici quidam Hiberni, habitu ſcholarium pauperculorum induti, ſub uullo autem præſide viventes. Iis ſolenne erat domi de die latitare, noctu vero circa Oenopolia domoſque infames obvium quemque ſpoliare, vel etiam trucidare. Antiq. Oxonienſis, lib. 1. p. 207.

Chamber depinct. Under this name in our parliament rolls is often mentioned, the room which was anciently St. Edward's chamber, and is now the painted chamber.

Chamberer, Is uſed for a chamber-maid. 33 H. 8. cap. 21.

Chamberlain, (Camerarius) Cometh of the French chambellan; that is, cubicularius vel præfectus cubiculi. It is variouſly uſed in our chronicles, laws, and ſtatutes; as Lord Great Chamberlain of England, Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold, the King's Chamberlain, (13 Ed. 1. c. 41. 17 Rich. 2. c. 16.) to whoſe office it eſpecially appertaineth to look to the King's chambers and wardrobe, and to govern the under-ſervants belonging to the ſame. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 6, 7.

To the Lord Chamberlain the keys of Weſtminſter-Hall, and the court of Requeſts are delivered upon all ſolemn occaſions. He diſpoſes of the ſword of ſtate to be carried before the King when he comes to the parliament, and goes on the right hand of the ſword next to the King's perſon. He has the care of providing all things in the houſe of lords in the time of parliament. To him belong livery and lodgings in the King's court, &c. and the gentleman uſher of the black rod, yeoman uſher, &c. are under his authority. He has the overſight and government of artificers retained in the King's ſervice, meſſengers, comedians, revels, muſick, &c. The ſerjeants at arms are likewiſe under his inſpection; and the King's chaplains, phyſicians, ſurgeons, barbers, &c. And he hath under him a vice-chamberlain; both being always privy counſellors.

There were formerly Chamberlains of the King's courts, 7 Ed. 6. 1. Chamberlain of the Exchequer, 51 H. 3. ſtat. 5. 10 Ed. 3. 11. 14 Ed. 3. 14. 26 H. 8. 2. Chamberlain of North Wales, Stow. p. 641. Chamberlain of Cheſter, Cromp. Jur. fol. 7. Chamberlain of London. This officer is commonly the receiver of all rents and revenues belonging to that city whereto he is chamberlain. Vide Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 70. To the Chamberlain of Cheſter, when there is no Prince of Wales and Earl of Cheſter, belongs the receiving and returning of all writs, coming thither out of any of the King's courts. The Lat. word ſeemeth to expreſs the function of this officer; for Camerarius dicitur a camera, i. e. Teſtudine ſive fornice, quia cuſtodit pecunias quæ in cameris præcipue reſervantur. Onuphrius de Interpret. Voc. Eccleſ. It ſeemeth to be borrowed from the Feudiſts, who define the word camera thus: Camera eſt locus in quem theſaurus colligitur, vel conclave in quo pecunia reſervatur. Zaſius de Feudis, par. 4. num. 7. And Peregrinus de Jure Fiſci, lib. 6. tit. 3. ſaith, that Camerarius, vel chamberlingus (quem quæſtorem antiqui appellarunt) in rebus fiſci primum locum tenet, quia Theſaurarius & cuſtos eſt publicæ pecuniæ. There are two officers of this name in the King's Exchequer, who were wont to keep a controulment of the pells of receipt, and exits, and certain keys of the treaſury and records: They kept alſo the keys of that treaſury, where the leagues of the King's predeceſſors, and divers ancient books, as Domeſday, Black Book of the Exchequer, remain. There is mention of this officer in the ſtatute 34 & 35 H. 8. cap. 16. There are alſo Under-Chamberlains of the Exchequer; for which ſee in Under-chamberlain.

Champarty, or Champerty, (from the Fr. champ, a field, and parti divided, or the Lat. campus and partitio, becauſe the parties in Champerty agree to divide the thing in queſtion) Signifieth in our Common law a maintenance of any man in his ſuit depending, upon condition to have part of the things (be it lands or goods) when it is recovered. F. N. B. fol. 171. This ſeems to have been an ancient grievance in our realm; for notwithſtanding the ſtatutes of 3 Ed. 1. 25. 13 Ed. 1. 49. 28 Ed. 1. 11. 32 Ed. 1. ſtat. 2 & 3. and 1 R. 2. cap. 4. and a form of a writ framed unto them; yet by ſtat. 4 Ed. 3. c. 11. it was again enacted, That whereas the former ſtatute provided redreſs for this in the King's Bench only (which at that time followed the court) from thenceforth it ſhould be lawful for the juſtices of the Common Pleas likewiſe, and juſtices of aſſizes, in their circuits, to inquire, hear, and determine this, and ſuch like caſes, as well at the ſuit of the King, as of the party. How far this writ extendeth, and the divers forms thereof applied to ſeveral caſes, ſee in F. N. B. fol. 171. Reg. Orig. f. 183. and the Book of Entries, verbo Champerty. Every champerty implieth maintenance. Cromp. Jur. fol. 39. See alſo Cromp. Juſtice of Peace, fol. 155. 2 par. Inſt. fol. 208. But every maintenance is not champerty, for champerty is but a ſpecies of maintenance, which is the genus. See Maintenance.

Champertors, vel campi participes, ſunt qui per ſe vel per alios placita movent, uel moveri faciunt, & ea ſuis ſumptibus proſequuntur ad campi partem, vel pro parte lucri habenda. 33 Ed. 1. ſtat. 2. Artic. ſuper Chart. cap. 11. Alſo it was ordained by the ſtat. 33 H. 8. confirmed by 37 H. 8. c. 7. The juſtices of peace, at their quarter-ſeſſions, ſhould have authority as well by oaths of twelve men, as by the information of any other perſon, to inquire of the offenders and offences againſt the laws and ſtatutes made and provided touching champerty, maintenance, &c. Termes de la Ley, fol. 114, 115.

Champion,

Champion, (Campio) Is taken not only for him that fights the combat in his own cauſe, but for him alſo that does it in the place or quarrel of another. Bracton, lib. 3. part 2. c. 21. numb. 24. who alſo ſeems to uſe this word for ſuch as held of another by ſome ſervices; as, Campiones faciunt homagium domino ſuo, lib. 2. cap. 35. Hottoman, de verbis feudalibus, defines it thus, Campio eſt certator pro alio datus in duello, a campo dictus, qui circus erat decertantibus definitus. And therefore it is called camfight. See Combat, and Sir Edward Byſhe's Notes upon Upton, where, fol. 36, you will find, that Henricus de Fernbureg, for thirty marks fee, did by a charter under the ſeal covenant to be champion for Roger, abbot of Glaſtonbury, anno 42 H. 3. See 3 Inſt. f. 221.

And here it may not be improper to mention a few things concerning champions, which I find in our law books and hiſtories, viz. they were uſually hired, and therefore they were accounted infamous perſons. Bracton, lib. 3. cap. 18.

Nunc caput in mortem vendunt, & funus arenæ.

Monks, eccleſiaſticks, and generally any perſons might hire them, except parricides, and thoſe who were accuſed of very great offences, but churchmen were firſt to have leave of the biſhop.

Before the champion came into the field, he was to ſhave his head, and make oath that he believed that the perſon who hired him was in the right, and that he would defend the cauſe to the utmoſt of his power; which was always done on foot, and with no other weapon but with a ſtick or club, and a ſhield. And before he engaged with his adverſary he always made an offering to the church, that God might aſſiſt him in the battle.

The puniſhment of a champion overcome in battle, and likewiſe of the perſon for whom he fought, was various: If it was the champion of a woman, ſhe was burnt, and the champion hanged: if it was of a man, and not for a capital crime, he not only made ſatisfaction, but had his right hand cut off; and the man was to be cloſe confined in priſon till the battle was over.

Champion of the King, (Campio Regis) Whoſe office is at the coronation of our Kings to ride into Weſtminſter-hall, armed cap-a-pe, when the King is at dinner there, and throw down his gauntlet by way of challenge, pronounced by a herald, that if any man ſhall deny or gainſay the King's title to the crown, he is there ready to defend it in ſingle combat, &c. which being done, the King drinks to him, and ſends him a gilt cup, with a cover, full of wine, which the champion drinks, and hath the cup for his fee.

This office (ever ſince the coronation of King Richard the Second, when Baldwin Frevile exhibited his petition for it) was adjudged from him to Sir John Dymocke, his competitor, both claiming from Marmion, as producing better records and evidence, and hath continued ever ſince in the worthy family of Dymocke, who hold the manor of Scrivelſbury in Lincolnſhire, hereditary from the Marmions, by grand ſerjeanty, viz. that the lord thereof ſhall be the King's champion, as aboveſaid. Camd. in part. Fin. Mich. 1. H. 6. Accordingly Sir Edward Dymocke performed this office at the coronation of his Majeſty King Charles the Second, April 23, 1661, and —— Dymocke, Eſq; performed it at the coronation of his preſent Majeſty King George the Third.

Chancellor (Cancellarius) Cometh of the French chancelier. Vincent Lupanus de magiſtratibus Francorum, ſaith, that cancellarius is no Latin word, though he citeth Latin writers that uſe it: with him agreeth Petrus Pithæus, lib. 2. Adverſariorum, cap. 12. And whereas Lupanus would derive it from the verb cancello, Pithæus thinks he hath ſome (though not ſufficient) colour for his opinion: and therefore derives it from cancelli, an incloſed or ſeparated place, a chancel, or place incompaſſed with bars, to defend the judges and other officers from the preſs of the people. Cancellarius at firſt, as Lupanus thinks, ſignified, the regiſters in court; Grapharios, ſcil. qui conſcribendis & excipiendis judicum actis dant operam. But this officer in late times is greatly advanced, not only in our, but in other kingdoms; for he is the chief adminiſtrator of juſtice, next to the Sovereign. All other juſtices in this kingdom are tied to the law, but the chancellor hath the King's abſolute power to moderate the written law, governing his judgment by the law of nature and conſcience, and ordering all things juxta æquum & bonum. Wherefore Stamford (in his Prærog. c. 20. fol. 25.) ſays, the chancellor hath two powers, one abſolute, the other ordinary; meaning, that though by his ordinary power, in ſome caſes, he muſt obſerve the form of proceeding as other inferior judges, yet in his abſolute power he is not limited by the written law, but by conſcience and equity, according to the circumſtances of the matter.

There were Chancellors in England before the coming of the Normans into this realm, Jan. Anglorum 127. for it is cited, that Reimbold was Chancellor to King Edward the Confeſſor; and there are divers other Chancellors cited to have been before this William.

As to the antiquity of this office in this kingdom, it is of no leſs date, as our learned Selden conceives, than King Ethelbert's time, who was the firſt Chriſtian King of the Saxons; for in a charter of his to the church of Canterbury, bearing date in the year of Chriſt 605, amongſt other witneſſes thereto, there is Augemundus Referendarius mentioned; where Referendarius (ſaith he) may well ſtand for Cancellarius; and the office of both (as the words applied to the court, are uſed in the code, novels, and hiſtory of the declining empire) ſignifying an officer who received petitions and ſupplications to the King, and made out his writs and mandates as a cuſtos legis; and though (ſaith he) there were divers Referendarii, as ſometimes 13, then 8, then more again, and ſo divers Chancellors in the empire; yet one eſpecially here exerciſing an office of the nature of thoſe many, might well be ſtiled by either of thoſe names. Dugd. Orig. Jurid. 32. cap. 16. ſect. 2.

Mich. 14 Jac. B. R. upon evidence at the bar, a charter of William the Conqueror was ſhewn, under the ſeal of the ſaid King, which was ſubſcribed by ſeveral Lords as witneſſes, in which I ſaw that it was ſubſcribed per Mauricium Regis Cancellarium, after the biſhops, and before the abbots. 1 *Rol. The Chancellor ſhall have the preſentation to all benefices of the King under 20 marks. Br. Preſentation, pl. 17. cites 38 Ed. 3. 3, 4.

Of what power and authority the Chancellor was in theſe elder times, or what his office, is not eaſily made out; the reading, allowing, and perhaps dictating royal grants, charters, writs, &c. keeping and affixing the King's ſeal to them, as the learned Sir Henry Spelman thought, and may alſo be gathered from Mr. Dugdale's diſcourſe of the Chancery, was the greateſt part of their truſt and employment, and that he had no cauſes pleaded before him until the time of Ed. 3. and thoſe not many till the reign of Hen. 4. Nor are there any decrees to be found in Chancery before the 20th of Hen. 6. Be his power and office what it would then, it was leſs than that of the juſticiar, who was next to the King in place of judicature; by his office he preſided in the Exchequer, the Chancellor ſitting on his left hand, as Gervaſe of Tilbury tells us, and by his office was the firſt man in the kingdom after the King; and that under his own teſte he could cauſe the King's writ to be made out, to deliver what ſum he would out of the Exchequer. The Chancellor was the firſt in order on the left hand of the juſticiar; and as he was a great perſon in court, ſo he was in the Exchequer, for no great thing paſſed but with his conſent and advice, that is, nothing could be ſealed without his allowance or privity, as it there appears. Brady's Preface to the Norman Hiſtory, 152 (F) 153 (A.)

Conſtituting a Chancellor does not conſtitute a court of equity, as in the caſe of Chancellor of the garter, &c. There was a Chancellor of the court of augmentations, and yet neither of them ever held a court of equity; per Hale Ch. J. 2 Lev. 24. Mich. 23 Car. 2. B. R.

The Chancellor (during the time of the grand juſticiary) before the breaking the courts into diſtinct juriſdictions, had the cuſtody of the ſeal, and therefore iſſued all originals returnable returnable before the juſticiar. But when the juriſdictions were diſtinguiſhed, the originals relating to civil pleas were returnable before the juſtices of C. B. But the originals in treſpaſs might be returnable in either court, becauſe the plea was criminal as well as civil; but B. R. themſelves made out the proceſs in criminal matters; for in this they ſhared with the power of the Chancery, though the Chancery continued to be the foot and baſis of a civil juriſdiction; but the criminal juriſdiction was returned coram rege, and not coram juſticiariis de banco. Gib. He that bears this magiſtracy is called High Chancellor of England (which is the higheſt honour of the long robe) being made ſo per traditionem magni ſigilli ſibi per dominum regem, and by taking his oath. And by the ſtatute 5 Eliz. cap. 18. the Lord Chancellor and Keeper have one and the ſame power; and therefore ſince that ſtatute, there cannot be a Lord Chancellor and Lord Keeper at one and the ſame time; but before there might, and hath been. Chancellor in cathedral churches. His office is thus deſcribed in the Monaſticon, 3 tom. pag. 24. in the ſtatutes of Litchfield, viz. whether he is reſident, or not, his duty is Lectiones legendas in eccleſia per ſe vel per ſuum vicarium auſcultare, male legentes emendare, ſcholas conferre, ſigilla ad cauſas conferre, literas capituli facere & conſignare, libros ſervare, quotieſcunque voluerit prædicationes in eccleſia vel extra eccleſiam prædicare, & cui voluerit prædicationis officium aſſignare. Ibid. p. 339.

Chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaſter. This officer is mentioned in ſtat. 3 Ed. 6. c. 1. and anno 5 ejuſdem, c. 26. His office is principally in that court to judge and determine all controverſies between the King and his tenants of the dutchy land, and otherwiſe to direct all the King's affairs belonging to that court. The Chancellor is the chief judge of the dutchy court, who in difficult points of law is uſually aſſiſted by two judges of the Common law, out of one court or other, to decide the matter in queſtion. This court is held in Weſtminſter-Hall, and was formerly much uſed in relation to ſuits between tenants of dutchy lands, and againſt accountants and others for the rents and profits of the ſaid lands. Under the Chancellor of the dutchy are an attorney of the courts, one chief clerk or regiſter, and ſeveral auditors, &c.

Chancellor of the Exchequer, Is mentioned in ſtat. 25 H. 8. c. 16. His office hath been thought by many to have been created for the qualifying extremities in the Exchequer. He ſits in the court, and in the Exchequer-Chamber; and, with the reſt of the court, orders things to the King's beſt benefit. He is always in commiſſion with the Lord Treaſurer for letting the lands that came to the crown by the diſſolution of abbies, or otherwiſe; and hath, by the ſtatute of 33 H. 8. c. 39. power with others to compound for the forfeitures upon penal ſtatutes, bonds, and recognizances entered into to the King; he hath alſo a great authority and juriſdiction in the management and diſpoſal of the royal revenue, and concerning the firſt-fruits, as appears by the acts for uniting them to the crown.

Chance-medley, Signifies the caſual killing of a man, not altogether without the killer's fault, though without an evil intent. Staunf. Pl. Cor. lib. 1. cap. 8. calls it homicide by miſadventure; Weſt. Symb. par. 2. tit. Indictments, ſect. 5. calls it homicide mixt. It is alſo called manſlaughter by miſadventure, for which the offender ſhall have his pardon of courſe, as appears by the ſtatute of 6 Ed. 1. 9. But here is to be conſidered, whether he that commits this manſlaughter by chance-medley was doing a lawful thing: for if the act were unlawful, it is felony. As if two were fighting together, and a third man comes to part them, and is killed by one of the two without any malice, forethought, or evil intent in him that killed the man; yet this is murder in him, and not manſlaughter by chance-medley, or miſadventure; becauſe they two that fought together were doing an unlawful act: and if they were met with prepenſed malice, the one intending to kill the other, then it is murder in them both. See Skene de Verb. Signif. verb. Melletum, where he ſays, this in Scotland is called chaudmelle. See Homicide.

Chancery. (Cancellaria) Is a court of equity and conſcience, moderating the rigour of other courts, that are ſtrictly tied to the letter of the law, whereof the Lord Chancellor of England is the chief judge. Cromp. Jur. fol. 41. Or elſe the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, 4 Eliz. cap. 18. The officers belonging to this court are the Lord Chancellor, or Keeper of the Great Seal, who is ſole judge here; the Maſter of the Rolls (anciently called Gardein des Rolls) who in the Lord Chancellor's abſence heareth cauſes and gives orders. 4 Inſt. f. 97. Twelve Maſters of the Chancery, who are aſſiſtants, and ſit by turns on the bench; the Six Clerks, who have each of them about 12 clerks under them, in nature of attornies in the court; two chief examiners, who have five or ſix clerks a-piece; one chief regiſter, who hath uſually four or five deputies; the clerk of the crown; the warden of the Fleet, the uſher, ſerjeant at arms, and crier of the court; the curſitors and their clerks; the clerks of the petty bag; the clerk of the hanaper; the controller of the hanaper; the clerk of the appeals; the clerk of the faculties, the ſealer, the chaſe-wax; the clerk of the patents, clerk of preſentations, clerk of diſmiſſions, clerk of licences to alienate, clerks of the enrolments, clerks of the protections, clerks of the ſubpœna's, clerks of the affidavits, &c. which ſee deſcribed in their ſeveral places. See Coke's 4 Inſt. fol 82. The juriſdiction of this court is of two kinds; ordinary, or legal; and extraordinary, or abſolute.

1. Of the ordinary and limited court, proceeding according to law, commonly called The Petty Bag.

2. Of the extraordinary court, proceeding according to equity.

3. Statutes concerning the court of Chancery.

1. Of the ordinary and limited court, proceeding according to law, commonly called The Petty Bag.

To underſtand the nature of this court we muſt obſerve, that in ancient times the Chancellor was likewiſe chaplain to the King, and it was his buſineſs, in the time of the juſticiar, to write Diplomata, that is, all charters and commiſſions from the King; therefore when the power of the juſticiar was broke, he obtained the Officina Brevium & Chartarum Regiarum; from thence all the extraordinary juriſdictions, touching granting of charters, as likewiſe all inqueſts of office to intitle the crown, were returned into this office; and the Exchequer, in which theſe things were anciently tranſacted, became only an ordinary court of revenue, to ſet leaſes to the King's farmers, and to get in the King's debts; and therefore the office in the Exchequer was only an office of inſtruction, of what lands were in the King in particular counties; but to veſt lands in the crown de novo, it was neceſſary to have an office under the great ſeal, and ſo to grant lands from the crown, unleſs it were merely farms that were granted for years. 1 New Abr. 587. See 2 Co. 16. Plowd. 320. 4 Co. 93.

From hence, at this day, this court has a juriſdiction to hold plea upon a ſcire facias, to repeal the King's letters patents upon petitions, monſtrans de droit, traverſes of offices, ſcire facias upon recognizances, executions upon ſtatutes, &c. which being regiſtered in this court, the proceſs thereupon iſſued out of the ſame, and were returnable there, and entered in the office called the Petty Bag; whereas the writs, which were the foundation of the buſineſs of the other courts, were put together in the hamper, which gave the diſtinction to thoſe names, and begot diſtinct officers in the court. 4 Inſt. 80.

If in this court the parties deſcend to iſſue, the chancellor cannot try it, but is to deliver the record, with his proper hand, into the King's Bench, where judgment is to be given; and the reaſon hereof ſeems to be, that the Chancery being officina brevium, if it could both make writs returnable here, and alſo try iſſues, it would incroach too much on other juriſdictions; beſides, there was no jury proceſs in the antient Aula regis, but upon demurrer the chancellor ſhall give judgment. 4 Inſt. 80.

An inquiſition was taken, and a forfeiture of the office of warden of the Fleet found, and the defendant pleaded to iſſue, and after iſſue joined, ſeveral other perſons came in by way of monſtrans de droit, and pleaded, and a demurrer to them, and the record was carried into B. R. by the clerk of the Petty Bag, without any order of the court, in order to have the iſſue tried; and it was reſolved, Firſt, That though the clerk had committed a fault to the court of Chancery, in carrying the record without any order, yet that it was well removed; for that which is done by the proper officer, is done by my lord chancellor, and may be ſaid to be done propria manu. Secondly, That though there were an iſſue and demurrer both, yet the removing the whole record was proper and well enough, on the authorities herein cited; by which it appears that judgment is moſt properly to be given in B. R. both on the iſſue and the demurrer; otherwiſe there might be two diſtinct judgments, and conſequently diſtinct executions taken out. 1 New Abr. 588.

Alſo all perſonal actions, by or againſt any officer or miniſter, in reſpect of their ſervice or attendance, may be determined in this court; but in theſe no jury proceſs can iſſue, but the record is to be removed, as before. 4 Inſt. 80.

2. Of the extraordinary court, proceeding according to equity.

This court was newly erected after the diviſion of the courts, and from a very ſmall and inconſiderable beginning hath (though impugned even towards its firſt original creation) grown up to that degree, as to ſwallow up moſt of the other buſineſs of the Common law. 1 New Abr. 588.

That there were ſome footſteps in the ancient Curia regis, which were the foundation of this juriſdiction, appears from the Engliſh juriſdiction exerciſed in the court of Exchequer, where, on informations on the King's behalf, articles are adminiſtered, to which the party is to anſwer upon oath; as likewiſe by impeachments in the houſe of Lords, where articles are exhibited in Engliſh for the party to anſwer to. 1 New Abr. 588. Reg. 25.

But notwithſtanding this, the eſtabliſhment of this juriſdiction ſeems to be owing to the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 24. by which a power was given, in new and extraordinary caſes, to invent a new writ: hence it was, that John Waltham, then biſhop of Saliſbury, and chancellor, as the Commons mention in their petition, out of his ſubtilty, found out and began a novelty againſt the form of the Common law, and that was the invention of the writ of ſubpœna; which writ ſummoned the party to appear, under a pain, to anſwer to ſuch things as ſhould be objected againſt him, and a petition was lodged in Chancery, containing the articles to which he was obliged to anſwer, and upon ſuch articles this new invented writ iſſued. 1 New Abr. 588.

By this conſtruction, not only a new writ was framed, but a new juriſdiction erected, and this was towards the time of R. 2. occaſioned chiefly by the ſtatute of Mortmain; for when that ſtatute had reſtrained the growing riches of the clergy, they found out this invention to avoid it, by giving away lands to truſtees for pious uſes, and the feoffees of ſuch truſt did the duties of ſuch tenure in behalf of the truſt; but if they perverted the truſt, the ordinary juriſdiction not reaching a thing that was againſt the ſtatute of Mortmain, the chancellor exerted this extraordinary juriſdiction, and examined them as to the ſeveral facts alledged againſt them. 1 New Abr. 588, 589.

After the eſtabliſhment of this court, it was thought reaſonable to give damages to ſuch perſons as were drawn into it by falſe ſuggeſtions, and therefore by the 17 R. 2. cap. 6. reciting, "For as much as people be compelled to come before the King's council, or in the Chancery, by writs grounded upon untrue ſuggeſtions, it is enacted, That the chancellor for the time being, preſently after that ſuch ſuggeſtions be duly found and proved untrue, ſhall have power to ordain and award damages, according to his diſcretion, to him which is ſo troubled unduly." For the conſtruction of this ſtatute, ſee 4 Inſt. 83.

The juriſdiction of this court was not only impugned towards its original creation, but even in the reign of queen Elizabeth it was ſtrongly holden by the judges of the Common law courts, that the chancellor could not by his decree ſequeſter the party's lands; that is, could only agere in perſonam, but not in rem; and agreeably hereunto it was reſolved 16 Eliz. in the caſe of Coleſton and Gardner, that if a man killed a ſequeſtrator in the execution of ſuch proceſs, it was no murder. Cro. Eliz. 651. 4 Inſt. 84. 1 Rol. Rep. 86, 190. Lit. Rep. 166.

But theſe were ſuch bloody and deſperate reſolutions, and ſo much againſt common juſtice and honeſty, which requires that the decrees of this court, which preſerved men from deceit, ſhould not be rendered illuſory, that they could not long ſtand; but this proceſs got the better of thoſe reſolutions on theſe grounds: Firſt, That the extraordinary juriſdiction might puniſh contempts by the loſs of eſtates, as well as impriſon the perſon, becauſe that liberty being a greater benefit than property; if they had power to commit the perſon, they might take from him his eſtate till he had anſwered his contempt. Secondly, To ſay that a court ſhould have power to decree about things, and yet ſhould have no juriſdiction in rem, is a perfect ſoleciſm in the conſtitution of the court itſelf. 1 New Abr. 589.

Alſo in the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James the firſt there are ſeveral ſtrong opinions, that a court of equity could not examine, or give any redreſs in a cauſe after judgment at law, and that ſuits in equity, to relieve againſt a judgment at law, are within the ſtatutes, which make it a præmunire to appeal to any foreign court, eſpecially if the end thereof be to controvert the very point determined at law, or to ſeek relief after judgment in a caſe wherein the law may relieve, as againſt exceſſiveneſs of damages, &c. 1 New Abr. 589.

But as theſe opinions tended to render the juſtice of this court illuſory, whoſe peculiar province it is to give remedies in caſes not remedial by the ordinary juriſdiction, and to relax and mitigate the rigour of the Common law, they ſeem now to be wholly exploded; and this ſeems highly reaſonable, when it is conſidered how uncertain and doubtful the law in many caſes is before it is determined; and conſequently that before ſuch determination it would be impoſſible to relax and mitigate the rigour thereof. Hard. 125. 1 Mod. 59. 3 Keb. 221. 1 Lev. 241. 2 Ch. Ca. 97. Abr. Eq. 130.

The ancient rule for the juriſdiction of the extraordinary court of Chancery was confined to frauds, accidents, and truſts; and though at this day, by its power in granting injunctions, it curbs the juriſdiction of other courts, and thereby has ſwallowed up the greateſt part of the buſineſs of the Common law, yet it is ſtill under ſome of theſe notions, that it exerciſes a juriſdiction in relieving againſt forfeitures and penalties, where a compenſation can be made, in preventing multiplicity of ſuits, decreeing a ſpecific execution of agreements, aſſiſting defective conveyances, &c. but in no caſe will relieve againſt an act of parliament, directly againſt a fundamental rule or maxim of the Common law, and retain a ſuit where the party appears to have a plain and adequate remedy at law. 1 New. Abr. 590.

All

All matters of truſt are peculiarly within the juriſdiction of the court of Chancery; but if a truſtee does by fraud and combination with the ceſtui que truſt endeavour to evade any penal law, under pretence that a truſt is only cognizable in equity, and that equity ſhould not aſſiſt a penalty or forfeiture, yet Chancery will aid remedial laws, and not ſuffer its own notions to be made uſe of to elude any beneficial law. 1 New. Abr. 590.

Three things, ſays Lord Coke, are to be adjudged in a court of equity: 1. All covins, frauds, and deceits, for which there is no remedy by the ordinary courſe of law. 2. Accidents, as when a ſervant, obligor, or mortgagor, is to pay money on a certain day, and they happen to be robbed in going to pay it. 3. Breaches of truſt and confidence. 4 Inſt. 84.

YE ſhall ſwear that well and lawfully ye ſhall ſerve our Lord the King and his people in the office of clerk of the Chancery, to which ye be attitled: and ye ſhall not aſſent nor procure the King's diſheriſon, nor perpetual damage to your power; nor ye ſhall do, nor procure to be done, any fraud to any man's wrong, nor thing that toucheth the keeping of the ſeal; and ye ſhall lawfully give counſel the things that touch the King, when ye ſhall be thereto required; and the counſel which you know touch him ye ſhall conceal. And if you know the King's diſheriſon, or perpetual damage or fraud to be done upon the things which touch the keeping of the ſeal, ye ſhall put your lawful power to repreſs and amend it: and if ye cannot do it, then ye ſhall certify the chancellor or other, which may do the ſame, to be amended to your intent. And for the clerks of courſe ſhall be added; And ye ſhall not bring, nor to your knowledge ſuffer to be brought, any writs which ye make out of the court not ſealed, thereof to do execution: nor ſhall record any attorney by writs, nor without writs, without ſpecial licence, if he have not lawfully examined the party and the attorney in proper perſon, or at the leaſt him that ſhall make attorney in proper perſon; nor ye ſhall deliver any writ which ſhall be of commandment to the examiners, nor to the ſeal, before that the ſame writ be ſent to you by the commander, which thereof hath power, unleſs it be to the chancellor, or to one of the maſters, which commandeth you to make the writs. And all the writs that ye ſhall make, ye ſhall deliver to the examiners by your own hand, or by one companion which is ſworn to the King, if ye yourſelf be out of the court becauſe of ſickneſs, or other cauſe neceſſary, ſo that ye cannot do it. And no writ written of another man's hand ſhall be delivered to the examiners, under your name, as yours, nor no name ſhall be put under your writs, but your own, as God you help, &c.

For every other certificate or report of any order made upon petition or motion, 10*s.*

And if any maſter receive any reward otherwiſe, ſuch maſter, after conviction, ſhall be diſabled from the execution of his office, and forfeit to the party grieved ſo much as he ſhall take contrary to this act, and 100*l.* one moiety to the King, and the other to the party grieved. And tables of the ſaid fees ſhall be ſet up in the office, and in the chapel of the Rolls.

Stat. 1 W. & M. ſtat. 1. cap. 21. ſect. 2. Commiſſioners for executing the office of Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, may uſe and exerciſe, as of right belonging to Lords Commiſſioners of the Great Seal, the ſame offices, authority, juriſdiction, and execution of laws, and all other cuſtoms, privileges, and advantages, which the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper ought; and ſhall have place next after the peers of the realm and Speaker of the houſe of commons, unleſs any of them be a peer, and then to take place according to his peerage.

Sect. 3. Any one commiſſioner may hear motions and give orders touching interlocutory proceedings in any cauſe, ſo as he ſhall not in the abſence of the others make any decrees, or put the Great Seal to any thing whereunto the whole broad ſeal ought to be affixed, unleſs there be two commiſſioners preſent.

Stat. 4 Ann. cap. 16. ſect. 22. No ſubpœna or proceſs for appearance ſhall iſſue out of any court of equity till the bill is filed (except in caſes of bills for injunctions) and a certificate thereof brought to the ſubpœna office under the hand of the Six clerks, or other officer who uſually file bills, for which certificate he ſhall receive no fee.

Sect. 23. Upon the plaintiff's diſmiſſing his own bill, or the defendant's diſmiſſing the ſame for want of proſecution, the plaintiff ſhall pay coſts to be taxed. And no copy or tenor of any bill ſhall go with the dedimus for taking the anſwer, but in lieu thereof the clerks of court ſhall take the whole term-fee of 3*s*. 4*d*. and the whole fees of all ſmall writs made by them.

Stat. 12 Geo. 2. cap. 32. Whereas the Lords Commiſſioners did, on the 26th of May 1725, make an order for the maſters to deliver into the Bank the money and effects under their care; and the Lord Chancellor did, by an order dated the 4th of November following, direct the ſaid order of the 26th of May to be obſerved, with the additions in the ſaid order of the 4th of November contained, which, among other things, contains as follows.

Jovis quarto die Novembris 1725.

Ordo curiæ.

WHEREAS the Right Hon. the late Lords Commiſſioners, &c. did on the 26th day of May laſt order and direct, among other things,

"That when any money or tallies, orders or bonds, at or after the hearing of any cauſe, ſhall be taken under the care of this court, the maſter ſhall direct the payment of ſuch money, &c. into the Bank; and the monies ſo paid, and the orders, tallies, and bonds ſo delivered, ſhall be entered in the maſter's accounts kept with the Bank; but the maſters ſhall have no power to iſſue any money entered in their ſaid accounts, or to direct the ſecurities to be delivered out.

"And when any money ſhall be paid, &c. into the Bank, purſuant to the directions aforeſaid, the party paying ſuch money, &c. ſhall take a certificate from one of the caſhiers of the Bank of their being placed to the proper maſter's account; and ſhall carry the ſaid certificate to ſuch maſter, who ſhall thereupon make his report of the payment of ſuch money, &c. into the Bank, and file the ſame at the report-office, and the clerk of the ſaid office ſhall enter the ſame in the maſter's book cauſewiſe.

"And when any money ſhall be directed to be laid out on government ſecurities, the ſpecies of the ſecurities ſhall be mentioned in the order: and in caſe any of them ſhall conſiſt of Eaſt-India bonds, South-Sea bonds, or Exchequer tallies and orders, the ſame ſhall be delivered in at the Bank; and if any ſuch ſecurities ſhall conſiſt of ſtock in any of the companies, ſuch ſtock is to be transferred to ſuch maſter, who ſhall make a declaration of truſt in the companies books, and ſhall take a certificate thereof from the proper officer, and enter the ſame in his book at the Bank, that the Bank may receive the dividends thereupon; and ſhall alſo make a report of all ſuch ſecurities; which certificate and report ſhall be filed at the report-office; and the clerk of the report-office is to enter the dates, ſums, and the number of the bonds, tallies, and orders, and quantities of ſtock in ſuch report mentioned, in the proper maſter's books kept there.

"And when any ſecurities depoſited at the Bank ſhall be directed to be delivered out, the regiſter ſhall certify to the maſter what ſecurity is to be delivered out, and the name of the cauſe; which certificate the clerk in court or ſolicitor ſhall deliver to the maſter, who ſhall counterſign the ſame; and ſuch certificate ſhall be a proper authority for the Bank to deliver over ſuch ſecurity, and enter the delivery of ſuch ſecurities in the maſter's accounts cauſewiſe; and it is the duty of the maſter to ſuperviſe ſuch entry, and to certify the ſame into the report office to be filed.

"Bonds, tallies, and orders ſhall be taken in and delivered out on Wedneſdays and Fridays between ten in the forenoon and one in the afternoon, and the maſter ſhall receive from the ſuitor the uſual fees for the report and filing the ſame, and ſhall anſwer for filing to the report-office.

"And when any ſtock ſhall be ordered to be transferred by any of the maſters to the ſuitors, the regiſter ſhall certify to the maſter what ſtock he is to transfer, and to whom; which certificate the clerk in court, &c. ſhall carry to the maſter, who ſhall within one week, or at the next opening of the books, attend in perſon, and deliver ſuch certificate to the officer of ſuch company, and transfer ſuch ſtock, or give ſufficient authority ſo to do.

"And ſuch certificate ſhall be an authority to the companies to permit the maſter, &c. to transfer ſuch ſtocks, of which transfer the maſter is to make his report, and procure the ſame to be filed in the report-office; for the making and filing of which the maſter ſhall receive the uſual fees, and anſwer the fee for filing to the report-office; and the transfer of ſuch ſtock ſhall be certified by the maſter to the Bank, that ſuch may be diſcharged out of the account of the maſter there.

"And when any money belonging to the ſuitors received by the Bank be directed to be paid, the clerk in court or ſolicitor ſhall carry the order to the maſter, who ſhall make a certificate thereof, which certificate ſuch clerk or ſolicitor ſhall file in the report-office; and the maſter ſhall by note draw on the Bank for ſuch money, which note ſhall be carried to the report office, and an entry made thereof in the maſter's book there, and intratur ſhall be written thereon, and ſigned by the regiſter; which note ſo entered and ſigned ſhall be ſufficient authority to the Bank to pay ſuch money, as likewiſe to write off the ſame from ſuch maſter's account; but when any money ſhall be directed to be paid to any ſuitor out of money to be received by the Bank, for intereſt or maintenance, the maſter ſhall by note, without any certificate, draw on the Bank; and ſuch note being ſigned by the maſter, and entered in the report-office, and counterſigned by the regiſter, ſhall be a proper authority.

"And every maſter ſhall, on the firſt day of every term, give an account to the ſecretary of the Lord Chancellor of all monies and ſecurities or ſtocks that the have iſſued or transferred in the reſpective cauſes ſince their laſt account, together with the dates of ſuch orders, and the maſters ſhall compare ſuch account with their books kept at the report office and at the Bank.

"And no perſon ſhall take any fee for doing any thing in purſuance of this order, other than the maſters and the clerk of the report-office; and the maſters ſhall only take the ſame fee for a certificate, as they have been intitled to for a report; and the clerk of the report-office ſhall only take the ſame fee for filing the certificate or report, as the clerk of the report-office has been intitled unto for filing the ſame.

"And whereas the ſaid order is for the benefit of the ſuitors; it is ordered by the right hon. the Lord High Chancellor, that the ſaid order of the 26th of May laſt, wherein it is not here varied, ſhall be firmly obſerved, with the additions following:

"And it is hereby ordered, that the Bank is to receive the intereſt and dividends on all ſtocks, bonds, tallies, and other ſecurities, whereof any of the maſters ſhall be poſſeſſed in truſt for the ſuitors; and each maſter ſhall impower one of the caſhiers to the Bank to receive the ſame; and ſuch intereſts and dividends ſhall be entered in the reſpective maſter's account at the Bank; and at the end of every term, but oftener if there be occaſion, the bank ſhall certify cauſewiſe to each maſter the ſums ſo received, to the end each maſter may make like entries in the books kept by themſelves, and likewiſe deliver a copy thereof to the clerk of the report-office, who is to cauſe the ſame to be entered cauſewiſe in the maſter's books at the report office; and as to all mortgages, the particular truſts ſhall be inſerted in the body of the mortgage deed; and all intereſt and principal on ſuch mortgage ſhall by the party be paid into the Bank.

"And all monies, tallies, or orders, bonds, ſecurities, and effects, directed to be brought before, or delivered in, or paid to, any maſter, ſhall not be brought before, or paid to ſuch maſter; but when any ſecurity, ſum of money, or other effects are ready to be delivered or paid in, in obedience to ſuch order, the maſter ſhall, on application of the party, certify the date of ſuch order, and the ſum of money, tallies, orders, bonds, depoſites, ſecurities, and other effects then to be paid or delivered in, and the name of the cauſe to the account of which the ſame is to be placed; and upon the party's delivering ſuch certificate, and payment of ſuch money, or delivering of ſuch tallies or other effects into the Bank, the ſame ſhall be entered in the reſpective maſter's accounts.

" When the maſter is by note to draw on the Bank for money, ſuch note ſhall be limited to be paid within a month after date; and if it be not be paid within ſuch time, the note ſhall be void; and when ſuch note is carried to the report-office, there ſhall alſo be carried with it the order whereby ſuch payment was directed to be made, and an entry ſhall be made in the maſter's book at the office, not only of the note, but alſo a memorandum that it was drawn by virtue of ſuch order; and thereupon an intratur is to be made, &c.

" When the maſters certify to the report-office any entry of the delivering out ſecurities, the clerk of the report-office ſhall make entries according to ſuch certificate in the reſpective maſter's books kept in that office, of the delivering out ſuch ſecurities.

" The Bank is to receive the intereſt and dividends of all ſtocks, bonds, tallies, orders, annuities, and other ſecurities, whereof the uſher ſhall be poſſeſſed in truſt for any of the ſuitors, the uſher authorizing one of the caſhiers of the Bank to receive the ſame; and ſuch entries are to be made thereof, and ſuch rules to be obſerved, as herein and in the ſaid recited order are ſet down for the maſters; and as to mortgages, which the uſher either ſingly or jointly may have in truſt for the ſuitors, the ſame rules ſhall be obſerved by the uſher, as in the like caſes are preſcribed to the maſters.

" All monies, tallies, orders, bonds, ſureties, and other effects, directed to be brought into court, or to be taken under the care of the uſher, ſhall not be brought before or paid to the uſher, but ſhall be paid or delivered into the Bank, under the regulations as the maſters are required to do: and the uſher ſhall on his part, in all things relating hereunto, act in like manner as the maſters are in ſuch caſes obliged to do.

" If any money or effects of the ſuitors ſhall by the uſher be inveſted in any ſecurities, the ſame methods ſhall be obſerved by the uſher and others in relation thereto, as are in like caſes preſcribed to the maſters.

" When any ſtock or annuities in the name of the uſher ſhall be transferred, or any depoſites, intereſts, or dividends, or other thing contained in the ſaid uſher's account, ſhall be paid or delivered out of the Bank, the ſame method ſhall be obſerved as the maſters are appointed to do; and in general the ſame rules which are preſcribed to be obſerved by the maſters, ſhall be in like caſes, mutatis mutandis, obſerved by the uſher.

" When any money or effects belonging to the ſuitors, paid into the Bank on account of the uſher, ſhall be directed to be paid out, and the uſher is to make a certificate thereof to be filed in the report-office, the uſher ſhall ſhall have 2 s. for ſigning ſuch certificate; and for every draught that he ſhall make on the Bank he ſhall receive 2 d. in the pound of all money contained in ſuch draught, draughts for intereſt or maintenance excepted.

" And it is further ordered, that in all orders to be hereafter made relating to the monies or effects of the ſuitors, the ſeveral directions of this order ſhall be followed, although the ſame ſhonld not be particularly expreſſed in any ſuch future order.

Sect. 1. The ſaid two orders ſhall be obſerved, unleſs in ſuch points as ſhall be varied in this act, or be hereafter changed by the Court of Chancery.

Sect. 2. There ſhall be one perſon appointed by the conrt of Chancery to do all ſuch things relating to the delivery of the ſuitors money and effects into the Bank, and taking them out, and the keeping the accounts with the Bank, as by the ſaid orders are directed to be done by the maſters and uſher; which officer ſhall be called The accountant general of the court of Chancery, and ſhall hold ſuch office during the pleaſure of the court, and an account ſhall be kept in his name with the Bank of England on behalf of the ſuitors, in ſuch manner as is directed by the ſaid orders with reſpect to the maſters; and the ſame rules as are preſcribed by the ſaid orders to the maſters, uſher, and Bank, as to the delivering in and taking out the monies and effects of the ſuitors, and other matters therein contained, ſhall be obſerved by the ſuitors, the Bank, and the accountant general, unleſs where the court ſhall otherwiſe determine.

Sect. 3. The accountant general ſhall ſtand in the place of the maſters and uſher, and ſhall receive no other fee from the ſuitors than what is allowed to the maſters by the ſaid order of the 26th of May.

Sect. 4. All mortgages, tallies, orders, ſtocks, annuities, and other transferrable ſecurities to be taken by direction of the court for the benefit of the ſuitors, ſhall, if appointed to be taken in the name of any officer of the court, be taken in the name of the accountant general; and in all ſuch aſſignments the particular truſt ſhall be ſpecified; and ſuch other rules in reſpect to ſuch transferrable ſecurities ſhall be obſerved by the accountant general and others, as by the ſaid orders are appointed to be obſerved by the maſters, uſher, and others.

Sect. 5. The court of Chancery ſhall have power to vary the regulations in the ſaid orders, or herein before contained, and to make ſuch farther regulations about the premiſſes as to the court ſhall ſeem meet.

Sect. 6. After the death or removal of any accountant general, all mortgages, &c. veſted in him in truſt for the ſuitors ſhall veſt in the ſucceeding accountant general, ſubject to the ſame truſts, without any aſſignment or transfer; and all monies and effects of the ſuitors, for which he ſhall have credit in his account with the Bank, ſhall be carried to the accountant of the ſucceeding accountant general.

Sect. 7. The accountant general ſhall not meddle with the actual receipt of any of the ſuitors money or effects, but ſhall only keep the account with the Bank, and obſerve the rules hereby preſcribed, or hereafter to be preſcribed by the court; he ſhall not be anſwerable for any money or effects he ſhall not actually receive; and the Bank ſhall be anſwerable for the money and effects of the ſuitors received by them.

Stat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 33. ſect. 15. If the court of Chancery ſhall judge it neceſſary, for the payment of the demands of the ſuitors, to borrow money on the duties or fund hereby granted (ſee Stamps.) it ſhall be lawful for the ſaid court to borrow any money thereon, not exceeding 60,000*l.* and to make ſuch order or ſecurity on the ſaid fund, for re-payment of the money borrowed, with intereſt not exceeding 5 l. per cent. as the ſaid court ſhall direct; which money ſo borrowed ſhall be paid into the Bank of England, and be made part of the common caſh of the court for the benefit of the ſuitors, and ſhall be iſſued by the Bank for the like benefit, as the court of Chancery ſhall direct.

Sect. 16. A book ſhall be kept in the Bank, in which an account of the monies borrowed on this act ſhall be entered. And all perſons who ſhall lend money on this act ſhall, on producing a receipt under the hand of the caſhier of the Bank, have an order of the Chancery for re-payment of their principal money with intereſt, to be accounted from the time of advancing the principal, and to be payable by half-yearly payments, till the re-payment of the principal: and ſuch orders ſhall be regiſtered, as the court ſhall direct; and all perſons ſhall be paid in courſe, according as their orders ſhall ſtand regiſtered; and no fee ſhall be taken for providing ſuch books, or making ſuch entries, or for any ſearch of the ſame, or for the payment of any money lent on this act, or the intereſt thereof, on penalty of treble damages to the party grieved, with coſts; or if the officer himſelf take or demand any ſuch fee, he ſhall loſe his place alſo: and if any undue preference ſhall be made by any ſuch officer, the party offending ſhall be liable, by action on the caſe, to pay the value of the debt, damages, and coſts, to the party grieved, and ſhall be forejudged from his office; and if ſuch preference be unduly made by his deputy or clerk, ſuch deputy or clerk only ſhall be liable to ſuch action, and ſhall be incapable of his place.

Sect. 17. If ſeveral orders for payment be brought the ſame day, it ſhall be no undue preference which of them be entered firſt, ſo he enters them the ſame day.

Sect. 18. It ſhall not incur any penalty to pay ſubſequent orders to perſons that demand their money and bring their orders, before other perſons that did not come, ſo as there be money reſerved to ſatisfy precedent orders, which ſhall be kept for them; the intereſt upon loans being to ceaſe from the time the money is kept in bank for them.

Sect. 19. Every perſon, &c. to whom money ſhall be due by this act, and orders entered for payment thereof, &c. by indorſement of their orders may aſſign their intereſt, or any part thereof, to any other; which being entered in the office for ſuch orders, and an entry thereof alſo made in the book of entry of ſuch orders (which the officer ſhall upon requeſt without fee make) ſhall intitle ſuch aſſignees to the benefit thereof; and ſuch aſſignees may in like manner aſſign again toties quoties; and afterwards it ſhall not be in the power of the perſons who made ſuch aſſignments to make void the ſame.

Sect. 20. All the money depoſited in the Bank on account of the ſuitors of the court of Chancery, and by order of the court, and all monies ariſing by the duties given by this act, or borrowed thereon, and paid into the Bank, ſhall be one common and general caſh, and ſhall be promiſcuouſly iſſued, as the court ſhall direct, for anſwering the demands of any of the ſuitors.

Stat. 3 Geo. 2. cap. 30. All orders and decrees made by the Maſter of the Rolls, except orders and decrees of ſuch nature, as according to the courſe of the court ought only to be made by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Lords Commiſſioners, ſhall be deemed valid orders and decrees of the court of Chancery; ſubject nevertheleſs to be diſcharged or altered by the Lord Chancellor, &c. ſo as no ſuch orders or decrees be inrolled, till the ſame are ſigned by the Lord Chancellor, &c.

Stat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 25. ſect. 1. If in any ſuit in equity, any defendant, againſt whom proceſs ſhall iſſue, ſhall not cauſe his appearance to be entered, according to the rules of the court in caſe ſuch proceſs had been ſerved; and affidavit ſhall be made that ſuch defendant is beyond the ſeas, or that upon enquiry at his uſual place of abode he could not be found ſo as to be ſerved, and that there is juſt ground to believe that ſuch defendant is gone out of the realm, or abſconds, to avoid being ſerved; the court may make an order, appointing ſuch defendant to appear at a day therein to be named: and a copy of ſuch order ſhall within fourteen days be inſerted in the London Gazette, and publiſhed on ſome Lord's day after divine ſervice in the pariſh church where ſuch defendant made his uſual abode within thirty days next before his abſenting; and a copy of ſuch order ſhall be poſted up, viz. a copy of ſuch order made in Chancery, Exchequer, or Dutchy Chamber, ſhall be poſted up at the Royal Exchange; and a copy of ſuch order made in any of the courts of equity of the counties palatine, or of the Great Seſſions in Wales, ſhall be poſted up in ſome market-town within the juriſdiction of the court neareſt to the place where ſuch defendant made his uſual abode, ſuch place of abode being alſo within the juriſdiction of the court: and if the defendant do not appear within ſuch time as the court ſhall appoint, then on proof made of ſuch publication of ſuch order as aforeſaid, the court may order the plaintiff's bill to be taken pro confeſſo, and make ſuch decree thereupon as ſhall be juſt: and the court may order ſuch plaintiff to be paid his demands out of the eſtate ſequeſtred according to the decree, ſuch plaintiff giving ſecurity to abide ſuch order touching the reſtitution of ſuch eſtate, as the court ſhall make upon the defendant's appearance; but in caſe ſuch plaintiff ſhall refuſe to give ſecurity, then the court ſhall order the effects ſequeſtred to remain under the direction of the court, until the appearance of the defendant to defend ſuch ſuit.

Sect. 2. If any defendant, by virtue of habeas corpus, or other proceſs of any court of equity, ſhall be brought into court, ſuch court may appoint a clerk in court to enter an appearance for ſuch defendant.

Sect. 3. If the perſon, againſt whom a decree ſhall be made upon refuſal to enter his appearance, ſhall be in cuſtody or forthcoming, ſo that he may be ſerved with a copy of ſuch decree, then he ſhall be ſerved with a copy thereof before proceſs ſhall be taken out to compel the performance thereof.

Sect. 4. If any decree ſhall be made in purſuance of this act againſt any perſon out of the realm or abſconding, and ſuch perſon ſhall within ſeven years return or become publickly viſible, he ſhall likewiſe be ſerved with a copy of ſuch decree within a reaſonable time after his return ſhall be known to the plaintiff; and in caſe any defendant againſt whom ſuch decree ſhall be made, ſhall within ſeven years happen to die before his return, or ſhall die in cuſtody before his being ſerved with a copy of ſuch decree, then his heir, if ſuch defendant ſhall have any real eſtate ſequeſtered, or whereof poſſeſſion ſhall have been delivered to the plaintiff, or the huſband, guardian, or committee of ſuch heir; or if the perſonal eſtate of ſuch defendant be ſequeſtered, or poſſeſſion thereof delivered, then his executor or adminiſtrator may be ſerved with a copy of ſuch decree, within a reaſonable time after it ſhall be known to the plaintiff that the defendant is dead, and who is his or her heir, executor, or adminiſtrator, or where they may be ſerved.

Sect. 5. If any perſon ſo ſerved ſhall not within ſix months after ſuch ſervice appear, and petition to have the cauſe reheard, ſuch decree ſhall ſtand abſolutely confirmed againſt the perſon ſo ſerved, and all perſons claiming under him by any act ſubſequent to the commencement of ſuch ſuit.

Sect. 6. If any perſon ſerved with a copy of ſuch decree ſhall within ſix months after ſuch ſervice, or if any perſon not being ſo ſerved ſhall within ſeven years next after the making ſuch decree, appear in court, and petition to be heard with reſpect to the matter of ſuch decree, and pay down, or give ſecurity for, ſuch coſts as the court ſhall think reaſonable; the perſon ſo petitioning, or any perſon claiming under him by any act done before the commencement of the ſuit, may be admitted to anſwer the bill, and iſſue may be joined, and witneſſes examined, and ſuch other proceedings had thereon, as might have been in caſe the party had originally appeared.

Sect. 7. If any perſon againſt whom ſuch decree ſhall be made, his heirs, executors, or adminiſtrators, ſhall not within ſeven years after the making ſuch decree, appear and petition to have the cauſe reheard, and pay or give ſecurity for ſuch coſts as the court ſhall think reaſonable, ſuch decree ſhall ſtand abſolutely confirmed againſt the perſons againſt whom ſuch decrre ſhall be made, and all claiming under them by any act done ſubſequent to the commencement of ſuch ſuit.

Sect. 8. This act ſhall not make good any proceeding againſt any perſon beyond the ſea, unleſs it ſhall appear to the court by affidavit before the making ſuch decree, that ſuch perſon had been in England within two years next before the ſubpœna iſſued.

Sect. 9. This act ſhall not make good any proceeding againſt any perſon in any court of equity having a limited juriſdiction, unleſs it ſhall appear to ſuch court by affidavit before the making ſuch decree, that ſuch perſon had reſided within the juriſdiction of ſuch court within one year next before the ſubpœna.

Stat. 7 Geo. 2. cap. 8. ſect. 2. Where perſons are obliged to anſwer on oath for diſcovering unlawful contracts, &c. See this ſtatute under title Brokers.

Stat. 12 Geo. 2. cap. 24. ſect. 1. To provide a juſt ſupport for the accountant general of the court of Chancery; be it enacted, That out of the caſh in the Bank of England, belonging to the ſuitors of the court of Chancery, a ſum not exceeding 35,000 l. ſhall by order of the court be placed out on ſuch government or parliament ſecurities as by ſuch order ſhall be directed; to the intent that the intereſt thereof may be applied for the purpoſes herein after-mentioned; and the ſaid court may from time to time change the ſecurities on which the ſaid monies ſhall be placed.

Sect. 2. And the intereſt ariſing from the ſaid ſecurities ſhall be received by the governor and company of the Bank of England, and placed to the credit of an account count to be raiſed in the books kept there for the ſuitors of the ſaid court, of intereſt ariſing from money placed out in purſuance of this act; and out of ſuch intereſt there ſhall be paid by huarterly qayments the annual ſum of 1020 l. which payment ſhall be made by the Bank by order of the court, videlicet, to the accountant general 650 l. to his firſt clerk 250 l. to his ſecond clerk 120 l. which ſalaries ſhall commence from the 29th of September 1739, and ſhall be in lieu of all fees, and the reſidue of the intereſt ariſing from the ſaid ſecurities ſhall be accounted for, as part of the common and general caſh of the ſuitors of the ſaid court.

Sect. 3. After the ſaid 29th of September no fees ſhall be taken in the ſaid office for any thing directed to be done therein by 12 Geo. 1. cap. 32. and if any perſon belonging to the ſaid office preſume to take any fee, he ſhall be looked upon as guilty of extortion, and be liable to be proſecuted for the ſame by indictment or information, or upon complaint to the court of Chancery ſhall be puniſhed as for a contempt.

Sect. 4. If hereafter the whole or any part of the ſaid ſum of 35,000 l. be wanted to anſwer the demands of the ſuitors of the ſaid court, then the court may direct the ſame or any part thereof to be called in, or the ſecurities on which the ſame ſhall be placed to be diſpoſed of.

Stat. 23 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſ. 1. Whereas by 12 Geo. 1. cap. 33. for relief of the ſuitors of the court of Chancery, and to make good the deficiencies of the offices of the maſters, certain ſtamp duties were granted for ſixteen years, and by 9 Geo. 2. cap. 32. the ſaid duties were continued for four years from Aug. 2, 1742. and it was thereby enacted, That when the deficiency of the ſuitors money, and all money borrowed on the credit of the ſaid acts. ſhould be ſatisfied, then the ſurplus money raiſed out of the ſaid duties ſhould be reſerved for the benefit of the publick; and whereas the ſaid deficiency, and all the money directed to be paid by the ſaid acts out of the fund thereby appropriated, have been ſatisfied, and there remains in the Bank of England as a ſurplus of the ſaid fund unapplied the ſum of 13,698 l. 1 s. 11 d. And whereas the revenue of the office of the Hanaper hath not for ſeveral years paſt been ſufficient to pay the diſburſements iſſuing out of the ſame: and there remained in arrear at Michaelmas 1749, the ſum of 10,590 l. 12 s. 11 d. due from the ſaid office; be it enacted, That out of the ſaid ſum of 13,698 l. 1 s. 11 d. now remaining in the Bank of England, as the ſurplus unapplied o the fund given by the 12 Geo. 1. c. 33. and the 9 Geo. 2. c. 32. reſerved for the diſpoſition of parliament, there ſhall be paid ſuch ſums not exceeding in the whole 10,590 l. 12 s. 11 d. to the creditors upon the office of the Hanaper, when and as the court of Chancery ſhall order, in ſatisfaction of the ſaid debt and arrears And as often as the accountant general of the ſaid court ſhall, in purſuance of any order of the court, give a draught upon the Bank for any of the ſaid debts, certificates thereof from the ſaid accountant general (which he is to make without fee) ſhall be tranſmitted to the clerk of the Hanaper, together with the proper vouchers of the payments of the ſaid debts, ſpecifying to whom ſuch payments have been made, and to what time they extend; to the end the ſame may be brought into the account of the clerk of the Hanaper, to be by him paſſed before one of the auditors of the ſaid revenue: and all ſuch certificates ſhall be filed in the office of the Hanaper, and the vouchers tranſmitted therewith are to be delivered over to the ſaid auditor.

Sect. 2. The duties granted by the 12 Geo. 1. cap. 33. for fourteen years, and continued by the 9 Geo. 2. c. 32. for the farther term of four years, and which expired in Auguſt 1746, ſhall be revived, and ſhall be payable upon the ſeveral writs and law proceedings in the ſaid former acts mentioned, from the 24th of June 1750, for ever; and all the penalties and proviſions in the ſaid former acts concerning the levying and managing the ſame ſhall be revived.

Sect. 3. All the officers concerned in the levying and managing the duties ariſing by virtue of this act ſhall keep diſtinct accounts thereof, and pay the ſame into the receipt of the Exchequer at Weſtminſter weekly, on every Wedneſday, unleſs it be an holy-day, and in that caſe on the next day after, not being any holy-day.

Sect. 4. There ſhall be kept in the ſaid Exchequer books wherein a diſtinct account of all the money paid in weekly in purſuance of this act ſhall be entered. And out of the money ariſing by the duties granted by this act, there ſhall be paid unto the clerk of the Hanaper office, or his deputy, a yearly ſum not exceeding 3000 l. by equal half-yearly payments, on the 25th of March and 29th of September in every year (for the iſſuing of which no fee ſhall be taken) and the receipt of the clerk of the Hanaper, or his depnty, ſhall be a ſufficient diſcharge for the ſame.

Sect. 5. The reſidue of the ſaid 13,698 l. 1 s. 11 d. ſurplus caſh in the Bank of England, after ſatisfaction of the ſaid debt due from the clerk of the Hanaper in Chancery at Michaelmas 1749, ſhall be placed out at intereſt on government ſecurities, under the direction of the court of Chancery, in the name and with the privity of the accountant general, and placed to the account of the clerk of the Hanaper in Chancery; and the intereſt ariſing therefrom ſhall be paid to the clerk of the Hanaper, or his deputy, to be applied in aid of the ſaid revived duties, to make good the ſaid annual ſum of 3,000 l. granted to his majeſty out of the ſaid duties, and the receipt of the clerk of the Hanaper, or his deputy, ſhall be a ſufficient diſcharge for the ſame.

Sect. 6. The ſaid yearly ſum of 3,000 l. and the yearly intereſt ariſing from the ſurplus caſh in the Bank as aforeſaid, ſhall be iſſued and accounted for as part of the revenue of the Hanaper office, for the ſame purpoſes and in the ſame manner as the revenue from the ſaid office hath from time to time been iſſued and accounted for: and alſo for the payment of the yearly ſum of 1,200 l. to the Maſter of the Rolls, by equal half-yearly payments, on the 25th of March and the 29th of September in every year.

Sect. 7. In caſe the yearly revenue of the ſaid office of clerk of the Hanaper, augmented by this act, be at any time more than ſufficient to pay the ſaid yearly ſum of 1,200 l. to the Maſter of the Rolls, and alſo the ſeveral fees, ſalaries, and allowances payable out of the ſame, then the clerk of the Hanaper ſhall be accountable for ſuch ſurplus; and upon a certificate thereof from one of the auditors of the Impreſt (which ſuch auditor is to make and tranſmit to the commiſſioners of the Treaſury) ſuch overplus ſhall be carried on to the account of the ſubſequent year of the clerk of the Hanaper, who ſhall ſtand charged therewith: and only ſo much of the ſaid yearly ſum of 3,000 l. ſhall be paid to the ſaid clerk of the Hanaper towards the next ſubſequent year, as with ſuch overplus aſcertained by ſuch certificate will anſwer the ſaid yearly ſum of 1,200 l. to the Maſter of the Rolls, and the ſeveral fees, &c. payable out of the ſame.

Sect. 8. In caſe the yearly revenue of the ſaid office of clerk of the Hanaper, augmented by this act, at any time prove deficient to pay the ſaid yearly ſum of 1,200 l. to the Maſter of the Rolls, and the ſeveral fees, &c. payable out of the ſame, then it ſhall be lawful for the commiſſioners of the Treaſury, out of any money in the Exchequer ariſen from the ſaid revived duties granted by this act, not otherwiſe applied by parliament, to direct ſuch ſum, not exceeding what has been ſaved in former years, by leſs having been paid to the clerk of the Hanaper than the annual ſum of 3,000 l. as aforeſaid, to be iſſued to the clerk of the Hanaper, as ſhall be neceſſary for the ſupplying ſuch deficiency, to be aſcertained by a certificate from one of the auditors of the impreſt, directed to the commiſſioners of the Treaſury in manner aforeſaid; and the receipts of ſuch clerk of the Hanaper, or his deputy, ſhall be a ſufficient diſcharge for all ſums ſo iſſued.

Sect. 9. In caſe the ſaid revived duties, and the intereſt of the ſaid ſurplus caſh in the Bank, ſhall in any one year produce leſs, and in another more than 3,000 l. it ſhall be lawful for the commiſſioners of the Treaſury, to order

ſuch deficiencies to be made good out of ſuch ſurpluſſes, ſo as the whole money iſſued to the clerk of the Hanaper out of the ſaid monies ariſing from the ſaid revived duties, and the intereſt of the ſaid ſurplus caſh in the Bank, do not one year with another exceed the yearly ſum of 3,000 l.

Sect. 10. All the reſidue and ſurplus of the money ariſing by the duties and other proviſions of this act, not applied in the payment of the ſeveral yearly and other ſums hereby directed, ſhall be reſerved for the benefit of the publick, and ſhall not be applied to any other uſe than ſuch as ſhall be hereafter directed by parliament.

Stat. 1 Geo. 3. c. 1. ſect. 6. His Majeſty ſhall be impowered from time to time to grant a ſum not exceeding 5,000 l. per annum, to the Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Commiſſioners for the cuſtody of the Great Seal of Great Britain, in the uſual and accuſtomed manner, to be from time to time paid by the paymaſter or receiver of the revenues of the general letter-office, or poſt-office, or office of Poſt-maſter General for the time being, out of the ſaid revenues, according to the tenor of ſuch grant; and ſuch payment ſhall be conſidered as part of, and ſhall be deducted from the annual rent or ſum by this act granted to his Majeſty, for the ſupport of his civil government.

Stat. 4 Geo. 3. c. 32. ſect. 1. Whereas by 12 Geo. 2. c. 24. a proviſion is made for the ſupport and maintenance of the office of accountant general of the court of Chancery, by directing certain payments to be made, in the manner therein mentioned, to the ſaid accountant general and his two clerks for their ſalaries, in lieu of, and in recompence for, all fees whatſoever that would be due and payable to the ſaid office by the ſuitors: and whereas ſince the paſſing the ſaid act, the money and effects belonging to the ſuitors of the ſaid court, under the care and direction of the ſaid accountant general, are greatly increaſed; by reaſon whereof the neceſſary buſineſs of the ſaid office is grown ſo extenſive and laborious, and the proviſions made by the ſaid act is become inſufficient to anſwer the charges attending the execution of the ſaid office. Wherefore, in order to provide for the further ſupport of the ſaid office, be it enacted, That out of the caſh that now lies, or ſhall hereafter lie dead and unemployed in the Bank of England, belonging to the ſuitors of the ſaid court of Chancery, a ſum not exceeding five thouſand pounds ſhall and may, by virtue of any order or orders of the ſaid court to be made for that purpoſe, from time to time to be placed out in one intire ſum, or in parcels, on ſuch government or parliament ſecurities as in and by ſuch order or orders ſhall be directed, to the intent that the intereſt and annual profits ariſing from the money ſo to be placed out as aforeſaid may be applied for the purpoſes herein after mentioned; and that the ſaid court of Chancery may from time to time change the ſecurity orſecurities on which the ſaid monies ſhall be ſo placed out, as the ſaid court ſhall think expedient.

Sect. 2. And the intereſt and annual profits ariſing and to be produced from the ſaid ſecurities ſhall from time to time be received by the governor and company of the Bank of England, and placed to the credit of the ſame account as was raiſed in the books kept there for the ſuitors of the ſaid court, by virtue of the ſaid act herein before mentioned, of the intereſt ariſing from money placed out in purſuance of the ſaid act; and that out of ſuch intereſt money and annual profits there ſhall be paid by quarterly payments, by the governor and company of the Bank of England, by virtue of an order or orders of the court of Chancery to be made for that purpoſe, the annual ſum of one hundred and twenty pounds to the ſaid accountant general's third clerk; which ſaid ſalary ſhall commence from the 8th day of April in the year of our Lord 1764, and ſhall, together with the ſalaries appointed by the ſaid act herein before mentioned, be in lieu of and in recompence and ſatisfaction for all fees whatſoever, which from that time ſhall or would be due or payable to the ſaid office by the ſuitors; and that the reſidue of the intereſt and annual profits, ariſing and to be produced from the ſaid ſecurities, ſhall be accounted for and taken as part of the common and general caſh of and belonging to the ſuitors of the ſaid court of Chancery, and ſhall be iſſued and applied purſuant and according to the directions of an act of parliament, paſſed in the 12th year of the reign of his late Majeſty king George the Firſt, intituled, An act for the relief of the ſuitors of the High Court of Chancery.

Sect. 3. Provided, that if at any time hereafter the whole, or any part of the ſaid ſum of five thouſand pounds, ſhall be wanted to anſwer any of the demands of the ſuitors of the ſaid court of Chancery, then and in ſuch caſe the ſaid court may and ſhall direct the ſame, or any part thereof, to be called in, or the ſecurities on which the ſame ſhall be placed, to be diſpoſed of, in order that the ſuitors of the ſaid court may at all times be paid their reſpective demands out of the common and general caſh belonging to ſuch ſuitors.

Changer, Is an office belonging to the king's mint, mentioned in the ſtatute 2 H. 6. c. 12. where it is alſo written after the old way changour, whoſe buſineſs was chiefly to exchange coin for bullion brought in by merchants or others.

Chapel, (Capella, Fr. Chapelle) Is of two ſorts, either adjoining to a church as a parcel of the ſame, which men of quality build, ut ibidem familaria ſepulchra ſibi conſtituant; or elſe ſeparate from the mother church, where the pariſh is wide, and commonly called A chapel of eaſe, becauſe it is built for the eaſe of one or more pariſhioners that dwell too far from the church, and ſerved by ſome inferior curate, provided at the charge of the rector, or them that have benefit by it, as the compoſition or cuſtom is. Whence the word is derived, the canoniſts differ in opinion, neither will we trouble ourſelves about it, ſince it makes not much to our purpoſe. There is a free chapel, which ſeemeth to be ſuch as hath maintenance perpetual towards the upholding thereof, and wages of the curate, by ſome lands charitably beſtowed on it, without the charge of the rector or pariſh. 37. H. 8. c. 4. ann. 1 Ed. 6. cap. 14. Chapiters, Chapiters, Capitula, cometh from the French chapitre, i. e. caput libri. It ſignifies in our Common law a ſummary, or content of ſuch matters as are to be inquired of or preſented before juſtices in eyre, juſtices of aſſiſe, or of peace, in their ſeſſions: ſo it is uſed ſtat. 3 Ed. 1. c. 27. in theſe words; "And that no clerk or any juſtice, eſcheator, or commiſſioners in eyre, ſhall take any thing for delivering chapiters, but only clerks of juſtices in their circuits." And again, ſtat. 13 E. 1. c. 10. in theſe words; "And when the time cometh the ſheriff ſhall certify the chapiters before the juſtices in eyre, how many writs he hath, and what, &c." Britton alſo uſeth the word in the ſame ſenſe, c. 3. Chapiters, or capitula, are now moſt commonly called articles, and are delivered as well by the mouth of the juſtice in his charge, as by the clerks in writing, to the inqueſt; whereas in ancient times, as appeareth by Bracton, they were, after an exhortation given by the juſtices, for the good obſervation of the laws, and the King's peace, firſt read diſtinctly and openly in the whole court, and then delivered in writing to the grand inqueſt; which the grand jury or inqueſt were likewiſe to anſwer upon their oath affirmatively and negatively, and not as they do now, put the judges to make long and learned charges to little or no purpoſe; who not remembering the tranſgreſſors againſt the deſign of thoſe articles, do think their oaths and duty to God and the King, and their country, well enough performed, if they only preſent thoſe few, of many more, miſdemeanors, which are brought unto them by way of indictment. The ſame order of articles Lambard wiſhes might ſtill be obſerved. Eiren. lib. 4. cap. 4. pag. 391. Horne in his Mirrour of Juſtices calleth them articles, and expreſſeth what they were wont to contain, lib. 3. cap. de Articles in Eyre. An example of theſe chapiters or articles you have in the book of Aſſiſes, fol. 138. num. 44. Chapter, Capitulum, Signifieth in our Common law (as in the Canon law, whence it was borrowed) Congregationem clericorum in eccleſia cathedrali, conventuali, regulari vel collegiata; and in another ſenſe, Locum in quo fiunt communes tractatus collegiatorum. It hath other ſignifications, though not worth the repeating in this place, which you may read in *Lyndewode's Provincialis Gloſſ. in ca. Charge. See Chapiters.

Charge and Diſcharge. A charge is ſaid to be a thing done that bindeth him that doth it, or that which is his, to the performance thereof: And diſcharge is the removal, or taking away of that charge. Terms de Ley. Land may be charged divers ways; as by grant of rent out of it, by ſtatutes, judgments, conditions, warranties, &c. Lands in fee-ſimple may be charged in fee; and where a man may diſpoſe of the land itſelf, he may charge it by a rent, or ſtatute, one way or other. Lit. ſect. 648. Moor ca. 129. Dyer 10. If one charge land in tail, and land in fee ſimple, and die, the land in fee only ſhall be chargeable. Bro. Cha. 9. Lands intailed may be charged in fee if the eſtate-tail be cut off by recovery: if tenant in tail charge the land, and after levy a fine, or ſuffer a recovery of the lands, to his own uſe; this confirms the charge, and it ſhall continue. 1 Co. Rep. 61. A tenant for life charges the land, and then makes a feoffment to a ſtranger, or doth waſte, &c. whereby it is forfeited, he in reverſion ſhall hold it charged during his life: and if one have a leaſe for life or for years of land, and grant a rent out of it; if after he ſurrenders his eſtate, yet the charge ſhall continue ſo long as the eſtate had endured, in caſe it had not been ſurrendered. 1 Rep. 67, 145. Dyer 10. If a feme ſole leſſee for years takes huſband, and he charges the land, and dies, ſhe may avoid it; for the huſband might have given or forfeited, but he may not charge it. Bro. Cha. 41. If one joint-tenant charge land, and after releaſe to his companion, and die, the ſurvivor ſhall hold it charged: but if it had come to him by ſurvivorſhip, it would be otherwiſe. 6 Rep. 76. 1 Shep. Abr. 325. He that hath a remainder or reverſion of land, may charge it; becauſe of the poſſibility that the land will come into poſſeſſion, and then the poſſeſſion ſhall be charged. But where one leaſes land for life, and grants the reverſion or remainder over to A. B. who charges the land, and dies, and the tenant for life is heir to the fee; in this caſe, he ſhall hold it diſcharged, for he had the poſſeſſion by purchaſe, though he had the fee by deſcent. Bro. 11, 16. 1 Rep. 62. If a rent be iſſuing out of a houſe, &c. and it falls down, the charge ſhall remain upon the ſoil. 9 Ed. 4. 20. But when the eſtate is gone upon which the charge was grounded, there generally the charge is determined. Co. Litt. 349. And in all caſes where an executory thing is created by deed, there by conſent of all the parties it may be by deed defeated and diſcharged. 10 Rep. 49. Charta Magna, Contains ſeveral privileges and liberties which were granted to the church and ſtate by Edward the Confeſſor, and ſome which were granted by Henry 1. but thoſe were only relating to the feudal laws which were impoſed on the people by William 1. ſo that nothing new was added by him.

King Stephen and King Henry 2. confirmed the Magna Charta of Henry 1. and Richard 1. took an oath at his coronation to aboliſh all evil cuſtoms, and to obſerve all juſt laws; which was an implicit confirmation of the charter itſelf.

King John took the like oath: but a difference ariſing between him and pope Innocent 3. concerning the election of an archbiſhop of Canterbury, he was for the moſt part of his reign embroiled in wars both at home and abroad; till at length at Runingmede (a place between Windſor and Stanes) he confirmed the charter; and ſoon after broke it; and thereupon the barons took up arms again; ſo that his reign ended in wars, and Henry 3. an infant, ſucceeded; in whoſe reign it was ſeveral times confirmed, and as often abrogated, even after the moſt ſolemn engagements to obſerve it. As for inſtance; in the 37th year of his reign he came to Weſtminſter-Hall, and there (in the preſence of the nobility, and of the archbiſhop and biſhops in their pontifical habits, with lighted candles in their hands) the charter was read, the King all that while laying his hand on his breaſt; and when it was read, the biſhops extinguiſhed the candles, and threw them on the ground; and every one ſaid, Thus let him be extinguiſhed, and ſtink in hell, who violates this charter. Then the bells rung, as a ſign that every one rejoiced, and approved what was done. And the King himſelf ſaid, So help me God; I will faithfully and inviolably obſerve all theſe things, as I am a man, a Chriſtian, a ſoldier, and a King. And yet the next year he invaded the rights of the people. And at length the barons took up arms, and beat his army at the battle of Lewes in Suſſex, and took him and his ſon Edward 1. priſoners; but the Prince eſcaping, he beat the barons in a battle at Eveſham, and reſtored his father to his royal dignity. And then the King, though conqueror, confirmed this charter, and the charter of the foreſt, in the parliament of Marlbridge, in the 52d year of his reign, and died afterwards in peace. And his ſon Edward 1. not only confirmed theſe charters, but in the 25th year of his reign he made an explanation of the liberties and privileges therein granted to the people; and added ſome which were new, and are called Articuli ſuper Chartas. And thus Magna Charta was then confirmed, and more than thirty times ſince. See Magna Charta.

And theſe in the Saxons times were called bock-land, which Lamb, in his explication of Saxon words, verb. Terra ex ſcripto, ſaith, was held with more commodious and eaſy conditions than folkland was; that is, land held without writing; and the reaſon is, becauſe that was Hæreditaria, libera atque immunis, whereas fundus ſine ſcripto cenſum penſitabat annuum, atque officiorum quadam ſervitute eſt obligatus; priorem viri plerumque nobiles atque ingenui, poſteriorem ruſtici ferè & pagani poſſidebant.—— Illum nos vulgo freehold & per chartam, hanc ad voluntatem domini appellamus. Thus far Mr. Lambard.

Charter-party, (Lat. charta partita, Fr. chartre parti, i. e. a deed or writing divided) Is what among merchants and ſeafaring men, we commonly call a pair of indentures, containing the covenants and agreements made between them touching their merchandize and maritime affairs. Termes de la Ley. 32 Hen. 8. c. 14. 12 Car. 2. c. 18. 2 Inſt. 673. And charter-parties of affreightment ſettle agreements, as to the cargo of ſhips, and bind the maſter to deliver the goods in good condition at the place of diſcharge, according to agreement; and the maſter ſometimes obliges himſelf, ſhip, tackle and furniture for performance. The Common law conſtrues charter-parties, as near as may be, according to the intention of them, and not according to the literal ſenſe of traders, or thoſe that merchandize by ſea, but they muſt be regularly pleaded. In covenant by charter-party, that the ſhip ſhould return to the river of Thames by a certain time, dangers of the ſea excepted, and after in the voyage, and within the time of the return, the ſhip was taken upon the ſea by pirates, ſo that the maſter could not return at the time mentioned in the agreement; it was adjudged, that this impediment was within the exception of the charter-party, which extends as well to any danger upon the ſea by pirates and men of war, as dangers of the ſea by ſhipwreck, tempeſt, &c. Stile 132. 2 Roll. Abr. 248. A ſhip is freighted at ſo much per month for the time that ſhe ſhall be out, covenanted to be paid after her arrival at the port of London; the ſhip is caſt away coming up from the Downs, but the lading is all preſerved; the freight ſhall in this caſe be paid; for the money becomes due monthly by the contract, and the place mentioned is only to aſcertain where the money is to be paid, and the ſhip is intitled to wages, like a mariner that ſerves by the month, who,

who, if he dies in the voyage, his executors are to be answered pro rata. Molloy de Jur. Maritim. 260. If a part-owner of a ſhip refuſe to join with the other owners in ſetting out of the ſhip, he ſhall not be intitled to his ſhare of the freight; but by the courſe of the admiralty, the other owners ought to give ſecurity if the ſhip periſh in the voyage, to make good to the owner ſtanding out his ſhare of the ſhip. Sir Lionel Jenkins, in a caſe of this nature certified, that by the law marine and courſe of the admiralty, the plaintiff was to have no ſhare of the freight; and that it was ſo in all places; for otherwiſe there would be no navigation. Lex Mercat. 100 See Freight.

Chartis reddendis, Is a writ which lies againſt him that hath charters of feoffment delivered to him to be kept, and refuſeth to deliver them. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 66. Orig. fol. 159.

Chaſe (Chacea, from the Fr. chaſſer, that is, ſectari belluas) Signifies in the Common law two things, Firſt, As much as actus in the Civil law, that is, a driving of cattle to or from any place, as to chaſe a diſtreſs to a fortlet. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 45. Secondly, It is uſed for a place of receipt for deer and wild beaſts, of a middle nature, between a foreſt and a park, being commonly leſs than a foreſt, and not having ſo many liberties; as the courts of attachment, ſwainemote, and juſtice ſeat; and yet of a larger compaſs, and ſtored with greater diverſity both of keepers and wild beaſts or game than a park. And Crompton, in his Juriſdiction, fol. 148. ſaith, that a foreſt cannot be in the hands of a ſubject, but it forthwith loſeth the name, and becometh a chaſe; yet fol. 197. he ſaith, that a ſubject may be lord and owner of a foreſt, which, though it ſeems a contrariety, yet are both his ſayings in ſome ſort true; for a King may give or alienate a foreſt to a ſubject, yet ſo, as when it is once in a ſubject, it loſeth the true property of a foreſt, becauſe the courts, called a juſtice-ſeat, the ſwainemote, and attachment forthwith do vaniſh; none being able to make a Lord Chief Juſtice in Eyre of the foreſt but the King, as Manwood well ſheweth in his Foreſt Laws, cap. 3. & 4. and yet it may be granted in ſo large a manner, that there may be attachment and ſwainemote, and a court equivalent to a juſtice-ſeat, as appeareth by him in the ſame chapter, num. 3. ſo that a chaſe differeth from a foreſt in this, becauſe it may be in the hands of a ſubject, which a foreſt in its proper and true nature cannot; and from a park, in that it is not incloſed, and hath not only a larger compaſs, and more ſtore of game, but of keepers alſo and officers. Chattels, or Catals (Catalla) Comes from the Normans; for in the 87th chapter of the Grand Cuſtumary, we ſhall find that all moveable goods with them are called chattels; the contrary whereof is fief; ibid. which we call fee. But as it is uſed in our Common law, it comprehends not all goods moveable and immoveable, but ſuch as are in the nature of freehold, or parcel thereof, as may be gathered out of Staunf. Prærog. cap. 16. and ſtat. 1 Eliz. cap. 2. Howbeit, Kitchin, in his chapter Catalla, fol. 32. ſaith, that ready money is not accounted any goods or chattels, nor hawks nor hounds; the reaſon for hawks and hounds he gives, is becauſe they are feræ naturæ; but why money is not, though he ſet not down the cauſe, yet it may be gathered to be, for that money of itſelf is not of worth, but as by conſent of men for their eaſier traffick, or permutation of things neceſſary for life. It is reckoned a thing rather conſiſting in imagination, than in deed. And here note, that chattels be either perſonal or real: Perſonal may be ſo called in two reſpects; one becauſe they belong immediately to the perſon of a man; as a bow, a horſe, &c. the other, for that being any way with held injuriouſly from us, we have no means to recover them, but by perſonal action: Chattels real are ſuch, as either do not appertain to the perſon, but to ſome other thing by way of dependency, as a box with charters of land, the body of a ward, apples upon a tree, or a tree itſelf growing on the ground, Cromp. Juſtice of Peace, f. 33. b. or elſe ſuch as are neceſſary, iſſuing out of ſome immoveable thing to a perſon, as a leaſe or rent for a term of years. And alſo to hold at will, is a chattel real. Terms de la Ley, verbo Chattel.

Cheats, Are deceitful practices, in defrauding or endeavouring to defraud another of his known right by means of ſome artful device, contrary to the plain rules of common honeſty; as by playing with falſe dice; or by cauſing an illiterate perſon to execute a deed to his prejudice, by reading it over to him in words different from thoſe in which it was written; or by perſuading a woman to execute writings to another as her truſtee, upon an intended marriage, which in truth contained no ſuch thing, but only a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment; or by ſuppreſſing a will; and ſuch like. 1 Haw. 188.

Stat. 33 H. 8. cap. 1. ſect. 2. If any perſon falſly and deceitfully get into his hands or poſſeſſion any money or other things of any other perſons by colour of any falſe token or counterfeit letter made in any other man's name, ſuch perſon being convicted by witneſſes taken before the Lord Chancellor, or by examination of witneſſes, or confeſſion before the juſtices of aſſize, or before the juſtices of peace in their general quarter ſeſſions, or by action in the courts of record, ſhall have ſuch puniſhment by impriſonment, ſetting upon the pillory, or by any corporal pain (except pains of death) as ſhall be adjudged by the perſons before whom he ſhall be convict.

Sect. 3. As well the juſtices of aſſize, as alſo two juſtices of peace in every county, whereof one to be of the quorum, ſhall have power to convent to the aſſizes or ſeſſions any perſons ſuſpected of the offences aforeſaid, and to commit them to ward, or let them to bail till the next aſſizes or general ſeſſions.

Sect. 4. Juſtices of peace within every city, town, and franchiſe ſhall have like juriſdiction as juſtices of aſſize, or juſtices of peace in the counties, for the puniſhment of offenders by this act, ſaving to the party grieved by ſuch deceit ſuch remedy as he might have had.

Get into his hands or poſſeſſion] A perſon endeavouring by a counterfeit letter to defraud another of goods, and being apprehended on ſuſpicion of ſuch fraud, before he hath got the goods into his poſſeſſion, ſeems not to be within this ſtatute. Seſſ. Ca. 2 vol. 27. Eaſt. 3 Geo. 2.

Falſe token] On motion to quaſh an indictment, which was, that the defendant came pretending that ſuch a perſon had ſent him to receive 20 l. and received it, whereas ſuch perſon did not ſend him. By the court, it is not indictable, unleſs he came with falſe tokens; for we are not to indict one man for making a fool of another. Blackerby's Juſtice 79.

It was adjudged, that an indictment averring the offence to be by falſe tokens, without ſhewing what thoſe falſe tokens are, is not ſufficient; and that the fraudulently procuring a note from a perſon, by falſly affirming that there was one in the next room that would pay the money due upon it, whereas in fact there was no ſuch perſon in the next room, is not a falſe token, but a falſe affirmation only. Seſſ. Ca. 2 vol. 201. Str. 1127.

Corporal pain] Lord Coke obſerves hereupon, that for this offence the offender cannot be fined, but corporal pain only inflicted. 3 Inſt. 133.

But Mr. ſerjeant Hawkins (p. 188.) obſerves, that a perſon has been fined 500 l. for this offence, and cites the following precedent:

Terrey, a merchant, was indicted upon the ſtatute of the 33 Henry 8. of falſe tokens, becauſe that he by a falſe note in the name of John Du-boys, obtained into his hands a wedge of ſilver of the value of 200 l. The defendant being found guilty, exception was taken by Charles Jones and Holbourn againſt the ſaid indictment for variance therein, in ſeveral words, from the ſtatute; but becauſe there was not any recital, nor miſrecital of the ſtatute, but it was only an inducement to the ſetting down thereof, and not in any point material, the court reſolved it to be good enough; and thereupon it was adjudged, that he ſhould ſtand upon the pillory in Cheapſide, and upon the pillory in Cornhill near to the Exchange upon the Saturday following, and ſhould pay fine to the King of 500 l. and be impriſoned during the king's pleaſure, and to be bound with good ſureties for his good behaviour. Cro. Car. 564. See 1 Bulſtr. 149.

Commit or bail him] See ſect. 3. of the laſt mentioned ſtatute. In this caſe the juſtices ſhall do well to take examination of the offence, and to certify the ſame to the ſeſſions or gaol-delivery, and withal to bind over the informer and witneſſes to give evidence therein. Dalt. c. 32.

On an indictment againſt the defendant, a miller, for changing corn delivered to him to be ground, and giving bad corn inſtead of it, it was moved to quaſh the ſame, becauſe it is only a private cheat, and not of a publick nature. It was anſwered, that being a cheat in the way of trade, it concerned the publick, and therefore was indictable. And the court unanimouſly agreed not to quaſh it. Seſſ. Ca. 1 vol. 217. Trin. 16 Geo. 2.

A perſon falſly pretending that he had power to diſcharge ſoldiers, took money of a ſoldier to diſcharge him; and being indicted for the ſame, the court held the indictment to be good. Latch 202.

As there are frauds which may be relieved civilly, and not puniſhed criminally (with the complaints whereof the courts of equity do generally abound); ſo there are other frauds, which in a ſpecial caſe may not be helped civilly, and yet ſhall be puniſhed criminally. Thus, if a minor goes about the town, and pretending to be of age, defrauds many perſons, by taking credit for a conſiderable quantity of goods, and then inſiſting on his nonage; the perſons injured cannot recover the value of their goods, but they may indict and puniſh him for a common cheat. Barl. 100.

It ſeems to be the better opinion, that the deceitful receiving of money from one man, to another's uſe, upon a falſe pretence of having a meſſage and order to that purpoſe, is not puniſhable by a criminal proſecution, becauſe it is accompanied with no manner of artful contrivance, but wholly depends on a bare naked lie; and it is ſaid to be needleſs to provide ſevere laws for ſuch miſchiefs, againſt which common prudence and caution may be a ſufficient ſecurity. 1 Haw. 188.

A perſon

A perſon for a counterfeit paſs was adjudged to the pillory and fined. Dalt. c. 32.

Stat. 30 Geo. 2. cap. 24. ſect. 1. All perſons who knowingly and deſignedly, by falſe pretence or pretences, ſhall obtain from any perſon money, goods, wares, or merchandizes, with intent to cheat or defraud any perſon of the ſame; or ſhall knowingly ſend or deliver any letter or writing with or without a name ſubſcribed thereto, or ſigned with a fictitious name, letter or letters, threatening to accuſe any perſon of any crime puniſhable by law with death, tranſportation, pillory, or any other infamous puniſhment, with intent to extort from him any money or other goods, ſhall be deemed offenders againſt law and the publick peace: and the court before whom any ſuch offender ſhall be tried, ſhall on conviction order him to be fined and impriſoned, or to be put in the pillory; or publickly whipped, or to be tranſported as ſoon as conveniently may be for ſeven years.

Sect. 2. And any juſtice, before whom any perſon charged on oath with having committed any of the offences intended by this act to be puniſhed ſhall be brought, ſhall examine by oath and ſuch other lawful means as to him ſhall ſeem meet touching the matters complained of, and deal with the offender according to law: and if the party charged as being the offender ſhall be committed to priſon, or admitted to bail to anſwer the matters complained of at the next ſeſſions or aſſizes, the ſaid juſtice ſhall bind over the proſecutor to appear and proſecute ſuch offender with effect; and if ſuch goods ſo fraudulently obtained, appear to ſuch juſtice to exceed twenty pounds, the recognizance ſhall be in no leſs than double the value of the goods.

Sect. 3. And if any perſon ſhall knowingly or deſignedly pawn or exchange, or unlawfully diſpoſe of the goods of any other perſon, not being employed or authorized by the owner ſo to do, and ſhall be thereof convicted by the oath of one witneſs, or confeſſion before one juſtice, he ſhall forfeit 20*s.* and if not forthwith paid, the juſtice ſhall commit him to the houſe of correction, or ſome other publick priſon of the place where he ſhall reſide or be convicted, there to remain and be kept to hard labour for fourteen days, unleſs the forfeiture ſhall be ſooner paid; and if within three days before the expiration of the ſaid fourteen days, the ſaid forfeiture ſhall not be paid, the ſaid juſtice, upon application of the proſecutor ſhall order him tb be publickly whipt in ſuch houſe of correction or priſon, or in ſome other publick place of the city, diviſion, town, or place wherein the offence ſhall have been committed, as to ſuch juſtice ſhall ſeem proper; the ſaid forfeitures, when recovered, to be applied towards making ſatisfaction thereout to the party injured, and defraying the coſts of the proſecution, as ſhall be adjudged reaſonable by ſuch juſtice; and if the party injured ſhall decline to accept of ſuch ſatisfaction and coſts, or if there be any overplus of the ſame, then ſuch forfeitures or overplus ſhall be paid to the overſeer for the uſe of the poor of the pariſh or place where the offence was committed.

Sect. 4. Every perſon who ſhall take any goods by way of pawn, pledge, or exchange, ſhall forthwith enter or cauſe to be entered in a fair and regular manner, in a book to be kept for that purpoſe, a deſcription of ſuch goods, and the ſum advanced thereon, the day and year, and the name of the place of abode of the perſon by whom they were pawned, and alſo the name and place of abode of the owner, according to the information of the perſon ſo pawning the ſame; and ſhall at the ſame time give a duplicate or copy to the perſon ſo pawning the ſame if required, on paying him an halfpenny if the goods are pawned for leſs than 20*s.* and one penny if pawned for 20*s.* and not more than 5*l.* and two pence if for any larger ſum; and in default of making ſuch entry and giving ſuch duplicate or copy if required, he ſhall forfeit 5*l.* by diſtreſs by warrant of one juſtice, to be applied to the uſe of the poor as aforeſaid.

Sect. 5. If in the courſe of any of the aforeſaid proceedings before any juſtice in purſuance of this act, it ſhall appear or be proved to the ſatisfaction of ſuch juſtice upon oath, that any of the goods ſo pawned are become or have been rendered of leſs value than the ſame were at the time of pawning thereof, through the default, neglect, or wilful miſbehaviour of the perſon to whom they were pawned, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, agents or ſervants; the ſaid juſtice ſhall award a reaſonable ſatisfaction to the owner in reſpect of ſuch damage, and the ſum ſo awarded ſhall be deducted out of the principal and intereſt and allowance for warehouſe-room, which ſhall appear to be due to the perſon to whom they were pawned, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns; and it ſhall be ſufficient for the pawner, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, to pay or tender the money upon the balance, after deducting out of the principal and intereſt, and money paid for warehouſe-room as aforeſaid, ſuch reaſonable ſatisfaction in reſpect of ſuch damage as ſuch juſtice ſhall order, and upon ſo doing, the juſtice ſhall proceed as if he had tendered the whole.

Sect. 6. If any perſon ſhall knowingly buy, or take in as a pledge, any linen or apparel intruſted to any other perſon to waſh, ſcour, iron, mend, or make up, and ſhall be convicted thereof on the oath of one witneſs, or confeſſion before one juſtice, he ſhall forfeit double the ſum given or lent on the ſame to the uſe of the poor, to be recovered as other forfeitures by this act, and ſhall be obliged to reſtore the goods to the owner in preſence of the juſtice.

Sect. 7. And if any perſon who ſhall offer by way of pawn, pledge, exchange, or ſale, any goods, ſhall not be able or ſhall refuſe to give a ſatisfactory account of himſelf, or of the means by which he became poſſeſſed thereof; or if there ſhall be any other reaſon to ſuſpect that ſuch goods are ſtolen, or otherwiſe illegally or clandeſtinely obtained; it ſhall be lawful for any perſon, his ſervants or agents, to whom the ſame ſhall be offered, to ſeize and detain ſuch perſon and the ſaid goods, and to deliver him as ſoon as conveniently may be into the cuſtody of the conſtable or other peace officer, who ſhall immediately convey ſuch perſon and the ſaid goods before a juſtice; and if ſuch juſtice ſhall upon examination and inquiry have cauſe to ſuſpect that the ſaid goods were ſtolen or illegally or clandeſtinely obtained, he may commit him to ſafe cuſtody for any time not exceeding ſix days, in order to be further examined; and if upon either of the ſaid examinations, it ſhall appear to the ſatisfaction of ſuch juſtice, that the ſaid goods were ſtolen, or illegally or clandeſtinely obtained, he ſhall commit the offender to the common gaol or houſe of correction, there to be dealt with according to law.

Sect. 8. Provided nevertheleſs, that if ſuch goods ſeized and detained as aforeſaid, ſhall afterwards appear to be the property of the perſon who offered the ſame to be pawned, exchanged, or ſold, or that he was authoriſed by the owner thereof to pawn, exchange, or ſell the ſame; the perſon who ſhall ſo ſeize or detain the party who offered the ſaid goods, ſhall be indemnified for having ſo done.

Sect. 9. And if the owner of any goods unlawfully pawned, pledged, or exchanged ſhall make out, either on his oath or by the oath of one witneſs before one juſtice, that ſuch owner hath or hath had goods unlawfully obtained or taken from him, and that there is juſt cauſe to ſuſpect, that any perſon within the juriſdiction of ſuch juſtice hath knowingly and unlawfully taken to pawn, or by way of pledge, or in exchange, any goods of ſuch owner, and without his privity or authority; and made appear to the ſatisfaction of ſuch juſtice probable grounds for ſuch the owner's ſuſpicion, ſuch juſtice may iſſue his warrant for ſearching in the day-time the houſe, warehouſe, or other place of any ſuch perſon ſo charged as aforeſaid; and if the occupier of ſuch houſe, warehouſe, or other place ſhall, on requeſt to him made to open the ſame by any peace officers authoriſed to ſearch there by warrant of ſuch juſtice, refuſe to open and permit the ſame to be ſearched, it ſhall be lawful for ſuch peace officer to break open any ſuch houſe, warehouſe, or other place in the day-time, and to ſearch as he ſhall think fit therein for the goods ſuſpected to be there, doing no wilful damage; and if any perſon ſhall oppoſe or hinder any ſuch ſearch, and ſhall be thereof convicted before one juſtice by the oath of one witneſs, he ſhall forfeit five pounds; and if the ſame ſhall not be immediately paid down, or within the ſpace of 24 hours, the juſtice ſhall commit him to the houſe of correction or ſome other publick priſon, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one month, nor leſs than five days, unleſs in the mean time the forfeiture ſhall be paid; and ſuch forfeiture, when recovered, ſhall go to the poor: and if upon ſuch ſearch any of the goods ſhall be found, and the property of the owner ſhall be made out to the ſatisfaction of ſuch juſtice, by the oath of one witneſs, or confeſſion, ſuch juſtice ſhall thereupon cauſe the ſame to be forthwith reſtored to the owner.

Sect. 10. And if any goods ſhall be pawned or pledged for ſecuring any money lent thereon, not exceeding in the whole the principal ſum of ten pounds, and the intereſt thereof, and if within two years after the pawning thereof (proof having been made on oath by one witneſs, or by producing a duplicate of the entry directed to be given by this act as aforeſaid, before any ſuch juſtice, of the pawning of ſuch goods within the ſaid ſpace of two years) any ſuch pawner who was the real owner of ſuch goods at the time of pawning thereof, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, ſhall tender to the perſon who lent on ſecurity of the ſaid goods, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, the principal money borrowed thereon, and all intereſt due for the ſame, together with ſuch charges for the warehouſe room of the goods pawned, as ſhall be agreed on at the time of pawning the ſame, and the perſon who took the goods in pawn, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, ſhall thereupon neglect or refuſe to deliver back the goods ſo pawned for any ſum not exceeding the ſaid principal ſum of ten pounds to the perſon who borrowed the money thereon, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns; then and in ſuch caſe, on oath thereof made by the pawner, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, or ſome other credible perſon, any juſtice of the place where the perſon who took ſuch pawn, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, ſhall dwell, on the application of the borrower, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, ſhall cauſe ſuch perſon to come before him, and ſhall examine on oath the parties themſelves, and ſuch other credible perſons as ſhall appear before him touching the premiſſes: and if tender of the principal and intereſt, and charges for warehouſe room as aforeſaid, ſhall be proved by oath to have been made as aforeſaid within the ſpace of two years; and the lender on payment by the borrower, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, of ſuch principal money, and the intereſt due thereon, together with ſuch charges for warehouſe room as aforeſaid to the lender, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns, ſhall refuſe to accept thereof on tender before ſuch juſtice, the ſaid juſtice ſhall thereupon, by order under his hand, direct the goods ſo pawned forthwith to be delivered to the pawner, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns; and if the lender ſhall neglect or refuſe to deliver up, or make ſatisfaction for ſuch goods as aforeſaid, as ſuch juſtice ſhall order, then he ſhall commit the party refuſing to the houſe of correction, or ſome other publick priſon, until he ſhall deliver up the ſaid goods according to the order of ſuch juſtice, or make ſatisfaction for the value thereof to the party intitled to the redemption.

Sect. 11. But if any pawn or pledge of goods made by or for the proprietor ſhall remain unredeemed for two years, the ſame ſhall be forfeited; and the perſon to whom they were pawned may ſell the ſame, ſubject nevertheleſs to account for the overplus, if any ſhall be, of ſuch goods which have been pledged for two pounds or upwards, as by this act is directed.

Sect. 12. And he ſhall enter in his book to be kept for that purpoſe, a juſt account of the ſale of all ſuch goods, expreſſing the day when, the money for which, and the name and place of abode of the perſon to whom the ſame were ſold, and if they be ſold for more than the principal and intereſt, and charge of warehouſe room, the overplus ſhall be paid on demand to the perſon on whoſe account ſuch goods were pawned, his executors, adminiſtrators, or aſſigns; who ſhall for his ſatisfaction be permitted to inſpect the entry to be made as aforeſaid of ſuch ſale, paying for his inſpection the ſum of one penny, and no more; and if any perſon ſhall refuſe to permit ſuch perſon who pawned the goods to inſpect ſuch entry (ſuch perſon if he be an executor, adminiſtrator or aſſignee, at ſuch time producing his letters teſtamentary, letters of adminiſtration or aſſignment) and if the goods were ſold for more than the ſum entered in ſuch book, or if ſuch perſon ſhall not make ſuch entry, or ſhall not have bona fide ſold the goods for the beſt price that he might have reaſonably got for the ſame, without his wilful default; or ſhall refuſe to pay ſuch overplus on demand as aforeſaid, he ſhall forfeit treble the value of ſuch goods to the perſon by whom or on whoſe account they were pawned, his executors, adminiſtrators, and aſſigns, to be recovered in any of his Majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter.

Sect. 13. Provided, that no fee or gratuity ſhall be taken for any ſummons or warrant granted by any juſtice in purſuance of this act, ſo far as the ſame relates to goods pawned, pledged, taken in exchange, or unlawfully diſpoſed of.

Sect. 16. And any juſtice, unto whom complaint upon oath ſhall be made of any offence committed againſt this act, ſhall iſſue his warrant for bringing before him or ſome other juſtice of ſuch place, the perſon charged with ſuch offence, and the juſtice before whom he is brought ſhall hear and determine the matter, and proceed to judgment and conviction; and if it ſhall appear upon oath to the ſatisfaction of ſuch juſtice, that any perſon within his juriſdiction can give any material evidence on behalf of the proſecutor, or of the perſon accuſed, and who will not voluntarily appear; he ſhall iſſue his ſummons to convene him to give his evidence; and if he ſhall neglect or refuſe to appear on ſuch ſummons, and no juſt excuſe ſhall be offered, then, on proof upon oath of the ſummons having been duly ſerved upon him, he ſhall iſſue his warrant to bring ſuch witneſs before him; and on his appearance, if he ſhall refuſe to be examined on oath, without offering juſt cauſe for his refuſal, the juſtice ſhall commit him to the publick priſon for any time not exceeding three months; and if on ſuch examination the juſtice ſhall deem the evidence of any ſuch witneſs to be material, he may bind over ſuch witneſs, unleſs a feme covert, or under the age of twenty-one years, by recognizance in a reaſonable penalty, to appear and give evidence at the next ſeſſions or aſſizes.

Sect. 17. And no perſon charged on oath with being guilty of any of the offences puniſhable by this act, and which ſhall require bail, ſhall be admitted to bail before twenty-four hours notice, at leaſt, ſhall be proved by oath to have been given in writing to the proſecutor, of the names and places of abode of the perſons propoſed to be bail for any ſuch offender; unleſs the bail offered ſhall be well known to the juſtice, and he ſhall approve of them; and every ſuch offender who ſhall be bound over to the ſeſſions or aſſizes, ſhall be tried at the next ſeſſions or aſſizes to be held after his being apprehended, unleſs the court ſhall think fit to put off the trial on juſt cauſe made out to them.

Sect. 18. And in all proceedings on this act, any perſon ſhall be admitted to be a witneſs, notwithſtanding his being an inhabitant of the place wherein the offence ſhall have been committed.

Sect. 19. And the juſtice before whom any perſon ſhall be convicted upon this act, ſhall cauſe the conviction to be drawn up in the form, or to the effect following:

To wit, { BE it remembered, that on this ——— day of ———, in the ——— year of his Majeſty's reign, ——— is convicted before ——— of his Majeſty's juſtices of the peace for the ſaid county of ——— [or for the riding or diviſion of the ſaid county of ———, or for the city, liberty, or town of ———, as the caſe ſhall be] for ———, and ——— the ſaid ——— do adjudge adjudge him or her to pay and forfeit for the ſame, the ſum of ———. Given under ———, the day and year aforeſaid.

The ſame to be written on parchment, and tranſmitted to the next ſeſſions, to be kept amongſt the records; and if any perſon ſhall appeal to the ſaid ſeſſions the juſtices there ſhall, upon the receiving the ſaid conviction, proceed to hear and determine the matter.

Sect. 20. And no certiorari ſhall be granted to remove any proceedings on this act.

Sect. 21. And if any perſon convicted of any offence puniſhable by this act, ſhall think himſelf aggrieved by the judgment of the juſtice before whom he ſhall have been convicted, he may appeal to the next ſeſſions, and the execution of the judgment ſhall, in ſuch caſe, be ſuſpended; the perſon convicted entering into recognizance at the time of the conviction, with two ſureties, in double the ſum he ſhall have been adjudged to pay, upon condition to proſecute ſuch appeal with effect, and to be forth-coming to abide the judgment and determination of the ſaid ſeſſions; and the ſeſſions ſhall award ſuch coſts as ſhall appear juſt and reaſonable to be paid to either party. And if the judgment ſhall be affirmed, the appellant ſhall immediately pay the ſum adjudged to be forfeited, together with ſuch coſts as the court ſhall award, or in default thereof ſhall ſuffer the pains and penalties by this act inflicted upon perſons reſpectively, who ſhall neglect to pay, or ſhall not pay the forfeitures by this act to be paid.

Sect. 22. And perſons ſued for any thing done on this act may have double coſts.

Sect. 23. And juſtices acting under this ſtatute ſhall be indemnified as by the 24 Geo. 2. cap. 44. And no ſuit ſhall be commenced againſt any peace-officer for any thing done in the execution of this act, until notice in writing ſhall have been given to him, or left at his uſual place of abode, by the attorney employed againſt him: which notice ſhall contain the name and place of abode of the perſon who is to bring the action, together with the cauſe of action, and the name and place of abode of the attorney ſhall be underwritten or indorſed thereon; and ſuch peace-officer may, at any time within fourteen days after ſuch notice, tender, or cauſe to be tendered, any ſum or amends for the injury complained of, to the party complaining, or to the ſaid attorney; and if the ſame is not accepted of, the defendant may plead ſuch tender in bar of ſuch action, together with the general iſſue, or any other plea, with leave of the court; and if the jury ſhall find the amends to have been ſufficient, or otherwiſe the plaintiff ſhall fail in the action, he ſhall have his coſts; and if the plaintiff ſhall prevail, he ſhall have ſuch damages as the jury ſhall think proper, together with full coſts.

Childzen, Are in law a man's iſſue begotten on his wife. In caſe land be given by will to a man and his children who has ſuch alive, the deviſee takes only an eſtate for life; but if there be no child living, it is held to be an eſtate tail. 1 Vent. 214, 225. A deviſe to one's children, prima facie, refers only to ſuch as are alive at the the time of making the will; though were the ſame to children living at his death, a child in ventre ſa mere may be looked upon as living. 1 P. Williams 342, 244. Alſo a ſon, with which a wife is priviment enſient, is adjudged living at the time of the teſtator's death, to prevent an eſtate going over to another, &c. Ibid. 486. If a ſum of money is given in truſt for the children of another perſon, and he had only one child and ſeveral grandchildren, the child only ſhall take; yet it is ſaid if ſuch perſon had not any child living, the grandchildren might have taken by the name of children. 2 Vern. 106. *Abr. Childwit (Sax.) Signifies a power to take a fine of a bond-woman, unlawfully begotten with child. Prior habeat gerſumam de nativa ſua impregnata ſine licentia maritandi. Ex Regiſtro Priorat. de Cokesford. Every reputed father of a baſe child, gotten within the manor of Writtel, in com. Eſſex. pays to the lord for a fine 3 s. 4 d. where it ſeems to extend as well to free as bond-women; and the cuſtom is there yet called Childwit. Quicunq; illam culpam fecerit, vocat. childwit, archiepiſcopus aut tam aut dimidiam emendationis partem habebit quietum eſſe de childwit. Du Freſne.

Chimin (Fr. chemin) Signifies in law phraſe a way: It is divided into two ſorts; the King's highway, and a private way. Kitchin, fol. 35. The King's highway, chiminus Regius, is that by which the King's ſubjects, and all under his protection, have free liberty to paſs, though the property of the ſoil on each ſide where the way lieth, may perhaps belong to ſome private man. A way private is that, by which one man or more have liberty to paſs, either by preſcription or by charter, through another man's ground. And this is divided into chimin in groſs, and chimin appendant. Kitchin, fol. 117. Chimin in groſs is that way which a man holdeth principally and ſolely in itſelf; chimin appendant is that which a man hath adjoined to ſome other thing or appurtenant thereto. For example; if a man hire a cloſe or paſture, and covenant for ingreſs and egreſs to and from the ſaid cloſe, through ſome other ground, by which otherwiſe he cannot paſs: Or chimin in groſs may be that, which the civilians call perſonal; as when one covenanteth for a way through another man's ground for himſelf and his heirs: Chimin appendant, on the other ſide, may be that which they call real; as when a man purchaſeth a way through another man's ground, for ſuch as do or ſhall dwell in this or that houſe, for ever, or be owners of ſuch a manor. See Co. on Litt. fol. 56. and 4 Vin. tit. Chimin.

Chiminage (Chiminagium) Signifies a toll for wayfarage through the foreſt. *Cromp. Chip, Cheap, Chipping, Signifies the place to be a market-town: from the Sax. ceapen, cyppan, emere; as Chippenham, Cheapſide, &c.

Chippingavel, rectius Cheapingavel, Toll for buying and ſelling. See Bagavel.

Chirgemote, Circgemote, Chirchemote, A Saxon word ſignifying forum eccleſiaſticum; Quouſque chirgemote diſcordantes inveniet, vel amore congreget, vel ſequeſtret judicio. Leg. H. 1. cap. 8. and 4 Inſt. fol. 321.

Chirograph, (Chirographium, or ſcriptum chirographatum) Signifies any publick inſtrument of gift or conveyance, atteſted by the ſubſcription and croſſes of the preſent witneſſes, and was in the Saxon times called chirographum; which being ſomewhat changed in form and manner by the Normans, was by them ſtiled Charta; of which Ingulph gives this account.———Chirographorum confectionem Anglicanam, quæ antea uſque ad Edwardi Regis tempora fidelium præſentium ſubſcriptionibus cum crucibus aureis aliiſque ſacris ſignaculis firma fuerunt, Normanni condemnantes chirographa chartas vocabant, & chartarum firmitatem cum cerea impreſſione per uniuſcujuſcunque ſpeciale ſigillum ſub inſtillatione trium vel quatuor teſtium ad- adſtantium conficere conſtituebant. Hiſt. Ingulph. edit. Gale, pag. 901. Anciently, when they made a chirograph or deed, which required a counterpart, as we call it, they engroſſed it twice upon one piece of parchment contrary-wiſe, leaving a ſpace between, in which they wrote in great letters the word chirograph; and cut the parchment in two, ſometimes even, ſometimes with indenture, through the midſt of the word, concluding the deed with,——In cujus rei teſtimonium utraq; pars mutuo ſcriptis præſentibus, fide media ſigillum ſuum fecit apponi. This was afterwards called dividenda, becauſe the parchment was ſo divided or cut. And the firſt uſe of the chirographs was in Henry the Third's time. See Indenture. Chirograph was alſo of old uſed for a fine.——Promittens fideliter fidæ media ſub juramento præſtiti, quod in adventu juſticiariorum prox. errantium levari faciam chirographum de prædicta remiſſione, &c. Charta Neſtæ de Stanley ſine dat. in Regiſtro de Wormley. And the manner of engroſſing the fines, and cutting the parchment in two pieces, is ſtill obſerved in that office, which is called the Chirographer's office. But as to deeds, that was anciently called a Chirograph, which was deſcribed by the proper hand-writing of the vendor or debtor, and delivered to the buyer or creditor; and it differed from ſyngraphus, which was in this manner, viz. both parties, as well the creditor as debtor, wrote their names, and the names of the witneſſes, and the ſum of money borrowed, either on paper or on a piece of wood, and the word ſyngraphus in capital letters in the middle; which letters were cut in the middle, and one part delivered to each party, that upon comparing them (if any diſpute ſhould ariſe) they might tally, and ſo put an end to the difference. When this prudent cuſtom had for ſome time prevailed, then the word chirographum was appropriated to ſuch bipartite writings or indentures—Et in hujus rei teſtimonium huic ſcripto in modum chirographi confecto viciſſim ſigilla noſtra appoſuimus. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. 177.—Ut autem iſta conventio tuta & inconcuſſa perpetuo permaneat, præſentis ſcripti ſerie & utriuſque monaſterii ſigilli teſtimonium una cum ſigillis abbatum diviſo inter eos chirographo confirmata eſt. Ibid. pag. 223. The chirographs were called Chartæ diviſæ, ſcripta per chirographum diviſa, chartæ per alphabetum diviſæ, as the chirographs of all fines are at this day.

Chirographer of Fines (Chirographus finium & concordiarum; from the Greek χειρ, manus, a hand, and γραφω, ſcribo, to write) Signifies in the Common law, that officer of the Common Pleas who engroſſeth fines in that court, acknowledged into a perpetual record, after they are acknowledged and fully paſſed by thoſe officers by whom they were formerly examined, and that writeth or deliver eth the indentures of them unto the party. 2 H. 3. c. 8. and *Weſt. Chivalry (Servitium militare, from the French chevalier) Signifieth in our Common law tenure of land by knight's ſervice: for the better underſtanding whereof, it is to be known, that there is no land, but is holden mediately or immediately of the crown by ſome ſervice, and therefore all our freeholds that are to us and our heirs are called feuda or feoda, fees, as proceeding from the beneficence of the King, for ſome ſmall yearly rent, and the performance of ſuch ſervices as originally were laid upon the land at the donation thereof; for the King gave to the great nobles, his immediate tenants, large poſſeſſions for ever, to hold of him for this or that ſervice or rent: and they again in time parcelled it out to ſuch other as they liked, the ſame lands, for rents and ſervices, as they thought good. And theſe ſervices are by Littelton divided in two ſorts, chivalry and ſocage; the former is martial and military, the other clowniſh and ruſtical: chivalry therefore is a tenure of ſervice, whereby the tenant is bound to perform ſome noble or military office unto his lord; and is of two ſorts, either regal, that is, ſuch as may hold only of the King, or ſuch as may hold only of a common perſon: that which may hold only of the King is properly called ſervitium or ſerjeantia, and is again divided into grand or petit, great or ſmall; great, commonly called grand ſerjeanty, is that where one holdeth lands of the King by ſervice, which he ought to do in his own perſon, as to bear the King's banner or his ſpear, or to lead his hoſt, or to find a man at arms to fight within the four ſeas, &c. Littl. tit. Serjeanty. Petit ſerjeanty is where a man holdeth land of the King, to yield him annually ſome ſmall thing towards his wars. as a ſword, dagger, bow, &c. Littl. tit. Petit ſerjeanty. Chivalry, whereby a man may hold of a common perſon, is called ſcutagium, eſcuage, that is, ſervice of the ſhield, and this is either uncertain or certain. Eſcuage uncertain is likewiſe twofold, firſt, where the tenant is bound to follow his lord, going in perſon, to the King's wars againſt his enemies, either himſelf, or to ſend a ſufficient man in his place, there to be maintained at his coſt ſo many days, as were agreed upon between the lord and firſt tenant at the granting of the fee. And the days of ſuch ſervice ſeem to have been rated by the quantity of the land ſo holden; as if it extended to a whole knight's fee, then the tenant was bound to follow his lord forty days, and a knight's fee was ſo much land, as in thoſe days was accounted a ſufficient living for a knight, and that was 680 acres as ſome hold, or as others 800, or 15 pounds per annum. Camb. Brit. p. 110. Sir Thomas Smith ſaith, cenſus equeſtris is forty pounds revenue in free lands. But if it extends to half a knight's fee, then the tenant is bound to follow his lord but twenty days; if to a fourth part, then ten days. F. N. B. fol. 83, 84. The other kind of this eſcuage uncertain is called caſtle-ward, where the tenant by his land is bound either by himſelf, or ſome other, to defend a caſtle as often as it ſhall come to his courſe. Eſcuage certain, is where the tenant is ſet at a certain ſum of money to be paid in lieu of ſuch uncertain ſervice; as that a man ſhall pay yearly for every knight's fee twenty ſhillings. Stow. Annal. pag. 233. For half a knight's fee ten, or ſome like rate. And this ſervice, becauſe it is drawn to a certain rent, groweth to be of a mixt nature; not merely ſocage, for that it ſmelleth not of the plough, and yet ſocage in effect, is now neither perſonal ſervice nor uncertain. Lit. tit. ſocage. This tenure called chivalry hath other conditions annext toit, as homage, fealty, wardſhip, relief, and marriage. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 35. which ſee in their reſpective places. Chivalry is either general or ſpecial. Dyer, f. 161. num. 47. General ſeemeth to be where it is only ſaid in the feoffment, that the tenant holdeth per ſervitium militare, without ſpecification of ſerjeanty, eſcuage, &c. Special, that which is declared particularly, what kind of knight's ſervice he holdeth by. But there is a great alteration made in theſe things by the ſtatute made 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. which ſaith, All tenures by knight's ſervice of the King or of any other perſon, knight's ſervice in capite or ſocage; in capite of the King, and the fruits and conſequences thereof happened, or which ſhall or may happen or ariſe thereupon, or thereby, are taken away and diſcharged: and all tenures of houſes, manors, lands, &c. ſhall be conſtrued and adjudged to be turned into free and common ſocage, &c.

Choſe (Fr. Thing) It is uſed with divers epithets; as choſe local is ſuch a thing as is annexed to a place. For example, a mill is choſe local. Choſe tranſitory ſeems to be that thing which is moveable, and may be taken away or carried from place to place. Kitchin, fol. 18. Choſe in action; is a thing incorporal, and only a right; as an annuity, obligation for debt, a covenant, voucher by warranty, and generally all cauſes of ſuit for any debt or duty, treſpaſs or wrong, are to be accounted choſes in action. And it ſeems choſe in action may be alſo called choſe in ſuſpence; becauſe it hath not real exiſtence or being, nor can properly be ſaid to be in our poſſeſſion. Br. tit. Choſe in action.

When a man can bring an action for ſome duty, viz. debt upon bond, or for rent; or action of covenant, or treſpaſs for goods taken away, or ſuch like; theſe are choſe in action: and as they are things whereof a perſon is not poſſeſſed, but is put to his action for recovery of them, they are therefore called choſes in action. 1 Lil. Abr. 264. A perſon diſſeiſes me of land, or takes away my goods; my right or title of entry into the lands, or action and ſuit for it, and ſo for the goods, is a choſe in action: ſo a debt on an obligation, and power and right of action to ſue for the ſame. 1 Brownl. 33. When bonds are aſſigned, it is done with power of attorney to receive and ſue in the aſſignor's name; ſo that though in this caſe a choſe in action is ſaid to be aſſignable over, yet it amounts to little more than a letter of attorney to ſue for the debt. Wood's Inſt. 282. A man may authorize another to ſue for a debt by ſpecialty in his name, and by agreement promiſe it to him when recovered; or he may give, grant, or aſſign the writing, and ſo deprive himſelf of the means to recover the debt, though ſuch a debt itſelf, being a choſe in action, cannot be regularly aſſigned over. 2 Shep. Abr. 337. Charters, where the owner of the land hath them in poſſeſſion, are grantable; a poſſibility of an intereſt or eſtate in a term for years, is near to a choſe in action, and therefore may not be granted; but a poſſibility joined with an intereſt may be a grantable chattel. *Co. Church, (from the Sax. circe, or from the Greek κυριου οικος, the Lord's houſe) The place which chriſtians conſecrate to the worſhip of God; or it is the collective body of chriſtians, uſually termed the catholick church, or the body of chriſtians adhering to one particular opinion, or form of worſhip; and ſometimes the ſame word means a ſynod of biſhops, or of preſbyters; and in ſome places it is the pope and a general council. Johnſ. Dict. Under this head is conſidered,

1. Of founding and conſecrating churches.

2. Statutes concerning the church and church-yard in general.

3. Statutes concerning the churches of particular places.

1. Of founding and conſecrating churches.

Lord Coke ſays, by the Common law and general cuſtom of the realm, it was lawful for biſhops, earls, and barons to build churches or chapels within their fees; and hereof King John informed Pope Innocent the Third (naming only, honoris cauſa, the biſhops and baronage of England, albeit this liberty extended to all) with requeſt, that this liberty to the baronage might be confirmed. To theſe letters the pope made this anſwer, Quod enim conſuetudine regni Anglorum procedere regia ſerenitas per ſuas literas intimavit, ut liceat tam epiſcopis, quam comitibus & baronibus, eccleſias in feodo ſuo fundare; laicis quidem principibus id licere nullatenus denegamus, dummodo diœceſani epiſcopi eis ſuffragetur aſſenſus, & per novam ſtructuarum veterum eccleſiarum juſtitia non lædatur. Whereas the baronage had abſolute liberty before, now the pope addeth the conſent of the biſhop: but that addition bound not, ſeeing it was againſt the liberty of the baronage warranted by the Common law: and he ſays, he would not have rehearſed this epiſtle, but that it is a proof what the general cuſtom of the realm was, concerning the building of churches without the King's licence, yet could they not erect a ſpiritual politick body to continue in ſucceſſion, and capable of endowment, without the King's licence; but by the Common law, before the ſtatutes of mortmain, they might have endowed this ſpiritual body once incorporated, perpetuis futuris temporibus, without any licence from the King, or any other. 3 Inſt. 201, 202. which body ſo incorporated, is not diſſolved, though the church is drowned, or otherwiſe deſtroyed; but, in that caſe, one may be preſented to the rectory, and ſhall be liable to annuities and other charges: the church, in conſideration of law, being properly the cure of ſouls and the right of tithes. Gibſ. 189.

But Dr. Gibſon obſerveth on the contrary, that no perſon may erect a church without the leave and conſent of the biſhop. And this, he ſays, is agreeable to the rules both of the Civil and Canon law, and was made an expreſs law of the church of England many years before the reign of King John, viz. in the council of Weſtminſter in the time of King Stephen. Nor would this right of the biſhop be defeated by the exemptions of religious perſons from epiſcopal juridiction; who might not, under colour of ſuch exemptions, erect churches in any part of their poſſeſſions not exempt without leave from the biſhop, as we find it ſpecially adjudged in the body of the Canon law. And to this, the pope's anſwer to King John is exactly agreeable, Laicis quidem principibus id licere nullatenus denegamus, dummodo diœceſani epiſcopi eis ſuffragetur aſſenſus. And King John's letter doth not relate to a right of erecting with or without licence; ſince the occaſion of it was, the building of a collegiate chapel by the archbiſhop, who was his own licence; and the only objection was, that the building of it would be prejudical to the church of Canterbury. Gibſ. 188.

But it is to be obſerved, that theſe two aſſertions are not contradictory; for the one ſays only that by the Civil and Canon law it might not be done, and the other ſays that it might be done by the Common law: altho' Lord Coke produceth no inſtances, before the reign of King John or after, of churches erected without the licence of the dioceſan. And it ſeemeth to amount to the ſame thing, ſo long as the biſhop hath power (unto which Lord Coke aſſenteth) after the church is erected, to withhold or deny the conſecration.

And not only the biſhop, by refuſing to conſecrate, may hinder the eſtabliſhment of a new church or chapel in any pariſh; but alſo any other perſon thinking himſelf injured thereby, as by incroaching upon his ground, ſtopping his way, or the like, may apply to the temporal courts, who (as they ſee cauſe) will grant him redreſs.

The ancient manner of founding churches was, after the founders had made their application to the biſhop of the dioceſe, and had his licence, the biſhop or his commiſſioners ſet up a croſs, and ſet forth the ground where the church was to be built; and then the founders might proceed in the building of the church: and when the church was finiſhed, the biſhop was to conſecrate it, but not till it was endowed; and before, the ſacraments were not to be adminſtered in it. Degge, part 1. c. 12.

For though churches or chapels may be built by any of the King's ſubjects, yet, before the law takes knowledge of them to be churches or chapels, the biſhop is to conſecrate or dedicate the ſame: and this is the reaſon, a church or not a church, a chapel or not a chapel, ſhall be tried and certified by the biſhop. 3 Inſt. 203.

The law takes no notice of churches or chapels till they are conſecrated by the biſhop: but the Canon law ſuppoſes, that with conſent of the biſhop, divine ſervice may be performed, and ſacraments adminiſtered in churches and chapels not conſecrated; inaſmuch as it provides, that a church ſhall have the privilege of immunity, in which the divine myſteries are celebrated, altho' it be not yet conſecrated: and there are many licences to that effect (granted on ſpecial occaſions) in our eccleſiaſtical records. Gibſ. 190.

And after a new church is erected, it may not be conſecrated without a competent endowment: and this was made a law of the church of England in the 16 canon of the council of London; A church ſhall not be conſecrated until neceſſary proviſion be made for the prieſt. And the canon law goes further; requiring the endowment, not only to be made before conſecration, but even to be aſcertained and exhibited before they begin to build. And the Civil law is yet more ſtrict; enjoining, that the endowment be actually made before the building be begun Gibſ. 189.

Foraſmuch as a church-yard that is dedicated is the ſoil of a church, and whatſoever is planted belonging to the ſoil, it muſt needs follow, that theſe trees which be growing in the church-yard are to be reckoned amongſt the goods of the church, the which laymen have no authority to diſpoſe; but, as the holy ſcripture doth teſtify, the charge of them is committed only to prieſts to be diſpoſed of: and yet, ſeeing thoſe trees be often planted to defend the force of the wind from hurting of the church, we do prohibit the parſons of the church, that they do not preſume to fell them down unadviſedly, but when the chan-

Church-reve, Is the ſame with churchwarden; reve in the Saxon being as much as guardian in the French, and ſignifies the guardian or overſeer of the church, as ſhire-reve is the gardein of ſhire or county, and port-reve of the port or haven, though afterwards it became a name of office. The word is now out of uſe, but uſed by Chaucer ſpeaking of the juriſdiction of archdeacons. See Churchwardens.

Churchwardens (Eccleſiarum guardiani) Are officers yearly choſen by the conſent of the miniſter and pariſhioners, according to the cuſtom of every ſeveral place, to look to the church, church-yard, and ſuch things as belong to both, and to obſerve the behaviours of their pariſhioners for ſuch faults as appertain to the juriſdiction or cenſure of the court eccleſiaſtical. Theſe are a kind of corporation, enabled by law to ſue for any thing belonging to their church, or poor of their pariſh. Cowell.

Churchwardens are officers inſtituted for the benefit and advantage of religion, whoſe chief duty it is to ſuppreſs all prophaneneſs and immorality, and to ſee that the publick worſhip be performed with due decency and reverence. But though they deal chiefly in matters relating to the church, yet are they every where treated of in our law books as temporal perſons, and are undoubtedly to be conſidered as a lay corporation veſted with a temporal right in their offices, and a ſpecial property in the goods belonging to the church, which farther appears by the duties enjoined them by ſeveral acts of parliament herein after mentioned. 1 New. Abr. 379.

In the ancient epiſcopal ſynods, the biſhops were wont to ſummon divers credible perſons out of every pariſh, to give information of, and to atteſt the diſorders of clergy and people. Theſe were called teſtes ſynodales, and were in after times a kind of impanelled jury, conſiſting of two, three, or more perſons in every pariſh, who were upon oath to preſent all hereticks and other irregular perſons. Ken. Par. Ant. 649. And theſe in proceſs of time became ſtanding officers in ſeveral places, eſpecially in great cities, and from hence were called ſynodſmen, and by corruption ſideſmen. They are alſo ſometimes called queſtmen, from the nature of their office, in making inquiry concerning offences: and theſe ſideſmen or queſtmen are to be choſen yearly in Eaſter week by the miniſter and pariſhioners (if they can agree) otherwiſe to be appointed by the ordinary of the dioceſe. But for the moſt part, this whole office is now devolved upon the churchwardens, together with that other office which their name more properly importeth, of taking care of the church and of the goods thereof, which they had of very ancient time. Dr. Burn's Eccleſ. Law, tit. Churchwardens.

2. Who are exempted from being churchwardens.
3. Of their intereſt in and power over the things belonging to the church.
4. Of their power and duty in making rates and preſentments, hindering irreverence in the church, and ſeveral other matters.
5. Of their accounts, and of actions brought by and againſt them.

1. Of the right and manner of chooſing churchwardens.

By the Common law, the right of chooſing churchwardens belongs to the pariſhioners, who are to be at the charge of repairing the church, &c. and therefore it is but fitting that they ſhould have it in their power to determine what perſons are proper to be intruſted in theſe concerns; nor does any canon deprive them of this right; for though by cuſtom the pariſhioners in ſome places chooſe one, and the parſon another, yet this is by virtue of the cuſtom; the validity of which, as of all other cuſtoms, muſt be determined in the King's temporal courts; nor can the archdeacon, or any others, who by virtue of their offices are to ſwear and admit them, controul any ſuch election, for herein their offices are purely miniſterial. 1 New Abr. 371. cites Cro. Jac. 532, 670. Cro. Car. 552. Noy 31, 139. 2 Rol. Abr. 234. Hard. 379. Raym. 439.

And though by cuſtom the rector or vicar may name one, yet where the vicar of St. Giles's in Northampton was under a deprivation for not taking the oaths to King William and Queen Mary, and the church being vacant, the pariſhioners proceeded to the election of two churchwardens, and preſented them to be ſworn; but the regiſter of the conſiſtory court being a friend to the vicar, refuſing to ſwear them unleſs that perſon whom the late vicar approved were nominated one, a mandamus was granted. Carth. 118.

The pariſhioners are alſo judges of the fitneſs and qualifications of the perſons they chooſe for that office; and therefore where to a mandamus to ſwear a churchwarden choſen according to cuſtom, the archdeacon returned, that the perſon preſented was a poor dairyman, who had no eſtate, and was perſona minus habilis & idonea for that office; the court granted a peremptory mandamus. Carth. 393. Comb. 417. S. C. 1 Salk. 166. S. C. 5 Mod. 325. S. C.

But where a prohibition was granted niſi to the eccleſiaſtical court, where J. S. ſued as churchwarden of, &c. in Colcheſter, on a ſuggeſtion, that in Colcheſter there is a cuſtom for the inhabitants to elect the churchwardens, and that A. and B. were duly elected, which matter the defendant had pleaded in the ſpiritual court, but the plea was refuſed; but it appearing that J. S. was church warden de facto, choſen by the parſon, and that he all the year acted as ſuch, and that he, with the inhabitants and another churchwarden, made the tax for which the defendant was ſued in the eccleſiaſtical court, the rule for a prohibition was diſcharged; for per cur', Where the queſtion is only, who is churchwarden, if ſuch cuſtom is alledged, a prohibition ſhall be granted; but the matter here is for a tax for the repair of the church, and it is not material now whether he was duly elected or not; it is ſufficient that he was guardian de facto; and it may be as well put in iſſue, whether the miniſter was a rightful miniſter; beſides, this tax is not rated by the churchwardens, for they have no ſuch power, but it is a common charge, impoſed by the major part of the pariſhioners, and the churchwardens do no more in aſſeſſing them, than the other pariſhioners, and the tax will be well aſſeſſed by the major part of the inhabitants, though the churchwardens are againſt it; their chief buſineſs is in collecting of it, and the matter is a matter of eccleſiaſtical cognizance, for the ſpiritual judge may inquire touching the want of reparations of the church. And note, that upon the rule for diſcharging the prohibition, all this matter was ordered to be entered, for fear it ſhould be afterwards thought, that a prohibition was decreed where a cuſtom was in queſtion. 3 Keb. 533, 542.

In an action for a falſe return, a ſpecial verdict found the cuſtom to be for the pariſhioners of annually to elect a churchwarden; that S. the plaintiff, was elected by the pariſhioners to ſerve for churchwarden for the year 1734, and until another be choſen; that at a veſtry the enſuing year, he was re-elected by the pariſhioners, but at the veſtry then holden, the vicar and one churchwarden adjourned the veſtry to the next day, and the vicar then choſe Chapman. A mandamus had been directed to to admit and ſwear in the plaintiff. It was argued for the plaintiff, that the 89th canon of 1603, that all churchwardens and queſtmen ſhall be choſen by the joint choice of the miniſter and pariſh, if it may be, if not, then the miniſter to chooſe one, and the pariſh the other, has never been received at law, and cited Cro. Jac. 532. Warner's caſe. Cro. Car. 551. Hard. 378. and Carth. 118. where Holt Ch. J. ſays, that where the incumbent chooſes one, it is only by uſage, and that a churchwarden is a temporal officer. Per Lee J. In all councils and elections the general rule is, that the major part binds, and cited 18 E. 4. 2. and Hackwell's Modus tenendi Parliament'. The Ch. J. ſaid, that the queſtion is, whether the adjourning by vicar jointly with one churchwarden, was a valid and a good adjournment; and he thought not; and that if vicar and churchwarden had ſuch a power, it muſt be by cuſtom or by rule of Common law; but no cuſtom is found, nor is there any rule of Common law to veſt this power in the vicar, nor is it in the power of the churchwarden to adjourn; and then the right is in the aſſembly itſelf. Per Probyn J. The vicar is not a neceſſary party at the veſtry; and judgment for the plaintiff per tot' cur'. Trin. 1736. in B. R. 4 Vin. 528.

By Can. 89. All churchwardens or queſtmen in every pariſh ſhall be choſen by the joint conſent of the miniſter and the pariſhioners, if it may be; but if they cannot agree upon ſuch a choice, then the miniſter ſhall chooſe one, and the pariſhioners another: and without ſuch a joint or ſeveral choice none ſhall take upon them to be churchwardens.

Warner, one of the churchwardens of Allhallows in London, prayed a prohibition; for that, whereas by the cuſtom of the ſaid pariſh, the pariſhioners uſed every year to elect one of the pariſh, who had borne the office of ſcavenger, ſideſman, or conſtable, to be churchwarden; and that every year one who had been ſo elected churchwarden, was to continue a year longer, and to be the upper churchwarden, and another was to be choſen to him, who is called the under churchwarden; that ſuch a choice being made in that pariſh of the ſaid Warner to be churchwarden, the parſon notwithſtanding that election nominated one Carter to be churchwarden, and procured him to be ſworn in the eccleſiaſtical court to be churchwarden, and denied the ſaid Warner to be churchwarden according to the election of the pariſhioners; and this by colour of the late canon, that the parſon ſhould have the election of one of the churchwardens; and this being againſt the cuſtom, a prohibition was prayed, and a precedent ſhewn in the common bench, E. 5. Ja. for the pariſhioners of Walbrook in London, where ſuch a prohibition was granted; for it being a ſpecial cuſtom, the canons cannot alter it, eſpecially in London, where the parſon and churchwardens are a corporation, to purchaſe and demiſe their lands; if every parſon might have election of one churchwarden, without the aſſent of the pariſhioners, they might be much prejudiced thereby. Cro. Jac. 532. Eaſt. 17 Jac. 1. Warner's Caſe.

But although the greateſt part of the pariſhes in London chooſe the churchwardens by cuſtom; yet in all the new erected pariſhes the canon ſhall take place (unleſs the act of parliament, in virtue of which any church was erected, ſhall have ſpecially provided that the pariſhioners ſhall chooſe both;) inſomuch as no cuſtom can be pleaded in ſuch new pariſhes. Gibſ. 215.

The cuſtom was, for the parſon to appoint one, and the two old churchwardens the other: but it went no further. In this caſe the two churchwardens could not agree, ſo the one preſents Barwick, and the pariſhioners at large chooſe Catten. It was inſiſted for Barwick, that his caſe was like that of coparceners, where if they diſagree, the ordinary may admit the preſentee of which he will, except the eldeſt alone preſents. On the other ſide it was ſaid, that the caſes widely differed; for in the caſe of a preſentation, the ordinary hath a power to refuſe, but he hath not ſo in the caſe of churchwarden, for they are a corporation at Common law, and more temporal than ſpiritual officers. And a caſe was cited to have been adjudged in the King's Bench, where to a mandamus to ſwear in a churchwarden, the ordinary returned that he was a very unfit perſon; but a peremptory mandamus was granted, becauſe the ordinary was not a judge in that caſe. And the court held, that by this diſagreement the cuſtom was laid out of the caſe; and then they muſt reſort to the canon: under which, Catten being duly elected, they decreed for him, with 60 l. coſts. Stra. 145. Hill. 5 Geo. 1. Catten and Barwick, at a court of delegates.

In ſome caſes the lord of a manor preſcribeth for the appointment of churchwardens; and this ſhall not be tried in the eccleſiaſtical court, although it be a preſcription of what appertains to a ſpiritual thing. God. 153.

Prohibition was granted to the ſpiritual court, where it was libelled againſt the defendant, for not appearing to take upon him the office of churchwarden, though thereunto appointed by the ordinary. And it was held, that although the pariſhioners and parſon neglect for ever ſo long to chooſe churchwardens, yet the ordinary hath no juriſdiction; for churchwardens were a corporation at Common law, and they are different from queſtmen, who were the creatures of the reformation, and came in by the Canon law. The canons ſay, that churchwardens ſhall be choſen by the parſon and pariſhioners; and if they diſagree, then one by the parſon, and the other by the pariſhioners; and otherwiſe they ſhall not be. By the court, The proper way is, to take a mandamus out of the King's Bench. Str. 52.

2. Who are exempted from being churchwardens.

All peers of the realm, by reaſon of their dignity, are exempt from the office of churchwarden. Gibſ. 215. So are all clergymen, by reaſon of their order. Id. In like manner all parliament men, by reaſon of their privilege. Id.

If an attorney of the King's Bench be made a churchwarden of a pariſh, he ſhall have a writ of privilege out of the King's Bench, ſhewing his privilege to be diſcharged thereof, by reaſon of his attendance in the ſaid court. Felix Wilſon, being an attorney of the King's Bench, was made churchwarden of Hanwell, and he refuſed, fuſed, and was ſued in the ſpiritual court to take upon him the office; and a prohibition was granted. So in like manner, Mr. Baker being choſen churchwarden of Aldermanbury in London, ſuch writ was granted. 2 Rol. Abr. 272. Eaſt. 14 Car. 1. and Trin. 15 Car. 1.

Stampe, clerk of the King's Bench, was choſen churchwarden of Kingſton, and had a writ of privilege to the ſpiritual court, requiring them not to compel him to take the oath; which writ being diſobeyed, he had a prohibition. 1 Rol. Abr. 368.

By ſtat. 6 Will. 3. c. 4. ſect. 2, 3. Every perſon that ſhall uſe and exerciſe the art of an apothecary within the city of London and ſeven miles thereof, being free of the company of Apothecaries, and who ſhall be duly examined of his ſkill in the ſaid myſtery, and ſhall be approved for the ſame, ſhall, for ſo long as he ſhall uſe and exerciſe the ſaid art, and no longer, be freed and exempted from all pariſh offices, nor be diſquieted or diſturbed by reaſon thereof; he ſhall, on producing a teſtimonial under the common ſeal of the ſaid corporation of ſuch his examination, approbation, and freedom, to the perſon by whom he ſhall be ſo elected and appointed, or by or before whom he ſhall be ſummoned, returned, or required to ſerve or hold any ſuch office, be abſolutely diſcharged from the ſame, and ſuch nomination, election, return, and appointment ſhall be void and of none effect. And all perſons that ſhall uſe and exerciſe the ſaid art of an apothecary within any other part of the realm, and have been brought up and ſerved in the ſaid art as apprentices for ſeven years, according to the ſtatute of the 5 Eliz. cap. 4. ſhall be freed and exempted from all ſuch offices within the ſeveral places where they live, ſo long as they ſhall uſe and exerciſe the ſaid art, and no longer; and if any perſon ſo qualified ſhall be elected or choſen into any ſuch office, ſuch nomination, election, return, and appointment ſhall be void, unleſs he ſhall voluntarily conſent and agree to hold the ſame.

By ſtat. 1 Will. & M. c. 18. ſect. 7, 11. If any perſon diſſenting from the church of England ſhall be choſen, or otherwiſe appointed to bear the office of churchwarden, or any other parochial office, and ſuch perſon ſhall ſcruple to take upon him ſuch office in regard of the oaths, or any other matter or thing required by the law to be taken or done in reſpect of ſuch office, he ſhall and may execute the ſame by a ſufficient deputy by him to be provided, that ſhall comply with the laws in that behalf: provided, that the ſaid deputy be allowed and approved by ſuch perſons, and in ſuch manner, as ſuch officer ſhould by law have been allowed and approved. And every teacher or preacher in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, that is a miniſter, preacher, or teacher of a congregation, and duly qualified by the ſaid act, ſhall be exempted from being choſen or appointed to bear the office of churchwarden, or any other parochial office.

By ſtat. 10 & 11 W. 3. cap. 23. All perſons who have proſecuted a felon to conviction, are exempted from the office of churchwarden in the pariſh where the offence was committed.

No perſon living out of the pariſh, although he occupies lands within the pariſh, may be choſen churchwarden; becauſe he cannot take notice of abſences from church, nor diſorders in it, for the due preſenting of them. Gibſ. 215.

3. Of their intereſt in, and power over the things belonging to the church.

The churchwardens, when choſen, are a corporation intruſted with the care and management of the goods belonging to the church, which they are to order for the beſt advantage of the pariſhioners; they are likewiſe enabled to take goods for the benefit of the church, but cannot diſpoſe of them without the pariſhioners. 1 Rol. Abr. 393. 2 Inſt. 492. 1 Rol. Rep. 67. Yelv. 173.

They have ſuch a ſpecial property in the organ, bells, pariſh-books, bible, chalice, ſurplice, &c. belonging to the church, that for the taking away, or for any damage done any of theſe, they may bring an action at law, and therefore the parſon cannot ſue for them in the ſpiritual court. 1 New Abr. 372.

If two churchwardens ſue in the ſpiritual court for a levy towards the reparation of their church, and have ſentence to recover, and coſts aſſeſſed, and after one of them releaſes, yet the other may proceed for the coſts, &c. for churchwardens have nothing but to the uſe of the pariſh, and the corporation conſiſts of both; and one only cannot releaſe or give away the goods of the church. Cro. Jac. 235. Yelv. 173. 2 Brownl. 215. S. C.

Alſo they have ſuch a ſpecial property in the goods of the church, that when they are ſtolen they may bring an appeal of robbery for them: they may alſo ſue the offender in the ſpiritual court, pro ſalute animæ, but not to recover damages. 2 Hawk. P. C. 167.

But the churchwardens have no right to, or intereſt in the freehold or inheritance of the church, which alone belongs to the pariſh or incumbent. Comp. Incumb. 381.

Alſo the ſeats in the church being fixed to the freehold, the churchwardens cannot diſpoſe of them alone, nor can the churchwardens and rector jointly diſpoſe of them without the conſent of the ordinary; and though ſuch diſpoſitions have been made, yet it has been always preſumed that it was ſo done with the conſent and approbation of the ordinary. See 12 Co. 105. Hetl. 94. Godb. 200. 2 Bulſt. 150. Hob. 69. Moor 878. Comp. Incumb. 1 Salk. 167.

But as ſeats are erected for the more convenient attending of divine ſervice, and as the pariſhioners are at the expence of erecting them, and keeping them in repair, if any of them be taken away, though they are fixed to the freehold, yet the churchwardens, and not the parſon, ſhall bring the action againſt the wrong-doer. Comp. Incumb. 382.

It is ſaid to have been holden, that at Common law a churchwarden may maintain an action upon the caſe for defacing a monument in the church, Godb. 279.

4. Of their power and duty in making rates and preſentments, and hindering irreverence in the church, and their power in ſeveral other matters.

The churchwardens have no power to make any rate themſelves, excluſive of the pariſhioners, their duty being to ſummon the pariſhioners, who are to meet for that purpoſe, and when they are aſſembled, a rate made by the majority preſent ſhall bind the whole pariſh, although the churchwardens voted againſt it. See Comp. Incumb. 389.

But if the churchwardens give the pariſhioners due notice, that they intend to meet for that purpoſe, and the pariſhioners refuſe to come, or being aſſembled, refuſe to make any rate, they may make one without their concurrence; for as they are liable to be puniſhed in the eccleſiaſtical courts for not repairing the church, it would be unreaſonable that they ſhould ſuffer by the wilfulneſs and obſtinacy of others. 1 Vent. 367. 1 Mod. 79, 194.

The churchwardens in ſummoning the pariſhioners need not to do it from houſe to houſe, but a general public ſummons at the church is ſufficient, and the major part of them that appear upon ſuch ſummons, will bind the whole pariſh. 1 Vent. 367. Comp. Incumb. 389.

On a motion for a prohibition it appeared, that the libel recited that the dean of, &c. had preſented that the church and chancel of D. was out of repair, &c. and that the churchwardens of the ſaid pariſh did make, or cauſe to be made, a certain rate upon the inhabitants thereof, towards the charge of repairing the ſaid church and chancel; and that the churchwardens had accordingly repaired the church and chancel, and beautified the ſame with ornaments, and that H. was a pariſhioner of the ſaid pariſh, and refuſed to pay his proportion of the ſaid rate; and it being objected, firſt, That the churchwardens only could not make a rate; ſecondly, That the parſon parſon alone ought to repair the chancel; a prohibition was granted generally, though it was ſtrongly inſiſted on that the prohibition ought to go quoad the rate for repairs of the chancel only. Carth. 360. 1 Salk. 165. Comb. 344. 5 Mod. 384. S. C.

Preſentments made by churchwardens relate to the church, the parſon, and pariſhioners, in which they are to be guided by the articles delivered them; but theſe articles muſt be agreeable to the laws of the church, and particularly to the canons made and agreed on in the year 1603, they need not take a particular oath upon all the preſentments they make, but may do it by virtue of their general oath of churchwardens. Cro. Car.. 291. 1 Vent. 114. 2 Vent. 42.

The oath is to be general, viz. to do all things which appertain to their office; and therefore if the oath tendered requires them to preſent matters not preſentable by law, they are not obliged to take it, nor are they to be required to preſent or accuſe themſelves. Hard. 364.

Alſo if the eccleſiaſtical court proceeds againſt the churchwardens in matters not within their juriſdiction, an action on the caſe lies againſt them. Hard. 364.

And if the churchwardens maliciouſly preſent an innocent perſon for any crime, by which he is put to expence, or ſuffers in his good name or reputation, an action on the caſe lies. Cro. Gar. 285. 1 Sid. 463. 1 Vent. 86.

In aſſault and battery againſt a churchwarden, he juſtified that the plaintiff was at church in time of prayers with his hat on, and that he demanded of him to pull it off, and becauſe he did not do it, the churchwarden took off his hat, and laid it by him; and the court held this a good juſtification; and that churchwardens may juſtify to wake a man, to ſwitch boys that are at play, and turn an excommunicated perſon out of the church. 1 Lev. 196.

Churchwardens may reſtrain and hinder any ſtranger not licenſed, from preaching in their church or chapel. Compt. Incumb. 335. See 2 Bulſt. 49.

Every churchwarden is alſo an overſeer of the poor; by the ſtatute of the 43 El. c. 2.

They, or the overſeers of the poor, ſhall levy the penalties relating to weights and meaſures; by the 16 C. 2. c. 19. and 22 C. 2. c. 8.

They ſhall carry hawkers and pedlars trading without licence before a juſtice of the peace; by the 9 & 10. W. 3. c. 27.

They, or the overſeers of the poor, ſhall pay to the high conſtables the general county rate out of their money collected for the poor; by the 12 G. 2. c. 29.

They ſhall receive the penalties for ſervants carelſsly firing houſes; by the 6 Ann. c. 31.

They ſhall receive the penalties for tracking hares in the ſnow, and other game penalties; by the reſpective game acts.

They ſhall join with the conſtable and ſurveyor of the highways in chooſing and returning new ſurveyors. Stat. 3 Will. & Ma. c. 12.

Two churchwardens ſue in the ſpiritual court for a levy towards the reparation of their church, and had a ſentence to recover, and coſts aſſeſſed; the one releaſeth, and the other ſues for the coſts, and there this releaſe was pleaded, and diſallowed. Whereupon he prays a prohibition; and all this matter was diſcloſed in the prohibition; and the defendant thereupon demurred in law. And now it was moved, that this releaſe by the one, being in the perſonalty, ſhould diſcharge the intire. But it was reſolved by all the court to the contrary; for churchwardens have nothing but to the uſe of the pariſh, and therefore the corporation conſiſts in the churchwardens; and the one ſolely cannot releaſe, nor give away the goods of the church; and the coſts are of the ſame nature, which the one without the other cannot diſcharge. And of that opinion was all the court of King's Bench; wherefore it was adjudged for the defendant. Cro. Ja. 134.

5. Of their account, and of actions brought by and againſt them.

By Can. 89. "All churchwardens at the end of their year, or within a month after at the moſt, ſhall before the miniſter and the pariſhioners give up a juſt account of ſuch money as they have received, and alſo what particularly they have beſtowed in reparations, and otherwiſe for the uſe of the church. And laſt of all, going out of their office, they ſhall truly deliver up to the pariſhioners whatſoever money, or other things of right belonging to the church or pariſh, which remaineth in their hands; that it may be delivered over by them, to the next churchwardens, by bill indented."

A juſt account] If the cuſtom of the pariſh is, for a certain number of perſons to have the government thereof, and the account is given up to them, the cuſtom is good in law, and the account given to them is a good account, Gibſ. 216.

By bill indented] Lindwood, ſpeaking of the inventory of the goods of the church to be delivered in writing to the archdeacon, ſays, It were good that theſe writings ſhould be indented, ſo that one part might remain with the archdeacon, and the other with the pariſhioners; from whence this branch of the preſent canon ſeemeth to have been taken. Gibſ. 216.

If money be diſburſed by churchwardens for repairing the church, or any thing elſe merely eccleſiaſtical, the ſpiritual courts ſhall allow their accounts; but if there be any thing elſe that is an agreement between the pariſhioners, the ſucceeding churchwardens may have an action of account at law, and the ſpiritual court in ſuch caſe hath not juriſdiction. 12 Mod. 9.

If the churchwardens, by the conſent and agreement of the pariſhioners, take a ruinous bell and deliver it to a bell-founder, and that he by their agreement ſhall have for the caſting thereof 4 l. and ſhall retain it till the 4 l. be paid; this agreement of the pariſhioners ſhall excuſe the churchwardens in a writ of account brought againſt them by their ſucceſſors. 1 Rol. Abr. 121. pl. 9.

If the churchwardens and pariſhioners make an aſſeſſment, and the churchwardens lay out the whole money, but before the whole is collected their time is expired, and new churchwardens are choſen, the former churchwardens, by having preſented ſuch pariſhioners as refuſed to pay before the determination of their time, may ſtill proceed againſt them; otherwiſe the new churchwardens muſt collect ſuch arrears, and reimburſe their predeceſſors. See Prec. in Chan. 42. 2 Ven. 262.

If goods belonging to the church are taken away, and the churchwardens for the time being neglect to bring an action, the ſucceeding churchwardens may, by virtue of their office, bring an action againſt the wrong doer, but they muſt declare ad damnum parochianorum, and not ipſorum; though the old churchwardens, in whoſe time the fact was done, may lay it either way. Cro. Eliz. 145, 179. 1 Leon. 177.

If A. was churchwarden of B. and at the end of the year gave up his accounts to his ſucceſſor, and yet A. is falſly and maliciouſly cited by D. into the eccleſiaſtical court to render an account, and at the requeſt of D. he is excommunicated for not rendering up his account, an action lies againſt D.

If a churchwarden in any caſe is maliciouſly ſued in the ſpiritual court for not making up his account, and is excommunicated, when in fact it hath been duly made, he may have a prohibition; and alſo an action upon the caſe will lie. Gibſ. 216. Bunb. 247.

Where

Where churchwardens have paſſed their accounts at a veſtry, the ſpiritual court ſhall not afterwards proceed againſt them to account upon oath. Bunb. 289.

The churchwardens were cited into the court of Litchfield to account. They pleaded, that they had accounted at the veſtry, according to law; which was rejected; and a prohibition was granted. For the ordinary is not to take the account; he can only give a judgment that they do account; and to what purpoſe ſhould they be ſent back to thoſe who have taken their account already? Str. 974.

The ſpiritual court hath no juriſdiction to ſettle the churchwardens accounts. And a prohibition was granted, after ſentence allowing the accounts, and an appeal to the arches. Str. 1133.

And if the churchwardens have laid out the pariſh money imprudently and improvidently; yet if it be truly and honeſtly laid out, they muſt be reimburſed again: and the pariſhioners can have no remedy herein, unleſs ſome fraud or deceit be proved againſt them; becauſe the pariſh have made them their truſtees. But if they be going on in an expenſive way, the pariſhioners may complain to the ordinary, in order to give a check to them, or to procure (Dr. Gibſon ſays) a removal of them from their office. Gibſ. 196.

Adjudged, that the churchwardens Prudence and Bond could not cite the defendant Dent into the ſpiritual court, for non-payment of his church-rate, after their year was expired; for they can only ſue in their politick capacity, and cannot inſtitue any ſuit after that capacity is gone. It was agreed, that if the ſuit had been begun within their year, they might have proceeded in it after their year was out, this being of neceſſity to prevent people from delays in order to wear out the year; but in regard this ſuit was not commenced till the year was out, and no precedents were ſhewn to warrant this ſuit, the defendant Dent was diſmiſſed. Str. 852.

If the churchwardens for the time being neglect to bring an action for any of the goods of the church taken away; their ſucceſſors may bring treſpaſs for them, in reſpect of their office: but then the new churchwardens muſt ſay, to the damage of the pariſhioners, and not of themſelves; though the old churchwardens, in whoſe time the goods were taken away, might ſay either. Watſ. c. 39.

And if any of the goods of the church are detained, or not delivered by the predeceſſor; the ſucceſſor hath an action againſt him alſo. Gibſ. 216.

On a bill in Chancery againſt ninety pariſhioners, by the executrix of one of the churchwardens of Woodford, to be reimburſed money laid out by the teſtator as churchwarden, for rebuilding the ſteeple of the church; it was objected, that this matter was proper for the eccleſiaſtical court, and not for this court. But by Harcourt Chancellor, The plaintiff is proper for relief in this court, and there are many precedents of the like nature. And it was decreed, that the pariſhioners ſhould reimburſe the plaintiff the money laid out by her teſtator, with coſts of this ſuit; and that the money ſhould be raiſed by a pariſh rate. 4 Vin. tit. Churchwardens.

The churchwardens, as being a corporation for the goods of the pariſh, commenced a ſuit, with the conſent and by order of the pariſh, concerning a charity for the poor; in which ſuit they miſcarried. And then they brought a bill againſt the ſubſequent churchwardens, to be repaid the coſts by them expended; and had a decree for it. It was proved, that from time to time the pariſh was made acquainted with what they did; and though there was no veſtry by preſcription, yet a veſtry-book, kept for the pariſh acts, was allowed as evidence of their conſent. They are the truſtees of the pariſh; and the pariſhioners ought to contribute, and not lay the burden upon thoſe poor people the churchwardens: and the annual ſucceſſive churchwardens need not to be made parties, as they are renewed. By the Maſter of the Rolls. 4 Vin. tit. Churchwardens. C.

By ſtat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 26. Churchwardens, &c. are required to carry hawkers of brandy, &c. before juſtices of peace.

By the ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 11. In all actions to be brought in the courts of Weſtminſter, or at the aſſizes, for money miſpent by churchwardens, the evidence of the pariſhioners, other than ſuch as receive alms, ſhall be taken and admitted.

Churchwardens are comprehended within the purview of the ſtatutes 7 Jac. 1. cap. 5. and 21. Jac. 1. cap. 12. as to pleading the general iſſue to actions brought againſt them, and as to double coſts when they have judgment.

But in action on the caſe againſt a churchwarden for a falſe and malicious preſentment, though there be judgment for him, yet he ſhall not have double coſts; for the ſtatute does not extend to ſpiritual affairs. Cro. Car. 285, 286.

Churcheſſet, (Ciricſceat, chirſet, or curcſcet,) A Saxon word mentioned in Domeſday, and interpreted, quaſi ſemen eccleſiæ, corn paid to the church. Fleta call it circſed, lib. 1. cap. 47. and thereof writes thus: it ſignifies a certain meaſure of wheat, which in times paſt every man on St. Martin's day gave to the holy church, as well in times of the Britains as of the Engliſh; yet many great perſons after the coming of the Romans gave that contribution, according to the ancient law of Moſes, in the name of firſt-fruits; as in the writ of King Canutus ſent to the pope is contained, in which they call that contribution church-ſed, as one would ſay *church-ſeed. Cinnamon, (Cinnamomum) Is a tree whereof the bark is known to be a pleaſant, comfortable, and medicinal ſpice, which you have deſcribed in Gerard's Herbal, lib. 3. cap. 142. This is reckoned among garbleable ſpices by ſtat. 1 Jac. c. 19.

Cinque Ports, (Quinque Portus) Are thoſe ſpecial havens that lie toward France, and therefore have been thought fit by our Kings from time to time to be ſuch as ought moſt vigilantly to be guarded againſt invaſion; in which reſpect the places where they are, have an eſpecial governor or keeper called, by his office, Lord wardens of the Cinque Ports, and divers privileges granted unto them as a particular juriſdiction, their warden having the authority of an admiral among them, and ſending out writs in his own name. Crompton in his Juriſdictions, fol. 28. nameth Haſtings, Rumney, Rye, Dover, Sandwich, Winchelſea and Hythe; whereof ſome, becauſe the number exceedeth five, muſt either be added to the firſt inſtitution by ſome later grant, or be accounted as appendants to ſome of the reſt.

Camden tells us, that Kent is accounted the key of England; and that William, called The Conqueror, was the firſt who made a conſtable of Dover caſtle, and warden of the Cinque ports, which he did to bring that county under a ſtricter ſubjection to his government; but King John was the firſt who granted the privileges to thoſe ports, which they ſtill enjoy: however, it was upon condition that they ſhould provide a certain number of ſhips at their own charge for forty days, as often as the King ſhould have occaſion for them in the wars, he being then under a neceſſity of having a navy for paſſing into Normandy, to recover that dukedom which he had loſt. And this ſervice the barons of the Cinque ports acknowledged and performed, upon the King's ſummons, attending with their their ſhips the time limited at their proper coſts, and ſtaying as long after as the King pleaſed at his own charge. Sommer of Rom. ports in Kent. The Cinque ports, as we now account them, are Dover, Sandwich, Rumney, Winchelſea, and Rye, and to theſe we may add Hythe and Haſtings, which are reckoned as a part or members of the Cinque ports: though by the firſt inſtitution it is ſaid, that Winchelſea and Rye were added as members, and that the others were the Cinque Ports. There are ſeveral other towns adjoining that have the privileges of the ports.

The Cinque Ports have many privileges, liberties, and franchiſes, which may be ſeized and forfeited for a miſdemeanor, as where the mayor and jurats of Hythe ſpoke contemptibly of a certiorari delivered to them to remove an indictment, and refuſing to allow it, ſaying, it was no time in the year for green plumbs, alluding to the green wax with which the writ was ſealed; they were in danger of loſing their privileges for this contempt. Cro. Car. 252, 264, 291.

Debt by two plaintiffs, viz. Hecker and Harriſon againſt Tyrrel, as heir, who pleaded riens per deſcent, upon which they were at iſſue; and the jury found, that the defendant had aſſets by deſcent in the Cinque ports, and ſhewed how, &c. thereupon the plaintiff had judgment, and brought a certiorari to remove the record into Chancery, and from thence by mittimus to the conſtable of Dover, to extend a moiety of the lands in the Cinque ports. 1 And. 28.

A contract was made between the parties in London, afterwards one of them left the city, and dwelt within the Cinque Ports; and an action being brought againſt him upon this contract, he prayed his privilege to be ſued there; but it was denied, for though he might be ſued there, and not elſewhere, for a matter ariſing within their juriſdiction, yet where the original cauſe ariſeth in another place, he ſhall not have this privilege. Mich. 29 Eliz.

Appeal, &c. brought in B. R. by original, of a murder done in Sandwich, in the county of Kent, the writ was directed to the ſheriff of Kent, who having brought in the defendant by cepi corpus, he pleaded, that Sandwich (where the murder was ſuppoſed to done) is parcel of the Cinque Ports, ubi breve domini regis non currit, qui quidem portus de Sandwich non eſt in com' Kanciæ, and ſo prayed judgment of the writ, and pleaded over to the felony; adjudged an ill plea, for if it ſhould be good, there would be a failure of juſtice, becauſe thoſe of the Cinque Ports could not try the defendant, he not being within their juriſdiction; for after the murder was done at Sandwich, he fled into Kent, and was there taken: it is true, if he had pleaded, that at the time of the ſuppoſed murder he had been an inhabitant, and commorant within the Cinque Ports, the plea had been good, becauſe this had given a juriſdiction to the court there, who might have tried the defendant, and given ſentence of death, if he had been found guilty on the appeal; but by this plea the defendant had not ſhewed that the court there had any manner of juriſdiction in this caſe. Yelv. 12.

Certiorari's to remove the indictments taken in the Cinque Ports muſt be directed to the mayor and jurats before whom they are taken, and not to the lord-warden, becauſe they hold plea of it as juſtices of peace by virtue of their commiſſion, and not by their antient charter. Cro. Car. 184.

Certiorari to remove a judgment in the court at Dimchurch, being a member of the Cinque Ports, which being removed into B. R. aſcire facias iſſued againſt the defendant, to ſhew cauſe why the plaintiff ſhould not have execution; and there being an alias certiorari in this caſe, the defendant objected againſt it, for that it was ſicut prius, when it ought to be ſicut alias; but the exception was diſallowed, and the plaintiff had execution.

Habeas corpus was directed to the lord-warden of the Cinque Ports to remove the body of T. B. who had been a long time in cuſtody there, but no return being made, another habeas corpus was granted, and a pain for the contempt in not returning the firſt; for though it is uſually ſaid, that in ſome places breve domini regis non currit, that muſt be underſtood breve regis ordinarium, between party and party; but an habeas corpus is a prerogative writ, by which the King commands an account of the liberty of the ſubject; thereupon this writ was returned, viz. that time out of mind the warden of the Cinque Ports had a court of admiralty belonging to his office, and an officer to determine matters which appertain to the court, ſecundum leges maritimas, and that an anchor and cable were thrown in the ſea, and caſt ſuper arenas maris; that the priſoner took them up, and being cited to the court, and deſired to reſtore them, he refuſed, and thereupon he was committed until he pay 40 l. whereupon the party was remanded; for here was a cauſe returned, viz. that the man was cited in a matter of which they had juriſdiction, and being required to reſtore it, he refuſed, that judgment was given againſt him ſecundum leges maritimas, this court will intend the judgment juſt; and if it was not they cannot relieve him upon an habeas corpus. Palm. 54, 96. Burne's Caſe.

Prohibition to the court of Dover, for that they held plea there by plaint, in nature of a writ of partition between tenants in common, and proceeded to judgment and execution; for that reaſon it was held too late to move for a prohibition, he ought to bring a writ of error; but it was held, that tenants in common may be compelled to make partition in thoſe inferior courts, though not by the ſtatute; becauſe that extends only to injoin partition by writ. Sid. 165.

Prohibition to the Cinque Ports, for that they held plea there, partly by the Chancery, and partly by the Admiralty, in the ſame cauſe, viz. an Admiralty proceſs upon a Chancery bill; it is true, they have thoſe diſtinct courts there, but that they cannot thus confound their juriſdiction; it is true likewiſe, that in this caſe the defendant had appeared, and the cauſe was ready for ſentence; but yet ſince a prohibition will lie to the Cinque Ports, it is not the appearance of the party, and owning their juriſdiction by ſuch appearance, that will exclude B. R. from juriſdiction. Sid. 355.

Certiorari to the mayor, jurats, and commonalty of Winchelſea, to remove an order by them made, who return that time out of mind there have been in Kent five antient towns, viz. Haſtings, Sandwich, Dover, Rumney, and Hythe, always called the Cinque Ports, and in Suſſex two ancient towns, called Rye and Winchelſea, which are members of the ſaid Cinque Ports; that the town of Winchelſea hath been time out of mind incorporated by the name of mayor, jurats, and commonalty; that all the Cinque Ports, with their members, have been time out of mind places for ordering the preſervation of ſhipping, and by reaſon of their ſituation have always, and ought to keep beacons and watch-houſes; and for the better maintenance thereof, the town of Winchelſea uſed to make taxes and rates on every occupier of houſe or land within their town or liberty; that May 1, 32 Car. 2. they made a tax of 6 d. per pound for maintaining the ſaid beacons and watch-houſes. &c. The objection was, that this order did non ſet forth, that the beacon and watch-houſes were in decay, or out of repair, for if they were not, then this tax is unneceſſary; but adjudged, that it might be dangerous to the people to ſtay till the beacons were in decay, for then there would be none till repaired; and it is not to be intended that the inhabitants would charge themſelves with an unneceſſary tax, eſpecially when the major part of them concur in the taxation. Raym. 448. Town of Winchelſea's Caſe.

Circuity of Action, (Circuitus actionis) Is when an action is rightfully brought for a duty, but yet about the buſh, as it were, for that it might have been as well otherwiſe anſwered and determined, and the ſuit ſaved; and becauſe the ſame action is more than needful, it is called circuity of action; as if a man grant a rent-charge of ten pounds out of his manor of Dale, and after the grantee diſſeiſes the grantor of the ſame manor, and he brings an aſſize, and recovers the land and twenty pounds damages, which twenty pounds being paid, the grantee of the rent ſues his action for ten pounds of the rent due during the time of his diſſeiſin, which if no diſſeiſin had been, he muſt have had. This is call circuity of action, becauſe it might have been more ſhortly anſwered; for whereas the grantor ſhall receive 20*l.* damages, and pay 10*l.* rent, he might have received but the ten pounds only for the damages, and the grantee might have cut off, and kept back the other 10*l.* in his hands, by way of detainer for his rent, and ſo thereby might have ſaved his action.

Citation, (Citation A ſummons to appear, applied particularly to proceſs in the ſpiritual court. The eccleſiaſtical courts proceed according to the courſe of the Civil and Canon law, citation, libel, &c. A perſon is not generally to be cited to appear out of the dioceſe or peculiar juriſdiction where he lives, unleſs it be by the archbiſhop, in default of the ordinary; where the ordinary is party to the ſuit, in caſes of appeal, &c. And by law a defendant may be ſued where he lives; tho' it is for ſubſtracting tithes in any other dioceſe, &c. 1 Nelſ. 449. Every archbiſhop may cite any perſon dwelling in any biſhop's dioceſe within his province for hereſy, &c. if the biſhop or other ordinary conſents, or if the biſhop or ordinary, or judge, do not his duty in puniſhing the offence. Where perſons are cited out of their dioceſe, and live out of the juriſdiction of the biſhop, a prohibition or conſultation may be granted: but where perſons live in the dioceſe, if when they are cited they do not appear, they are to be excommunicated, &c. The above ſtatute was made to maintain the juriſdiction of inferior dioceſes; and if any perſon is cited out of the dioceſe, &c. where the Civil or Canon law doth not allow it, the party grieved ſhall have double damages. City, in Lat. Urbs, civitas and oppidum: It is named civitas, in regard it is governed in juſtice, and order of magiſtracy. Oppidum, for that it contains a great number of inhabitants; and urbs, becauſe it is in due form ſurrounded with walls. Civitas, according to Ariſtotle lib. Politicor. cap. 1. is defined to be a certain or uniform government of the inhabitants, & Cæſar civitatem vocat populum eodem jure utentem. Camb. Brit. p. 310. But this is the general definition of a commonwealth, and not of a city, at leaſt as we now a-days take it. City is a word which hath obtained ſince the conqueſt: for in the time of the Saxons there were no cities, but all great towns were called burghs; and even London was then called Lunden burgh, i. e. London borough. And long after the conqueſt the word city is uſed promiſcuouſly with burgh, as in the charter of Leiceſter, it is called both civitas and burgus; which ſhews that my Lord Coke was miſtaken, when he tells us that every city was or is a biſhop's ſee: nor had Glouceſter then any biſhop, though it is called a city in Domeſday. And himſelf obſerves in another place, that Cambridge was a city by ancient record, viz. Mich. 7 R. 1. Rot. 1. though it never had a biſhop. And in the ſtat. 11 H. 7. c. 4. it is called Cambridge town.

So that though the word city ſignifies with us ſuch a town corporate as hath uſually a biſhop and cathedral church, yet it is not always ſo: and Crompton reckoning our cities, leaves out Ely, though it has a biſhop and a cathedral church. In ſtat. 35 Eliz. cap. 6. Weſtminſter is called a city; and it appears by the ſtatute 35 H. 8. c. 10. that then there was a biſhop of Weſtminſter. But by letters patent, dated May 21, 2 Eliz. (purſuant to an act of parliament of 1 Eliz. not printed) the revenues of that late monaſtery were veſted in the dean and chapter of the collegiate church of Weſtminſter, which hath cauſed error in the pleading of ſome caſes, by ſtiling it the cathedral, for collegiate church of Weſtminſteri Caſſanæus de Conſuetud. Burgun. pag. 15. ſaith that France hath within its territories one hundred and four cities; and gives his reaſon, becauſe there are ſo many ſees of archbiſhops and biſhops. Cowell, ed. 1727.

Citizens (Cives) Of London, are either freemen, or ſuch as reſide and keep a family in the city, &c. and ſome are citizens and freemen, and ſome are not, who have not ſo great privileges as the others. The citizens of London may preſcribe againſt a ſtatute, becauſe their liberties are reinforced by ſtatute. 1 Roll. Rep. 105.

Civil law, Is defined to be that law which every particular nation, commonwealth, or city, has eſtabliſhed peculiarly peculiary for itſelf: Jus civile quod quiſque populus ſibi conſtituit. But more ſtrictly the Civil law is that which the old Romans uſed, compiled from the laws of nature and of nations. The twelve tables were the foundation of this law, which for its great wiſdom is as it were the Common law, or the foundation of it, in all well-governed kingdoms, a very few only excepted: and no other laws are eſteemed comparable to it for its equity. The Civil law is either written or unwritten; and the written law is publick or private: publick, which immediately regards the eſtate of the commonwealth, as the enacting and execution of laws, conſultations about war and peace, eſtabliſhment of things relating to religion, &c. private, that more immediately has reſpect to the concerns of every particular perſon. The unwritten law is cuſtom introduced by the tacit conſent of the people only, without any particular eſtabliſhment: the authority of it is great, and it is equal with a written law, if it be wholly uninterrupted, and of a long continuance. The whole Civil law is contained in four books or tomes, 1. The Code. 2. The Pandects or Digeſts. 3. The Inſtitutes. 4. The Novels or Authenticks. The Code is divided into twelve books, and was the firſt book of the Civil law, which the emperor Juſtinian ordered to be collected. It was publiſhed in the year 534, and contains the conſtitutions, &c. of fifty-ſix emperors, and their wiſe councils. The firſt book of it treats of religion, prieſts, &c. other books are upon trade, merchandize, the Exchequer, &c. The Digeſt or Pandects was collected from the works and commentaries of the ancient lawyers, ſome whereof lived before the coming of our Saviour. This tome is divided into fifty books; and upon a more particular diviſion, the whole digeſt is divided into ſeven parts: the firſt part contains the elements of the law, as what is juſtice, right, &c. the ſecond part treats of judges and judgments; the third part of perſonal actions, &c. the fourth part of contracts, pawns, and pledges; the fifth part of wills, teſtaments, &c. the ſixth part of the poſſeſſion of goods; the ſeventh part of obligations, crimes, puniſhments, &c. The Inſtitutes contain a ſyſtem of the whole body of law, and are an epitome of the Digeſt, divided into four books; but ſometimes they correct the Digeſt. They are called Inſtitutes, becauſe they are of inſtruction, and ſhew an eaſy way to the obtaining a knowledge of the Civil law: but they are not ſo diſtinct and comprehenſive as they might be, nor ſo uſeful at this time as they were at firſt. The Novels or Authenticks were publiſhed at ſeveral times without any method. They are termed Novels as they are new laws, and Authenticks, being authentically tranſlated from the Greek into the Latin tongue; and the whole volume is divided into nine collations, conſtitutions, or ſections, and they again into 168 novels, which alſo are diſtributed into certain chapters: the firſt collation relates to heirs, executors, &c. the ſecond to the eſtate of the church; the third is againſt bawds; the fourth concerns marriages, &c. the fifth forbids the alienation of the poſſeſſions of the church; the ſixth ſhews the legitimacy of children, &c. the ſeventh determines who ſhall be witneſſes; the eighth ordains wills to be good, though imperfect, &c. and the ninth contains matter of ſucceſſion in goods, &c. To theſe tomes of the Civil law we may add the book of Feuds, which contains the cuſtom and ſervices that the ſubject or vaſſal doth to his prince or lord for ſuch lands or fees as he holdeth of him. The Conſtitution of the Emperors are either by a reſcript, which is the letter of the Emperor, in anſwer to particular perſons who inquired the law of him; or by edict, which the Emperor eſtabliſhes of his own accord, that it may be generally obſerved by every ſubject; or by decrees, which the Emperor pronounces between plaintiff and defendant upon hearing a particular cauſe. The power of iſſuing forth reſcripts, edicts, and decrees was given to the Prince by the Lex Regina, wherein the people of Rome wholly ſubmited themſelves to the government of one perſon, viz. Julius Cæſar, after the defeat of Pompey, &c. And by this ſubmiſſion, the Prince could not only make laws, but was eſteemed above all coercive power of them. The matters wherein the whole Civil law is generally exerciſed, relate either to perſons in the commonwealth, or the things belonging or not belonging to them; or to the actions whereby men claim ſuch things as are due to them by the law, &c. The Civil law is allowed in the kingdom in the two univerſities, for the training up of ſtudents, &c. in matters of foreign treaties between princes; marine affairs civil and criminal; in the ordering of martial cauſes; the judgment of enſigns and arms, rights of honour, &c. See *Duck de Jure Civil. Claim (Clameum) Is a challenge of intereſt in any thing that is in the poſſeſſion of another, or at leaſt out of a man's own; as claim by charter, by deſcent, &c. Old Nat. B. f. 11. And claim is either verbal, where one doth by words claim and challenge the thing that is ſo out of his poſſeſſion; or it is by an action brought, &c. and ſometimes it relates to lands, and ſometimes to goods and chattels. Litt. ſect. 414. Where any thing is taken wrongfully from a perſon, this claim is to be made; and the party making it may thereby avoid deſcents of lands, diſſeiſins, &c. and preſerve his title, which otherwiſe would be in danger of being loſt. Co. Litt. 250. A man which hath preſent right or title to enter, muſt make a claim; and in caſe of reverſions, &c. one may make a claim where he hath a right, but cannot enter on the lands. When a perſon dares not make an entry on land, for fear of being beaten or other injury, he may approach as near as he can to the land, and claim the ſame; and it ſhall be ſufficient to veſt the ſeiſin in him. 1 Inſt. 25. If nothing doth hinder a man having right to land from entering or making his claim; there he muſt do ſo, before he ſhall be ſaid to be in poſſeſſion of it, or can grant it over to another. But where the party who hath right, is in poſſeſſion already, and where an entry or claim cannot be made, it is otherwiſe. 1 Rep. 157. A claim will deveſt an eſtate out of another, when the party muſt enter into ſome part of the land; but if it be only to bring him into poſſeſſion, he may do it in view. By claim of lands in moſt caſes is intended, a claim with an entry in part of the land, or by a near approach to it. Co. Litt. 252. 254. Poph. 67. One in reverſion after an eſtate for years, or after a ſtatute merchant, ſtaple, or elegit, may enter and make a claim to prevent a deſcent, or avoid a collateral warranty. And claim of a remainder by force of a condition muſt be upon the land, or it will not be ſufficient. Co. Lit. 202. If a man ſeiſed of lands in right of his wife, make a feoffment in fee on condition, and the huſband dieth, and then the condition is broken, and the heirs enter; in this caſe the wife need not claim to get poſſeſſion of her eſtate, for the law doth veſt it in her without any claim. Co. Lit. 202. 8 Rep. 43. The claim of the particular tenant ſhall be good for him in reverſion or remainder; and of him in reverſion, &c. for the particular tenant. So claim of a copyholder, will be good good for the lord, &c. But if tenant for years in a court of record claim the fee of his land, it is a forfeiture of his eſtate. Plowd. 359. Co. Litt. 251. A Claim may be made by the party himſelf; and ſometimes by his ſervants or deputy: And a guardian in ſocage, &c. may make a claim or enter in the name of the infant that hath right, without any commandment. Co. Litt. 245. Claim or entry ſhould be made as ſoon as may be; and by the Common law it is to be within a year and a day after the diſſeiſin, &c. and if the party who hath unjuſtly gained the eſtate, do afterwards occupy the land, in ſome caſes an aſſiſe, treſpaſs, or forcible entry may be had againſt him. Litt. ſect. 426, 430. If a fine is levied of lands, ſtrangers to it are to enter and make a claim within five years, or be barred: Infants after their age, feme coverts after the death of their huſbands, &c. have the like time, by ſtat. 1 R. 3. cap. 7. If a diſſeiſor levy a fine, and the diſſeiſee enters his claim in the record of the foot of the fine, this is not ſuch a claim as ſhall avoid the ſtatute. 4 Hen. 7. cap. 24. 1 Lill. Abr. 270.

By ſtat. 4 Ann. c. 16. ſect. 16. No claim or entry ſhall be of force to avoid any fine levied with proclamations in the Common Pleas, or in the court of ſeſſions in the counties palatine, or of grand ſeſſions in Wales, or ſhall be a ſufficient entry or claim within the ſtatute of limitations, 21 Jac. 1. cap. 16. Clergy (Clerus) Is diverſly taken; ſometimes for the whole number of thoſe who are de clero Domini, of our Lord's lot or ſhare, as the tribe of Levi was in Judæa; ſometimes for a plea to an indictment or an appeal, and is by Staunford (Pl. Cor. lib. 2. c. 41.) thus defined:—— Clergy is an antient liberty of the church, which hath been confirmed by divers parliaments, and is, when a prieſt, or one in orders, is arraigned of felony before a ſecular judge, he may pray his clergy; which is as much as if he prayed to be delivered to his ordinary, to purge himſelf of the offence objected. And this might be done in caſe of murder. Coke, lib. 4. fol. 46. a. This liberty is mentioned in Articulis Cleri, An. 9 Ed. 2. c. 26. And note, that the ancient courſe of law in this point is much altered: for by the ſtatute of 18 El. c. 7. Clerks are no more delivered to their ordinaries to be purged; but now every man to whom this benefit is granted, though not in orders, is put to read at the bar after he is found guilty, and convicted of ſuch felony, and ſo burnt in the hand, and ſet free for the firſt time, if the ordinary's commiſſioner or deputy ſtanding by do ſay,——Legit ut clericus; or otherwiſe he ſuffers death for his tranſgreſſion.

As to the clergy in general, though they claim an exemption from all ſecular juriſdiction, yet Mathew Paris tells us, that ſoon after William the Firſt had conquered

Harold, he ſubjected the biſhopricks and abbeys who held per baroniam (and who till then were exempted from all ſecular ſervice) that they ſhould be no longer free from military ſervices; and for that purpoſe he in an arbitrary manner regiſtered how many ſoldiers every biſhoprick and abbey ſhould provide, and ſend to him and his ſucceſſors in time of war; and having placed theſe regiſters of eccleſiaſtical ſervitude in his treaſury, thoſe who were aggrieved, departed out of the realm.

But the clergy were not till then exempted from all ſecular ſervice; becauſe by the laws of King Edgar they were bound to obey the ſecular magiſtrate in three caſes; viz. upon any expedition to the wars, and to contribute to the building and repairing bridges and caſtles for the defence of the kingdom.

It is probable that by expedition to the wars, it was not intended that they ſhould perſonally ſerve, but contribute towards the charge. One they muſt do; as appears by the petition to the King, anno 1267, viz. Ut omnes clerici tenentes per baroniam vel feudum laicum, perſonaliter armati procederent contra regios adverſarios; vel tantum ſervitium in expeditione regis invenirent, quantum pertineret ad tantam terram vel tenementum. Their anſwer was, That they ought not to fight with the military, but with the ſpiritual ſword, that is, with prayers and tears; that they ought to maintain peace, and not war, and that their baronies were founded in charity, for which reaſon they ought not to perform any military ſervice. *Blount. 1. Original of the benefit of clergy.

Anciently princes and ſtates, converted to chriſtianity, in favour of the clergy, and for their encouragement in their offices and employments, and that they might not be ſo much intangled in ſuits, did grant to the clergy very bountiful privileges and exemptions; particularly, an exemption of their perſons from criminal proceedings in ſome capital caſes before ſecular judges; which was the true original of the benefit of clergy.

The clergy increaſing in wealth, power, honour, number, and intereſt, afterwards ſet up for themſelves; and that which they obtained by the favour of princes and ſtates at firſt, they now begin to claim as their right, and a right of the higheſt nature, namely, by the law of God; and by their canons and conſtitutions endeavoured, and in ſome places obtained, vaſt extenſions of theſe exemptions both with regard to the perſons concerned, to wit, not only to perſons in holy orders, but alſo to all that had any kind of ſubordinate miniſtration relative to the church; and likewiſe in reſpect of the cauſes, exempting as far as they could all cauſes of clergymen, as well civil as criminal, from the juriſdiction of the ſecular power, and wholly ſubordinating them immediately, and only to the eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, which they ſuppoſed to be lodged firſt in the pope by divine right and inveſtiture from Chriſt, and from the pope ſhed abroad into all ſubordinate and eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction.

And by this means they endeavoured, and in ſome kingdoms, and for ſome ages obtained, that there was a double ſupreme power in every kingdom; the one eccleſiaſtical, abſolute, and independent upon any but the pope, over eccleſiaſtical men and cauſes; and the other ſecular, of the King, or civil magiſtrate.

But this claim of exemption, although it obtained much in this kingdom, yet it grew ſo burthenſome, that it was from time to time qualified and abridged by the civil power, ſometimes by acts of parliament taking it away in ſome caſes, ſometimes by the interpretation and conſtruction of the judges, and ſometimes by the contrary uſage of the kingdom: for eccleſiaſtical canons never bound in England farther than they were received, and ſo had not their authority from their own ſtrength and obligation, but from the uſages and cuſtoms of the kingdom that admitted them, and only ſo far forth as they were ſo admitted.

And therefore as to the exemption of the clergy from civil ſuits between party and party only, if upon the diſtringas he was returned clericus & beneficiatus non habens laicum feodum, proceſs iſſued to the biſhop to bring him in; and in caſe of a ſtatute merchant they were by ſpecial acts exempted from arreſts by capias: but yet they were not exempt from the juriſdiction of civil courts in civil cauſes; yet anciently they attempted this alſo in the King's courts, but with ill ſucceſs, and ſo they never attempted it after. 2 Hale's Hiſt. P. C. 323, 324, 325. M. 7 & 8 Ed. 1. R. Rot. 13. Cant. William Joyce plaintiff brought an action againſt Guy Mortimer, rector of Kingston, for beating him, and cutting off his upper lip with a knife; the defendant pleaded quod ipſe eſt clericus, & non debet hic reſpondere, and that was all the anſwer he would give; Et quia querela iſta non tangit vitam & membrum, ſed eſt quædam tranſgreſſio perſonalis, nec ipſe vult in curia domini regis reſpondere ad querelam iſtam: judgment was given for the plaintiff to recover 100 l. damages taxed by the court, and the defendant was committed to gaol, and afterwards paid twenty marks to the King for a fine. 2 H. H. P. C. 325.

If the clergy were indicted in caſes criminal, but not capital, nor wherein they were to loſe life or limb, their privilegium clericale was not allowed them, and therefore not in indictments of treſpaſs, petty larceny, or killing ſe defendendo. Stamf. P. C. fol. 124. a.

If they were indicted of high treaſon, clergy was not allowable, and therefore Hil. 2 H. 4. Rot. 4. B. R. Rex, where the biſhop of Carliſle was indicted of high treaſon, and inſiſted upon his privilegium clericale, quia epiſcopus unctus, yet this claim was diſallowed, and he put upon his trial, and convicted. 2 H. H. P. C. 326.

Yet Hil. 17 Ed. 2. Rot. 87. in dorſo, Heref. coram rege, the biſhop of Hereford, indicted of high treaſon for levying war againſt the King, alledged, that he was epiſcopus Heref. ad voluntatem Dei & ſummi pontificis, and could not anſwer abſque offenſa divina & ſanctæ eccleſiæ. Thereupon the plea was adjourned into parliament, where the biſhop anſwered as before, and the archbiſhop of Canterbury claimed him, and had him; thereupon it was ordered, that day ſhould be given in the King's Bench to the biſhop, and the archbiſhop was to have him there at the day, and in the mean time a writ iſſued to the ſheriff of Heref. to return twenty-four to inquire, as if he had pleaded, quod venire faciat tot & tales, &c. ad inquirendum prout moris eſt, &c. pro quali, &c. returnable at the ſame day; the biſhop appeared accordingly in the cuſtody of the archbiſhop, and the jury found him guilty, Ideo conſideratʼ eſt, quod prædictus epiſcopus tanquam convictus, &c. remanet penes prædictum archiepiſcopum ut prius, &c. and all his goods and chattels, lands and tenements were ſeized into the King's hands by writ directed to the ſheriff: upon which it is obſervable, 1. That a kind of allowance is made of clergy in high treaſon. 2. That notwithſtanding his claim of clergy, yet a writ iſſued to ſummon a jury, who inquired whether guilty or not. 3. That upon this plea, and this inquiſition, though he had his clergy, it was ut clericus convictus. 2 H. H. P. C. 326, 327.

Note, In the parliament of the 1 Ed. 3. this judgment was reverſed for this cauſe, that the juſtices took the inquiſition, licet idem epiſcopus in aliquam inquiſitionem ſe non poſuiſſet. Clauſ. 1 Ed. 3. part. 1. M. 13. So that the judgment was given upon the inquiſition, and not upon nihil dicit for ſtanding mute, and therefore erroneous. 2 H. H. P. C. 327.

But

But afterwards T. 21 Ed. 3. Rot. 23. Hertford, Rex, John Gerberge was indicted for a conſtructive treaſon, namely, accroaching royal power, and thereupon claimed the privilege of clergy, Et quia privilegium clericale in hujuſmodi caſu ſeditionis ſecundum legem & conſuetudinem regni hactenus obtentas & uſitatas non eſt allocandum, &c. quæſitum eſt ab eo ſæpius qualiter ſe velit acquietare; he ſtill replied, that he was a clerk, aſſerens ſe nolle aliam reſponſionem exhibere; and thereupon he is committed to the marſhal ad pœnitentiam ſuam ſecundum legem & conſuetudinem regni ſubiturum, &c.

Note, Clergy denied in ſuch a treaſon, yet penance awarded, though the charge was treaſon.

Yet at Common law before the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. cap. 4. pro clero, it ſeems that clergy was allowable to him that was indicted for counterfeiting coin, or for counterfeiting money. B. Clergy 31. But that is altered by the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. pro clero.

If clerks were indicted with theſe clauſes, inſidiatores viarum & depopulatores agrorum, clergy was denied them, and therefore the act of 4 H. 4. cap. 2. was made to put theſe clauſes out of indictments, and to allow clergy, if they were in the indictment. 2 H. Hiſ. P. C. 328.

Again, as it was denied in reſpect of ſome offences, ſo this privilegium clericale was by the Common law abridged in reſpect of the perſon; for certainly by the Canon laws nuns had the exemption from temporal juriſdiction, but the privilege of clergy was never allowed them by our law. See ſtat. 21 Jac. c. 28. ſect. 6 & 7.

Again, though the ordinary took himſelf to be the judge of the allowance of the clergy, and of the purgation of the clerk, yet the King's courts took that courage to make the ordinary but a miniſter, and themſelves judges of the allowance of the clergy and purgation. 21 Ed. 4. 21. b. 9 Ed. 4. 28. a.

And ſo the judges of the Common law would oftentimes deliver the clerk to the ordinary, but abſque purgatione; as where the clerk is attainted by outlawry, or by judgment, or convict by his own confeſſion, or upon appeal. Stamf. P. C. lib. 11. cap. 49. 3 H. 7. 12. a. 10 Ed. 3. Coron. 247. Hob. Rep. 288. Searl and Williams; or if he were a notorious malefactor, Vide 10 Ed. 3. Coron. 247. or if he be convict by verdict of counterfeiting the ſeal or coin at Common law before the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. lib. parl. 18 Ed. 1. Berton's Caſe; or if he be committed by record to the ordinary abſque purgatione. Hob. ubi ſupra. 2 H. H. P. C. 328.

And in theſe caſes, if the ordinary admitted him to his purgation, he was fineable for it as a great miſdemeanor, and the party delivered by ſuch purgation ſhall be again committed to priſon, M. 34 & 35 Ed. 1. Rot. 59 Kanc. B. R. The caſe of Hugh Forſham delivered by William Teſta, and another commiſſionated from the pope; and the entry in ſuch caſes is, Liberatur ordinario tanquam clericus convictus & utlegatus ad ſalvo cuſtodiend' periculo, quod incumbit, &c. & inhibitum eſt eidem ordinario, ne ad aliquam purgationem ipſius A. B. procedat domino rege inconſulto, eo quod prædictus A. B. pro feloniis, &c. utlegatus eſt, &c. H. 14 Ed. 3. B. R. Rot. 19. Rex. Suff. Lond. The caſe of John de Hemmyngeſton, chaplain. But indeed, if the clerk had his clergy, and were generally delivered to the ordinary, he might admit him to make his purgation, and upon ſignification thereof by the ordinary into the Chancery, a writ ſhould iſſue to the ſheriff to deliver unto the party ſo purged all his goods and chattels ſeized into the King's hands upon that occaſion, niſi fugam fecerit ea occaſione. F. N. B. 66. a. And this is to ſhew, that whatſoever weight the clergymen laid upon their canons and their exemptions from the ſecular juriſdictions, yet their canons or conſtitutions, or pretenſions or claims of this kind were not binding here, nor ſo taken farther than either by acts of parliament, or the common acceptation of the kingdom they were received, and therefore theſe privileges received divers alterations and corrections, and reſtrictions by the temporal judges, as the occaſion required. 2 H. H. P. C. 329, 330.

2. In what offences benefit of clergy was allowed or not, before and by the ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. c. 4.

In caſe of high treaſon againſt the King, clergy was never allowable in this kingdom. 2 Ha. H. P. C. 330.

The ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. for the clergy, was made in the parliament held in Hil. 25 Ed. 3. which was in the ſame parliament, wherein the ſtatute of declaration of treaſon was made, commonly called the ſtatute of purveyance. Id. ib.

By this ſtatute pro Clero, cap. 4. it is enacted, "That all manner of clerks, as well ſecular as religious, which ſhall be from henceforth convict before ſecular judges, for any treaſons or felonies touching other perſons than the King himſelf or his royal Majeſty, ſhall from henceforth have and enjoy the privilege of holy church, and ſhall be without impeachment or delay delivered to the ordinaries demanding them; and upon this the archbiſhop promiſeth, that upon the puniſhment and ſafe keeping of ſuch clerks offenders, which ſhall be delivered to the ordinaries, he ſhall thereof make a convenient ordinance, whereby they ſhall be ſafely kept and duly puniſhed, ſo that no clerk ſhall take courage to offend for default of correction."

At the ſame parliament it was declared what was treaſon, and amongſt the reſt, counterfeiting the great or privy ſeal, or the King's coin, is declared treaſon, and put in the ſame rank with compaſſing the King's death or levying of war, and it is thereby enacted, that no other offences than what are therein declared, be treaſon, till declared by parliament. 2 H. H. P. C. 331.

Before this ſtatute, there were two ſorts of treaſons that concerned the King, one was of great note, and another of leſs note.

Thoſe of the greater note were conſpiring the King's death, levying of war againſt the King, adhering to his enemies, and two others, that are ſince abrogated by the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. which came under the general and obſcure names of ſedition, and accroaching of royal power. 2 H. H. P. C. 331.

In any of theſe a party convict had not his clergy at Common law. This appears by the judgment, T. 21 Ed. 3. B. R. Rot. 23 Rex. Id. ib.

But there were other treaſons that concerned the King, which were of an inferior note, namely counterfeiting the ſeal and counterfeiting the coin, and theſe (the latter eſpecially) had only judgment as in caſe of petit treaſon, namely, to be drawn and hanged. Id. ib.

And it ſeems before the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. of treaſons, clergy was allowed in both theſe caſes, as appears by the old book of E. 3. B. R. tit. Clergy, placito ultimo, and the judgment in parliament of 18 Ed. 1. in Berton's caſe, who being convict for counterfeiting the King's ſeal, had his clergy, but tradatur ordinario ſine purgatione. Id. ib.

But now, as to the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. pro clero, and the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. at the ſame parliament de proditionibus, laying them both together in all caſes of treaſon touching the King himſelf or his royal Majeſty, clergy is wholly taken away, and in all other caſes of treaſon or felony, clergy is allowed; and conſequently in murder, robbery, petit treaſon, clergy is reſtored and ſettled by this act of parliament. 2 H. H. P. C. 332.

But whatſoever is declared treaſon againſt the King by the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. de proditionibus, as well counterfeiting the ſeal or the money of the kingdom, as any other treaſon therein declared, is wholly exempted from clergy. 2 H. H. P. C. 332. cites 19 H. 6. 47. b. Staunf. P. C. lib. 2. cap. 42. fol. 124. a. M. 31 Ed. 3. coram Rege Rot. 18. Rex, in dorſo, Bucks; caſus abbatis de Muſenden pro reſecatione & falſificatione legalis Monetæ, 24 H. 8. Spelman's Reports accordant adjudge, 2 Co. Inſt. 635, 636. ſuper Artic' Cleri.

So that at this day, in all caſes of high treaſon, whether thoſe declared by the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. de proditionibus, or other treaſons newly enacted ſince, the privilege of clergy is wholly taken away. 2 H. H. P. C. 332.

In all felonies, that were at Common law before the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. pro Clero, and in all caſes of petit

treaſon by that ſtatute, the privilege of clergy is reſtored and ſettled.

And therefore in all ſuch felonies or petit treaſons, which were ſuch at the time of the ſtatute of 25 Edw. 3. cap. 4. pro Clero, clergy is allowable, unleſs in ſuch caſes where it is taken away by ſubſequent acts of parliament, and ſo far forth only as the ſame is ſo taken away. Id. ib.

But there ſeem to be two felonies, where clergy was not allowable notwithſtanding this act, namely, certain acts, that by interpretation of law were hoſtile acts, viz. 1. Inſidiatio viarum & depopulatio agrorum. 2. Wilful burning of houſes.

Concerning the former of theſe it appears, that inſidiatores viarum and depopulatores agrorum were ouſted of their clergy, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. cap. 4. pro Clero.

Rot. Parl. 4 H. 4. n. 3. There was a complaint in parliament by the archbiſhop of Canterbury and clergy, whereupon it was enacted, that that general clauſe ſhould be left out in indictments, and words of the ſame effect inſerted, and that notwithſtanding the indictment carried the ſame effect, yet benefit of clergy ſhould not be denied, as appears at large by the ſtatute of 4 H. 4. cap. 2.

As to wilful burning of houſes, clergy was not allowable by the common law. 2 H. H. P. C. 333.

As to ſacrilege, though ſome later ſtatutes were made to ouſt clergy in that crime, yet it ſeems at Common law, or at leaſt after the ſtatute of 25 Ed. 3. c. 4. pro Clero, it was allowable, as appears 26 Aſſiſe 27. where it is agreed by the juſtices, that a perſon indicted of robbing a chapel and breaking a church ſhould have his clergy; but it ſeems, it was with this difference, that if the ordinary refuſed him, as he might, he ſhould not have his clergy, 20 Ed. 2. Coron. 283. Staunf. P. C. 123, 124. but otherwiſe the court will allow it him. 26 Aſſiſe 27.

3. In what offences benefit of clergy is taken away by acts of parliament, ſubſequent to 25 Ed. 3. c. 4.

As to new felonies made by acts of parliament ſince 25 Ed. 3. this general rule holds, that if an act of parliament make a felony, and doth not take away clergy in expreſs words, in all theſe caſes clergy is allowable. And if it doth make a felony, and takes away clergy not generally, but in ſuch or ſuch caſes, regularly in other caſes clergy is allowable; as if it take away clergy in caſe the party be convicted by verdict, yet he ſhall have his clergy if he ſtand mute. 2 Hale's Hiſ. P. C. 334, 335.

But as to ſtanding mute, this is in part remedied by the 3 W. c. 9. ſect. 2. which enacts, that if any perſon be indicted of any offence, for which by virtue of any former ſtatute he is excluded from clergy, if he had been convicted by verdict or confeſſion; if he ſtand mute, or will not anſwer directly, or challenge peremptorily above 20 of the jury, or be outlawed, he ſhall not be admitted to his clergy. But this extends not to appeals, nor to offences made felonies by ſubſequent ſtatutes. 2 Haw. 348.

But if the ſtatute enacts generally, that it ſhall be felony without benefit of clergy, or that he ſhall ſuffer as in caſe of felony without benefit of clergy, this excludes it in all circumſtances, and to all intents. 2 H H. 335.

It follows farther, from what has been ſaid, that in all caſes where an act of parliament ouſteth clergy, in caſe of any felony, the indictment muſt preciſely bring the party within the caſe of the ſtatute; otherwiſe, although poſſibly the fact itſelf be within the ſtatute, and it may ſo appear upon the evidence, yet if it be not ſo alledged in the indictment, the party, though convict, ſhall have his clergy. 2 H. H. 336.

But although the caſe be ſo laid in the indictment, that it comes within the ſtatute, to exempt the priſoner from clergy, yet if upon the evidence it fall out, that though it be a felony, yet it is not ſo qualified as laid in the indictment, the jury ought to find him guilty of the felony ſimply, but not as to the matter laid in the indictment, and thereupon the priſoner ſhall be admitted to his clergy; and this is commonly done. 2 H. H. 336.

But if the offence was capital at Common law, and a ſtatute only excludes it from clergy, the indictment in ſuch caſe need not conclude againſt the form of the ſtatute, becauſe the ſtatute doth not alter the nature of the offence, but leaves it to its proper judgment, and only takes away a perſonal privilege of exemption from ſuch judgment. 2 Haw. P. C. 342.

Furthermore, from what hath been obſerved above, it follows, that where an act taketh away clergy from the principal, and ſaith nothing of the acceſſary, the acceſſaries, as well before as after, ſhall have their clergy. 11 Co. 37.

For the ſeveral offences which have been excluded the benefit of clergy by acts of parliament made ſince 25 Ed. 3. c. 4. ſee title Felony.

4. In what offences benefit of clergy is now allowed, ſee title Felony.

5. What perſons are or are not capable of clergy.

By a favourable interpretation of the ſtatutes relating to the benefit of clergy, not only thoſe actually admitted into ſome inferior order of the clergy, but alſo thoſe who were never qualified to be admitted into orders (which was formerly tried by putting them to read a verſe) have been taken to have a right to this privilege, as much as perſons in holy orders. 2 Haw. 338.

By the Common law, a woman could not have the benefit of clergy; but now by the ſtatute of 3 Will. & M. c. 9. a woman convicted or outlawed for any felony, for which a man might have his clergy, ſhall, upon praying the benefit of that ſtatute, be ſubject only to ſuch puniſhment as a man would be in the like caſe.

A perſon convicted of hereſy, a Jew, or a Turk, ſhall not have their clergy; but a perſon excommunicate ſhall have his clergy. 2 H. H. 373.

Alſo every perſon (not being within orders) who hath been once admitted to his clergy, ſhall not be admitted to the ſame a ſecond time. 4 H. 7. cap. 13.

And if he is convicted of murder, he ſhall be marked (unleſs he is a peer, 2 H. H. 376) with an M, on the brawn of the left thumb; and if for any other felony with an F, by 4 H. 7. c. 13.

But he ſhall not be ouſted of his clergy, by the bare mark in his hand, or by a parol averment, without the record teſtifying it, or a tranſcript thereof, according to the following ſtatutes. 2 H. H. 373.

By ſtat. 34 & 35 H. 8. cap. 14. The clerk of the crown, or of the peace, or of aſſiſe, ſhall certify a tranſcript briefly of the tenor of the indictment, outlawry, or conviction, and attainder, into the King's bench in 40 days: and the clerk of the crown, when the judges of aſſiſe or juſtices of the peace write to him for the names of ſuch perſons, ſhall certify the ſame, with the cauſes of the conviction or attainder.

Another method is given by the ſtat. 3 Will. & M. c. 9. ſect. 7. which enacts, that the clerk of the crown, clerk of the peace, or clerk of aſſiſe, where a perſon admitted to clergy ſhall be convicted, ſhall at the requeſt of the proſecutor, or any other on the King's behalf, certify a tranſcript briefly and in few words, containing the effect and tenor of the indictment and conviction, of his having the benefit of clergy, and the addition of the party, and the certainty of the felony and conviction, to the judges where ſuch perſon ſhall be indicted for any ſubſequent offence.

Alſo it ſeems, that if the party deny that he is the ſame perſon, iſſue muſt be joined upon it, and it muſt be found upon trial that he is the ſame perſon, before he can be ouſted of clergy. 2 H. H. 373.

6. At what time clergy is to be allowed, and the effect of allowing it.

By the ancient Common law, the benefit of clergy was demanded as ſoon as the priſoner was brought to the bar, before any indictment or other proceeding againſt him; but this was found a great inconvenience to the priſoner, becauſe poſſibly he might have been acquitted of the felony; or if not, yet in caſe of an inqueſt of office he loſt his challenges to ſuch inqueſt, and yet upon ſuch inqueſt found, he forfeited his goods, and the profits of his lands; and therefore Priſot Ch. J. with the advice of the other judges, in the reign of Hen. 6. for the ſafety of the innocent, would not allow the priſoner the benefit of clergy before he had pleaded to the felony, and (having the benefit of his challenges and other advantages) had been convicted thereof; which courſe hath been generally obſerved ever ſince. 2 Inſt. 164. 2 H. H. 378.

And this benefit of clergy may be allowed by the court in diſcretion, though the party challenge it not. Hale's Pl. 239.

Perſons admitted to their clergy may be continued in priſon as a further puniſhment, not exceeding one year. 18 El. cap. 7.

By ſtat. 4 Geo. 1. cap. 11. Perſons convicted of offences within benefit of clergy (except receivers and buyers of ſtolen goods) may, inſtead of being whipped and burnt in the hand, be tranſported for ſeven years.

A perſon admitted to his clergy forfeits all his goods that he hath at the time of the conviction. 2 H. H 388.

But preſently upon burning in the hand, he ought to be reſtored to the poſſeſſion of his lands, and from thenceforth to enjoy the profits thereof. 2 H. H. 388.

Alſo, it reſtores him to his credit; and conſequently enables him to be a good witneſs. 2 Haw. 364.

And it is holden, that after a man is admitted to his clergy, it is actionable to call him felon; becauſe his offence being pardoned by the ſtatute, all the infamy and other conſequences of it are diſcharged. 2 Haw. 365.

Clerico admittendo, Is a writ to the biſhop for the admitting of a clerk to a benefice upon a ne admittas tried and found for the party that procureth the writ. Reg. Orig. fol 31.

Clerico capto per ſtatutum mercatorum, &c. Is a writ directed to the biſhop, for the delivery of a clerk out of priſon that is in cuſtody upon the breach of a ſtatute merchant. Reg. Orig. fol. 147.

Clerico convicto commiſſo gaolae in defectu ordinarii deliberando, &c. Is a writ for the delivery of a clerk to his ordinary that formerly was convicted of felony, by reaſon his ordinary did not challenge him according to the privileges of clerks. Reg. Orig. fol. 69. a.

Clerico infra ſacros ordines conſtituto non eligendo in officium, Is a writ directed to the bailiffs, &c. that have thruſt a bailiwick or beadleſhip upon one in holy orders, charging them to releaſe him again. Reg. Orig. fol. 143. a.

Clericus. This word was uſed for a ſecular prieſt, in oppoſition to a religious or regular, King John; in the time of the interdict, committed to William de Cornhull, and Gerard de Camvill,——Omnes terras & res abbatum & priorum, & omnium religioſorum, & etiam clericorum de epiſcopatu Linc. Paroch. Antiq. p. 171.

Clericus ſacerdotis, A pariſh clerk, or inferior aſſiſtant to the parochial prieſt, who uſually took an oath of fidelity from this ſervant. Before the Reformation, the rector was ſometimes obliged to provide and maintain his own clerk; and ſometimes the religious appropriators were bound to find and ſupport a clerk, as a menial ſervant to the vicar. So in the churches appropriated to the abbey of Oſeney,——Canonici vero clericum vicario, & eccleſiæ miniſterio, & ejus obſequio devotum invenient, qui juramentum fidelitatis ipſo vicario præſtabit.——Ubi autem non fuerint canonici reſidentes, clericus, qui ut ſupra dictum eſt, expenſis eorum procurabitur, clavem eorum deferet in domo eorum, &c. Paroch. Antiq. p. 304. The pariſh clerks were formerly to be men of letters, and to teach a ſchool in the pariſh, and were ſometimes elected by the pariſhioners, two for each church, as the ſacriſtan or ſexton, and clerk in our city churches, being ſuppoſed to live upon the alms and voluntary contributions of their electors. So John Peckham archbiſhop of Canterbury, anno 1280, ordained the church of Banquel, and the chapels annexed to it.——Volumus inſuper ibidem eſſe duos clericos ſcholaſticos per parochianorum, de quorum habeant vivere eleemoſynis, induſtriam eligendos, qui aquam benedictam circumferent in parochiam ac capellis diebus dominicis & feſtivis, in divinis miniſtrantes officiis, & profeſtis diebus diſciplinis ſcholaſticis indulgentes. Mon. Angl. tom. 3. p. 237. Pariſh clerks were to be ſchoolmaſters in country villages, by the conſtitutions of Alexander biſhop of Coventry, anno 1237, &c. Hence the ſchool-houſe or place of teaching was often in the belfrey, in the church-porch, or ſome contiguous building; and hence the prophaner uſe of teaching in the chancels. It would however be of good ſervice to the church and nation to reſtore this ancient practice, eſpecially in remote country villages, where the clerk would do more to the ſervice of God and the benefit of the people, if he were able to inſtruct the children in reading and writing, and underſtanding the church catechiſm; thus they might be bred to ſome ſenſe of Chriſtianity and good manners. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Clerk (Clericus) Hath two ſignifications; one as it is the title of him that belongeth to the holy miniſtry of the church, that is (as we reckon) either miniſter or deacon, or what other degree or dignity ſoever; though according to former times, not only ſacerdotes & diaconi but alſo ſubdiaconi, lectores, acholythi, exorciſtæ, & oſtiarii were within this account, as they be at this day, where the canon law hath full power. And in this ſignification a clerk is either religious (otherwiſe called regular) or ſecular. An. 4 H. 4. c. 12. This word clericus comprehends all ſorts of prieſts, deacons, and others in holy orders, either ſecular or regular; but more properly a miniſter or prieſt, or one who is more peculiarly called in ſortem Domini. Poor Vicar's Plea, fol. 13. Yet Johannes Sawell clericus Domini Regis, (ſcil. E. 1.) was ſuppoſed to ſignify ſecretary or clerk of his council. Antiq. of Nottinghamſhire, fol. 317. The other ſignification of this word noteth thoſe that by their function, or courſe of life, practiſe their pen in any courts, or otherwiſe; as namely, the clerk of the rolls of parliament; clerks of the Chancery, and ſuch like; whoſe offices ſhall be ſet in order. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Clerk of the acts, Is an officer of good account in the Navy-office, who receives and records all orders, contracts, bills, warrants, and other buſineſſes tranſacted by the Lord Admiral and commiſſioners of the navy; and is mentioned in the ſtat. 16 Car. 2. cap. 5. and 22 & 23 Car. 2.

Clerk of the affidavits, In the court of Chancery, is an officer that files all affidavits made uſe of in court.

Clerk of the aſſiſe (Clericus aſſiſarum) Is he that writes all things judicially done by the juſtices of aſſiſe in their circuits. Cromp. Juriſd. fol. 227.

Clerk of the bails, Is an officer belonging to the court of King's Bench, mentioned in ſtat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 9.

Clerk of the check, Is an officer in the King's Court, ſo called, becauſe he hath the check and controlment of the yeomen belonging either to his Majeſty, the Queen, or Prince; either giving leave, or allowing their abſences or defects in attendance, or diminiſhing their wages for the ſame. He alſo nightly, by himſelf or deputy, takes the view of thoſe that are to watch in the court, and hath the ſetting of the watch. This officer is mentioned in ſtat. 33 H. 8. cap. 12. Alſo there is an officer of the ſame name in the King's navy, and mentioned in ſtat. 19 Car. 2. c. 1.

Clerk of the cheſt, Keeps an account of the monies collected, and kept in a cheſt, for the uſe of ſick and maimed ſeamen and mariners, mentioned in ſtat. 16 Car. 2. c. 5.

Clerk of the crown (Clericus coronæ) Is a clerk or officer in the King's Bench, whoſe function is to frame, read, and record all indictments againſt traitors, felons, and and other offenders there arraigned or indicted upon any publick crime. He is otherwiſe termed clerk of the crown office. And in ſtat. 2 Hen. 4. cap. 10. he is called clerk of the crown of the King's Bench.

Clerk of the crown in Chancery (Clericus coronæ in Cancellaria) Is an officer there, who, by himſelf or deputy, is continually to attend the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper; writes and prepares, for the great ſeal of England, ſpecial matters of ſtate by commiſſion, or the like, either immediately from his Majeſty, or by order of his council, as well ordinary as extraordinary, viz. commiſſions of lieutenancy, of juſtices itinerant, and of aſſiſe of oyer and terminer, of gaol-delivery, and of the peace, with their writs of aſſociation, and the like. Alſo, all general pardons upon grants of them, at the King's coronation, or at the parliament, where he ſits in the Lords houſe in parliament-time; into whoſe office the writs of parliament, made by the clerks of the petty-bag, with the names of the knights and burgeſſes elected thereupon, are to be returned and filed. He hath alſo the making of all ſpecial pardons and writs of execution upon bonds of ſtatute-ſtapel forfeited, which was annexed to his office in the reign of Queen Mary, in conſideration of his continual and chargeable attendance: both theſe before being common for every curſitor and clerk of the court of Chancery to make. See Chancery.

Clerk of the declarations, An officer in the court of King's Bench that files all declarations in cauſes there depending after they are ingroſſed, &c.

Clerk of the deliveries, Is an officer in the Tower, who takes indentures of all ſtores iſſued thence.

Clerk of the errors (Clericus errorum) In the court of Common Pleas, does tranſcribe and certify into the King's Bench the tenor of the records of the cauſe of action, upon which the writ of error (made by the curſitor) is brought, there to be adjudged and determined. The clerks of the errors in the King's Bench does likewiſe tranſcribe and certify the records of ſuch cauſes in that court into the Exechequer, if the cauſe or action were by bill; if by original, the Lord Chief Juſtice certifies the record into the houſe of peers in parliament, by taking the tranſcript from the clerk of the errors, and delivering it to the Lord Keeper, there to be determined, according to the ſtatutes 27 El. 8. and 31 El. 1. The clerk of the errors in the Exchequer does tranſcribe the records, certified thither out of the King's Bench, and prepares them for judgment in the court of Exchequer, to be given by the juſtices of the Common Pleas, and barons there. See 16 Car. 2. cap. 2. and 20 Car. 2. cap. 4.

Clerk of eſſoins (Clericus eſſoniorum) Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, who keeps the eſſoin rolls, and hath for every execution to bar the eſſoin, in caſe where the party hath omitted his time, ſix pence. He hath alſo the providing of parchment, and cutting it out into rolls, and marking the numbers upon them, and the delivering out of all the rolls to every officer, the receiving them again when they are written, and the binding and making up the whole bundles of every term; and this he doth as ſervant of the Chief juſtice. For the Chief Juſtice is at charge for the parchment of all the rolls; for which he is allowed, as the Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, beſides the penny for the ſeal of every writ of privilege and outlawry, the ſeventh penny taken for the ſeal of every writ under the green wax, or petit ſeal, in the court of King's Bench and Common Pleas reſpectively; the ſaid Lord Chief Juſtices having annexed to their ſeveral offices or places the cuſtody of the ſaid ſeals belonging to each court.

Clerk of the eſtreats (Clericus extractorum) Is a clerk belonging to the Exchequer, who termly receives the eſtreats out of the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer's office, and writes them out to be levied for the King. He alſo makes ſchedules of ſuch ſums eſtreated as are to be diſcharged. See the Practice of the Exchequer, pag. 82

Clerk of the hamper or hanaper (Clericus hanaperii) Is an officer in Chancery (mentioned in ſtat. 2. E. 4. c. 1.) otherwiſe called warden of the hamper, in the ſame ſtatute, whoſe function is to receive all the money due to the King for the ſeals of charters, patents, commiſſions, and writs; as alſo fees due to the officers for enrolling and examining the ſame, with ſuch like. He is tied to attendance on the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper daily in the term-time, and at all times of ſealing, having with him a leather bag, wherein are put all charters, &c. after they are ſealed; thoſe bags, being ſealed up with the Lord Chancellor's private ſeal, are delivered to the controller of the hanaper, who upon receipt of them doth, as you ſhall read in his office. This hanaper repreſents a ſhadow of that which the Romans termed fiſcum, which contained the Emperor's treaſure.

The Exchequer was anciently ſo called, becauſe in eo reconderentur hanapi & ſcutræ, cæteraque vaſa quæ in cenſum & tributum perſolvi ſolebant; thus we read in the Monaſt. 1 tom. p. 943. Rex, &c. Cum de gratia noſtra ſpeciali & pro quodam fine, &c. ſolut. &c. in hanaperio noſtro, conceſſerimus. Or it may be ſo called, becauſe the yearly tribute which princes received was in hampers or large veſſels full of money. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Clerk of the juries (Clericus juratorum) An officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas that inrolls and exemplifies all fines and recoveries, and returns writs of entry, ſummons, and ſeiſin, &c.

Clerk of the juries, or jurata-writs (Clericus juratorum) Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, who makes up the writs called habeas corpora and diſtringas for appearance of juries, either in court, or at the aſſizes, after the jury or pannel is returned upon the venire facias. He enters alſo into the rolls the awarding of theſe writs, and makes all the continuances from the going out of the habeas corpora, until the verdict be given.

Clerk comptroller of the King's houſe, Whereof there are two, is an officer in the court that hath authority to allow or diſallow the charges and demands of purſuivants, meſſengers of the green-cloth, or other like. He hath alſo the overſight and controlling of all defects and miſcarriages of any of the inferior officers, and to ſit in the counting-houſe with the ſuperior officers, viz. the Lord Steward, Mr. Treaſurer, Comptroller, and Cofferer, either for correcting or bettering things out of order. This officer is mentioned in ſtat. 33 H. 8. c. 12.

Clerk marſhal of the King's houſe, Seems to be an officer that attends the marſhal in his court, and records all his proceedings. Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 12.

Clerk of the King's ſilver (Clericus argenti Regis) Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, to whom every fine is brought, after it hath been with the cuſtos brevium, and by whom the effect of the writ of covenant is entered into a paper-book; and according to that note, all the fines of that term are alſo recorded in the rolls of the court. And his entry is in this form; he puts the ſhire in the margin, and then ſaith, A. B. dat domino Regi dimidiam marcam (or more, according to the value) pro licentia concordandi cum C. D. pro talibus terra in tali villa, & habet chirographum per pacem admiſſum, &c.

Clerk of the King's great wardrobe (Clericus magnæ garderobæ Regis) Is an officer of the King's houſe that keeps an account or inventory in writing of all things belonging to the King's wardrobe, mentioned in ſtat. 1 Ed. 4. cap. 1.

Clerk of the market (Clericus mercati hoſpitii Regis) Is an officer of the King's houſe (mentioned in ſtat. 1 Ed. 4. cap. 1. and in ſtat. 13 Rich. 2. cap. 4.) whoſe duty is to take charge of the King's meaſures, and to keep the ſtandards of them, that is, the examples of all the meaſures that ought to be through the land: as of ells, yards, lagens, quarts, pottles, gallons, &c. of weights, buſhels, and ſuch like; and to ſee that all meaſures in every place be anſwerable to the ſaid ſtandard. Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. Of which office, as alſo of our diverſity of weights and meaſures, you may there find a treatiſe worth the reading. Britton alſo, in his 30 ca. ſaith in the King's perſon, to this effect: We will that none have meaſures in the realm, but we ourſelves; but that every man take his meaſures and weights from our ſtandards. And ſo goes on with a diſcourſe of this matter, that that well ſhews the ancient law and practice in this point.

By ſtat. 13 Ric. 2. cap. 24. The clerk of the market of the King's houſe ſhall execute his office duly, and all falſe weights and meaſures ſhall be burnt. And the ſaid clerk ſhall take no common fine, but every one ſhall be puniſhed according to their deſert; and he ſhall not ride with above ſix horſes, and ſhall tarry no longer in a place than need requireth; and if he offend againſt this ſtatute, he ſhall pay to the King for the firſt time 5 l. for the ſecond time 10 l. for the third 20 l.

Stat. 16 Car. 1. cap. 19. ſect. 2. There ſhall be one weight and one meaſure, according to the ſtandard of the Exechequer throughout the realm; and every meaſure of corn ſhall be ſtriked without heap; and whoſoever ſhall ſell, buy, or keep any other weight or meaſure whereby any thing is bought or ſold, ſhall forfeit for every offence 5 s. being thereof convicted by the oath of one witneſs before a juſtice of peace, mayor, or other head officer, which forfeiture ſhall be levied by the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor (or one of them) where the offence ſhall be committed, to the uſe of the poor, by diſtreſs and ſale of goods; and in default of diſtreſs, the juſtice, mayor, or head officer, may commit the offender to priſon, until he pay the ſum forfeited.

Sect. 3. The clerk of the market of the King's or Prince's houſhold ſhall only execute their offices within the verge; and head officers of corporations, and lords of liberties, and their deputies, may execute the ſaid office in their precincts.

Sect. 4. If any of the officers aforeſaid ſhall ſeal any weight or meaſure which is not agreeable to the ſtandard, or ſhall refuſe to ſeal ſuch as are agreeable (paying only ſuch fees as are warranted by ſtatute or ancient cuſtom) they and their deputies ſhall forfeit 5 l. to be levied as aforeſaid, to the uſe of the poor.

Sect. 5. If they ſhall take any common fine, fee, or other ſum of money, than what are allowed by ſtatute or ancient cuſtom, for the ſigning or examination of any weights or meaſures which have been formerly marked or ſealed, or ſhall impoſe any fine or amerciament without a legal trial of offence, or ſhall otherwiſe miſdemean themſelves in their office, they ſhall forfeit for the firſt offence 5 l. the ſecond offence 10 l. and for every other offence 20 l. to be levied as aforeſaid, to the uſe of the poor.

Sect. 6. He that is fined or amerced by this act, ſhall not be again puniſhed for the ſame offence by any former law.

Sect. 7. This act ſhall not extend to the meaſure of rent-corn, nor to water meaſure in ports.

Sect. 8. If any officer authorized to execute this ſtatute ſhall be impleaded for any act he ſhall do therein, he may plead the general iſſue not guilty.

Sect. 9. If he be found not guilty, or if the plaintiff be nonſuited, he ſhall recover treble coſts. See Weights and Meaſures.

Whether clerk of the market can break pots not being meaſure? Attorney general ſaid, that he could not, but muſt order them according to the form of the ſtatute. Savil 57. pl. 122. Paſch. 25 Eliz. Anon.

At the motion of Coke, attorney of the Queen, all the juſtices of England aſſembled at Serjeants Inn, upon extortions committed by the clerks of the markets, becauſe they took 1 d. fee for the view of veſſels, though they found not any defect in them, and ſealed them not, and if they did ſeal them they took 2 d. And all the juſtices agreed, that this was grand extortion, and that no preſcription can ſerve for taking a fee for the view only, unleſs they found default, or ſealed them. Mo. 523. pl. 690. Mich. 39 & 40 Eliz. Anon.

Clerk of the market has to do with nothing but victuals. Het. 145. Trin. 5 Car. C. B. Cambridge Univerſity's Caſe.

In treſpaſs defendant juſtified as clerk of the market within, &c. for a diſtreſs of 3 s. 4 d. for not uſing meaſures marked according to the ſtandard of the Exchequer. On demurrer it was urged for the defendant, that this was an authority given by the 14 Ed. 3. c. 12. ſect. 2. and held per Holt, Ch. J. that the clerk of the market could not have power to eſtreat fines and amerciaments otherwiſe than as a franchiſe, and it is more reaſonable the clerk ſhould bring the ſtandard with him, than that the people ſhould follow him, or attend at a place out of the market. 1 Salk. 327. Trin. 8 Ann. B. R. Burdet's Caſe.

Clerk of the Nichils, or Nihils (Clericus nihilorum) Is an officer in the Exchequer, who makes a roll of all ſuch ſums as are nihiled by the ſheriffs upon their eſtreats of green-wax, and delivers the ſame into the Lord Treaſurer's Remembrancer's office, to have execution done upon it for the King. See the ſtat. 5 R. 2. cap. 13. ſtat. 1. and Practice of the Exchequer, pag. 101. See Nihil.

Clerk of the Ordnance, Is an officer in the Tower who regiſters all orders touching the King's ordnance.

Clerk of the Outlawries (Clericus utlagariarum) Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, being only the ſervant or deputy of the King's attorney general, for making out writs of capias utlagatum, after outlawry; the King's attorney's name being to every one of thoſe writs. And whereas ſeven pence is paid for the ſeal of every other writ betwixt party and party, there is but a penny paid for the ſeal of this writ, becauſe it goes out at the King's ſuit.

Clerk of the Paper-Office, Is an officer in the court of King's Bench, that makes up the paper-books of ſpecial pleadings and demurrers in that court.

Clerk of the Papers, An officer in the Common Pleas who hath the cuſtody of papers of the Warden of the Fleet, enters commitments and diſcharges of priſoners, delivers out day-rules, &c.

Clerk of the Parcels, Is an officer in the Exchequer.

Clerk of the Pariſh. See Clericus ſacerdotis. It was held, that a pariſh clerk is a mere layman, and ought to be deprived by them that put him in, and no other; and if the eccleſiaſtical court meddle with deprivation of the pariſh clerk, they incur a præmunire, and the Canon, which wills that the parſon ſhall have election of the pariſh clerk, is merely void to take away the cuſtom that any had to elect him. 2 Brownl. 38. Paſch. 8 Jac. C. B. Gaudy v. Newman.

Reſolved, that if the pariſh clerk miſdemean himſelf in his office, or in the church, he may be ſentenced for it in the eccleſiaſtical court to excommunication, but not to deprivation. 2 Brownl. 38. Paſch. 8 Jac. C. B. Gaudy v. Newman.

Pariſh clerk may ſue in court chriſtian for his fees, which are called largitiones charitativæ. Arg. cites the Regiſter, fol. 52. for he is quodam modo an officer ſpiritual, cites 21 Ed. 4. 47. 2 Rol. Rep. 71. Hill. 18 Jac. B. R. in Biſhop's Caſe.

The clerk of a pariſh preſcribed, that he and his predeceſſors had uſed to have 5 s. per ann. of the parſon for tithes of a certain place within the pariſh, but a conſultation was awarded, becauſe a clerk dative and removeable cannot preſcribe. Mo. 908. pl. 1274. 29 & 30 Eliz. Savell v. Wood. Cro. E. 71. pl. 26. S. C. and it was moved, that it was a good preſcription, becauſe the parſonage was a parſonage impropriate, and by intendment it commenced by the act of the parſon, viz. that he made a compoſition that the tithe of that land ſhould be paid to the clerk in diſcharge of himſelf, and that he had uſed time out of mind, &c. to pay to the clerk 5 s. in diſcharge of all tithes, &c. and the court ſaid, if this ſpecial matter be ſhewn in the ſurmiſe, perhaps it might be good, by reaſon of the continuance, and that by this the parſon is diſcharged from finding the clerk, with which, perhaps, he ſhall be charged, and ſo is as a payment of tithes to the parſon himſelf; but ſuch matter is not ſhewn, and by common intendment tithes are not be paid to the pariſh clerk, and he is no party in whom a preſcription can be alledged, and thereupon they awarded a conſultation.——Le. 94. pl. 122. S. C. accordingly.

In caſe the plaintiff declared, quod cum extitiſſet clerk of ſuch a pariſh; the defendant diſturbed him in the exerciſe of his office, and hindered him to ſit in the clerk's ſeat, per quod he loſt the profits of his office. It was objected, that this was rather a ſervice or employment than an office; and if it be an office, it is eccleſiaſtical, for of common right the parſon appoints the clerk, and the court will not intend a cuſtom; and unleſs a clerk comes in by the election of the pariſhioners, according to cuſtom, he has not a temporal right, and the court will not grant a mandamus for a clerk, without an affidavit that he is appointed by the pariſh. 2. It does not appear that any fees appertain unto his office, and no action lies at Common law for diſturbance in the enjoyment of a ſeat in the church without a temporal right, and ſo it is here; adjornatur. 2 Salk. 468. pl. 7. Trin. 4 Ann. B. R. Lee v. Drake.

Pariſh clerk nominated by the parſon is by Common law an officer, and in for life, without deed. 2 Salk. 536. pl. 27. Hill. 10 Ann. B. R. Pariſh of Gatton v. Milwick.

The parſon libelled in the ſpiritual court to have the clerk eſtabliſhed according to the Canon, which gave the parſon authority to chooſe and place the clerk, and that the pariſhioners diſturbed him, upon a pretence of a cuſtom of the veſtry to chooſe one; the pariſhioners ſuggeſted this cuſtom for a prohibition, which was granted; for it was held to be a good cuſtom, and that the Canon ſhall not take it away. 2 Cro. 670. Jermyn verſus Hammond.

Libel by a pariſh clerk againſt the churchwardens, for ſo much money due yearly to him by cuſtom, and to be levied by them on the pariſhioners, &c. the defendants ſuggeſted for a prohibition, that there was no ſuch cuſtom; it was objected, that this is now too late, it being after ſentence, eſpecially ſince the cuſtom was not pleaded in the ſpiritual court as it ought; for if it had, and they would have proceeded, then it had been proper to move for a prohibition: but adjudged, where they have no original juriſdiction, it is never too late for a prohibition, and they can have no ſuch juriſdiction in this caſe, becauſe the clerk of the pariſh is not a ſpiritual perſon, neither is the duty ſpiritual, but founded on a cuſtom: and if there is ſuch a cuſtom, it is triable at law, for he may have an action on the caſe againſt the churchwardens for not making a rate, and levying it: or if levied it, for not paying it. Mod. Caſes 252. Parker verſus Clerk.

Clerk of the Parliament-rolls (Clericus Rotulorum Parliamenti) Is he that records all things done in the high court of parliament, and engroſſeth them fairly in parchment rolls, for their better preſervation to poſterity. Of theſe there are two, one of the Lords Houſe, another of the Houſe of Commons. Cromp. Juriſ. f. 4 & 1. Smith de Rep. Angl. pag. 38. See alſo Vowel's book, touching the order of the Parliament. See Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 12. pag. 31.

Clerk of the Patents, Or of the letters patent under the great ſeal of England, was erected 18 Jac.

Clerk of the Peace (Clericus pacis) Is an officer belonging to the ſeſſions of the peace. His duty is, in the ſeſſions, to read the indictments, to enroll the acts, and draw the proceſs: to record the proclamation of rates for ſervants wages, to enroll the diſcharge of apprentices, to keep the counterpart of the indentures of armour, to keep the regiſter-book of licences given to badgers and laders of corn, and of thoſe that are licenſed to ſhoot in guns, and to certify into the King's Bench tranſcripts of indictments, outlawries, attainders, and convictions had before the juſtices of the peace, within the time limited by ſtatute. Lambard's Eiren. lib. 4. cap. 3. fol. 379.

By ſtat. 37 Hen. 8. cap. 1. ſect. 3. Every cuſtos rotulorum ſhall appoint the clerk of the peace, and grant the office to ſuch able perſons inſtructed in the laws, as ſhall be able to exerciſe the ſame, during the time that the cuſtos rotulorum ſhall exerciſe the office of cuſtos rotulorum, ſo that the ſaid clerk demean himſelf in the office juſtly; and it ſhall be lawful to ſuch grantee of the ſaid clerkſhip to occupy the office by himſelf, or by his deputy inſtructed in the laws, ſo that the deputy be admitted by the cuſtos rotulorum.

Stat. 1 W. & M. ſtat. 1. cap. 21. ſect. 4. The appointing of the cuſtos rotulorum through all the counties ſhall be as is directed by ſtat. 37 H. 8. c. 1.

Sect. 5. The cuſtos rotulorum, or other perſon to whom it ſhall belong to appoint the clerk of the peace, ſhall, where the office of clerk of the peace ſhall be void, nominate a ſufficient perſon reſiding in the county or place, to exerciſe the ſame by himſelf or his ſufficient deputy, for ſo long time as ſuch clerk of the peace ſhall well demean himſelf in his office.

Sect. 6. If any clerk of the peace ſhall miſdemean himſelf in the office, and a complaint in writing of ſuch miſdemeanor ſhall be exhibited to the quarter ſeſſions; it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices upon examination and proof, to ſuſpend or diſcharge him from the office; and the cuſtos rotulorum, or other perſon to whom it ſhall belong, ſhall appoint another ſufficient perſon reſiding in the county, &c. to be clerk of the peace. And in caſe of neglect to make ſuch appointment before the next quarter-ſeſſions, it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices to appoint one.

Sect. 7. He ſhall be ſubject to the penalties and proviſions herein mentioned.

Sect. 8. It ſhall be lawful for any cuſtos rotulorum, &c. to ſell the place of clerk of the peace, or to take any bond or aſſurance to have any reward or profit for ſuch appointing. But every cuſtos rotulorum, &c. that ſhall ſo ſell, and every clerk of the peace who ſhall ſo buy his place, are diſabled to hold their places; and ſhall each of them forfeit double the value ſo given or taken, to be recovered by them that ſhall ſue for the ſame.

Sect. 9. Every clerk of the peace, before he enter upon the execution of his office, ſhall in open ſeſſions take the oath following, viz.

I A. B. do ſwear, that I have not, nor will pay any ſum or ſums of money, or other reward whatſoever, nor given any bond or other aſſurance to pay any money, fee, or profit, directly or indirectly, to any perſon or perſons whomſoever for ſuch nomination or appointment. So help me God.

Sect. 10. Nothing in this act ſhall affect the clerk of the peace for the duchy and county palatine of Lancaſter, who holds his office for lives by grants from King Charles II.

The clerk of the peace muſt make out all proceſs, and when they are compleat muſt deliver them to the cuſtos, but as long as they are in proceſs they are not to be with the clerk, but for refuſing to deliver the rolls to the cuſtos, he was indicted and removed, and a mandamus to reſtore him was denied per three juſtices againſt the Chief Juſtice. 4 Mod. 31. Paſch. 3 W. & M. in B. R. The King and Queen v. Evans.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit, and non aſſumpſit pleaded, the jury found the ſtat. 27 H. 8. and 1 W. & M. and the ſeveral clauſes in them about the clerk of the peace; that the Earl of Clare was cuſtos rotulorum of Middleſex, and that he named the plaintiff to be clerk of the peace, to exerciſe the office by him or his deputy, Quamdiu ſe bene geſſerit; that the plaintiff was capable of the office, and duly admitted; that the Earl of Clare was afterwards removed, and the Earl of Bedford made cuſtos rotulorum, who conſtituted, by writing under hand and ſeal, the defendant during the time he was cuſtos rotulorum, quamdiu the defendant ſe bene geſſerit; and on ſolemn argument, judgment pro quer' per tot. cur. for that he had an eſtate for life, and was not removeable by the new cuſtos. 12 Mod. 42. Trin. 5 W. & M. Harcourt v. Fox.

By the ſtatute 1 W. & M. the cuſtos rotulorum is to appoint a clerk of the peace for ſo long time only as he ſhall demean himſelf well. Owen brought a mandamus to the juſtices to reſtore him to that office. The return was, that the Earl of Winchelſea, who was cuſtos rotulorum, did appoint O. to be clerk of the peace durante bene placito, &c. that the ſaid Earl being dead, the Lord Sydney was made cuſtos, who appointed S. to be clerk of the peace of Kent, purſuant to the ſaid act. The queſtion was, whether a grant of this office during pleaſure, which is only an eſtate at will, ſhall be ſo governed by the ſtatute as to make it an eſtate for life, when once the perſon is admitted to the office; ſo that let the cuſtos make what appointment he will, though not purſuant to the ſtatute, it is the ſtatute, and not the cuſtos, which gives an intereſt and eſtate to the nominee. Adjudged, that no peremptory mandamus ſhall go; for, by the act, the cuſtos is to nominate a clerk to execute the office ſo long as he ſhall demean himſelf well, &c. and if he appoint him in any other manner, he is no clerk of the peace, ſo that appointment during pleaſure is not purſuant to the act; for he has not executed the authority given him by the act, and ſo the defendant has no title. 4 Mod. 293. Trin. 6 W. & M. in B. R. The King v. Owen,

It always belonged to the cuſtos rotulorum to nominate the clerk of the peace, but the clerk of the peace was removeable whenever the cuſtos was removed or changed, and moreover was removeable at the will of the cuſtos till 37 H. 8. 1. which makes him to continue in quouſque the cuſtos ſhall continue in; but now, by the late act, he is to continue for life, and though the words are, give and grant to him, yet it is only an appointment, and conſequently may be without deed. 2 Salk. 467. Trin. 10 W. 3. *B. He is no more than a miniſterial officer, and a record made by him is not to be pleaded as a record, and will not conclude the judgment of B. R. Arg. 8 Mod. 43. Paſch. 7 Geo. 1. in the caſe of Colvin v. Fletcher.

By ſtat. 34 & 35 Hen. 8. c. 14. The clerk of the peace ſhall certify into the King's Beneh the names of ſuch as be outlawed, attainted, or convicted of felony.

By ſtat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 22. ſect. 7. The clerk of the peace ſhall deliver to the ſheriff, within ten days after Sept. 29. yearly, a perfect eſtreat or ſchedule of all fines and other forfeitures in ſeſſions.

Sect. 8. And alſo ſhall yearly, on or before the ſecond Monday after the morrow of All Souls, deliver into the Exchequer a duplicate of ſuch eſtreats ſo delivered to the ſheriffs, that the ſheriffs may be charged therewith on their appoſals, on pain to forfeit 50 l. the one moiety to the King, the other to the proſecutor.

Sect. 9. And if he ſhall ſpare, take off, diſcharge, or conceal any ſuch fine or forfeiture, unleſs it be by rule of court, he ſhall forfeit treble value; half to the King, and half to him that ſhall ſue; and ſhall alſo forfeit his office, and be incapable to be employed in any office where the revenue is concerned.

By ſtat. 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 24. ſect. 5. The clerk of the peace ſhall, upon delivery of the eſtreats into the court of Exchequer, take the following oath, to be adminiſtered by one of the barons:

YOU ſhall ſwear, that theſe eſtreats, now by you delivered, are truly and carefully made up and examined, and that all fines, iſſues, amerciaments, recognizances, and forfeitures, which were ſet, loſt, impoſed, or forfeited, and in right and due courſe of law ought to be eſtreated in the court of Exchequer, are, to the beſt of your knowledge and underſtanding, therein contained; and that in the ſame eſtreats are alſo contained and expreſſed all ſuch fines as have been paid into the court, from which the ſaid eſtreats are made, without any wilful or fraudulent diſcharge, omiſſion, miſnomer, or defect whatſoever.

By ſtat. 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. ſect. 12. The barons of the Exchequer may amerce the clerk of the peace for neglecting to return the eſtreats according to the ſaid two acts of 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 22. and 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 24. See Eſtreats.

By ſtat. 10 & 11 W. 3. ſect. 7, 8. Clerk of the peace ſhall have only 2 s. for drawing an indictment of felony; and if it is defective, he ſhall draw a new one gratis, on pain of 5 l. with full coſts to him that ſhall ſue.

By ſtat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 46. ſect. 14. No clerk of the peace, or his deputy, ſhall act as ſolicitor, attorney, or agent, or ſue out any proceſs at any general or quarter ſeſſions, when he ſhall execute the office of clerk of the peace or deputy, on pain of 50 l. to him who ſhall ſue in 12 months, with treble coſts.

Clerk of the Pell (Clericus pellis) Is a clerk belonging to the Exchequer, whoſe office is to enter every teller's bill into a parchment-roll, (called pellis receptorum) and alſo to make another roll of payments, which is called pellis exituum, wherein he ſets down by what warrant the money was paid. He is mentioned in the ſtatute 22 & 23 Car. 2. for ſubſidy. This officer is called in ancient records Clericus Domini Theſaurarii.

Clerk of the petty-bag (Clericus parvæ bagæ) Is an officer of the Chancery, of which ſort there are three, and the Maſter of the Rolls their chief. Their office is to record the return of all inquiſitions out of every ſhire; to make all patents of cuſtomers, gaugers, controllers, and aulnegers; all conge d'eſlires for biſhops; all liberates upon extents of ſtatute-ſtaples; the recovery of recognizances forfeited, and all elegits upon them; the ſummons of the nobility, clergy, and burgeſſes to the parliament; commiſſions directed to the knights, and others of every ſhire, for aſſeſſing ſubſidies; writs for the nomination of collectors for taxes; and all traverſes upon any office, bill, or otherwiſe; to receive the fees for homages due to the Lord Great Chamberlain, of the nobility, biſhops, &c. This officer is mentioned in ſtat. 33 H. 8. cap. 22.

Clerk of the pipe (Clericus pipæ) Is an officer in the Exchequer, who, having all accompts and debts due to the King delivered and drawn out of the remembrancers offices, charges them down into the great roll; and is called clerk of the pipe from the ſhape of that roll, which is put together like a pipe: formerly he was called Ingroſſator magni rotuli, contrarotulator pipæ, duplex ingroſſator, and now clerk of the pipe. He alſo writes ſummons to the ſheriff to levy the ſaid debts upon the goods and chattels of the debtors; and if they have no goods, then he draws them down to the Lord Treaſurer's remembrancer, and writes eſtreats againſt their lands. The ancient revenue of the crown remains in charge before him, and he ſees the ſame anſwered by the farmers and ſheriffs. He makes a charge to all ſheriffs of their ſummons of the pipe and green wax, and ſees it anſwered upon their accounts. He hath the drawing and ingroſſing all leaſes of the King's land. In Henry the Sixth's time he was called Ingroſſator magni rotuli.

Clerk of the pleas (Clericus placitorum) Is an officer in the Exchequer, in whoſe office all the officers of the court (upon eſpecial privilege belonging unto them) ought to ſue, or to be ſued upon any action, &c. See the Practice of the Exchequer, p. 86. and 4 Inſt. fol. 107.

Clerk of the privy ſeal (Clericus privati ſigilli) There are four of theſe officers that attend the Lord Privy Seal, or (if none ſuch) the principal ſecretary, writing and making out all things that are ſent by warrant from the ſignet to the privy ſeal, and are to be paſſed to the great ſeal; as alſo to make out (as they are termed) privy ſeals upon any ſpecial occaſion of his Majeſty's affairs; as for loan of money, and ſuch like. Of this officer and his function, you may read the ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. c. 11. He that now is called the Lord Privy Seal, ſeems in ancient time to have been called clerk of the privy ſeal, and to have been reckoned, notwithſtanding, in the number of the great officers of this realm. Clerk of the rules, In the court of King's Bench is he who draws up and enters all the rules and orders made in court, and gives rules of courſe on divers writs. This officer is mentioned 22 & 23 Car. 2.

Clerk of the ſewers (Clericus ſuerarum) Is an officer appertaining to the commiſſioners of ſewers, writing all things that they do by virtue of the commiſſion; for which ſee Sewers: and ſee the ſtatute of 13 Eliz. c. 9.

In caſe the plaintiff declared, quod cum extitiſſet clerk of ſuch a pariſh; the defendant diſturbed him in the exerciſe of his office, and hindered him to ſit in the clerk's ſeat, per quod he loſt the profits of his office. It was objected, that this was rather a ſervice or employment than an office; and if it be an office, it is eccleſiaſtical, for of common right the parſon appoints the clerk, and the court will not intend a cuſtom; and unleſs a clerk comes in by the election of the pariſhioners, according to cuſtom, he has not a temporal right, and the court will not grant a mandamus for a clerk, without an affidavit that he is appointed by the pariſh. 2. It does not appear that any fees appertain unto his office, and no action lies at Common law for diſturbance in the enjoyment of a ſeat in the church without a temporal right, and ſo it is here; adjornatur. 2 Salk. 468. pl. 7. Trin. 4 Ann. B. R. Lee v. Drake.

Pariſh clerk nominated by the parſon is by Common law an officer, and in for life, without deed. 2 Salk. 536. pl. 27. Hill. 10 Ann. B. R. Pariſh of Gatton v. Milwick.

The parſon libelled in the ſpiritual court to have the clerk eſtabliſhed according to the Canon, which gave the parſon authority to chooſe and place the clerk, and that the pariſhioners diſturbed him, upon a pretence of a cuſtom of the veſtry to chooſe one; the pariſhioners ſuggeſted this cuſtom for a prohibition, which was granted; for it was held to be a good cuſtom, and that the Canon ſhall not take it away. 2 Cro. 670. Jermyn verſus Hammond.

Libel by a pariſh clerk againſt the churchwardens, for ſo much money due yearly to him by cuſtom, and to be levied by them on the pariſhioners, &c. the defendants ſuggeſted for a prohibition, that there was no ſuch cuſtom; it was objected, that this is now too late, it being after ſentence, eſpecially ſince the cuſtom was not pleaded in the ſpiritual court as it ought; for if it had, and they would have proceeded, then it had been proper to move for a prohibition: but adjudged, where they have no original juriſdiction, it is never too late for a prohibition, and they can have no ſuch juriſdiction in this caſe, becauſe the clerk of the pariſh is not a ſpiritual perſon, neither is the duty ſpiritual, but founded on a cuſtom: and if there is ſuch a cuſtom, it is triable at law, for he may have an action on the caſe againſt the churchwardens for not making a rate, and levying it: or if levied it, for not paying it. Mod. Caſes 252. Parker verſus Clerk.

Clerk of the Parliament-rolls (Clericus Rotulorum Parliamenti) Is he that records all things done in the high court of parliament, and engroſſeth them fairly in parchment rolls, for their better preſervation to poſterity. Of theſe there are two, one of the Lords Houſe, another of the Houſe of Commons. Cromp. Juriſ. f. 4 & 1. Smith de Rep. Angl. pag. 38. Clerk of the Patents, Or of the letters patent under the great ſeal of England, was erected 18 Jac.

Clerk of the Peace (Clericus pacis) Is an officer belonging to the ſeſſions of the peace. His duty is, in the ſeſſions, to read the indictments, to enroll the acts, and draw the proceſs: to record the proclamation of rates for ſervants wages, to enroll the diſcharge of apprentices, to keep the counterpart of the indentures of armour, to keep the regiſter-book of licences given to badgers and laders of corn, and of thoſe that are licenſed to ſhoot in guns, and to certify into the King's Bench tranſcripts of indictments, outlawries, attainders, and convictions had before the juſtices of the peace, within the time limited by ſtatute. Lambard's Eiren. lib. 4. cap. 3. fol. 379.

By ſtat. 37 Hen. 8. cap. 1. ſect. 3. Every cuſtos rotulorum ſhall appoint the clerk of the peace, and grant the office to ſuch able perſons inſtructed in the laws, as ſhall be able to exerciſe the ſame, during the time that the cuſtos rotulorum ſhall exerciſe the office of cuſtos rotulorum, ſo that the ſaid clerk demean himſelf in the office juſtly; and it ſhall be lawful to ſuch grantee of the ſaid clerkſhip to occupy the office by himſelf, or by his deputy inſtructed in the laws, ſo that the deputy be admitted by the cuſtos rotulorum.

Stat. 1 W. & M. ſtat. 1. cap. 21. ſect. 4. The appointing of the cuſtos rotulorum through all the counties ſhall be as is directed by ſtat. 37 H. 8. c. 1.

Sect. 5. The cuſtos rotulorum, or other perſon to whom it ſhall belong to appoint the clerk of the peace, ſhall, where the office of clerk of the peace ſhall be void, nominate a ſufficient perſon reſiding in the county or place, to exerciſe the ſame by himſelf or his ſufficient deputy, for ſo long time as ſuch clerk of the peace ſhall well demean himſelf in his office.

Sect. 6. If any clerk of the peace ſhall miſdemean himſelf in the office, and a complaint in writing of ſuch miſdemeanor ſhall be exhibited to the quarter ſeſſions; it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices upon examination and proof, to ſuſpend or diſcharge him from the office; and the cuſtos rotulorum, or other perſon to whom it ſhall belong, ſhall appoint another ſufficient perſon reſiding in the county, &c. to be clerk of the peace. And in caſe of neglect to make ſuch appointment before the next quarter-ſeſſions, it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices to appoint one.

Sect. 7. He ſhall be ſubject to the penalties and proviſions herein mentioned.

Sect. 8. It ſhall be lawful for any cuſtos rotulorum, &c. to ſell the place of clerk of the peace, or to take any bond or aſſurance to have any reward or profit for ſuch appointing. But every cuſtos rotulorum, &c. that ſhall ſo ſell, and every clerk of the peace who ſhall ſo buy his place, are diſabled to hold their places; and ſhall each of them forfeit double the value ſo given or taken, to be recovered by them that ſhall ſue for the ſame.

Sect. 9. Every clerk of the peace, before he enter upon the execution of his office, ſhall in open ſeſſions take the oath following, viz.

I A. B. do ſwear, that I have not, nor will pay any ſum or ſums of money, or other reward whatſoever, nor given any bond or other aſſurance to pay any money, fee, or profit, directly or indirectly, to any perſon or perſons whomſoever for ſuch nomination or appointment. So help me God.

Sect. 10. Nothing in this act ſhall affect the clerk of the peace for the duchy and county palatine of Lancaſter, who holds his office for lives by grants from King Charles II.

The clerk of the peace muſt make out all proceſs, and when they are compleat muſt deliver them to the cuſtos, but as long as they are in proceſs they are not to be with the clerk, but for refuſing to deliver the rolls to the cuſtos, he was indicted and removed, and a mandamus to reſtore him was denied per three juſtices againſt the Chief Juſtice. 4 Mod. 31. Paſch. 3 W. & M. in B. R. The King and Queen v. Evans.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit, and non aſſumpſit pleaded, the jury found the ſtat. 27 H. 8. and 1 W. & M. and the ſeveral clauſes in them about the clerk of the peace; that the Earl of Clare was cuſtos rotulorum of Middleſex, and that he named the plaintiff to be clerk of the peace, to exerciſe the office by him or his deputy, Quamdiu ſe bene geſſerit; that the plaintiff was capable of the office, and duly admitted; that the Earl of Clare was afterwards removed, and the Earl of Bedford made cuſtos rotulorum, who conſtituted, by writing under hand and ſeal, the defendant during the time he was cuſtos rotulorum, quamdiu the defendant ſe bene geſſerit; and on ſolemn argument, judgment pro quer' per tot. cur. for that he had an eſtate for life, and was not removeable by the new cuſtos. 12 Mod. 42. Trin. 5 W. & M. Harcourt v. Fox.

By the ſtatute 1 W. & M. the cuſtos rotulorum is to appoint a clerk of the peace for ſo long time only as he ſhall demean himſelf well. Owen brought a mandamus to the juſtices to reſtore him to that office. The return was, that the Earl of Winchelſea, who was cuſtos rotulorum, did appoint O. to be clerk of the peace durante bene placito, &c. that the ſaid Earl being dead, the Lord Sydney was made cuſtos, who appointed S. to be clerk of the peace of

of Kent, purſuant to the ſaid act. The queſtion was, whether a grant of this office during pleaſure, which is only an eſtate at will, ſhall be ſo governed by the ſtatute as to make it an eſtate for life, when once the perſon is admitted to the office; ſo that let the cuſtos make what appointment he will, though not purſuant to the ſtatute, it is the ſtatute, and not the cuſtos, which gives an intereſt and eſtate to the nominee. Adjudged, that no peremptory mandamus ſhall go; for, by the act, the cuſtos is to nominate a clerk to execute the office ſo long as he ſhall demean himſelf well, &c. and if he appoint him in any other manner, he is no clerk of the peace, ſo that appointment during pleaſure is not purſuant to the act; for he has not executed the authority given him by the act, and ſo the defendant has no title. 4 Mod. 293. Trin. 6 W. & M. in B. R. The King v. Owen,

It always belonged to the cuſtos rotulorum to nominate the clerk of the peace, but the clerk of the peace was removeable whenever the cuſtos was removed or changed, and moreover was removeable at the will of the cuſtos till 37 H. 8. 1. which makes him to continue in quouſque the cuſtos ſhall continue in; but now, by the late act, he is to continue for life, and though the words are, give and grant to him, yet it is only an appointment, and conſequently may be without deed. 2 Salk. 467. Trin. 10 W. 3. *B. He is no more than a miniſterial officer, and a record made by him is not to be pleaded as a record, and will not conclude the judgment of B. R. Arg. 8 Mod. 43. Paſch. 7 Geo. 1. in the caſe of Colvin v. Fletcher.

By ſtat. 34 & 35 Hen. 8. c. 14. The clerk of the peace ſhall certify into the King's Beneh the names of ſuch as be outlawed, attainted, or convicted of felony.

By ſtat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 22. ſect. 7. The clerk of the peace ſhall deliver to the ſheriff, within ten days after Sept. 29. yearly, a perfect eſtreat or ſchedule of all fines and other forfeitures in ſeſſions.

Sect. 8. And alſo ſhall yearly, on or before the ſecond Monday after the morrow of All Souls, deliver into the Exchequer a duplicate of ſuch eſtreats ſo delivered to the ſheriffs, that the ſheriffs may be charged therewith on their appoſals, on pain to forfeit 50 l. the one moiety to the King, the other to the proſecutor.

Sect. 9. And if he ſhall ſpare, take off, diſcharge, or conceal any ſuch fine or forfeiture, unleſs it be by rule of court, he ſhall forfeit treble value; half to the King, and half to him that ſhall ſue; and ſhall alſo forfeit his office, and be incapable to be employed in any office where the revenue is concerned.

By ſtat. 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 24. ſect. 5. The clerk of the peace ſhall, upon delivery of the eſtreats into the court of Exchequer, take the following oath, to be adminiſtered by one of the barons:

YOU ſhall ſwear, that theſe eſtreats, now by you delivered, are truly and carefully made up and examined, and that all fines, iſſues, amerciaments, recognizances, and forfeitures, which were ſet, loſt, impoſed, or forfeited, and in right and due courſe of law ought to be eſtreated in the court of Exchequer, are, to the beſt of your knowledge and underſtanding, therein contained; and that in the ſame eſtreats are alſo contained and expreſſed all ſuch fines as have been paid into the court, from which the ſaid eſtreats are made, without any wilful or fraudulent diſcharge, omiſſion, miſnomer, or defect whatſoever.

By ſtat. 3 Geo. 1. c. 15. ſect. 12. The barons of the Exchequer may amerce the clerk of the peace for neglecting to return the eſtreats according to the ſaid two acts of 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 22. and 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 24. See Eſtreats.

By ſtat. 10 & 11 W. 3. ſect. 7, 8. Clerk of the peace ſhall have only 2 s. for drawing an indictment of felony; and if it is defective, he ſhall draw a new one gratis, on pain of 5 l. with full coſts to him that ſhall ſue.

By ſtat. 2 Geo. 2. c. 46. ſect. 14. No clerk of the peace, or his deputy, ſhall act as ſolicitor, attorney, or agent, or ſue out any proceſs at any general or quarter ſeſſions, when he ſhall execute the office of clerk of the peace or deputy, on pain of 50 l. to him who ſhall ſue in 12 months, with treble coſts.

Clerk of the Pell (Clericus pellis) Is a clerk belonging to the Exchequer, whoſe office is to enter every teller's bill into a parchment-roll (called pellis receptorum) and alſo to make another roll of payments, which is called pellis exituum, wherein he ſets down by what warrant the money was paid. He is mentioned in the ſtatute 22 & 23 Car. 2. for ſubſidy. This officer is called in ancient records Clericus Domini Theſaurarii.

Clerk of the petty-bag (Clericus parvæ bagæ) Is an officer of the Chancery, of which ſort there are three, and the Maſter of the Rolls their chief. Their office is to record the return of all inquiſitions out of every ſhire; to make all patents of cuſtomers, gaugers, controllers, and aulnegers; all conge d'eſlires for biſhops; all liberates upon extents of ſtatute-ſtaples; the recovery of recognizances forfeited, and all elegits upon them; the ſummons of the nobility, clergy, and burgeſſes to the parliament; commiſſions directed to the knights, and others of every ſhire, for aſſeſſing ſubſidies; writs for the nomination of collectors for taxes; and all traverſes upon any office, bill, or otherwiſe; to receive the fees for homages due to the Lord Great Chamberlain, of the nobility, biſhops, &c. This officer is mentioned in ſtat. 33 H. 8. cap. 22.

Clerk of the pipe (Clericus pipæ) Is an officer in the Exchequer, who, having all accompts and debts due to the King delivered and drawn out of the remembrancers offices, charges them down into the great roll; and is called clerk of the pipe from the ſhape of that roll, which is put together like a pipe: formerly he was called Ingroſſator magni rotuli, contrarotulator pipæ, duplex ingroſſator, and now clerk of the pipe. He alſo writes ſummons to the ſheriff to levy the ſaid debts upon the goods and chattels of the debtors; and if they have no goods, then he draws them down to the Lord Treaſurer's remembrancer, and writes eſtreats againſt their lands. The ancient revenue of the crown remains in charge before him, and he ſees the ſame anſwered by the farmers and ſheriffs. He makes a charge to all ſheriffs of their ſummons of the pipe and green wax, and ſees it anſwered upon their accounts. He hath the drawing and ingroſſing all leaſes of the King's land. In Henry the Sixth's time he was called Ingroſſator magni rotuli.

Clerk of the pleas (Clericus placitorum) Is an officer in the Exchequer, in whoſe office all the officers of the court (upon eſpecial privilege belonging unto them) ought to ſue, or to be ſued upon any action, &c. See the Practice of the Exchequer, p. 86. and 4 Inſt. fol. 107.

Clerk of the privy ſeal (Clericus privati ſigilli) There are four of theſe officers that attend the Lord Privy Seal, or (if none ſuch) the principal ſecretary, writing and making out all things that are ſent by warrant from the ſignet to the privy ſeal, and are to be paſſed to the great ſeal; as alſo to make out (as they are termed) privy ſeals upon any ſpecial occaſion of his Majeſty's affairs; as for loan of money, and ſuch like. Of this officer and his function, you may read the ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. c. 11. He that now is called the Lord Privy Seal, ſeems in ancient time to have been called clerk of the privy ſeal, and to have been reckoned, notwithſtanding, in the number of the great officers of this realm. The clerk of the pipe and remembrancer ſhall be ſworn to make a ſchedule of perſons diſcharged in their offices, 5 Ric. 2. ſt. 1. c. 15. See Remembrancer.

Clerk of the rules, In the court of King's Bench is he who draws up and enters all the rules and orders made in court, and gives rules of courſe on divers writs. This officer is mentioned 22 & 23 Car. 2.

Clerk of the ſewers (Clericus ſuerarum) Is an officer appertaining to the commiſſioners of ſewers, writing all things that they do by virtue of the commiſſion; for which ſee Sewers: and ſee the ſtatute of 13 Eliz. c. 9.

Clerk of the ſignet (Clericus ſigneti) Is an officer attendant continually on his Majeſty's principal ſecretary, who always hath the cuſtody of the privy ſignet, as well for ſealing his Majeſty's private letters, as alſo ſuch grants as paſs his Majeſty's hand by bill ſigned. Of theſe there are four that attend in their courſe, and have their diet at the ſecretary's table. More largely you may read of their office in the ſtatute made anno 27 H. 8. cap. 11.

Clerk of the ſuperſedeas, Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, who makes out the writ of ſuperſedeas (upon the defendant's appearing to the exigent) whereby the ſheriff is forbidden to return the exigent.

Clerk of the Treaſury (Clericus Theſaurarii) Is an officer belonging to the Common Pleas, who hath the charge of keeping the records of the court, and makes out all the records of niſi prius, hath the fees due for all ſearches, and hath the certifying all records into the King's Bench, when a writ of error is brought. Alſo he makes all exemplifications of records being in the Treaſury. He is taken to be the ſervant of the Chief Juſtice, and removeable at his pleaſure, whereas all other officers are for term of life. There is alſo a ſecondary or under-clerk of the Treaſury for aſſiſtant, who hath ſome allowances; and likewiſe an under keeper, who always keeps one key of the Treaſury-door, and the chief clerk of the ſecondary another; ſo as the one cannot come in without the other.

Clerk of the warrants (Clericus warrantorum) Is an officer belonging to the court of Common Pleas, who entereth all warrants of attorney for plaintiff and defendant, and inrols all deeds of indentures of bargain and ſale, which are acknowledged in the court, or before any judges out of the court. And he eſtreats into the Exchequer all iſſues, fines, and amerciaments, which any way grow due to the King in that court, and hath a ſtanding fee of ten pounds of the King for making the ſame eſtreats. Client and attorney. Attorney being to draw a deed, has writings brought to him, and among them is one that concerns himſelf and his title; tho' the deed concerned the attorney's own title, yet they forced him to deliver it up, and left him to take his proper remedy at law. 9 Show. 165. pl. 156. Mich. 33 Car. 2. *B. Attorney having writings delivered to him to draw a mortgage, &c. may detain them till the money is paid for his drawing them; but he cannot detain any writings, which are delivered to him on a ſpecial truſt for the money due to him in that very buſineſs; and if he does, an attachment will go, and he will be ordered to pay coſts and damages to the party. 8 Mod. 306. Mich. 11 Geo. 1. Lawſon v. Dickenſon.

A Client delivered a deed to his attorney, in order to bring an action of covenant. The attorney loſt the deed, as he pretended. On a motion for an attachment againſt the attorney for not delivering the deed, it was propoſed by Mr. Strange, the attorney's counſel, that the plaintiff ſhould bring a bill of diſcovery, to make him ſet out whether there was not ſuch deed, and what the deed was; but he agreed, that it ought to be at the attorney's coſts, and moved that the court would not grant an attachment. Page J. ſaid, he thought the attorney himſelf ought to procure a diſcovery by bill in Chancery, but that the plaintiff ſhould allow him to make uſe of his name for that purpoſe; accordingly the court granted an attachment, but to lie in the officer's hands till further directions given. 2 *Barnard. A client brought action ſur le caſe againſt his attorney for delivering to the ſheriff a fi. fa. againſt him in a ſuit in which he was attorney for him, and procuring it to be executed. It was inſiſted after verdict, that the ſuit was determined by judgment being given, and conſequently the truſt repoſed in the defendant. Iſſue was, that the defendant had notice before the 12th, viz. on the 6th of March; whereas he had in truth fully adminiſtered before the 6th of March, and in truth before the original purchaſed; ſo that by the falſe plea by the attorney the right was never tried. The Maſter of the Rolls diſmiſſed the bill, and Lord Somers affirmed the diſmiſſion. 2 Vern. 325. pl. 314. Mich. 1695. Stephenſon v. Wilſon.

Stat. 27 Geo. 2. cap. 7. ſect. 1. If any perſon who ſhall be hired or employed by any perſon practiſing in the trade of clockmaking or watchmaking, or any other branch or branches of ſuch trade, to make, finiſh, alter, repair, or clean any clock or clocks, watch or watches, or any part or parts of a clock or clocks, watch or watches, or be intruſted by any perſon practiſing the ſaid trade or trades, with any gold, ſilver, or other metals or materials, to be, or that ſhall be in the whole or in part wrought or manufactured, for any part or parts of a clock or clocks, watch or watches, or any diamond or other precious ſtone, to be, or that ſhall be ſet or fixed in or about any clock or clocks, watch or watches, ſhall purloin, imbezzle, ſecrete, ſell, pawn, exchange, or otherwiſe unlawfully diſpoſe of any clock or watch, or any part or parts of any clock or watch, or any gold, ſilver, or any other metal or material, or any part thereof, or any diamond or other precious ſtone, with which ſuch perſon ſhall be intruſted by any perſon practiſing the ſaid trade or trades, or any part or branch, or any parts or branches of ſuch trade or trades, and ſhall be thereof convicted by the oath of the owner of ſuch goods, or by oath of any other credible witneſs or witneſſes, or by confeſſion of the perſon or perſons charged with ſuch offence, before any one or more juſtice or juſtices of the peace of the county, riding, liberty, city, diviſion, town, or place where ſuch offence ſhall be committed, or where the perſon ſo charged ſhall reſide or inhabit (which oath the ſaid juſtice or juſtices is and are hereby impowered and required to adminiſter); every ſuch offender ſhall for the firſt offence forfeit 20 l. and in caſe the ſaid forfeiture ſhall not be forthwith paid, the juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, ſhall commit the party or parties ſo convicted to the houſe of correction, or other publick priſon of ſuch county, riding, diviſion, city, liberty, town, or place, there to be kept to hard labour for the ſpace of fourteen days, unleſs ſuch forfeiture ſhall be ſooner paid; and if within two days before the expiration of ſuch fourteen days, ſuch forfeiture ſhall not be paid, the ſaid juſtice or juſtices is and are hereby impowered to order the perſons ſo convicted to be publickly whipped at the market-place, or ſome other publick place of the city, town, or place where ſuch offender or offenders ſhall be reſpectively committed; and in caſe of a further conviction, in manner before preſcribed by this act, for or upon a ſecond or other ſubſequent offence of the ſame kind, the perſon or perſons ſo again offending, being thereof convicted in manner aforeſaid, ſhall for every ſecond or other ſubſequent offence forfeit forty pounds; and in caſe the forfeiture ſhall not be forthwith paid, the juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, ſhall commit the perſon or perſons ſo again offending to the houſe of correction, or other publick priſon, for any time not exceeding three months, nor leſs than one month, unleſs the ſaid forfeiture ſhall be ſooner paid; and if within ſeven days before the expiration of the time for which ſuch offender or offenders ſhall be committed, the ſaid forfeiture ſhall not be paid, the juſtice and juſtices is and are hereby impowered to order the perſon ſo again offending to be publickly whipped at the market-place, or ſome other publick place of the city, town, or place where ſuch offender or offenders ſhall be reſpectively committed, twice or oftener, as to ſuch juſtice or juſtices ſhall appear reaſonable.

Sect. 2. And if any perſon ſhall buy, receive, accept, or take by way of gift, pawn, pledge, ſale, or exchange, or in any other manner whatſoever, of or from any perſon whomſoever, any clock or watch, or any part or parts of a clock or watch, or any gold, ſilver, or other metal or material as aforeſaid, whether the ſame or any part thereof be or be not wrought or manufactured, or any diamond or other precious ſtone, which ſhall have been intruſted with any perſon or perſons hired or employed as aforeſaid by any perſon practiſing the ſaid trade or trades; he, ſhe, or they ſo buying, receiving, accepting, or taking any ſuch goods, materials, or effects, knowing the ſame to be purloined or embezzled, being thereof lawfully convicted, in manner before preſcribed for the conviction of perſons purloining or imbezling the ſaid goods, materials, or effects, ſhall for the firſt offence forfeit 20 l. and in caſe the forfeiture ſhall not be forthwith paid, the juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, ſhall commit the party or parties ſo convicted to the houſe of correction, or other public priſon as aforeſaid, there to be kept to hard labour for the ſpace of fourteen days, unleſs the forfeiture ſhall be ſooner paid; and if within two days before the expiration of the ſaid fourteen days, the ſaid forfeiture ſhall not be paid, the ſaid juſtice or juſtices is and are hereby impowered and required to order the perſon or perſons ſo convicted to be publickly whipped at the market-place, or ſome other publick place of the city, town, or place where ſuch offender or offenders ſhall be reſpectively committed, once or oftener, as to ſuch juſtice or juſtices ſhall appear reaſonable: and in caſe of any further conviction, for or upon a ſecond or any other ſubſequent offence of the ſame kind, the perſon or perſons ſo again offending, being thereof convicted in manner before preſcribed, ſhall for every ſecond or other ſubſequent offence forfeit 40 l. and in caſe the ſaid forfeiture ſhall not be forthwith paid, the juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, ſhall commit the party or parties ſo convicted to the houſe of correction, or other public priſon as aforeſaid, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three months, nor leſs than one month, unleſs the ſaid forfeiture ſhall be ſooner paid; and if within ſeven days before the expiration of the time for which ſuch offender or offenders ſhall be committed, the ſaid forfeiture ſhall not be paid, the ſaid juſtice or juſtices is and are hereby impowered and required to order ſuch offender or offenders to be publickly whipped at the market-place, or ſome other publick place of the city, town, or place where ſuch offender or offenders ſhall be reſpectively committed, twice or oftener, as to ſuch juſtice or juſtices ſhall appear reaſonable; and the ſaid reſpective forfeitures when recovered, after ſatiſfaction faction ſhall have been made thereout to the party or parties injured, together with ſuch coſts of proſecution as ſhall be judged reaſonable by the juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch conviction ſhall have been had, ſhall be paid and applied to and for the uſe of the poor of the pariſh or place where the perſon or perſons ſo convicted ſhall reſide or inhabit.

Sect. 3. Provided, that if any perſon convicted as aforeſaid of purloining, imbeziling, ſecreting, ſelling, pawning, exchanging, or otherwiſe unlawfully diſpoſing of, or buying, receiving, or taking to pawn any of the goods, materials, or effects herein before mentioned, ſhall think himſelf or herſelf aggrieved by the judgment of the juſtice or juſtices before whom he or ſhe ſhall have been convicted, ſuch perſon ſhall have liberty to appeal to the juſtices at the next general or quarter ſeſſions of peace which ſhall be held for the county, riding, diviſion, city, liberty, town, or place where ſuch judgment ſhall have been given; and the execution of the ſaid judgment ſhall in ſuch caſe be ſuſpended; the perſon ſo convicted entering into a recognizance at the time of ſuch conviction, with two ſufficient ſureties, in double the ſum which ſuch perſon ſhall be adjudged to forfeit, upon condition to proſecute ſuch appeal with effect, and to be forthcoming to abide the judgment and determination of the juſtices in the ſaid general or quarter ſeſſions; which recognizance the ſaid juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, is and are hereby required and impowered to take; and the juſtices in the ſaid general or quarter ſeſſions are hereby authorized and required to hear and finally determine this matter of the ſaid appeal, and to award ſuch coſts as to them ſhall appear juſt and reaſonable to be paid by either party; and if upon the hearing of the ſaid appeal, the judgment of the juſtice or juſtices before whom the appellant ſhall have been convicted, ſhall be affirmed, ſuch appellant ſhall immediately pay the ſum which he or ſhe ſhall have been adjudged to forfeit, together with ſuch coſts as the juſtices in their general or quarter ſeſſions ſhall award to be paid by him or them, for defraying the expences ſuſtained by the defendant or defendants in ſuch appeal; or in default of making ſuch payments, ſhall ſuffer the reſpective pains and penalties by this act inflicted upon perſons reſpectively who ſhall neglect to pay, or ſhall not pay the reſpective forfeitures by this act impoſed upon ſuch perſons reſpectively, who ſhall be convicted of purloining, imbeziling, ſecreting, ſelling, pawning, exchanging, or otherwiſe unlawfully diſpoſing of any of the goods, materials, or effects herein before mentioned, or of perſons buying, receiving, or taking to pawn any of ſuch goods, materials, or effects.

Sect. 4. And the juſtice or juſtices of the peace before whom any perſon ſhall be convicted, in manner preſcribed by this act, of purloining, imbeziling, ſecreting, ſelling, pawning, exchanging, or otherwiſe unlawfully diſpoſing of, or of buying, receiving, or taking to pawn any of the goods, materials, or effects aforeſaid, ſhall cauſe ſuch reſpective conviction to be drawn up in the form and words following; that is to ſay:

Middleſex, } BE it remembered, that on the ——— day

Sect. 5. And it ſhall and may be lawful to and for any one juſtice of the peace of any county, riding, diviſion, city, liberty, town, or place, and he is hereby required, upon complaint to him made upon oath of any offence committed againſt this act within the ſame county, riding, diviſion, city, liberty, town, or place, to iſſue his warrant for apprehending and bringing before him, or before any other juſtice or juſtices of the peace of the ſame county, riding, diviſion, city, liberty, town, or place, the perſon or perſons charged with ſuch offence, and the juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall be brought, is and are hereby authorized and required to hear and determine the matter of every ſuch complaint, and to proceed to conviction and judgment thereupon.

Cloere, A priſon or dungeon; I believe of ſome Britiſh original, which might give name to the old Latin cloeria, which Du Freſne unaptly conjectures to have been a corruption of clauſeria, a cloſe place of reſtraint. The dungeon, or inner priſon in Wallingford-Caſtle, temp. H. 2. was called Cloere-Brien, i. e. carcer Brieni, fil. com. Domini de Wallingford.

Hence ſeems to come the Lat. cloaco, which was originally the cloſeſt ward, the naſtieſt part of a priſon. The old cloacarius is interpreted in a MS. gloſſary, carceris cuſtos. The preſent cloacarius, or keeper of a jakes, is an officer in ſome religious houſe, impoſed on an offending brother, or voluntarily choſen by him as an exerciſe of humility and mortification; and in ſome of our Engliſh convents beyond the ſeas, this ſweet officer is called *Count of Holt. Coaches, and Chairs. Stat. 9 Ann. cap. 23. ſect. 1. The crown may nominate under the great ſeal commiſſioners for regulating and licenſing hackney coaches, not exceeding five, who ſhall regulate and licenſe all hackney coaches within the bills of mortality for thirty-two years.

Made perpetual, 3 Geo. 1. cap. 7. ſect. 1.

Sect. 2. The commiſſioners may, under their hands and ſeals, or of the major part of them, licenſe not exceeding eight hundred hackney coaches, and upon every licence there ſhall be reſerved the weekly ſum of 5 s. to be monthly paid.

Sect. 3. The commiſſioners for thirty-two years may licenſe two hundred hackney chairs within the bills of mortality, reſerving to the crown the yearly ſum of 10 s. to be paid quarterly.

Made perpetual, 3 Geo. 1. cap. 7. ſect. 1. part of the general fund.

Sect. 4. No perſon ſhall drive or let to hire any hackney coaches or coach-horſes within the weekly bills, &c. without a licence from the commiſſioners, upon forfeiture of 40 s. and no horſe ſhall be uſed in any hackney coach under the ſize of fourteen hands; and every licenſed coach and chair ſhall have a mark or figure on each; and if one perſon ſhall be licenſed to keep ſeveral hackney coaches or chairs, he ſhall have diſtinct figures; and no perſon ſhall put the ſame figure on his coach or chair which is appointed for another, or ſhall deface the figure, upon forfeiture of 5 l. one moiety to the informer, and the other to the crown.

Sect. 5. Commiſſioners licenſing more than eight hundred coaches or two hundred chairs, ſhall forfeit 100 l. to be recovered in the courts at Weſtminſter by any who will ſue.

Sect. 6. No hackney coachman ſhall take for his hire in and about London and Weſtminſter, or within ten miles thereof, above ten ſhillings per day, reckoning twelve hours to the day; and not above 1 s. 6 d. for the firſt hour, and 12 d. for every hour after. And no perſon ſhall pay from any of the inns of courts, or thereabouts, to any part of St. James's or Weſtminſter (except beyond Tuttle-ſtreet) above 12 d. and from any of the inns of court, or thereabouts, to the Royal Exchange, 12 d. and if to the Tower, Biſhopſgate, or Aldgate, or thereabouts, 1 s. 6 d. and the like rates from and to any places of the like diſtance.

Sect. 7. No perſon ſhall be obliged to pay for a hackney coach above 12 d. for any diſtance not exceeding one mile and four furlongs; and if above that diſtance, and not exceeding two miles 1 s. 6 d. and the commiſſioners ſhall cauſe the diſtance to be meaſured between the moſt noted places within the weekly bills.

Sect. 8. Hackney chairmen ſhall have no more than the rate of a hackney coach driven two-third parts of the ſame diſtance; and any hackney coachman or chairman exacting more, or refuſing to go at that rate, forfeits 40 s.

Sect. 9. The commiſſioners ſhall appoint under officers, and they are not to take for their licences any gratuity or any fee, other than what is to be paid to the crown, upon pain to forfeit their offices, and to be incapable of any grant thereof, or of any other office; only the clerks may take 2 s. 6 d. for ingroſſing each licence.

Sect. 10. The commiſſioners and other officers ſhall take an oath for the due execution of their offices.

Sect. 11. The commiſſioners ſhall pay the money into the Exchequer, and upon oath deliver to the Treaſury books of accounts, containing all the licences granted, and the names and ſurnames of the perſons to whom granted, &c. once in every year.

Sect. 12. The weekly and other rents and ſums of money, and all forfeitures and penalties by this act, or by any by-laws made by the commiſſioners (the penalties to be incurred by the commiſſioners excepted) ſhall be levied by warrant of three of the commiſſioners, by diſtreſs of the goods of the offender, which ſhall be ſold within ten days after the diſtreſs, &c. and if no diſtreſs can be had, the offender ſhall be committed by like warrant till the penalty paid; and if the rent be behind fourteen days, the commiſſioners (without demanding the arrear) may revoke the licence.

Sect. 13. Offences againſt this act may be heard and determined by three commiſſioners in a ſummary way, upon the oath of one witneſs or upon confeſſion (the party being ſummoned) one moiety to the crown, the other to the informer.

Sect. 14. Perſons ſued for any thing done in purſuance of this act may plead the general iſſue; and if judgment be againſt the plaintiff, the defendant ſhall have double coſts.

Sect. 15. No certiorari ſhall ſuperſede execution or other proceeding upon any order of the commiſſioners.

Sect. 16. The commiſſioners may make by-laws to bind the perſons who have licences, and annex penalties for the better putting in execution this act, and for the good government of the perſons licenſed.

Sect. 17. The by-laws ſhall be approved by the Lord Chancellor and the two Chief Juſtices and Chief Baron, or any three of them, and then printed; and the breach of ſuch by-laws ſhall be puniſhable by any juſtice of peace, mayor, or head officer, where the offence ſhall be committed.

Sect. 18. That part of the penalties which belongs to the Queen ſhall be tranſmitted to the receiver general of the revenues of the hackney coaches, and certified to the commiſſioners within ten days after levied, upon forfeiture of double the ſum; two thirds to the crown, the other third to the informer.

Sect. 19. Upon complaint to the commiſſioners that a coachman or chairman hath offended, he ſhall be ſummoned, and if he refuſe to appear, or is found guilty of a miſbehaviour, they may revoke his licence for giving abuſive language, or otherwiſe.

Sect. 20. Coachmen or chairmen licenſed may ply on the Lord's day, notwithſtanding the act 29 Car. 2. c. 7.

Sect. 21. An account of the profits ariſing by licenſing coaches and chairs ſhall be made annually before the auditors of the impreſt.

Sect. 22. If any refuſe to pay a coachman or chairman his juſt hire, or ſhall cut or break any coach or chair willfully, any juſtice of peace may grant a warrant againſt the offender, and upon proof on oath award ſatisfaction; and upon refuſal to make ſatisfaction, may bind him over to the next ſeſſions, which ſhall finally determine, and for non-payment levy by diſtreſs.

Sect. 49. If any perſon driving a coach, or carrying a chair for hire, under the licence of another perſon as his ſervant, ſhall be guilty of any miſbehaviour, by demanding more than his fare, or giving abuſive language or other rude behaviour, and being convicted by oath of one witneſs before the commiſſioners, or one Juſtice for London, Weſtminſter, Middleſex, or Surrey, he ſhall forfeit not exceeding 20 s. to the poor of the pariſh; or if not able to pay, ſhall be ſent to Bridewell, or ſome houſe of correction, to be kept to hard labour for ſeven days, and have the publick correction of the houſe.

The commiſſioners powers are continued by 33 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſo long as any part of the acts for licenſing hackney coaches.

Stat. 10 Ann. cap. 19. ſect. 158. The commiſſioners for hackney coaches may licenſe (over and above the number of chairs by the former act) any additional number not exceeding one hundred hackney chairs, during thirty-one years, ſo that the number ſhall not exceed three hundred at one time.

Made perpetual, 3 Geo. 1. cap. 7. ſect. 1. part of the general fund.

Stat. 12 Ann. ſtat. 1. cap. 14. ſect. 1. The commiſſioners for licenſing coaches and chairs ſhall in the firſt place licenſe the widows of hackney chairmen who died poſſeſſed of any licences, unleſs ſuch widows ſhall neglect to take licences, &c. within a reaſonable time to be limited by the commiſſioners, but not leſs than twenty days.

Sect. 2. Such widows, and their chairs and ſervants, ſhall be liable to ſuch rules, penalties, and orders, as any other chairmen are by the act 9 Ann. cap. 23. and 10 Ann. c. 19.

Stat. 1 Geo. 1. cap. 57. ſect. 1. The commiſſioners authorized to put the act 9 Ann. cap. 23. in execution, may make ſuch by-laws to bind perſons licenſed to keep hackney coaches, the renters of ſuch licences and drivers of ſuch coaches, and annex ſuch penalties as they ſhall think fit, ſo as ſuch by-laws be agreeable to the intent of this and former acts; and for the good government of the perſons licenſed, the renters and drivers, the ſaid by-laws to be approved and put in execution, as by the act 9 Ann. cap. 23.

Sect. 2. If any hackney coachman or driver ſhall refuſe to go at, or ſhall exact more for his hire than ſhall be appointed, he ſhall forfeit a ſum at the diſcretion of the commiſſioners, not exceeding 3 l. nor under 10 s. the ſaid offences to be determined, and the penalties levied as by the ſaid act is directed concerning the 40 s. penalty.

Sect. 3. No perſon ſhall ply or drive for hire with any coach or coach-horſes, to attend at any funeral in London, Weſtminſter, or the bills of mortality, except perſons licenſed by the commiſſioners, on pain to forfeit 5 l. as by the ſaid act 9 Ann. cap. 23.

Sect. 4. If any perſon ſhall drive a mourning coach or hearſe to any funeral, except the ſame have a number fixed on the fore-ſtandard, or in ſome other place to be appointed by the commiſſioners, or except the ſame be the coach of ſome gentleman attending the maſter or any of the family, the commiſſioners upon information may ſummon the driver, againſt whom, not appearing, they are impowered to proceed; and though no expreſs hiring ſhall be proved, yet unleſs the party appear and prove a previous order from the owner of ſuch coach, &c. to attend at ſuch funeral, it ſhall be adjudged a driving for hire, and the party ſhall forfeit 5 l. to be recovered of the driver or the undertaker of ſuch funeral, to be levied and applied as aforeſaid.

Sect. 5. If any perſon be ſued for any thing done in purſuance of this act, he may plead the general iſſue; and if the plaintiff be nonſuit, &c. the defendant ſhall have double coſts.

Sect. 6. No certiorari ſhall ſuperſede execution, or other proceeding upon any order of the commiſſioners in purſuance of this act.

Sect. 7. The alderman of every ward of the city, and every juſtice of peace in the ſaid cities and counties, may inflict and levy the like penalties for any offences contrary to this act, as the commiſſioners may, provided that no perſon be puniſhed twice for the ſame offence.

Stat. 12 Geo. 1. cap. 12. ſect. 15. The commiſſioners for hackney coaches are (over and above the number of chairs authorized by the acts 9 Ann. cap. 13. and 10 Ann. cap. 19.) to licenſe an additional number of hackney chairs not exceeding one hundred, which after the 24th of June 1726, during eighteen years, ſhall be uſed for hire within London and Weſtminſter, and the bills of mortality; ſo that the number of all the chairs to be licenſed ſhall not exceed four hundred.

Sect. 16. On every of the licences to be granted in purſuance of this act for keeping any hackney chair, there ſhall be reſerved to his majeſty the annual ſum of 10 s. to be paid quarterly at the four uſual feaſts: and the chairs ſhall have the ſame rates, and be ſubject to the ſame rules, as are by the former acts preſcribed.

Sect. 17. All monies to ariſe by rents of the additional number of chairs ſhall be added to the funds ſettled by the act of 9 Ann. cap. 13.

Continued by 16 Geo. 2. c. 26. ſect. 3. to June 24, 1760, &c. and by 33 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſo long as any act for licenſing hackney coaches.

Stat. 20 Geo. 2. cap. 10. ſect. 1. There ſhall be paid unto his majeſty the ſmall duties herein after expreſſed, viz.

For every coach, berlin, landau, chariot, calaſh, with four wheels, chaiſe marine, chaiſe with four wheels, and caravan, or by what name ſoever ſuch carriage may be called, that ſhall be kept by or for any perſon for his own uſe, or to be let out to hire (except ſuch coaches and other carriages as may be licenſed by the commiſſioners for the duties on hackney-coaches) the yearly ſum of 4 l.

And for every calaſh and chair with two wheels, or by what name ſoever ſuch carriage may be called, to be drawn by one or more horſes, that ſhall be kept by or for any perſon for his own uſe, or to be let out to hire, the yearly ſum of 40 s.

Which ſeveral duties ſhall be paid by the perſons who keep the ſame.

Sect. 2. No perſon ſhall be obliged to pay the yearly ſum of 4 l. for more than five ſuch carriages on which the duty of 4 l. a year is charged, to be kept for his own uſe only; but all perſons who keep the ſame for ſupplying any waiting jobb by the day, week, month, quarter, or any other time, or to be lett out to hire, ſhall pay the ſaid yearly ſum of 4 l. for every ſuch coach, &c. kept to be lett to hire, though exceeding the number of five; and every perſon who ſhall keep any chaiſe, &c. with two wheels, to be drawn by one or more horſes to be lett out to hire, ſhall pay the ſaid yearly ſum of 40 s. for every ſuch chaiſe, &c. kept to be lett out for hire, though exceeding the number of five.

Sect. 3. Such of the ſaid duties as are chargeable upon coaches, &c. kept in England, Wales, or Berwick, ſhall be under the management of the commiſſioners and officers of exciſe in England; and ſuch as are impoſed upon coaches, &c. in Scotland, ſhall be under the management of the commiſſioners and officers of exciſe in Scotland, who are to appoint officers for charging and collecting the ſame. And all monies ariſing by the ſaid duties (the charges of raiſing and accounting excepted) ſhall be paid into the receipt of the Exchequer at Weſtminſter, apart from all other revenues.

Sect. 4. Every perſon who ſhall keep any coach, &c. for his own uſe, or the uſe of any perſon for whom he is committee, truſtee, or guardian, or to lett out to hire in London, Weſtminſter, or within the weekly bills of mortality, ſhall within thirty days after the 25th of March 1747, or within twenty days after he begins to keep ſuch coach, &c. give notice in writing at the chief office of exciſe in London; and every perſon who ſhall keep any ſuch coach, &c. in any other part of Great Britain, ſhall within ſixty days after the 25th of March 1747, or within twenty days after he begins to keep ſuch carriage (not being in the place of a former) give notice in writing at the office of exciſe next to the place where ſuch perſon for whoſe uſe the ſame is kept inhabits, of his keeping the ſame, and of the number of the coaches, &c. with four wheels, or chaiſes, &c. with two wheels, and of the pariſh or place where he reſides, and ſhall at the ſame time pay the annual duties.

Sect. 5. Every perſon obliged to give ſuch notice, ſhall, within twenty days after the expiration of twelve kalendar months after the times of ſuch firſt notices, give a freſh notice in manner aforeſaid, and pay the annual duties; and in the ſame manner renew ſuch notice, and make ſuch payment from year to year, as long as he keeps any ſuch carriages; and if any perſon keep any coach, &c. without giving ſuch firſt notice, and making ſuch payments, or without renewing ſuch notice and payments yearly, he ſhall forfeit 20 l. for each offence.

Sect.

Sect. 6. Upon the payment of the duties by the owners, the names of the perſons paying the ſame, and the number of the coaches, &c. kept, and the name of the pariſh or place where he and any perſon for whom he is committee, truſtee, or guardian reſides, ſhall be entered in a regiſter to be kept at the reſpective offices of exciſe for that purpoſe by the perſon receiving the ſame; and a receipt (of which an indented duplicate ſhall be kept by the perſon receiving the money) ſhall be given to every perſon ſo paying ſuch rates; which receipt ſhall contain the number of the regiſter, the number of the coaches, &c. paid for, the ſum paid, and the time for which it is paid, and be a diſcharge to the owner.

Sect. 7. Nothing in this act ſhall charge with the ſaid duty any publick ſtage coach, conſtantly employed in carrying paſſengers for hire to and from different places in this kingdom, on certain fixed days in every week, and not let out to hire by way of by-jobb for a day, or any longer time.

Sect. 8. This act ſhall not charge with the ſaid duty any poſt-chaiſe kept for hire by the poſt-maſter general, or by any deputy poſt-maſter in Great Britain authorized by him.

Sect. 9. All poſt-chaiſes ſo kept by ſuch poſt-maſter general, or any deputy poſt-maſters for hire, ſhall within thirty days after the letting out of ſuch chaiſes be entered by the owners at the office of exciſe next to the place where ſuch perſons inhabit; and ſhall (beſides his majeſty's arms to be painted upon every ſuch poſt-chaiſe) have ſuch figure or mark of diſtinction as ſhall be appointed by the ſaid commiſſioners; and in caſe any ſuch poſt-maſter ſhall lett out to hire any ſuch poſt-chaiſe before the ſame is entered, and have ſuch arms painted, or ſuch mark fixed thereupon, he ſhall for ſuch offence forfeit 20 l.

Sect. 10. It ſhall be lawful for the ſaid commiſſioners to cauſe ſuch figure or mark of diſtinction as they think proper, to be fixed upon every ſuch carriage ſo lett out to hire as aforeſaid; and in caſe any perſon lett out to hire any ſuch carriage, not having ſuch figure or mark fixed thereupon, or take off the ſame when fixed, he ſhall for every offence forfeit 20 l.

Sect. 11. Nothing in this act ſhall charge with any of the ſaid duties any coach licenſed by the commiſſioners for regulating and licenſing hackney coaches within London and Weſtminſter, and the ſuburbs thereof, and having the proper number thereon, and which ſhall not be employed in carrying any perſon more than ten miles from the ſaid cities.

Sect. 12. Nothing in this act ſhall charge with any of the ſaid duties any coach or carriage kept for ſale, and remaining unſold in the poſſeſſion of the owner, or of any coach-maker the purchaſer thereof: and no ſuch carriage ſhall whilſt in ſuch poſſeſſion be employed for his own uſe, or the uſe of any perſon, other than ſuch perſon whoſe like carriage ſhall be then repairing by ſuch coach-maker, or be let out to hire; on pain of forfeiting 20 l. for every time ſuch carriage ſhall be ſo employed, or lett out to hire.

Sect. 13. All the ſaid duties, forfeitures, and offences ſhall be heard and determined as hereafter is directed; viz. all proſecutions for the recovery of the duties and forfeitures within the limits of the chief office of exciſe in London ſhall be determined by the commiſſioners of exciſe, or by the commiſſioners for appeals in caſe of appeal; and all proſecutions for the duties and forfeitures in any other place in Great Britain ſhall be determined by any two juſtices of peace reſiding near the place where ſuch forfeitures ſhall be made; and if the party finds himſelf aggrieved, he may appeal to the next quarter-ſeſſions, whoſe judgment therein ſhall be final: which ſaid commiſſioners for appeals, and the commiſſioners of exciſe and juſtices of peace, are, upon information upon oath of any forfeiture or offence, to ſummon the party accuſed, and upon his appearance or contempt, and upon proof either by confeſſion, or by oath of one witneſs, to give judgment, and to iſſue warrants for levying ſuch forfeitures upon the goods of the offender, and to cauſe ſale to be made of the ſaid goods, if not redeemed within fourteen days, rendering to the party the overplus; and for want of ſufficient diſtreſs to impriſon the party offending till ſatisfaction be made.

Sect. 14. All forfeitures and penalties mentioned in this act (the charges for recovery being firſt deducted) ſhall be employed, one moiety to his Majeſty, and the other moiety to the informer.

Sect. 15. In every caſe where the duty ſhall be paid and entry made before any information laid of its not having been made within the time mentioned, no perſon having made ſuch payment and entry ſhall be afrerwards proſecuted for not having made it within the time limited.

Sect. 16. If any perſon, having made due entry and payment of the duty for any coach or carriage, die before the end of the year for which ſuch entry and payment is made, the perſon claiming title to ſuch coach or carriage may make uſe of it during the reſidue of the year.

Sect. 53. If any perſon be proſecuted for any thing done in purſuance of this act, he may plead the general iſſue; and if a verdict paſs for the defendant, &c. the defendant ſhall have treble coſts.

Coachmakers. The wares of coachmakers ſhall be ſearched by perſons appointed by the Sadlers Company. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 22.

Coadjutor, A fellow-helper or aſſiſtant; particularly applied to one appointed to aſſiſt a biſhop, being grown old and infirm, ſo as not to be able to perform his duty.

Coals and Coal trade. Stat. 9 Hen. 5. ſtat. 1. cap. 10. The keels at Newcaſtle, which ought to be of twenty chalders burthen, being made of twenty-two or twenty-three chalders, and the cuſtom of 2 d. a chalder to the king upon ſea coals ſold to people not free there, being taken according to the burthen of twenty chalder; all keels in the ſaid port ſhall be meaſured by commiſſioners aſſigned by the king, and marked of what burthen they are; upon pain of forfeiture of all keels in which coals ſhall be carried before they be marked.

Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 2. ſect. 1. All ſea coals brought into the Thames and ſold, ſhall be ſold by the chalder, containing thirty-ſix buſhels heaped according to the buſhel ſealed for that purpoſe at Guildhall; and all other coals commonly ſold by weight ſhall be ſold after the proportion of a hundred and twelve pounds to the hundred avoirdupoize; upon pain of forfeiture of all coals otherwiſe ſold or expoſed to ſale by any wood-monger or retailer, and double the value thereof; to be recovered by any perſon in any court of record, or by complaint unto the lord mayor and juſtices of peace of London, or any two of them, or to the juſtices of peace of the places where ſuch coals ſhall be expoſed to ſale; who are upon due proof to convict the offenders, and to give warrant for levying the forfeitures; the one half for the uſe of the perſon proſecuting, and the other half for the poor, or repairing the highways within the ſame or adjoining pariſh; and the lord mayor and court of aldermen, and the juſtices of peace of the ſeveral counties, or three of them, one of the quorum, are to ſet the prices of coals ſold by retail from time to time. See 17 Geo. 2. cap. 35. in this title.

Sect. 2. If any retailer of coals refuſe to ſell as aforeſaid, the lord mayor and aldermen, and juſtices of peace reſpectively, are to appoint perſons to enter into any place where ſuch coals are ſtored; and in caſe of refuſal, take a conſtable to force entrance; and the ſaid coals to ſell at ſuch rates, rendering to ſuch retailer the money, charges deducted.

Sect. 4. No perſon ſued by virtue of this act ſhall be ſued upon any other law for the ſame offence; and if any action ſhall be commenced for any thing done by colour of this act, the defendant may plead the general iſſue; and if the verdict be found for him, &c. ſhall have his damages and double coſts.

Sect. 5. No perſon having intereſt in any wharf uſed for the receiving or uttering of coals, or that ſhall trade in the ſale of coals, ſhall act in the ſetting the price of coals.

Made perpetual, 7 & 8 Will. 3. cap. 36. ſect. 2.

Stat.

Stat. 30 Car. 2. cap. 8. ſect. 2. Commiſſioners ſhall from time to time be appointed by his Majeſty for meaſuring and marking keels, boats, carts and wains, uſed for carriage of coals in the port of Newcaſtle, and places to the ſaid port belonging, by the bowl-tub of Newcaſtle, containing twenty-two gallons and a pottle Wincheſter meaſure, and being twenty-ſeven inches diameter upon the top from out to out, and allowing twenty-one bowls heap-meaſure to each chalder.

Sect. 3. The content of each wain ſhall be ſeven bowls, and of each cart three bowls and one buſhel heaped meaſure; and three wains or ſix carts ſhall be a chalder; and the coals made uſe of in ſuch admeaſurement ſhall be one moiety dry, and the other moiety wet, as accuſtomed.

Sect. 5. The mayor of Newcaſtle is to adminiſter an oath to every perſon employed by commiſſioners for the admeaſuring or marking of boats and keels in the river Tine, for the faithful diſcharge of their truſts; and the commiſſioners ſhall adminiſter the like oath to every perſon appointed for the meaſuring or marking of boats, keels, wains or carts.

Stat. 6 & 7 Will. 3. cap. 10. ſect. 2. Commiſſioners ſhall be appointed by the King for meaſuring all keels, pan-keels, pan-boats, and other boats, wains and carts, uſed for carriage of coals in the ports of Newcaſtle, Sunderland, Cullercoats, Seaton-Sluice, Blyth-Nook, and all other places in the counties of Northumberland and Durham; which admeaſurement ſhall be by a dead weight of lead or iron, or otherwiſe as ſhall ſeem meet to three of the commiſſioners, allowing three and fifty hundred weight to every chalder of coals.

Sect. 3. The weight of coals carried by ſuch wains ſhall be ſeventeen hundred weight and a half, by every ſuch cart eight hundred and three quarters. And three ſuch wains or ſix carts ſhall be reckoned as one chalder, and no other wains are intended to be admeaſured or marked but ſuch as are employed in carrying coals to the ſtaiths.

Sect. 4. Three days notice ſhall be given of the time of the admeaſurement.

Sect. 5. No keel or boat ſhall be marked but between the 25th of March and the 29th of September, nor marked to carry more than ten chalders; and keels in the port of Newcaſtle ſhall be marked at the new quay, and in the Weare at Lambton ſtaiths.

Sect. 6. All keels, boats, wains or carts, that ſhall carry coals before they be admeaſured, marked, and nailed, ſhall be forfeited, together with the coals laden upon them, unleſs by default of commiſſioners; one moiety of the forfeiture to the King, and the other to him that will ſue for the ſame.

Sect. 7. If after marking, &c. the mark ſhall be removed or altered, to fruſtrate the intent of this act, the party ſo offending ſhall, upon proof of one witneſs before one juſtice of peace, forfeit 10*l.* to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of goods by warrant from the ſaid juſtice; and for want of diſtreſs the party to be committed for three months; one moiety of the ſaid forfeiture to the King, the other to the party that ſhall make the diſcovery. And the ſaid keels, boats, &c. to be admeaſured and marked, &c. anew.

Stat. 6 & 7 Will. 3. cap. 18. ſect. 19. There ſhall be allowed yearly from the 15th of April till the firſt of January, free from impreſſing, to every maſter of a ſhip imployed in the coal trade two able ſeamen (ſuch as the maſter ſhall nominate) for every ſhip under 100 tun, and one for every 50 ton, for every ſhip of 100 ton and upwards, according to the meaſurement which the ſhip ſhall appear to be of by certificate from the cuſtomhouſe. And if any officer ſhall impreſs any of the men allowed by this act, he ſhall forfeit to the maſter or owner of ſuch ſhip 10*l.* for every man, to be recovered with coſts by action of debt, &c. and ſhall be incapable of holding office in his Majeſty's ſhips of war.

Quære if in force. See ſect. 20. as alſo ſtat. 11 & 12 Will. 3. cap. 13. ſect. 8. and 6 Ann. cap. 22. ſect. 8.

Stat. 9 & 10 Will. 3. cap. 13. ſect. 1. For five years, from the 15th of May 1698, there ſhall be paid to his Majeſty for coal and culm (except charcoal made of wood, and cinders made of pit-coal) the duties mentioned in the act.

Sect. 7. The duties upon coals and culm ſo imported or water-born, ſhall be under the management of the commiſſioners, and ſhall be paid into the Exchequer diſtinct from all other monies.

Sect. 8. The ſaid duties ſhall be paid to ſuch as his Majeſty, or the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, or four of them, ſhall appoint, before bulk be broken, or any coals or culm unladen, meaſured, or weighed; and entries ſhall be made of all ſuch coals and culm at the cuſtom-houſe where they are imported (if any there be) or elſe in the cuſtom-houſe of the next port; and if ſuch coals or culm be unſhipped before the duties be paid or ſecured, the ſaid coals and culm, and the ſhip with tackle, ſhall be forfeited; one moiety to the King, the other to ſuch perſons as ſhall ſeize or ſue for the ſame.

Sect. 9. His Majeſty, or four of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, may appoint in every port weighers or meaſurers of the ſaid coals and culm, who, upon the unlading of any ſuch ſhip, ſhall deliver a certificate to the collector of the ſorts and quantity of coals and culm delivered from any ſuch ſhip, under the penalty of 100*l.* And in caſe there was on board a greater number of chalders or tons of coals and culm, than for which the duty had been anſwered, there ſhall be paid for every chalder or ton ſo concealed, over and above the duty, 10*s.* under the penalty of attaching and detaining ſuch ſhip or veſſel till payment thereof, and of ſelling the ſaid ſhip in caſe all the ſaid duties for ſuch concealed coals or culm be not paid with coſts.

Sect. 10. If the importer ſhall within ſix days after the delivery of ſuch ſhip, and before her departure, give in his poſt-entry and pay the whole duty for the ſurpluſage, the penalty ſhall be diſcharged.

Sect. 11. The officers for receiving the ſaid duties, and for weighing and meaſuring ſuch coals and culm, ſhall in every ſuch port enter an account of the duties paid and of the diſburſements, and the number of the chalders and tons ſo imported.

Sect. 12. There ſhall be allowed to every maſter of any ſhip three months for payment of the duty, giving ſuch ſecurity as the collector or chief officer of the place ſhall approve of, with an allowance of 10 per cent. per annum for prompt payment. And if any of the coals and culm, for which the duty ſhall be once paid or ſecured, be again exported to any other place of this kingdom, there ſhall be no further duty paid; and if any of the coals, for which the duty ſhall be once paid or ſecured, be afterwards carried beyond ſea, an allowance out of the overſea duties or repayment ſhall be made of ſo much as was before paid for the ſame.

Sect. 13. If any perſon be proſecuted for any thing done in execution of this act, he may plead the general iſſue; and if a verdict paſs for the defendant, &c. the defendant ſhall have treble coſts.

Stat. 8 Ann. cap. 4. ſect. 1. For thirty-two years from the 29th of September 1710, there ſhall be paid to her Majeſty upon all coals, culm, and cinders herein after expreſſed (except charcoals made of wood) the new impoſitions ſitions herein mentioned (over and above other duties) viz. for all coals imported from beyond ſea, uſually ſold by weight, 4 s. per ton; for all coals ſo imported uſually ſold by meaſure, 4 s. 6 d. per chalder, to be paid by the importer; and for all coals carried by ſea from port to port within Great-Britain uſually ſold by meaſure, 3 s. per chalder; and for all coals ſo carried uſually ſold by weight, 2 s. per ton, to be paid at the place of landing, and charged upon the owners and maſter of the ſhip. And for all culm ſo carried, 7 d. and two-tenths of a penny, to be paid at the place of landing, &c. and for all cinders made of pit-coal ſhipped within Great-Britain or brought into the ſame, 3 s. per chalder, to be paid at the place of landing, &c.

Made perpetual by 5 Geo. 1. cap. 9 and part of the South-Sea fund.

Sect. 2. Such of the ſaid duties as ſhall ariſe within England, Wales, &c. ſhall be under the management of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms in England: and the receiver general of the cuſtoms ſhall pay the ſame into the Exchequer weekly on Wedneſday, &c. And ſuch of the ſaid duties as ſhall ariſe in Scotland, ſhall be under the management of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms in Scotland, and the receiver general ſhall pay the ſame into the Exchequer in England.

Sect. 3. The ſaid duties ſhall be collected in manner, &c. appointed by any law in force concerning the duties upon the like coals, &c. which have continuance until the 30th of September 1710 by ſtat. 1 Ann. cap. 6. And all directions, &c. contained in that act (which only contains the powers contained in 9 & 10 Will. 3. cap. 13. and 10 Will. 3. cap. 21.) for collecting the ſaid duties, ſhall be in force.

Sect. 39. Coals, culm and cinders carried from Stirling to Dunbar, or other part betwixt, ſhall not by ſuch carriage be liable to theſe duties.

Stat. 9 Ann. cap. 6. ſect. 5. The duties herein mentioned, and no other, ſhall be paid to her Majeſty upon coals, which during thirty-two years, from the 8th of March 1710, ſhall be exported beyond the ſeas, viz. for coals of Wales or the weſt of England ſhipped for Ireland or the Iſle of Man, 1 s. per chalder; for every chalder of coals ſhipped for the plantations 2 s. for every chalder of coals Newcaſtle meaſure ſhipped for other parts beyond ſea in foreign bottoms, 12 s. and in Engliſh bottoms 3 s. and for ſuch coals, which ſhall be ſo ſhipped for Ireland, and the Iſle of Man, the plantations, or other parts beyond ſea (if ſuch as are uſually ſold by weight) the rates following, viz. for ſuch coals exported for Ireland or the Iſle of Man, 8 d. per ton. and for ſuch coals ſhipped for the plantations, 16 d. per ton; and for ſuch coals ſhipped for other parts beyond the ſeas, one third of the rates charged thereupon in caſe they were ſhipped by Newcaſtle meaſure: the ſaid duties to be collected, &c. as the cuſtoms upon exportation of merchandize in England or Scotland reſpectively.

Made perpetual, 3 Geo. 1. cap. 7. general fund.

Sect. 6. Security ſhall be given to the officers of the cuſtoms in the ports where coals ſhall be ſhipped for Ireland, the Iſle of Man, or the plantations, for landing ſuch coals at ſuch places reſpectively; the danger of the ſeas and of enemies excepted. And in caſe the ſhip depart without giving the ſame, ſuch ſhip and the coals, or the value thereof, ſhall be forfeited; one moiety to the Queen, and the other moiety to ſuch perſon as will ſeize or ſue for the ſame.

Sect. 7. During the ſaid thirty-two years, no duties ſhall be charged to the uſe of her Majeſty upon exportation of coals for the plantations by the act 15 Car. 2. cap. 7. Or for coals exported in foreign bottoms by ſtat. 6 Ann. cap. 22. Or for any coals upon exportation, other than the duties by this act impoſed, during the continuance thereof.

Sect. 8. During 32 years from the 8th of March 1710, there ſhall be paid to her Majeſty upon all coals, culm, and cinders (except charcoal made of wood) which ſhall be ſhipped and carried from place to place in Great-Britain, and for coals imported, the ſums hereafter mentioned (over and above all duties already payable) viz. for coals imported, uſually ſold by weight, 2 s. per ton; for coals imported, uſually ſold by meaſure, 3 s. per chalder, to be paid by the importer: for coals carried by ſea from place to place in Great-Britain, uſually ſold by meaſure, 2 s. per chalder; and for coals ſo carried, uſually ſold by weight, 1 s. 4 d. per ton; to be paid at the place of landing, and charged upon the owners and maſters of ſhips: and for all culm ſhipped in Great-Britain, or brought into the ſame, four-pence and eight-tenths of a penny per chalder; and for all cinders made of pit-coal ſhipped in Great-Britain, or brought into the ſame, 2 s. per chalder; to be paid at the places of landing, and charged upon the owners and maſters of ſhips.

Made perpetual, 3 Geo. 1. cap. 7. General fund.

Sect. 9. The ſaid duties ſhall be collected, &c. as by ſtat. 4 Ann. cap. 6. (which re-enacts the powers contained in ſtat. 9 & 10 Will. 3. cap. 13.) or any other law for collecting the like duties upon coals, &c. which had continuance till the 30th of September 1710.

Sect. 10. Coal, culm, and cinders carried from Stirling to Dunbar or Bedhead, or any part betwixt, ſhall not by reaſon of ſuch carriage be liable to the duties.

Sect. 4. All coals uſed for melting copper and tin ores in Cornwall and Devon, for which duties have been anſwered, ſhall upon oath made before the cuſtomer or collector, have a drawback of all the duties, to be paid by the collector.

Stat. 9 Ann. cap. 23. ſect. 90. Coals exported from the Weſt of Scotland to Ireland, or the Iſle of Man, ſhall be charged with the ſame duties as coals exported from the Weſt of England to Ireland, or the Iſle of Man, by ſtat. 9 Ann. cap. 6. ſect. 5.

Stat. 9 Ann. cap. 28. ſect. 1. All contracts or agreements between any coal-owners, lightermen, fitters, maſters or owners of ſhips, crimps, coal-factors, or other perſons concerned in the coal-trade, or ingroſſing coals, or reſtraining any perſons from freely ſelling, buying, loading or unloading, navigating or diſpoſing of coals, are declared illegal and void: and if any perſon ſhall keep up, continue, act in, make, enter into, ſign, ſeal, or be knowingly concerned in any ſuch contract or agreement, or ſhall keep up any office or place for the management of ſuch contract or agreement, as party to, or knowingly intereſted in the ſame, or ſhall act or officiate therein as clerk, agent, or ſervant to the perſons contracting, &c. the perſons offending ſhall forfeit as follows, viz. every coal owner 100 l. every fitter 50 l. and every maſter or owner of a ſhip, clerk, agent, &c. 20 l.

Sect. 2. Every fitter or other perſon vending coals ſhall give a certificate to every ſhip-maſter every voyage, ſigned by him, containing the day and year of ſuch loading, the maſter's and ſhip's name, and quantity, and names of the collieries out of which the coals are gotten, and the price paid by the maſter for every ſort of coals; which certificate, upon arrival in the port of London, or other delivering port, ſhall be regiſtered, and if in London then at the cocket-office; if at any other port, then at the cuſtom-houſe with the keeper of the cockets, for which ſhall be paid 6 d. to which regiſter any may have recourſe without fee; and the perſon refuſing to make ſuch certificate, or making a falſe one, or any maſter of a ſhip knowingly giving a falſe certificate to be regiſtered, or who ſhall not within forty-eight hours after entry of his ſhip at the cuſtom-houſe in London, or other delivering port, give in his certificate to be regiſtered; or if the perſon who ought to regiſter it, neglect it twenty-four hours after the delivery of the certificate, or ſhall make a falſe entry of ſuch certificate, or ſhall refuſe to ſhew the certificate and regiſter to any perſon coming at the uſual office-hours, he ſhall pay 10 l.

Sect. 3. If any lighterman, maſter of a ſhip, crimp, coal-factor, or other peaſon dealing in coals, or otherwiſe concerned in the coal-trade, ſhall receive any ſalary or reward from any coal-owner, fitter, maſter of a ſhip, &c. or for the diſpatch, delivery, or diſpoſal of coals before any other, or ſhall knowingly ſell coals for a ſort they are not, he ſhall forfeit 50 l.

Sect. 4. If any perſon guilty of thoſe offences ſhall, within three months after the offence committed, make diſcovery diſcovery of any coal-owner, or of any fitter, their officer or ſervant, or of any maſter of a ſhip, or any lighterman, crimp, coal-factor, or other perſon concerned in the coal-trade, ſo as they be convicted of any of the ſaid offences, ſuch diſcoverer ſhall be diſcharged of the penalties, and ſhall have the ſame benefit as any other perſon by virtue of this act.

Sect. 5. If more than fifty ſhips loaden with coal ſhall continue either in the port of Newcaſtle, or in any other port between that and London, above ſeven days, unleſs they ſhall be unloaded or prevented by wind or weather, or for want of convoy, repairs, or ſome other unavoidable cauſe; every maſter of every ſhip ſhall forfeit 50 l.

Sect. 6. Any ſhip-maſter, whoſe ſhip is loaden with coals only, and has given bond to deliver them in ſome port of Great Britain, may, upon producing his coaſt cocket and making oath before an officer of the cuſtoms of the quantity of coals (ſuch quantity not being leſs than expreſſed in the cocket) pay the over-ſea duty, and ſhall have a certificate from the cuſtomer for ſuch duty paid; which being given into the cuſtom-houſe of the port where ſuch coals were laid aboard, ſhall diſcharge the coaſt-bond.

Sect. 7. If any crimp, ſhufband, agent or factor for any ſhip-maſter, importing coals in London, ſhall ſell to his own agents, partners, or ſervants, or to any other in truſt for him, the coals, &c. intruſted with him to ſell, he ſhall forfeit 50 l.

Sect. 8. Every fitter or other perſon loading coals on any ſhip in Newcaſtle, Sunderland, Seaton Sluice, or Blyth Nook, in any keel, cart, or wain not gauged and marked, ſhall forfeit 10 l.

Sect. 9. No coal-owner of any coal-mine in Northumberland, Durham, or town and county of Newcaſtle upon Tine, or his overmen, ſtaithmen, fitter or agent, ſhall knowingly ſet on work any overman, pitman, ſinker, carriage-man, waggon-driver, keelman, labourer, wright or other perſon, who ſhall be agreed with, hired or actually employed by any other coal-owner in the ſaid coal-trade in any coal-mines in the ſaid counties, during the time he ſhall be employed under ſuch retainer, and his wages paid, or knowingly keep ſuch perſon; upon forfeiture of 5 l. for every ſix days.

Sect. 10. Any perſon thus retained, and whoſe wages ſhall not be paid fourteen days after it is due, may be hired by any other perſon.

Sect. 11. The penalties in this act ſhall be one moiety to the crown, the other moiety to the proſecutor, within three months after the offence committed, to be recovered in the courts at Weſtminſter with coſts.

Sect. 12. This act ſhall continue three years.

Made perpetual, 1 Geo. 1. cap. 26.

Stat. 12 Ann. ſtat. 2. cap. 9. ſect. 9, 10, 12. There ſhall be paid to her majeſty upon all coals, which during thirty-two years from the ſecond of Auguſt 1714 ſhall be ſhipped to be exported beyond ſea (except to Ireland, the Iſle of Man, and the plantations) the duties following, viz. for ſuch coals exported in foreign bottoms, 5 s. per chalder Newcaſtle meaſure; and in Britiſh bottoms, 3 s. per chalder Newcaſtle meaſure, over and above the preſent duties: under the management of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms in England and Scotland reſpectively; to be collected as the preſent duties upon coals exported, or other cuſtomable goods.

Made perpetual, 6 Geo. 1. cap 4. in order to be ſubſcribed into the South-Sea fund.

Stat. 12 Ann. ſtat. 2. cap. 17. ſect. 11. The coal-buſhel ſhall be round with a plain bottom, and be nineteen inches and a half from out to out, and ſhall contain one Wincheſter buſhel, and one quart of water, according to the ſtandard deſcribed by ſtat. 13 Will. 3. cap. 5. ſect. 28. [See Weights, &c.] And all ſea coals and culm, chargeable with duties by Wincheſter meaſure, ſhall be chargeable, ſold, and meaſured by the chalder, containing thirty-ſix ſuch buſhels heaped, under the like penalties.

Sect. 12. The commiſſioners of the Treaſury ſhall cauſe a buſhel to be made of braſs, of the dimenſions aforeſaid, to be ſealed and kept in the Exchequer.

Stat. 5 Geo. 1. cap. 9. ſect. 1. For all coals and culm, which after the twenty-ſeventh of September 1725, and before the annunciation 1751, ſhall be brought into the port of London, or the river of Thames, within the liberty of the city upon the river, there ſhall be paid to his majeſty, (over and above all other duties) for all coals and culm uſually ſold by the chalder, for every chalder containing thirty-ſix buſhels Wincheſter meaſure, 3 s. and for coals ſold by the ton, for every ton, 3 s.

Made perpetual, 6 Geo. 1. cap. 4. South-Sea fund, and charged with Bank annnities, by Geo. 2. cap. 8.

Sect. 2. Theſe duties ſhall be under the management of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, according to the directions from the Treaſury; and ſhall be collected, &c. as by any law in force for any other duty payable to his majeſty upon coals and culm brought into the port of London.

Sect. 3. This act ſhall not extend to charge ſuch coals, not exceeding one hundred chalders by the year, as ſhall be brought for the uſe of the Royal Hoſpital at Chelſea.

Stat. 8 Geo. 1. cap. 14. ſect. 14. Coals carried from Ellenfoot to Bank End, in the county of Cumberland, or any place between, ſhall not in reſpect of ſuch carriage be liable to the duties in any other act.

Sect. 15. Provided, that the maſter or owner of every boat or veſſel carrying ſuch coals do firſt enter into bond with ſureties, at leaſt once a year, in a penalty not exceeding 360 l. with a general condition, that all ſuch coals as he ſhall take on board his veſſel by virtue of a ſufferance, ſhall be landed at ſome place in the bay or firth of Eden in Cumberland to the northward of Ellenfoot; and he ſhall bring a return ſigned by the proper officer, that ſuch coals were there landed; the perſon concerned paying for each bond, 1 s. beſides the ſtamps, and to the officers granting the ſufferance and return, for each boat, 4 d.

Stat. 3 Geo. cap. 26. ſect. 1. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon who ſhall keep wharfs on the Thames, or any branch thereof, and for any other perſons who ſhall deal in coals or other goods, to employ their own lighters and other craft in carrying of coals and goods to and from any ſhip in the Thames, and to and from any wharf where ſuch goods might be lawfully landed or ſhipped off, ſo as the perſons employed in navigating ſuch lighter, &c. be duly qualified to row the ſame on the Thames.

Sect. 2. All perſons (not being lightermen) who by virtue of this act ſhall become entitled to uſe their own lighters, ſhall before their working the ſame make before the company of Watermen, or ſome other whom the company are required to appoint for that purpoſe, an entry of their lighters or their craft; for each of which entries the officer ſhall receive for the company 5 s. and thereupon he ſhall regiſter the ſame, with the owner's name and place of abode, and the number or mark intended to be affixed on ſuch lighters or other great craft; and after the entry the owner ſhall affix ſuch number in metal or colours on the outſide of the lighter, viſible above water when loaded, there to remain without alteration (except with conſent of the company, or in caſes of involuntary accidents); and afterwards ſuch lighter and the owners thereof ſhall be ſubject to the rules of the company in regard to the entries, numbers, or marks.

Sect. 3. No lighterman, or buyer of coals for ſale, nor any of their partners, agents, or ſervants, or any in truſt for them, ſhall act as a crimp, agent, or factor for any maſter of any ſhip importing coals into the port of London, on forfeiture of 200 l. and every maſter, &c. who ſhall employ them to act as ſuch, ſhall forfeit the like ſum.

Sect. 4. Every perſon who ſhall take any premium or allowance from any coal-owner, fitter, or maſter of a ſhip for buying, vending, or diſpoſing of any particular ſort of coals, or ſhall otherwiſe offend, contrary to the clauſe in the act of 9 Ann. cap. 28. ſect. 3. ſhall, over and above the penalty inflicted by the ſaid act, forfeit 300 l. and every coal-owner, or fitter, who ſhall give, or agree to give, to any ſhip-maſter, lighterman, crimp, or or buyer of coals, or to any perſon in truſt for ſuch ſhip-maſter, &c. any premium, &c. for buying, vending, &c. any particular ſort of coals, or for the loading of any veſſel with ſuch coal-owner's coals, or for the diſpatch, delivery, or diſpoſal of ſuch coals from ſuch coal-owners, collieries, or ſtaiths, and every perſon who ſhall knowingly ſell one ſort of coals for another, ſhall forfeit 500 l.

Sect. 5. Nothing in this act ſhall hinder any coal-owner from imploying or giving any ſalary or reward to any fitter for the vending and diſpoſing of his coals from his colliery and ſtaiths; or to prevent any maſter or owners of any ſhip, uſing the coal trade, from imploying crimps or factors (not being lightermen, or buyers of coal for ſale, or any of their partners, agents, or ſervants, or any in truſt for them) to ſell or diſpoſe of their loadings of coals, or pay them their crimpage or factorage as uſual.

Sect. 6. All bargains or contracts for coals between buyer and ſeller at the market of Billingsgate, or other place of ſale within the bills of mortality, ſhall by the crimp or factor be entered, with the conditions thereof, in the book of ſuch crimp, ſubſcribed by the ſeller and buyer, and witneſſed by the crimp, who ſhall at the ſame time deliver gratis a copy atteſted by him of ſuch bargain to the ſeller and buyer; and the entries ſo made, and the copies ſo given, ſhall be admitted as evidence on trials in any court of law; and if any crimp or factor ſhall neglect to enter ſuch contract, and to ſubſcribe and atteſt the ſame, or to give copies thereof, he ſhall forfeit 50 l.

Sect. 7. All lightermen and other buyers of coals on board any ſhip in the port of London, ſhall at the time of the delivery of ſuch coals pay for the ſame in ready money; or for ſuch part thereof as ſhall not be ſo paid for ſhall give their promiſſory notes, expreſſing the words Value received in coals, payable at ſuch days as ſhall be agreed upon; and all ſuch notes may be proteſted as inland bills of exchange; and in the default of ſuch proteſting, and notice by the indorſee to the indorſor within twenty days after failure of payment, the indorſor ſhall not be liable to pay ſuch money as ſhall be mentioned in ſuch note.

Sect. 8. All lightermen and other buyers of coals, who ſhall refuſe to give their notes for coals to them delivered, and to inſert the words Value received in coals, and every maſter who ſhall take ſuch note from any dealer in coals, in which note the ſaid words are not inſerted, ſhall forfeit 100 l.

Sect. 9. Every maſter of a ſhip uſing the coal trade ſhall be ſubject to the direction of the owners of the major part of his ſhip, and ſhall keep, and once a year render to ſuch owners, if required, a true account in writing of the produce and expence of every voyage; and if he ſhall refuſe to obey the owner's directions, given under their hands, or to give ſuch account, being required by order under their hands, he ſhall forfeit 100 l. provided, that in ſuch directions there be nothing which ſhall relate to the reſtraining or inhancing the price of coals in the Thames, or to keeping of turn in delivering of coals there.

Sect. 10. All lightermen and others dealing in coals, who ſhall ſell any parcel of coals for pool meaſure, including the ingrain, &c. one chalder, which by an ancient cuſtom in the port of London is allowed in every ſcore bought on board ſhip, and ſhall not deliver to the buyers the full quantity meaſured to the lighterman, &c. by the maſter, together with the ingrain, ſhall forfeit 100 l.

Sect. 11. All coals which ſhall be landed at any place on the Thames, or on any branch near thereto, and which ſhall be carried to any place within the cities of London or Weſtminſter, or the bills of mortality, in any cart or carriage, ſhall be carried to the buyers in linen ſacks, ſealed or marked with white paint in oil at Guildhall, London, or at the Exchequer at Weſtminſter, which ſacks ſhall be four feet and two inches in length, and ſix and twenty in breadth, after they ſhall be made; which ſacks all dealers in and carriers of coals ſhall uſe for carriage of coals within the ſaid limits; and all makers of coal ſacks ſhall make them of the ſaid dimenſions at leaſt; and every dealer in, and carrier of coals, who ſhall make uſe of any other ſacks for carriage of coals within the limits aforeſaid, ſhall for every ſack forfeit 20 s.

Sect. 12. This act ſhall not extend to hinder any conſumer of coals from fetching home his coals by porters, or in his own or hired carts, without being obliged to uſe ſuch ſacks,

Sect. 13. All dealers in, and ſellers of coals by the chalder or leſſer quantity, within the cities of London and Weſtminſter, or ten miles of the ſame, ſhall keep and uſe at their wharfs, and other places for ſale of coals, a buſhel, as deſcribed in the act 12 Ann. ſtat. 2. cap. 17. ſect. 11. with which buſhel ſellers of coals ſhall meaſure all the coals they ſhall ſell by the chalder, or leſſer quantity, and ſhall put three buſhels of coals into each ſack: and all dealers in coals who ſhall offend in the premiſſes, ſhall forfeit 50 l. and if any ſervant of ſuch dealer in coals ſhall fill coals into ſacks without meaſuring the ſame by ſuch buſhel, he ſhall be committed to the houſe of correction to hard labour, not exceeding thirty days, nor leſs than fourteen days.

Sect. 14. All perſons dealing in coals, and uſing coal buſhels, and ſmaller meaſures, ſhall before they uſe them have them fitted for work and uſe with iron or copper; and after they are ſo fitted, ſhall carry them to Guildhall, or to the Exchequer Office, to be ſealed with a ſteel inſtrument on the uppermoſt iron or copper hoop and ſtrap; which meaſures ſhall be kept by them, without alteration, at their places of ſale, which places of ſale are declared to be the wharfs, warehouſes, docks, ſheds, cellars, or other repoſitories for coals of ſuch as are dealers therein: and all dealers in coals who ſhall offend herein ſhall forfeit 50 l. and all perſons who ſhall alter any ſuch buſhel, or other meaſure, or any of the ſacks after they have been ſealed or marked, ſhall forfeit 50 l.

Sect. 15. Any perſon who ſhall be guilty of any of the offences declared by this act, and ſhall within ſix calendar months after ſuch offence make diſcovery of any coal-owner, proprietor of a colliery, or of their agents or ſervants, or of any of their fitters, officers or clerks, or of any maſter of a ſhip, or of any lighterman, crimp, coal-factor, or ſeller or retailer of coals, or other perſon concerned in the coal-trade, who ſhall have committed any offence contrary to this act, ſo as they be convicted: the perſon making ſuch diſcovery ſhall be diſcharged from the penalties for all ſuch offences by him before that time committed, and ſhall be intitled to the ſame benefit from ſuch diſcovery and conviction as any other perſon.

Sect. 16. All penalties in this act above 5 l. ſhall be one moiety to the crown, and the other to him who ſhall ſue for the ſame within ſix calendar months after ſuch offences committed, to be recovered with double coſts, by action of debt, &c. in any of his majeſty's courts of record; and all penalties in this act under 5 l. ſhall be recovered by complaint made to the Lord-mayor of London, or one juſtice of peace within the city of London, or one juſtice of the ſeveral places where ſuch offender ſhall live, who are to call the parties before them, and examine ſuch complaint on oath, and on due proof thereof made to his ſatisfaction, to grant a warrant for levying ſuch forfeitures; one moiety to the informer, and the other to the poor of the pariſh where ſuch offence ſhall be committed; and if ſuch forfeitures ſhall not be forthwith paid, the ſame ſhall be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of goods by warrant of the Lord-mayor, or ſuch juſtice of the peace; and for want of ſufficient diſtreſs, the offender ſhall be committed to the houſe of correction for any time not exceeding thirty days, and not leſs than fourteen, to be kept to hard labour.

Sect. 17. This act ſhall be a publick act.

Sect. 4. Geo. 2. cap. 30. ſect. 1. It ſhall not be lawful for any owners of any ſhip employed in the coal-trade, or any other perſon, to give any directions to any maſter of ſuch ſhip, or to any agent employed in the ſelling of coals, which ſhall relate to keeping turn in ſelling or deliver-delivering coals in the Thames; and no maſter or other perſon having command of ſuch ſhip ſhall obey ſuch orders, or keep turn as aforeſaid, upon pain to forfeit 100*l* one moiety to his majeſty, and the other moiety to him who ſhall ſue for the ſame within ſix months after the offence committed, to be recovered with treble coſts by action of debt, &c.

Sect. 2. The maſter of every ſhip loaded with coals, or other perſon having charge thereof, ſhall deliver to the proper officers of the cuſtoms at London, cocquets containing the lading of ſuch ſhip, within four days after the arrival of ſuch ſhip as high as Graveſend; on pain of forfeiting 50 l. to be recovered and diſpoſed of in manner before directed.

Sect. 3. This ſhall be a publick act.

Stat. 10 Geo. 2. cap. 32. ſect. 6. During the continuance of 9 Geo. 1. cap. 22. if any perſon ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly ſet on fire, or cauſe to be ſet on fire any mine, pit, or delph of coal, he ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.

Made perpetual by 31 Geo. 2. c. 42. ſect. 6.

Stat. 11 Geo 2. cap. 15. ſect. 6. If any buyer or ſeller of coals at Billingsgate, or other place of ſale within the bills of mortality, being required, ſhall neglect to ſign the contracts as by the act 3 Geo. 2. cap. 26. is directed; every ſuch buyer and ſeller ſhall forfeit 50 l. one moiety to his majeſty, and the other moiety to ſuch as ſhall ſue for the ſame in any of his majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter, within ſix months after ſuch offence.

Sect. 7. Every maſter of a ſhip carrying coals as aforeſaid ſhall after every voyage produce to his owners (when required) a copy of ſuch contracts ſigned by the crimp; and in caſe of refuſal, ſuch maſter ſhall forfeit 50 l. as aforeſaid.

Sect. 8. It ſhall be lawful for the commiſſioners appointed in purſuance of 6 Will. cap. 10. or any three of them, to admeaſure and mark all waggons, barrows, and other carriages uſed in loading ſhips with coals in the port of Newcaſtle and members thereunto belonging.

Sect. 9. This ſhall be a publick act.

Stat. 13 Geo. 2. cap. 21. ſect. 1. If any perſon wilfully and maliciouſly divert, or cauſe to be diverted, water from any river, brook, watercourſe, channel or land flood, or convey or cauſe to be conveyed water into any coal-work and mine, pit or delph of coal, or into any ſubterraneous cavities or paſſages, or make any ſubterraneous cavities, with deſign thereby to deſtroy or damage any coal-work, &c. belonging to any other perſon, or wilfully and maliciouſly deſtroy or obſtruct any ſough or ſewer (which has been a ſough or ſewer in common for fifty years) made for draining any coal-work, &c. or attempt any ſuch miſchievous practice, or aſſiſt therein; every ſuch perſon ſhall for every offence forfeit to the party aggrieved treble damages, and coſts of ſuit, to be ſued for by action of debt, &c. in any court of record at Weſtminſter.

Sect. 2. Nothing in this act ſhall reſtrain any perſon, being the owner of any ſough, drain or ſewer, from deſtroying, obſtructing, or diverting any ſuch ſough, drain, or ſewer, as he may now lawfully do.

Stat. 14 Geo. cap. 41. ſect. 3. For all coals which ſhall be uſed in fire-engines for draining water out of the mines of tin and copper in Cornwall, and for which duties have been firſt paid, a drawback ſhall be allowed of all ſuch duties, upon proof by oath before the cuſtomer or collector of the ſaid duties that ſuch coals have been ſo uſed; which drawback ſhall be paid by the collector of the ſaid duties to the perſon ſo making proof.

Stat. 17 Geo. 2. cap. 35. ſect. 1. The juſtices of peace of the ſeveral counties in England, Wales, and of Berwick, or three of them, whereof one to be of the quorum, ſhall be impowered to ſet the prices of coals called ſea-coals, brought by ſea into any rivers, creeks or ports, and ſold by retail in any places in England, Wales, and Berwick; and if any ingroſſer or retailer of ſuch coals refuſe to ſell as aforeſaid, the juſtices are to appoint perſons to enter into any place where ſuch coals are ſtored; and in caſe of refuſal, take a conſtable to force entrance, and the ſaid coals to ſell at ſuch rates, rendering to ſuch ingroſſer or retailer the money, charges deducted; and if any actor be commenced againſt the juſtice, conſtable, or any perſon for any thing done in purſuance of this act, the defendant may plead the general iſſue, and if the verdict be found for him ſhall recover his damages and treble coſts.

Sect. 2. No perſon having intereſt in any wharf uſed for receiving and uttering coals, or that trades in the ſale of coals, ſhall act in the ſetting the price of coals. See the ſecond act under this title.

Stat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 35. ſect. 1. There ſhall be erected and continued within the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, one publick office, which ſhall be called The land coal-meters office for the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, which ſhall be managed by two perſons appointed by his majeſty, who ſhall be called The principal land coal-meters for the city and liberty of Weſtminſter; and ſuch office ſhall be kept open every day (Sundays excepted) from the 25th of March to the 29th of September yearly, from ſix till twelve in the forenoon, and from one till eight in the afternoon; and from the 29th of September to the 25th of March yearly, from ſeven till twelve in the forenoon, and from one till eight in the afternoon.

Sect. 2. No perſon ſhall be capable of acting as one of the principal land coal-meters, until he ſhall before two juſtices of the peace for Weſtminſter take an oath in the words following; to wit,

I A. B. do ſwear, that I will truly and faithfully, according to the beſt of my judgment and ability, execute the office of one of the principal land coal-meters for the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, and for that part of the duchy of Lancaſter adjoining thereto; and for the ſeveral pariſhes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary le Bone, and for ſuch part of the pariſh of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middleſex. So help me God.

Sect. 3. It ſhall be lawful for the ſaid principal land coal-meters, or any one of them, to appoint a ſufficient number of perſons to be labouring coal-meters within the ſaid city and liberty, and the aforeſaid part of the duchy of Lancaſter, and in the ſaid pariſhes, and the aforeſaid part of the pariſh of Saint Andrew, Holborn; one of whom ſhall attend every day (Sundays excepted) at ſuch of the coal wharfs, or other place of ſale, within the ſaid limits, at which he ſhall be ſtationed by the principal land coal-meters, from the twenty-fifth of March to the twenty-ninth of September yearly, from five till twelve in the forenoon, and from one till eight in the afternoon; and from the twenty-ninth of September to the twenty-fifth of March yearly, from ſeven till twelve in the forenoon, and from one till ſix in the afternoon, to meaſure out the coals ſold at the wharfs or warehouſes where he is ſtationed.

Sect. 4. No perſon ſhall be capable of acting as a labouring coal-meter, until he ſhall, before two juſtices of the peace for Weſtminſter, take an oath in the words following; to wit,

I A. B. do ſwear, that I will duly and faithfully, to the beſt of my ſkill and knowledge, execute the office of one of the labouring coal-meters for the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, and for that part of the duchy of Lancaſter adjoining thereto, and for the ſeveral pariſhes of Saint Giles in the Fields, and for Saint Mary le Bone, and for ſuch part of the pariſh of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middleſex; and will well and truly, according to the beſt of my ſkill and judgment, meaſure coals between buyer and ſeller, without favour or ill-will. So help me God.

And the juſtices who adminiſter the ſaid oaths, ſhall certify the taking thereof to the general quarter ſeſſions for Middleſex, there to remain on record.

Sect. 5. If any lighterman or other perſon, after coals delivered on board any lighter or craft of any ſhip, break bulk before the time of delivery at the wharf in the abſence of the maſter (or of the conſumer or his agent, where the maſter is not obliged to attend the delivery) he ſhall for every offence forfeit 5*l.*

Sect. 6.

Sect. 6. The ſtations for the ſaid labouring coal-meters at the ſaid wharfs ſhall be varied as the principal coal-meters, or any of them, think fit.

Sect. 7. All contracts for coals to be delivered within the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, or the aforeſaid part of the ſaid duchy, or the ſaid pariſhes, or the aforeſaid part of the pariſh of Saint Andrew, Holborn, directly from any lighter, &c. to the conſumer (not being leſs than five chalder) ſhall be for pool meaſure, including the ingrain of one chalder in every ſcore, according to the cuſtom of the port of London, though the term of pool meaſure be omitted in any written or verbal contract for that purpoſe.

Sect. 8. All coals delivered as pool meaſure at any wharf within the ſaid city and liberty, or the ſaid part of the ſaid duchy, ſhall be loaded ſeparately in the craft with the ingrain, and ſhall be ſo filled and delivered without being meaſured by the buſhel, unleſs the buyer deſire to have the ſame meaſured.

Sect. 9. All coals ſold as wharf meaſure within the ſaid city and liberty, or the aforeſaid part of the ſaid duchy, or the ſaid pariſhes, or the aforeſaid part of the pariſh of Saint Andrew, Holborn, ſhall be meaſured in the preſence of one of the labouring coal-meters, as is directed by 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 2. and the labouring coal-meters ſhall fill up any buſhel that appears deficient out of the ſtock of the perſon vending the ſaid coals.

Sect. 10. Four-pence by the chalder, for every chalder of coals ſold and delivered at any wharf or place within the ſaid limits, ſhall be paid by the ſeller to the principal land coal-meters, or to the labouring coal-meters, for the purpoſes following, viz. one moiety for the uſe of the principal coal-meters, and the other moiety for the uſe of the labouring coal-meters; and thereupon ſuch principal land coal-meters ſhall deliver to every ſeller of ſuch coals, or the carman who carries the ſame, a ticket ſigned by the principal land coal-meters, or one of them, and counterſigned by the labouring coal-meter attending the ſame; in which ſhall be contained as well the Chriſtian and ſurname of the ſellers, as of the conſumers, the quantity and quality, the price per chalder, and the day of the week, month, and year of the ſales, delivery, and admeaſurement, the amount of the metage charge, and the names of the carmen; which ticket, the metage being paid, ſhall be delivered by the labouring coal-meter counterſigning the ſame to the carman, and by the carman to the conſumer or his ſervant; and thereupon he ſhall pay to the ſeller the metage therein ſpecified: and if the labouring coal-meter counterſigning ſuch ticket ſhall after payment of the metage refuſe to deliver ſuch ticket to the carman, he ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 5 l. and if ſuch carman either alter or neglect to deliver the ſame ticket to the conſumer, or to the ſervant who attends to receive the coals, he ſhall forfeit for every ſuch offence 5 l.

Sect. 11. If any cart in which more than eight buſhels ſhall be ſent from any place within the ſaid limits, without firſt having obtained ſuch ticket, the vender of the ſaid coals, and the driver of ſuch cart being convicted by the oaths (or if by quakers, by affirmation) of two witneſſes before one juſtice of peace for Weſtminſter or Middleſex, ſhall for every offence forfeit as follows, viz. the vender 50 l. and the driver 5 l.

Sect. 12. If any meter appointed by virtue of this act deliver any falſe ticket, or wilfully make any falſe meaſure, and be convicted by the oaths (or if by quakers, affirmations) of any two witneſſes before any juſtice of peace for the ſaid liberty or county, he ſhall be incapable of acting as a coal-meter, and forfeit 5 l.

Sect. 13. No coals belonging to any dealer above eight buſhels under any one contract, ſhall be ſent from any wharf or ſtorehouſe within the ſaid limits, except in the preſence of one labouring coal-meter.

Sect. 14. This act ſhall not extend to the owners of any works for raiſing water by fire, nor who at any time have twenty chalders of coals or upwards, in any lighter or other crafts, and who ſhall not vend ſuch coals, but they may have twenty chalders of coals or more delivered under the inſpection of their own agent in the abſence of a meter, and in that caſe ſuch perſons are hereby exempted from payment of metage charge; and if they require the attendance of any meter appointed in purſuance of this act, then they ſhall pay the metage of 4 d. by the chalder.

Sect. 15. If any ſuch labouring coal-meter wilfully ſuffer any coals ſold as wharf-meaſure (exceeding the quantity of eight buſhels) to be ſent from any wharf or warehouſes within the ſaid limits, without being meaſured as is herein directed, and give not information thereof to the principal land coal-meters, or their deputies, at the ſaid office within two days after, and be convicted thereof by the oaths of two witneſſes, ſuch labouring coal-meter ſhall from thenceforth be incapable of acting as a labouring coal-meter within the ſaid limits, and forfeit 5 l.

Sect. 16. If any dealer in coals directly or indirectly give to any labouring coal-meter, appointed in purſuance of this act, any fee (other than the ſum of 4 d. by the chalder) or if any labouring coal-meter directly or indirectly receive from any dealer any ſuch fee, other than the ſum of 4 d. by the chalder; every ſuch dealer ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 50 l. and the labouring coal-meter who received ſuch fee ſhall be from thenceforth incapable of acting as a coal-meter within the ſaid limits, and forfeit 5 l.

Sect. 17. If the driver of any cart loaded with coals, or any perſon belonging thereto or employed therewith, deliver any coals under his care, otherwiſe than for the uſe of the owner, and be convicted, he ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 5 l.

Sect. 18. If any perſon be diſſatisfied with the meaſure of any coals under this act, the ſame coals ſhall (either upon acquainting the ſeller or the carman, at any time during the delivery thereof, and before the carman be diſcharged, be remeaſured, either in the preſence of a ſea-coal-meter, from the ſea coal-meters office in London, or one of the meters, or their agents, appointed in purſuance of this act; for which ſhall be paid 4 d. and no more, for every chalder; and in caſe the coals thus remeaſured amount not to the meaſure for which they were originally ſold, the ſellers are hereby liable to the penalties inflicted by law for offences of this ſort.

Sect. 19. After notice given in writing to the ſeller of ſuch coals, or to the carman, and whilſt ſuch coals remain in either of their poſſeſſion, of ſuch diſſatisfaction, ſuch ſeller or carman ſhall not leave the cart in which ſuch coals are laden, but ſhall remain with the ſame, and take care both of the coals and cart, till a meter appointed in purſuance of this act can be procured to remeaſure ſuch coals; and they are on notice delivered, or left at the office in writing, in any of the office hours, to attend for that purpoſe.

Sect. 20. No perſon who ſhall be a ſeller of coals, or dealer in, or employed in the carrying of coals, or a wharfinger, or intereſted in any wharf, ſhall be capable of acting either as a principal or labouring coal-meter.

Sect. 21. The penalties impoſed by this act ſhall be recovered and applied for the purpoſes following, viz. ſuch of the penalties as exceed 5 l. by action of debt, &c. in any court of record at Weſtminſter; one moiety of which penalties (that is, where each of them exceed 5 l.) ſhall be to the uſe of his Majeſty, and the other moiety (with coſts) to the uſe of ſuch perſon who ſhall inform or ſue: and all other penalties ſhall be recovered by way of complaint unto any juſtice of peace for Weſtminſter or Middleſex, who ſhall call the parties before him, and examine ſuch complaint upon oath (or upon affirmation, in the caſe of quakers) and upon proof grant a warrant for levying ſuch penalties; one moiety to the uſe of the informer, and the other moiety to the uſe of the poor of the pariſh in which ſuch offences are committed; and in caſe ſuch penalties be not after conviction forthwith paid, they ſhall be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of goods of the offenders by warrant of ſuch juſtice, and for want of ſufficient diſtreſs ſuch offenders ſhall be committed to the houſe of correction for any time not exceeding thirty days, and not leſs than fourteen days, there to be kept to hard labour.

Sect. 22. If any perſon ſo convicted think himſelf aggrieved, he may appeal to the general quarter ſeſſions for Middleſex next after ſuch conviction (but not afterwards) and that ſeſſions ſhall, at the next ſeſſions after bringing ſuch appeal, finally determine the ſame; and if the appellant ſhall not make good his appeal, or proſecute the ſame with effect, the ſeſſions ſhall award coſts, to be then, with the penalty adjudged on ſuch conviction, paid to the informer, and for want thereof commit the perſon appealing to the common gaol of Middleſex, there to remain until he pay ſuch coſts and penalty; but in caſe the appellant make good his appeal and be acquitted of his conviction, the ſame court ſhall award to ſuch appellant reaſonable coſts, to be paid by the perſon on whoſe information ſuch conviction was founded; and for want of ſuch payment ſhall commit ſuch informer to the common gaol of Middleſex, there to remain until he pay the coſts ſo awarded; but no conviction by virtue of this act ſhall be quaſhed for want of form only.

Sect. 23. No writ of certiorari ſhall iſſue to remove the record of any conviction or proceeding thereon, in purſuance of this act, into any court of record at Weſtminſter.

Sect. 24. If any action be brought for any thing done in purſuance of this act, the ſame ſhall be commenced within ſix months after the fact, and be laid in Middleſex, and the defendant may plead the general iſſue, and if the plaintiff be nonſuited, &c. the defendant ſhall have full coſts.

Sect. 25. This act ſhall be deemed a publick act.

Sect. 26. This act ſhall continue for three years from the 24th of September 1746, and from thence to the end of the then next ſeſſion of parliament.

Continued to the 24th of June 1759 by 31 Geo. 2. cap. 35. ſect. 4. and for ſeven years more, and to the end of the next ſeſſion, by 32 Geo. 2. cap. 27. ſect. 2.

Stat. 22 Geo. 2. cap. 37. ſect. 1. No officer of the cuſtoms in Great Britain ſhall clear outwards any ſhip wherein coals, culm, or cinders ſhall have been exported from Great Britain to any place beyond the ſeas, nor grant any warrant, cocquet, or other diſpatch for the clearing outwards, either for a coaſting or foreign voyage, any ſuch ſhip, or for the loading on board thereon any goods, nor permit any ſuch ſhip to go out of any port in Great Britain, until all the duties payable for ſuch coals, &c. exported beyond the ſeas in ſuch ſhip the laſt preceding voyage be paid, or until an authentic certificate under the hands and ſeals of the collector, cuſtomer, and comptroller, or other chief officer of the cuſtoms of the port where the the coals, &c. ſo exported were firſt ſhipped, ſignifying that the ſaid duties are paid, be produced; and every officer acting contrary to the meaning of this act ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 100 l. to his Majeſty, to be recovered by bill, &c. in any court of record at Weſtminſter, or in the Exchequer at Edinburgh reſpectively, wherein no eſſoin, &c. ſhall be allowed.

Sect. 2. If any action be commenced for any thing done in purſuance of this act, the defendant may plead the general iſſue, and if the plaintiff be nonſuited, &c. the defendant ſhall recover treble coſts.

Sect. 3. If any maſter or other perſon taking charge of any veſſels whereon coals, culm, and cinders are laden in any port in Great Britain, in order to be carried coaſtwiſe to ſome other port within the realm, or having given bond accordingly, proceed with his ſaid loading of coals, &c. to parts beyond the ſeas, and there unlade and diſpoſe of the ſame, not being compelled by ſtreſs of weather, or other lawful neceſſity, he ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit for every chalder of coals, &c. ſo exported contrary to this act 5 s. over and above all duties payable for the ſame, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. in any court of record at Weſtminſter, or in the Exchequer at Edinburgh reſpectively, wherein no eſſoin, &c. ſhall be allowed; one moiety to the uſe of his Majeſty, and the other moiety to the uſe of ſuch perſon as ſhall inform or ſue.

Stat. 23 Geo. 2. cap. 26. ſect. 4. If either of the principal land coal-meters appointed by virtue of 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35. neglect to ſtation labouring coal-meters at the wharfs, and at the times by the ſaid act directed, he ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 10 l. and if any labouring coal-meter ſo ſtationed ſhall not attend and perform his duty, he ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 40 s. which penalties ſhall be recovered and applied as any other penalty is directed by the ſaid act.

Stat. 30 Geo. 2. cap. 19. ſect. 28. There ſhall be paid to his Majeſty for every chalder of coals, Newcaſtle meaſure, ſhipped for exportation beyond the ſeas, except to Ireland, the Iſle of Man, or his Majeſty's plantations, an additional duty of 4 s. and after the ſame rate for any greater or leſs quantity, over and above the duties now payable: to be collected and paid in the ſame manner and under ſuch penalties, as the former duties on the exportation of coals.

Sect. 29. The monies ariſing from the additional duty, and paid into the receipt of the Exchequer, ſhall be entered apart from all other monies, and ſhall be part of the fund eſtabliſhed by this act.

Stat. 31 Geo. 2. cap. 15. ſect. 1. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon during fifteen years, and from thence to the end of the then next ſeſſion of parliament, to export any quantity of culm to Liſbon in Portugal, upon payment of a duty of 1 s. for every chalder, Newcaſtle meaſure, and after that rate for any greater or leſſer quantity; ſo as the exporter before the loading of ſuch culm become bound with other ſufficient ſecurity, in treble the value, to the commiſſioners or chief officer of the cuſtoms belonging to the port where ſuch culm is ſhipped (who have hereby power to take ſuch ſecurity, in his Majeſty's name to his uſe, and for which ſecurity no fee ſhall be given) that ſuch culm ſhall be landed at Liſbon in Portugal, and not elſewhere; and that a certificate under the hand and ſeal of the Britiſh conſul-general, or deputy-conſul reſiding at Liſbon, ſhall within twelve calendar months from the date of the ſaid bonds (danger of the ſeas excepted) be returned to the officers who took the ſaid bonds, that ſuch culm hath been landed at Liſbon; and in caſe the ſhip on which any culm is put on board, for which ſuch ſecurity ought to be given, go out of the port before ſuch ſecurity is given, the ſhip and the culm therein or the value ſhall be forfeited, and may be recovered; one moiety to the uſe of the King, and the other moiety to the perſon who will ſeize, inform, or ſue.

Sect. 2. The ſaid duty on culm exported to Liſbon ſhall be raiſed in the ſame manner and under ſuch penalties as the duties payable upon the exportation of coals.

Sect. 3. If any action be commenced for any thing done in purſuance of this act, the defendant may plead the general iſſue, and if the plaintiff be nonſuit, &c. the defendant ſhall recover treble coſts.

Stat. 32 Geo. 2. cap. 27. ſect. 1. If the driver of any cart loaded with coals, or any perſon belonging thereto or employed therewith, deliver or ſuffer to be delivered from ſuch cart any coals under his care, otherwiſe than for the uſe of the owner, and be convicted, as in the 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35. is mentioned, he ſhall for every ſuch offence be publickly whipt, or committed to the houſe of correction for three months.

Sect. 2. In caſe any perſon be diſſatisfied with the meaſure of any coals, and ſuch coals be remeaſured in purſuance of the 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35. and upon ſuch remeaſuring fall ſhort of the quantity for which the ſame were originally ſold and meaſured, then the principal coal-meter ſhall for every buſhel which they fall ſhort forfeit 40 s. to be recovered and applied as the penalties inflicted by the 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35.

Sect. 3. If any labouring coal-meter deliver a ticket for any quantity of coals, without having ſeen the meaſuring of the whole quantity expreſſed in ſuch ticket, the principal coal-meters ſhall forfeit 5 l. to be recovered and applied as the penalties inflicted by the 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35. And every labouring coal-meter ſo offending, upon complaint to a juſtice of peace for Weſtminſter or Middleſex, and upon proof to his ſatisfaction, ſhall be committed to the houſe of correction, and be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding 30 days, and ſhall be for ever incapable of acting as a labouring coal-meter under this act.

Sect. 4. After the 24th of December 1759, all ſacks made uſe of for the carriage of coals within the limits mentioned in 3 Geo. 2. cap. 26. par. 67. ſhall be four feet four inches in length, and 26 inches in breadth after they are made; nor ſhall any of leſs dimenſions be ſealed or marked at Guildhall in London, or the Exchequer-office at Weſtminſter: and if any perſon dealing in coals within the limits aforeſaid, uſe ſacks of any leſs dimenſions than before directed, every ſuch perſon ſhall for every offence forfeit 40 s. to be recovered and applied as the penalties inflicted by 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35.

Sect. 5. If any perſon as a labouring coal-meter ſuffer any coal-ſacks to be made uſe of for the carriage of coals, leſs than four feet in length and two feet in breadth, within-inſide the ſack, or neglect to perform his duty at the wharfs, as in the 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35. is directed, he ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 40 s. to be recovered and applied as the penalties inflicted by the ſaid act.

Sect. 6. Such juſtice upon every ſuch complaint is to ſummon the parties before him, and to examine ſuch complaint upon oath (or affirmation, if the witneſs be a quaker) and upon proof of ſuch offence to his ſatisfaction, to grant a warrant for the commitment of ſuch offender to the houſe of correction, there to be dealt with as aforeſaid.

Sect. 7. After the commencement of this act, none of the proviſions made by the 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35. or by this act relating to the payment of any ſums of money for the admeaſurement or inſpection of the admeaſurement of coals, or to the puniſhment of any dealer in coals or carter, on account of ſending coals from any place within the limits aforeſaid, ſhall be in force; except where the buyer ſhall have ſignified, by notice in writing to one of the principal coal-meters, or one of the labouring coal-meters, his deſire to have the attendance of a coal-meter to inſpect the admeaſurement of his coals, and where a coal-meter ſhall purſuant to ſuch notice attend and inſpect the admeaſurement of the whole quantity of ſuch coals.

Sect. 8. The 19 Geo. 2. cap. 35. continued by 23 Geo. 2. cap. 25. and 24 Geo. 2. cap. 57. and 31 Geo. 2. cap. 35. and all the proviſions in the ſaid acts which are now in force (other than ſo far as any of them are varied by this act) ſhall be put in execution during the continuance of this act; and this act ſhall take effect from the 24th of June 1759, for ſeven years next enſuing, and to the end of the then next ſeſſion of parliament; and ſhall be a publick act.

Stat. 33 Geo. 2. cap. 15. ſect. 1. If any perſon have occaſion to carry any culm to be uſed for the burning of lime in any veſſels not exceeding thirty tons burthen, from any place within the port of Milford or the limits thereof, to any other place within the counties of Pembroke, Caermarthen, Cardigan, or Merioneth; the maſter of ſuch veſſel may apply to the collector of the ſaid port or his deputy for a ſufferance to ſhip ſuch culm; and the ſaid collector or his deputy are to grant every ſuch maſter a ſufferance accordingly, in which ſhall be inſerted the quantity of culm ſo to be ſhipped; and the officer to whom the ſufferance ſhall be directed is to attend the ſhipping all the culm expreſſed in the ſufferance, and to certify on the back of the ſufferance the quantity: and the maſter or owner ſhall pay to the collector 1 s. for every chalder of ſuch culm: and the collector or his deputy ſhall, upon receipt of ſuch duty, grant a certificate under the ſeal of his office to ſuch maſter, ſetting forth the quantity of culm ſhipped, and that the duties have been paid; and ſuch certificate ſhall be a clearance for ſuch veſſel to any place within the counties aforeſaid; for which certificate it ſhall be lawful for ſuch collector or his deputy to receive 1 s. and no more; and it ſhall not be lawful for the ſaid collector or any other officer to take any other fee.

Sect. 2. The maſter of every ſuch veſſel, on board whereof any culm ſhall have been ſhipped within the limits aforeſaid, ſhall, upon his return to Milford, make oath before the collector of the ſaid port or his deputy of the place where and the time when he landed his former cargo of culm; and ſuch maſter ſhall not be permitted to ſhip any other cargo of culm until he have made oath as aforeſaid: and in caſe ſuch maſter ſhall fraudulently change either his own name or the name of the veſſel, to prevent a diſcovery of the place to which he carried his former cargo of culm, and ſhall be convicted, either upon confeſſion, or upon the oath of one witneſs, before any juſtice of peace of the county where the offence ſhall be committed, he ſhall for every ſuch offence forfeit 5 l. and it ſhall be lawful for the ſaid collector, or any perſon he ſhall appoint, to ſeize ſuch veſſel and detain the ſame until the ſaid 5 l. be paid, and the charges of ſeizing and detaining; which penalty of 5 l. ſhall be applied as other penalties by the laws relating to the cuſtoms.

Sect. 3. Whenever any culm ſhipped at any place within the limits aforeſaid, for which the duty hath been paid, ſhall be loſt, proof being made upon oath before the collector of ſuch port or his deputy, ſuch collector or his deputy ſhall permit the owner to ſhip the like quantity of culm duty-free, and without any charge other than the fee of one ſhilling.

Cocket is uſed for a ſort of meaſure, as we may ſee in Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 9. Panis vero integer quadrantalis frumenti ponderabit unum coket & dimidium It is alſo uſed for a diſtinction of bread in the ſtatute of bread and ale, made 51 Hen. 3. The words are, "When a quarter of wheat is ſold for 12 d. the waſtel-bread of a farthing ſhall weigh 6 pound and 16 s. but bread-cocket of a farthing, of the ſame corn and bultel, ſhall weigh more than waſtel by 2 s. and cocket-bread made of corn of lower price ſhall weigh more than waſtel by 5 s. Bread made into a ſimnel ſhall weigh 2 s. leſs than waſtel. Bread made of the whole wheat ſhall weigh a cocket and a half; ſo that a cocket ſhall weigh more than a waſtel by 5 s. Bread of treet ſhall weigh two waſtels, and bread of common wheat ſhall weigh two great cockets. When a quarter of wheat is ſold for 18 d. then waſtel-bread of a farthing, white and well baked, ſhall weigh 4 l. 10 s. when for 2 s. 3 l. 8 s. &c." by which we may perceive that waſtel-bread was the fineſt, cocket-bread next, then bread of treet, and laſtly, bread of common wheat; as we now call the fineſt bread wheaten or French bread, the ſecond ſort white bread, the third brown, or houſhold bread, &c. In Oxford anciently they had a coarſe bread called tuteſtyn, hoc eſt panem ſurfuraceum vel atrum. Hiſt. Cockettata lana, Wool duly entered and cocketted, or authorized to be tranſported.——Mandatum quod lanæ non cockettatæ, vel non cuſtumatæ ſub forisfactura capiantur. Trin. 16 Ed. 3. m. 37.

Cocklets, i. e. The meaneſt ſort of men, corruptly for cotſetts, that is, cottagers. Villani vero vel cocſeti, vel perdingi, vel qui ſunt viles vel inopes perſonæ, non ſunt inter legum judices numerandi. Leges H. 1. c. 29.

Cocodones, Was a ſort of French money, very bad: Prohibita eſt moneta alienigenarum ſurreptitia & illegitima, quam polardos, cocodones & roſarios appellabant, qui paulatim & latenter loco irrepſerunt ſterlingorum. Walſingham in Ed. 1. 1300. See Pollards.

Cocſetus, A cock-ſwain, coxon, boat-man, or ſeaman. Vid. Coggle.

Cocula, Coculum, A cogue, or little drinking-cup, in form of a ſmall boat, uſed eſpecially at ſea, and ſtill retained in a cogue of brandy.

Codicil (Codicillus) A ſchedule or ſupplement to a will, or ſome other writing: ſome writers, comparing a teſtament and a codicil together, call a teſtament a great will, and a codicil a little one; and compare a teſtament to a ſhip, and the codicil to a boat tied to it.

Codicil is uſed as an addition annexed to a teſtament, when any thing is omitted, which the teſtator would add, explain, alter or retract; and is the ſame with a teſtament, but that it is without an executor. See Swinb. p. 1. ſect. 1. and Touchſtone of Wills, pag. 21, 22.

Coffee, mentioned in ſtat. 15 Car. 2. cap. 11. A kind of drink, originally uſed among the Turks and Perſians, and from them brought to us: it is thick, blackiſh, and bitter, made from berries of that nature and name, and now agreeably in uſe as a wholeſome liquor. See Exciſe.

Cofez, Cottages. See Domeſday-Book.

Cofferer of the King's houſhold, Is a principal officer of his Majeſty's court, next under the comptroller, that in the counting-houſe, and elſewhere at other times, hath a ſpecial charge and overſight of other officers of the houſe, for their good demeanor and carriage in their offices, to all which he pays their wages. He is made mention of 39 Eliz. cap. 7.

Cofra, A coffer, cheſt, or trunk.——Cuſtos collegii & domus eleemoſynariæ de Pontefracto, & miniſtri ejuſdem non ſunt dotati quacunque dote temporali ſeu ſpirituali, vivente fundatore ejuſdem. Sed fuerunt ſtipendiarii capientes certam ſummam pecuniæ de cofris dicti fundatoris. Munimenta Hoſpit. SS. Trin. de Pontefracto, MS. f. 50.

Coggle. Upon ſome of the ſea-coaſts in Yorkſhire, a ſmall fiſhing-boat is called a coggle, i. e. a little cogge; and in ſome places by corruption a cobble, from the old Teuton. kogge, a ſhip, whence the Lat. coggo, cogga, &c. Anno 1066. venit ad hoc in Angliam (Rex Noricorum) trecentis coggonibus advectus. Mat. Weſt. ſub ann. Præparatis cogonibus, galleis & aliis navibus onerariis—— 600 naves, & 24 coggas bene præparatas. Mat. Paris ſub An. 1218. Hence our old Sax. cockede, a ſeaman; called in the laws of King Henry 1. c. 29. cocſeti; and cap. 81. cothſeti. The old gloſſary to theſe laws, made in the reign of Edward III. interprets cocſade, by Cocarius, which Du Freſne ſeems to miſunderſtand for coquus, a cook; whereas cocarius is indeed a cocker, or boat-man, from coca, coquia, a boat: as with little variation, a coggeſuanne, a cock-ſwain, now a coggeſon, or coxon, is an officer in a ſhip. Hence the old Lat. cogcio, coccio, a wandering and begging ſeaman; which Sir Henry Spelman (who rarely trifles) believes to have been ſo called from the Greek κωκυω, lugeo, ploro. But the true name and original was cogciones, cog-men, or boat-men, who after ſhipwreck, or loſſes by ſea, travelled about to defraud the people by begging and ſtealing, till they were reſtrained by many civil and good laws.——Ut iſti mangones & cogciones, qui ſine omni lege vagabundi vadunt per iſtam terram, non ſinantur vagari, & deceptiones hominibus agere. Vide Spelm. in voce, & Du Freſne.

Cognatione. See Coſinage.

Cogniſor, or Conuſor, Is he that paſſeth or acknowledgeth a fine of lands or tenements to another. Cogniſee or Conuſee is he to whom the fine is acknowledged. Weſt. Symb. par. 2. tit. Fines, ſect. 2. 32 H. 8. 5.

Cogniſance (Fr. Connuſance, Lat. Cognitio) Is uſed diverſly; ſometimes ſignifying a badge on a waterman or ſerving-man's ſleeve, which is commonly the giver's, whereby he is diſcerned to belong to this or that maſter. Sometimes an acknowledgment of fine, or confeſſion of a thing done, as Cognoſcens latro. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 3. 20. 32. Cognoſcere ad villanum. Id. lib. 4. tract. 3. cap. 16. As alſo to make cogniſance of taking a diſtreſs: ſometimes as an audience, or hearing of a matter judicially, as to take cogniſance. Sometimes a power or juriſdiction, as cogniſance of pleas is an ability to call a cauſe or plea out of another court, which no man can do but the King, except he can ſhew charters for it; for ſuch cogniſance lies not in preſcription. Manwood, cap. 3. num. 2. See The Terms of the law, and New Book of Entries, verb. Conuſance.

Cognitiones, Enſigns, arms, or rather a military coat, painted with arms: Cum viderunt hoſtes Chriſti armis, vexillis & cognitionibus picturatis, &c. Mat. Pariſ. 1250.

Cognitionibus mittendis, Is a writ to a juſtice, or other that hath power to take a fine, who having taken acknowledgment thereof, deferreth to certify it into the court of Common Pleas, commanding him to certify it. Reg. Orig. 68. b.

Cogs (Cogones) Seems to be a kind of veſſel or boat upon the river Ouſe and Humber, mentioned in Matth. Weſtm. An. Dom. 1066.——Venit ad hoc in Angliam (Rex Noricorum) trecentis coggonibus advectus. About Scarborough they have ſtill a ſort of ſmall veſſels which they call coggles, the little cogs.

Cogware, Seems to be a ſort of coarſe clothes made in the north of England, mentioned in the ſtat. 13 R. 2. c. 10. where there is mention alſo of cogmen, that is, buyers of, makers or dealers in ſuch cogware.

Cohua, Is a promiſcuous multitude of men in a market or fair, and cohuagium is a tribute paid by thoſe who meet there: Quieti ab omni thelonio, paſſagio, pontagio, cohuagio, pallagio, &c. Du Freſne.

Coif (Coifa, Fr. Coiffe) Our ſerjeants at law are otherwiſe called Serjeants of the coif, from the lawn coif they wear on their heads, under their cap, when they are created, and always after. See Serjeant, and Mat. Paris in an. 1259. and Forteſcue de LL. Angliæ, cap. 50.

The uſe of it was to cover tonſuram clericalem; otherwiſe called corona clericalis, becauſe the crown of the head was cloſe ſhaved, and a border of hair left round the lower part, which made it look like a crown. See Tena.

Coin (Cuneus, vel cuna) Seems to come from the old French Coigne, Angulus, a corner; which probably verifieth the opinion of ſuch as hold the ancienteſt ſort of coin to be cornered, and not round; of this lawyers ſubſtantive cuna, comes their verb cunare, to coin. Cromp. Juſt. of Peace, fol. 220. See Money.

Coinage (Cunagium) Is the ſtamping and making of money by the King's authority. Beſides this general ſignification relating to money, it is by a law provided, that all the tin in Cornwall, after it is caſt and wrought, ſhall be weighed, and marked by the King's officer with a lion rampant, which is called coinage. Britton, f. 186. and anno 11 H. 7. cap. 4. Some authors write it cunage. See Money.

Cointeſes,

Cointeſes, Are garments made of ſilk or fine linen: Mille enim milites & amplius, veſtiti ſerico ut vulgariter loquamur cointeſes, in nuptiis ex parte regis apparuerunt. Matt. Pariſ. 1252.

Cokettatio. The cocketting, or taking account of goods to be tranſported, in order to receive the due cuſtom, and give the ticket of diſcharge.——Ordinatio de cockettatione lanarum facta. Clauſ. 33 Ed. 3. m. 37.

Colbroke. See Pontes.

Colcheſter. For erecting hoſpitals and workhouſes there. 15 Geo. 2. c. 18.

Cole-ſeed, To what duties liable. 2 Will. & M. ſeſſ. 2. c. 4 ſect. 31.

Coliander-ſeed, or rather Coriander-ſeed, ſemen coriandri, is the ſeed of an herb ſo called; medicinal, and wholſome for divers good purpoſes; which ſee in Gerard's Herbal, lib. 2. ca. 379. It is numbered among the drugs that are to be garbled. Ann. 1 Jac. c. 19.

Colibertus, Collibertus, Con-libertus. Theſe coliberts in the Civil law were only thoſe freemen, who at the ſame time had been manumiſed by their lord or patron. But the condition of a colibert, in Engliſh tenure, was (as Sir Edward Coke aſſerts) the ſame with a ſokeman, or one who held in free ſocage; but yet was obliged to do cuſtomary ſervices for the lord. The word occurs in Domeſday; though I think no gloſſographer has cited it from thence.——Lib. Domeſday. Somerſet——Epiſcopus Winton. tenet Fantone, ibi quater xx villani, & quater xxii bordarii, & lxx ſervi, xvi coliberti, & xviii porcarii. ——So again Glouceſtreſcire:——Brictric, filius Algari tenebat Turnebiri T. R. E. ibi xxiii bordarii, & xv ſervi & iv coliberti, ibi ii molendini, &c.——They were certainly a middle ſort of tenants between ſervile and free, or ſuch as held their freedom of tenure under condition of ſuch works and ſervices, and were therefore the ſame landholders whom we meet with under the name of conditionales.

Libertate carens colibertus dicitur eſſe. Du Freſne. It ſeems alſo to be the ſame with Colonus, which ſee.

Collateral (Collateralis) Is derived from the Lat. laterale, that which hangeth by the ſide; and in the legal ſenſe it differs not from the ſame acceptation; for collateral aſſurance is that which is made over and beſide the deed itſelf. For example, If a man covenants with another, and enters into bond for the performance of his covenant, the bond is termed collateral aſſurance, becauſe it is external, and without the nature and eſſence of the covenant. And Cromp. Jur. fol. 185. ſaith, That to be ſubject to the feeding of the King's deer is collateral to the ſoil within the foreſt. In like manner we ſay, That the liberty to pitch booths, or ſtandings for a fair in another man's ground, is collateral to the ground. The private woods of a common perſon within a foreſt may not be cut without the King's licence; for it is a prerogative collateral to the ſoil. Manwood's Foreſt Laws, c. 8. num. 2.

Collateral warranty. See Warranty.

Collation of benefice (Collatio beneficii) Signifies properly the beſtowing of a benefice by the biſhop that hath it in his own gift or patronage, and differeth from inſtitution in this, that inſtitution into a benefice is performed by the biſhop, at the motion or preſentation of another who is patron of the ſame, or hath the patron's right for the time; yet is collation uſed for preſentation, 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 6. And there is a writ in the Regiſter, 31. b. called De collatione facto uni poſt mortem alterius, &c. directed to the juſtices of the Common Pleas, commanding them to direct their writ to the biſhop for the admitting a clerk in the place of another preſented by the King, who died during the ſuit between the King and the biſhop's clerk; for judgment once paſſed for the King's clerk, and he dying before he be admitted, the King may give his preſentation to another. See Benefice.

Collation of Seals. This was, when upon the ſame appending ribbon, or thread, or label, one ſeal was ſet on the back, or reverſe of the other.——Ad majorem ſecuritatem præmiſſorum ſigillum diſcreti viri officialis domini Patho-Well. Epiſcopi filo medio per modum collationis ſigillo meo apponi procuravi. Cartular. Abbat. Glaſton. MS. fol. 105. b.

Collatione facta uni poſt mortem alterius, Is a writ directed to the juſtices of the Common Pleas, commanding them to direct their writ to a biſhop for the admitting a clerk in the place of another preſented by the King, who during the ſuit between the King and the biſhop's clerk is departed this life; for judgment once paſt for the King's clerk, and he dying before admittance, the King may beſtow his preſentation to another. Regiſ. of Writs, fol. 31. b.

Collectors of the cuſtoms, Being ſued by any but the King, may plead the general iſſue. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 17.

Collatione heremitagii, Is a writ whereby the King conferreth the keeping of an hermitage upon a clerk Reg. Orig. fol. 303, 308.

College (Collegium) A particular corporation, company, or ſociety of men, having certain privileges founded by the King's licence; and for college in reputation, ſee 4 Rep. 106, 108. See Leaſe, Viſitor, Univerſity.

Collegiate church, A church built and endowed for a ſociety, or body corporate of a dean, or other preſident and ſecular prieſts, as canons or prebendaries in the ſaid church. There were many of theſe ſocieties diſtinguiſhed from the religious or regulars before the Reformation; and ſome are now eſtabliſhed, as Weſtminſter, Windſor, Ripon, Wolverhampton, Southwell, Manchester, &c.

Colloquium (a Colloquendo) A talking together or affirming of a thing, laid in declarations for words in actions of ſlander, &c. 1 Mod. Ca. 203. Carth. 90.

Colluſion (Colluſio) Is, in our Common law, a deceitful agreement or compact between two or more, for the one party to bring an action againſt the other to ſome evil purpoſe, as to defraud a third of his right, &c. See the Terms of the Law, fol. 142. and Brit. tit. Colluſion. See alſo the caſe of Colluſion, Reg. Orig. f. 179. a. Weſt. 2. ca. 32. and 8 H. 6. ca. 26. which gives the Quale Jus, and inquiry in ſuch caſes: gifts made by colluſion. See 50 E. 3. c. 6. See Covin, Fraud.

Colonia, Colcheſter in Eſſex.

Colonus, A huſbandman or villager, who was bound to pay yearly a certain tribute; or at certain times in the year to plough ſome part of the lord's land, and from hence comes the word clown: he was called by the Saxons gebure, and by the Dutch boure.

Colour (Color) Signifies, in a legal acceptation, a probable plea, but in truth falſe, and hath this end, to draw the trial of the cauſe from the jury to the judges. As for example, A. brings an aſſiſe of land againſt B. and B. ſaith he himſelf did let the ſame land to one C. for term of life, and afterwards did grant the reverſion to A. the demandant; and afterwards, C. the tenant for term of life died, after whoſe deceaſe A. the demandant, claiming the reverſion by force of the grant (whereto C. the tenant did never attorn) entered, upon whom B. entered, againſt whom A. for that entry brings this aſſiſe, &c. This is a good colour, becauſe the common people think the land will paſs by the grant without attornment, where indeed it will not paſs, &c. Alſo in an action of treſpaſs, colour muſt be given, of which there are an infinite number; take this one for an example of the reſt. In an action of treſpaſs, for taking away the plaintiff's beaſts, the defendant ſaith, that before the plaintiff had any thing in them, he himſelf was poſſeſſed of them as of his proper goods, and delivered them to A. to deliver to him again, when, &c. and A. gave them to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff ſuppoſing the property to be in A. at the time of the gift, took them, and the defendant took them from the plaintiff, whereupon the plaintiff brings an action; that is a good colour and a good plea. See more hereof, Doctor and Student, lib. 2. cap. 13. and Broke, tit. Colour, in Aſſiſe, Treſpaſs, &c. fol. 104.

Colour of office (Color officii) Is always taken in the worſt part, and ſignifies an act evilly done by the countenance of an office, and it bears a diſſembling face of the right of an office, whereas the office is but a veil to the falſhood; falſhood; and the thing is grounded upon vice, and the office is a ſhadow to it, it is but colore officii; whereas virtute officii, by virtue of the office, is taken always in the beſt part; and where the office is the juſt cauſe of the thing, and the thing is purſuing the office. Plowd. in Dive and Manningham's caſe, fol. 64. a.

Colpare arbores, To lop or top trees.——Poterant etiam colpare, & habere ramiliam (i. e. to lop, and to have the lop, or boughs cut off) & omnia genera arborum quæ in eodem mariſco fuerant. Contin. Hiſt. Croyland. p. 473.

Colpatura (Colpatura, colpatio) Lopping or topping of trees; a treſpaſs within the foreſt.—Qui autem forisfecerit in foreſta Regis de viridi ſive per colpaturam, ſive per eſbrumataram, ſive per foditionem turvarum, ſive per eſchoriationem moræ, ſive per culpationem ſub memore, &c. Aſſiſa de Foreſtis temp. Rich. 1. Rog. Hoved. p. 784.

Colpicium.—Hæc charta chirographata teſtatur quod Dominus Willielmus de Herle dedit——R. Peny ſervienti ſuo capitale meſſuagium de B. cum una carucata terræ, & paſtura ad octo boves infra boſcum de W. ſalvis colpiciis infra boſcum prædictum factis & in poſterum faciendis, donec ad perfectionem pervenerint, quod ſe contra omnimoda animalia defendere poſſint.——I ſuppoſe by colpiciis is meant ſamplars, or young poles, which being cut down, make levers or liſters; in Warwickſhire called colpices to this day. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Colpo, A cruſt, or rather a ſmall wax candle, a copo de cere; Hoveden tells us, that when the King of Scots came to the Engliſh court, as long as he ſtaid there, he had every day, De liberatiane triginta ſol. & duodecim vaſſellos dominicos, & quadraginta groſſos longos colpones de dominica candela Regis, & octoginta colpones de alia candela An. 1194.

Coltrops (Coltraps) An inſtrument of three iron ſpikes, ſo contrived that when thrown out of hand, one of the ſpikes is always erect, invented to caſt in the road, for galling the enemy's horſe. They were uſed by the Romans, and called Murices.

Comatio, i. e. Cutting off the hair.——Si quis Dominum ſuum occidat, ſi capiatur, nullo modo ſe redimat; ſed de ejus comatione, &c. damnatur. Leg. H. 1.

Combarones, The fellow-barons or commonalty of the Cinque ports. King Henry 3. grants to the barons, or freemen of the port of Feverſham,——Quietantium de omni theolonio, & conſuetudine——ſicut ipſi & anteceſſores ſui, & combarones ſui de quinque portibus eam melius & plenius habuerunt tempore Regis Edwardi.——Placit. tempore Ed. 1. & Ed. 2. MS. Penes Dom. Fountains. Now the title of Barons of the Cinque ports is reſtrained from the common inhabitants, to diſtinguiſh their repreſentatives in parliament; the word combaron is now likewiſe uſed for a fellow member, the baron and his combaron.

Combat (Duellum) Is a French word, ſignifying the ſame with certamen, prælium, pugna; and in our ancient law was a formal trial of a doubtful cauſe or quarrel by the ſwords or baſtons of two champions. Of this you may read at large both in divers Civilians, as Paris de Puteo de re militari & duello; Alciat. de duello; Hottoman diſputatio feudalium, cap. 42. and others; and common lawyers, namely Glanvill, lib. 14. c. 1. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. ca. 3. Britton, c. 22. Horne's Mirror of Juſtice, lib. 3. cap. des Exceptions in fine prox. & cap. Juramentum duelli. Dyer, fo. 301. num. 41, 42. Camden in his Brit. fol. 519. mentions a combat between Alan de la Zouch and John Earl of Warren, in the year 1269. The laſt trial by combat in England was in the ſixth year of King Charles the Firſt, between Donal Lord Rey appellant, and David Ramſey, Eſq; defendant, both Scotchmen; but after many formalities, the matter was referred to the King's will and pleaſure, whoſe favour inclined to Ramſey. Baker's Chron. f. 500. See Co. on Litt'. fo. 294. b. Origines Juridiciales, fo. 65. and Spelman's Gloſſary at large verbo Campus.

Comba terrae, and Cumba terrae, Does in ſome old charters occur for a low piece of ground, from Sax. cumbe, Brit. kum or cuum, Engl. comb, a valley or low place between two hills; ſo called in Devonſhire and Cornwall. And may villages in other parts of England obtained their name of comb from their ſituation. So Compton, Combwell, &c. See Kennet's Gloſſary in voce Combe.

Combe, in Domeſday, ſignifies a valley, as Mr. Agar reports.

Combinations to do unlawful acts, are puniſhable before the unlawful act is executed; which is to prevent the conſequence of combinations and conſpiracies, &c. 9 Rep. 57. See Confederacy.

Combuſtio pecuniae, The old way of trying mixt and corrupt money, by melting it down upon pavements into the Exechequer. In the time of Hen. 2. the biſhop of Salisbury being Treaſurer, conſidered, that though the money did anſwer numero & pondere, it might be deficient in value, becauſe mixed with copper or braſs. Therefore (Conſilio regis & regiæ ſimul & publicæ providere utilitati) a conſtitution was made, called The trial by combuſtion; the practice of which differed little or nothing from the preſent method of aſſaying ſilver. Vide Lownde's Eſſay upon Coin, p. 7. Whether this examination of money by combuſtion was to reduce an equation of money only of ſterling, viz. a due proportion of allay with copper; or to reduce it to fine pure ſilver without allay, doth not ſo eaſily appear. Vide. Hale of Sheriffs Accounts, p. 23.

Comin-ſeed (Semen cumini) Is a ſeed brought forth by an herb ſo called, which you may ſee deſcribed in Gerard's Herbal, lib. 2. cap. 416. This is placed among the drugs to be garbled, by 1 Jac. 19.

Comitatu commiſſo Is a writ, or commiſſion, whereby the ſheriffs is authorized to take upon him the command of the county. Reg. Orig. fol. 295. Co. Rep. lib. 3. fol. 72.

Comitatu et caſtro commiſſo, Is a writ whereby the charge of a county, together with the keeping of a caſtle, is committed to the ſheriff. Reg. Orig. f. 295. a.

Comitatus, A county. Ingulphus tells us, that England was firſt divided into counties by King Alfred, and counties into hundreds, and thoſe again into tithings; and Forteſcue writes, that Regnum Angliæ per comitatus ut regnum Franciæ per ballivatus diſtinguitur. Sometimes it is taken for the county court, as in Magna Charta, cap. 35. and Fleta, lib. 2. ca. 52. Nullus comitatus teneatur niſi de menſe in menſem. Sometimes it is taken for a territory or a juriſdicton of a particular place, as in Matt. Pariſ. anno 1234. Infra metas illas continentur quædam predia & etiam civitates & caſtra, quas comitatui ſuo aſſignare præſumunt. So in Charta H. 2. apud Hoveden: Caſtellum de Notingham cum comitatu, &c. De firmis mortuis & debitis, de quibus non eſt ſpes, fiat unus rotulus, & intituletur comitatus & legatur ſingulis annis ſuper compotum vicecomitum. Clauſ. 12 Ed. 1. m. 7. Dorſo.

Comitatus. "Of dead farms, and debts deſperate, whereof there is no hope, one roll be ſhall made and intituled comitatus, and read every year upon the account of ſheriffs." 10 Ed. 1. cap. unico.

Comitiva, A companion or fellow-traveller. It is mentioned in Brompton in Hen. 2. viz. Filio ſuo mandavit ut ſororem ſuam & comitivam ejus reverenter ſuſciperet. Sometimes it ſignifies a troop or company of robbers, as in Walſingham, anno 1366. Interpellaverunt auxilium Regis Angliæ contra magnas comitivas, &c.

Commandment (Preceptum) Is uſed diverſly in the Common law; ſometimes for the commandment of the King, when upon his mere motion, and from his own mouth, he ſendeth any man to priſon. Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol. 72. Commandment of the juſtices; and this commandment of the juſtices is either abſolute or ordinary. Abſolute, as when upon their own authority, in their wiſdom and diſcretion, they commit a man to priſon for a puniſhment. Ordinary, is when they commit one rather for ſafe cuſtody than puniſhment: and a man committed upon an ordinary commandment is bailable. Staundf. Pl. Cor. 73. Again, commandment is uſed for the offence of him that willeth another man to tranſgreſs the law, or to do any thing contrary to the law, as theft, murder, and ſuch like. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 19. Les civilians appellent ce commandment, Angelus de maleficiis. Termes de la Ley 145.

He

He that commandeth any one to do an unlawful act, is acceſſary to it and all the conſequences, if it be executed in the ſame manner as commanded: but if the commander revoke the command; or if the execution varies from it, or in the nature of the offence, in ſuch caſe he will not be acceſſary. 3 Inſt. 51, 57. 2 Inſt. 182. If a man command another to commit a felony on a particular perſon, and he doth it on another, as to kill A. and he kills B. or to burn the houſe of A. but he burns the houſe of B. or to ſteal one thing, and he ſteals another; or. to commit a felony of one kind, and he commits another; it is ſaid that the commander is not an acceſſary, becauſe the act done varies in ſubſtance from that which was commanded. H. C. P. 217. Plowd 475. But where a perſon commands or adviſes another to kill ſuch a one in the night, and he kills him in the day; or to kill him in the fields, and he kills him in the town; or to poiſon him, and he ſtabs or ſhoots him; theſe acts being the ſame felony in ſubſtance with that which was intended, and varying only in circumſtances, in reſpect to time, place, &c. the commander is as much an acceſſary as if there had been no variance at all between the command and the execution of it. 2 Hawk. 316. If I command a man to rob another, and he kills him in the attempt, though he doth not rob him, I am guilty of the murder; it being the direct and immediate effect of an act done in execution of my command to commit a felony: and if the command be to beat a perſon, and the perſon commanded beat him in ſuch a manner that he dies thereof, I am an acceſſary before to the felony; becauſe it happened in the execution of a command, which intended to endanger the life of the other. Alſo it is ſaid, that if one command another to burn the houſe of a certain perſon, and he by burning it burn likewiſe the houſe of another, the commander is equally acceſſary to the ſubſequent felony, as to that which was directly commanded. Ibid. 315, 316. To command or councel any one to commit burglary is felony without the benefit of clergy. Stat. 3 & 4 Will. & Mar. In forcible entries, &c. an infant or feme covert may be guilty in reſpect of actual violence done by them in perſon; though not in regard to what ſhall be done by others at their command, becauſe all ſuch commands of theirs are void. Co. Lit. 357. 1 Hawk. 147.

In treſpaſs, &c. the maſter ſhall be charged criminally for the act of the ſervant done by his command; but ſervants ſhall not be excuſed for committing any crime, when they act by command of their maſters who have no authority over them to give ſuch command. Doct. & Stud. cap. 42. H. C. P. 66. Kel. 13. And if a maſter commands his ſervant to diſtrain, and he abuſeth the diſtreſs, the ſervant ſhall anſwer it to the party injured, &c. Kitch. 372.

Commandry (Præceptoria) Was a manor or chief meſſuage, with lands and tenements appertaining thereto, belonging to the priory of St. John of Jeruſalem in England; and he who had the government of any ſuch manor or houſe was called the commander, who could not diſpoſe of it but to the uſe of the priory, only taking thence his own ſuſtenance, according to his degree, who was uſually a brother of the ſame priory. New Eagle in the county of Lincoln was, and ſtill is called the Commandry of Eagle, and did anciently belong to the priory. So were Slebach in Pembrokeſhire, and Shengay in Cambridgeſhire, commandries in the time of the Knights Templars, ſays Camden ——Theſe in many places of England are termed Temples; as Temple Bruere in Lincolnſhire, Temple Newſum in Yorkſhire, &c. becauſe they formerly belonged to the ſaid Templars. Commendam (Eccleſia commendata, vel cuſtodia ecclefia alicui commiſſa) Is a benefice or church-living, and being void, is commended to the care of ſome ſufficient clerk, to be ſupplied till it may be conveniently provided with a paſtor: and that this was the true original of this practice, may be read at large in Durandus de Sacris Eccleſiæ Miniſteriis & Beneficiis, lib. 5. c. 7. He to whom the church is commended hath the fruits and profits thereof only for a certain time, and the nature of the church is not changed thereby, but is as a thing depoſited in the hands of him to whom it is commended, who hath nothing but the cuſtody thereof, which may be revoked. When a perſon is made biſhop, there is a ceſſion of his benefice by the promotion; but if the King gives him power to retain his benefice, he ſhall continue parſon, and is ſaid to hold it in commendam. Hob. Rep. 144. Latche's Rep. 237. See Eccleſia commendata in Gloſſ. 10 Script.

As the King is the cauſe of avoidances on promotions to dignities, and the preſentations thereon belong to him, he often on the creation of biſhops grants them licences to hold their benefices in commendam; but this is uſually where the biſhopricks are ſmall, for the better ſupport of the dignity of the biſhops promoted: and it muſt be always before conſecration; for afterwards it comes too late, becauſe the benefice is then abſolutely void. A commendam, founded on the ſtatute 25 Hen. 8. is a diſpenſation from the ſupreme power to hold or take an eccleſiaſtical living contra jus poſitivum: and therere are ſeveral ſorts of commendams, as a commendam ſemeſtris, which is for the benefit of the church without any regard to the commendatory, being only a proviſional act of the ordinary for ſupplying the vacation of ſix months, in which time the patron is to preſent his clerk, and is but a ſequeſtration of the cure and fruits until ſuch time as the clerk is preſented: a commendam retinere, which is for a biſhop to retain benefices on his preferment; and theſe commendams are granted on the King's mandate to the archbiſhop, expreſſing his conſent, which continues the incumbency, ſo that there is no occaſion for inſtitution. A commendam recipere is to take a benefice de novo in the biſhop's own gift, or in the gift of ſome other patron, whoſe conſent muſt be obtained. Dyer 228. 3 Lev. 381. Hob. 143. Danv. 79. A commendam may be temporary for ſix or twelve months, two or three years, &c. or it may be perpetual, i. e. for life, when it is equal to a preſentation, without inſtitution or induction. But all diſpenſations beyond ſix months were only permiſſive at firſt, and granted to perſons of merit. The commendam retinere is for one or two years, &c. and ſometimes for three or ſix years, and doth not alter the eſtate which the incumbent had before: a commendam retinere, as long as the commendatory ſhould live and continue biſhop, hath been held good. Vaugh. 18. The commendam recepere muſt be for life, as other parſons and vicars enjoy their benefices; and as a patron cannot preſent to a full church, ſo neither can a commendam recipere be made to a church that is then full. Show. 414. A benefice cannot be commended by parts; any more than it may be preſented unto by parts; as that one ſhall have the glebe, another the tithes, &c. nor can a commendatory have a juris utrum or take to him and his ſucceſſors, ſue or be ſued, in a writ of annuity, &c. But a commenda perpetua may be admitted to do it. 11 H. 4. *Compl. Commendatary (Commendatarius) Is he that hath a church-living in commendam.

Commendatory letters, Are ſuch which are writ by one biſhop to another in behalf of any of his clergy, or other of his dioceſe travelling thither, that they may be received among the faithful, or that the clerk made be promoted, or that neceſſaries may be adminiſtered to both. Several forms of theſe letters may be ſeen in our hiſtorians, as in Bede, lib. 2. c. 18. Simeon of Durham, Anno 1125, &c.

Commendati homines, Perſons who by voluntary homage put themſelves under the protection of any ſuperior perior lord; for ancient homage was either predial, due for ſome tenure; or perſonal, which was either by compulſion, as a ſign of neceſſary ſubjection; or voluntary, with a deſire of protection. And thoſe who by doing voluntary homage put themſelves under the protection of any man of power, were ſaid commendare ſe in manus ejus, and were therefore ſometimes called homines ejus commendati; and ſometimes ſimply commendati, as often in Domeſday-Book. Though we have loſt the meaning of the phraſe, yet we uſe it in this compliment, Commend me to ſuch a friend, which is no leſs than, let him know I am his humble ſervant. Vide Spelman of Feuds, cap. 20.

Commendati dimidii, Perſons who depended on two ſeveral lords, and were to pay one half of their homage to this, the other to that. Subcommendati were ſuch as, like under-tenants, were under command of thoſe who were themſelves depending on a ſuperior lord. And again, Dimidii Subcommendati, who bear a double relation to ſuch depending lords.——— *Lib. Comminalty, or rather Communalty, or Commonalty; Signifies the middle ſort of the King's ſubjects, 2 Inſt. fol. 539. Tout le commune d'Engleterre, are ſuch of the commons as, raiſed beyond the ordinary peaſants, come to have the managing of offices, and by that means are one degree under burgeſſes, which are ſuperior to them both in order and authority, as in companies incorporated, they are ſaid to conſiſt of maſter, wardens, and commonalty; the firſt two being the chief, the middle ſort ſuch as are uſually called of the livery. See Communitas Regni. Blount ſays that this word commonalty includes all the King's ſubjects. As in Articul. ſuper chart. 28 Ed. 1. cap. Tout le commune d'Engleterre ſignifies all the people of England.

Commiſſary (Commiſſarius) Is a title of eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, appertaining to ſuch a one as exerciſeth ſpiritual juriſdiction (at the leaſt ſo far as his commiſſion permitteth) in places of the dioceſe ſo far diſtant from the chief city, as the chancellor cannot call the ſubjects to the biſhop's principal conſiſtory without their too great moleſtation. This commiſſary is by the Canoniſts termed commiſſarius, or officialis foraneus. Lyndewoode's Provin. c. 1. de Accuſat. &c. And he is ordained to this eſpecial end, that he ſupply the biſhop's juriſdiction and office in the out places of his dioceſe, or elſe in ſuch pariſhes as are peculiar to the biſhop, and exempted from the juriſdiction of the archdeacon; for where either by preſcription or compoſition, there are archdeacons that have juriſdiction within their archdeaconries, as in moſt places they there have, this commiſſary is ſuperfluous, and moſt commonly doth rather vex and diſturb the country for his lucre, than through conſcience ſeek to redreſs the lives of offenders. And therefore the biſhop taking preſtation-money of his archdeacons yearly pro exteriori juriſdictione, as it is ordinarily called, doth, by ſuperonerating their circuit with a commiſſary, not only wrong the archdeacons, but the poorer ſort of ſubjects much more, as common practice too frequently teacheth. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Commiſſion (Commiſſio) Is for the moſt part in the underſtanding of the law, as much as delegatio with the Civilians (ſee Broke, tit. Commiſſion) and is taken for the warrant, or letters patent, that all men exerciſing juriſdiction, either ordinary or extraordinary, have for their power to hear, or determine any cauſe or action. Of theſe, ſee divers in the table of the Regiſter Original verbo Commiſſio; yet this word ſometimes is extended further than to matters of judgment; as the commiſſion of purveyors. 11 H. 4. cap. 28. But with the epithet (high) is uſed for the honorable commiſſion-court, inſtituted and founded upon the ſtatute 1 Eliz. cap. 1. but for divers reaſons utterly aboliſhed and taken away by the ſtatute made 16 & 17 Car. 1. cap. 10. and that again explained by another act, 13 Car. 2. cap. 2.

Stat. 4 2 Ed. 3. In all inquiries the commiſſions ſhall be made to ſome of the juſtices of the one bench or of the other, or juſtices of aſſize, or juſtices of peace, with other of the moſt worthy of the country, ſaving in the office of eſcheatorſhip.

Stat. 4 Hen. 4. cap. 9. Becauſe many commiſſions be made in Chancery, ſometimes to inquire and certify, ſometimes to inquire, hear, and determine, and ſometimes to ſeize lands and goods, which commiſſions never come to the hands of the commiſſioners, whereupon writs iſſue out of the Exchequer to diſtrain ſuch commiſſioners, ſometimes to yield eſtreats of the fines, ſometimes to certify that which is found before them by inqueſt, and ſometimes to account of certain things contained in the commiſſions, to the great damage of the people; it is ordained that the chancellor uſe his power, as before time, in this caſe; and in other caſes the chancellor, calling to him ſuch juſtices as him ſhall pleaſe, or the chief baron of the Exchequer, ſhall have power by authority of parliament to provide remedy.

Stat. 7 Hen. 4. cap. 11. Whereas people be aſſigned by commiſſions, ſome to hear and determine, ſome to inquire and certify, and otherwiſe, whereby the commiſſioners be greviouſly diſtrained by proceſs of the Exchequer, where the ſaid commiſſioners were never knowing of ſuch commiſſions, nor the ſame commiſſions never came to their hands, it is ordained, that the barons of the Exchequer ſhall have power to receive the oath of ſuch commiſſioners, of their excuſe and diſcharge of the receipt of the ſaid commiſſions; and alſo that the barons and the juſtices of one bench and the other ſhall have power, by dedimus poteſtatem, to receive ſuch oath in the country, and the juſtices ſhall thereof certify the barons in the Exchequer, and the barons ſhall diſcharge the commiſſioners. And in likewiſe it ſhall be done for their heirs, executors, or land-tenants, provided that ſuch oaths be not taken but in the caſe of commiſſions of oyer and terminer, and of enquiry and certifying only.

Stat. 6 Ann. cap. 7. ſect. 27. No greater number of commiſſioners ſhall be made for the exceution of any office, than have been employed in the execution of ſuch office before the firſt day of this parliament.

Commiſſion of anticipation, Was a commiſſion under the great ſeal, to collect a ſubſidy before the day. ſtat. 5 Hen 8. Co. 12 Rep. fol. 120.

Commiſſion of aſſociation, Mentioned 18 Eliz. cap. 9. is a commiſſion under the great ſeal, to aſſociate two or more learned perſons, with the ſeveral juſtices in the ſeveral circuits and counties in Wales.

Commiſſion of bankrupts. Where any perſon is become a bankrupt within any of the ſtatutes againſt bankrupts, on ſecurity given to prove the party a bankrupt, &c. this commiſſion iſſues from the Lord Chancellor to certain commiſſioners appointed to take order with the bankrupt's lands and goods for the ſatiſaction of the creditors. Commiſſion of charitable uſes, Goes out of the Chancery to the biſhop and others, where lands given to charitable uſes are miſemployed, or there is any fraud or diſputes concerning them, to enquire of and redreſs the abuſe, &c. 43 Eliz. cap. 4.

Commiſſion of delegates, Is a commiſſion under the great ſeal to certain perſons, uſually two or three temporal lords, as many biſhops, and two judges of the law, to hit upon an appeal to the King in the court of Chancery, where any ſentence is given in any eccleſiaſtical cauſe by the archbiſhop. Stat. 25 Hen. 8. c. 19.

Commiſſion to enquire of faults gainſt the law, Was an ancient commiſſion ſent forth on extraordinary occaſions and corruptions.

Commiſſion

Commiſſion of lunacy, A commiſſion out of Chancery to inquire whether a perſon repreſented to be a lunatick be ſo or not, that if lunatick, the King may have the care of his eſtate, &c. 17 Ed. 2. c. 10.

Commiſſion of Rebellion (Commiſſio rebellionis) Is otherwiſe called a writ of rebellion, breve rebellionis, and iſſues when a man (after proclamation iſſued out of the Chancery or Exchequer, and made by the ſheriff, to preſent himſelf, under pain of his allegiance, to the court by a certain day) appears not; and this commiſſion is directed by the way of command to certain perſons, to the end that they, three, two, or one of them, do apprehend or cauſe to be apprehended the party, as a rebel and contemner of the king's laws, whereſoever they find him within the kingdom, and bring him, or cauſe him to be brought to the court, upon a day therein aſſigned. The true copy of this commiſſion or writ is in Cromp. Juriſd. Court de Star-Chamber, as alſo in Weſt's Sym. touching Proceedings in Chancery, ſect. 24.

Commiſſion of ſewers, Is directed to certain perſons, to ſee drains and ditches well kept and maintained in the marſhy and fenny parts of England, for the better conveyance of the water into the ſea, and preſerving the graſs upon the land. Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 5. 13 Eliz. c. 9.

Commiſſion of treaty with foreign princes, Is where leagues and treaties are made and tranſacted between ſtates and kingdoms, by their ambaſſadors and miniſters, for the mutual advantage of the kingdoms in alliance.

Commiſſion to take up men for war, Was a commiſſion to preſs or force men into the King's ſervice.

Commiſſioner (Commiſſionarius) Is he that hath commiſſion, as letters patent, or other lawful warrant to execute any publick office, as commiſſioners of the office of fines and *licences. Commitment, Is the ſending of a perſon to priſon by warrant or order, either for a crime, or for contumacy in refuſing to do a thing required. Where a man is committed for a crime, the commitment muſt be until diſcharged according to law; but for contumacy, until he comply and perform the thing required; for in that caſe he ſhall not lie till ſeſſions, but ſhall be diſcharged upon the performing his duty. Carth. 153. Trin. 2 Will. & Ma. in B. R.

All perſons who are apprehended for offences not bailable, as alſo perſons who neglect to offer bail for offences which are bailable, muſt be committed: and where-ever a juſtice of peace is impowered to bind a perſon over, or to cauſe him to do a certain thing, he may commit him quouſque, &c. if in his preſence he ſhall refuſe to be ſo bound, or to do ſuch thing. 2 *Haw. 1. Who may commit and to what place.

It is laid down by ſerjeant Hawkins, as a matter which ſeems agreed by all the old books, that whereſoever a conſtable or private perſon may juſtify the arreſting another for a felony or treaſon, he may alſo juſtify the ſending or bringing him to the common gaol; and that every private perſon has as much authority in caſes of this kind, as the ſheriff, or any other officer, and may juſtify ſuch impriſonment by his own authority, but not by the command of another. 2 Hawk. P. C. 116, 117.

But inaſmuch as it is certain, that a perſon lawfully making ſuch an arreſt may juſtify bringing the party to the conſtable, in order to be carried by him before a juſtice of peace; and inaſmuch as the ſtatutes of 1 & 2 P. & M. cap. 13. and 2 & 3 P. & M. cap. 10. which direct in what manner perſons brought before a juſtice of the peace for felony, ſhall be examined by him, in order to their being committed or bailed, ſeem clearly to ſuppoſe, that all ſuch perſons are to be brought before ſuch juſtice for ſuch purpoſe; and inaſmuch as the ſtatute of 31 Car. 2. commonly called the habeas corpus act, ſeems to ſuppoſe that all perſons, who are committed to priſon, are there detained by virtue of ſome warrant in writing, which ſeems to be intended of a commitment by ſome magiſtrate, and the conſtant tenor of the late books, practice, and opinions are agreeable hereto; it is certainly moſt adviſeable at this day, for any private perſon who arreſts another for felony, to cauſe him to be brought, as ſoon as conveniently he may, before ſome juſtice of peace, that he may be committed or bailed by him. 2 Hawk. P. C. 117. H. P. C. 91, 112. Dalt. c. 118.

It is certain, that the privy council, or any one or two of them, or ſecretary of ſtate, may lawfully commit perſons for treaſon, and for other offences againſt the ſtate, as in all ages they have done. 2 Hawk. P. C. 117.

By the ſtat. 31 Car. 2. cap. 2. it is enacted, "That no ſubject of this realm, being an inhabitant or reſiant of this kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, or town of Berwick upon Tweed, ſhall or may be ſent priſoner into Scotland, Ireland, Jerſey, Guernſey, Tangier, or into any parts, garriſons, iſlands, or places beyond the ſeas, which then were, or at any time hereafter ſhould be within or without the dominions of his Majeſty, his heirs or ſucceſſors; and that every ſuch impriſonment is by the ſaid ſtatute enacted and adjudged to be illegal; and that every ſubject ſo impriſoned ſhall have an action of falſe impriſonment, and recover treble coſts, and no leſs damages than 500 l. againſt the perſon making ſuch warrant, who ſhall alſo incur a præmunire.

By ſtat. 14 Ed. 3. cap. 10. it is enacted as followeth, "In the right of the gaols which were wont to be in ward of the ſheriffs, and annexed to their bailiwicks, it is aſſented and accorded, that they ſhall be rejoined to the ſheriffs, and the ſheriffs ſhall have the cuſtody of the ſame gaols as before this time they were wont to have, and they ſhall put in ſuch under-keepers for whom they will anſwer." And this is confirmed by 19 Hen. 7. cap. 10. Alſo it is recited by 5 Hen. 4 cap. 10. That divers conſtables of caſtles within the realm, being aſſigned juſtices of the peace by the King's commiſſion, had, by colour of ſuch commiſſion, uſed to take people, to whom they bore evil will, and impriſon them within the ſaid caſtles, till they had made fine and ranſom with the ſaid conſtables for their deliverance: and thereupon it is enacted, "That none be impriſoned by any juſtice of the peace, but only in the common gaol, ſaving to lords, and others which have gaols, their franchiſe in this caſe."

Since this ſtatute it has been held, that regularly no one can juſtify the detaining a priſoner in cuſtody out of the common gaol, unleſs there be ſome particular reaſon for ſo doing, as if the party be ſo dangerouſly ſick, that it would apparently hazard his life to ſend him to the gaol; or there be evident danger of a reſcous from rebels, &c. yet conſtant practice ſeems to authorize a commitment to a meſſenger; and it is ſaid, that it ſhall be intended to have been made in order for the carrying of the party to gaol. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

And it is ſaid, that if a conſtable bring a felon to gaol, and the gaoler refuſe to receive him, the town where he is conſtable ought to keep him till the next gaol-delivery. H. P. C. 114.

If a perſon arreſted in one county for a crime done in it, fly into another county, and be retaken there, he may be committed by a juſtice of the firſt county to the gaol of ſuch county. H. P. C. 93.

But by the better opinion, if he had before any arreſt fled into ſuch county, he muſt be committed to the gaol thereof by a juſtice of ſuch county. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118. Dalt. c. 118.

Alſo it ſeems to be laid down as a rule by ſome books, that any offender may be committed to the gaol next to the place where he was taken, whether it lie in the ſame county or not. 2 Hawk, P. C. 118.

As priſoners ought to be committed at firſt to the proper priſon, ſo ought they not to be removed thence, except in ſome ſpecial caſes; and to this purpoſe it is enacted by 31 Car. 2. cap. 2. "That if any ſubject of this realm ſhall be committed to any priſon, or in cuſtody of any officer or officers whatſoever, for any criminal, or ſuppoſed criminal matter, that the ſaid perſon ſhall not be removed from the ſaid priſon and cuſtody into the cuſtody of any other officer or officers, unleſs it be by habeas corpus, or ſome other legal writ, or where the priſoner is delivered to the conſtable or other inferior officer, to carry ſuch priſoner to ſome gaol; or where any perſon is ſent by order of any judge of aſſize, or juſtice of the peace, to any common workhouſe, or houſe of correction; or where the priſoner is removed from one priſon or place to another within the ſame county, in order to a trial or diſcharge by due courſe of law; or in caſe of ſudden fire or infection, or other neceſſity; upon pain that he who makes out, ſigns, or counterſigns, or obeys or executes ſuch warrant, ſhall forfeit to the party grieved 100 l. for the firſt offence, 200 l for the ſecond, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 118.

By ſtat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 19. Vagrants and other criminals, offenders, and perſons charged with ſmall offences, may for ſuch offences, or for want of ſureties, be committed either to the common gaol, or houſe of correction, as the juſtices in their judgment ſhall think proper.

By ſtat 24 Geo. 2. c. 55. If a perſon is apprehended, upon a warrant indorſed, in another county, for an offence not bailable, or if he ſhall not there find bail, he ſhall be carried back into the firſt county, and be committed, or if bailable, bailed by the juſtices in ſuch firſt county.

2 Examination of the perſon committed, and form of the commitment.

By ſtat. 2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 10. it is enacted, That every juſtice or juſtices, before whom any perſon ſhall be brought for manſlaughter or felony, or for ſuſpicion thereof, before he or they ſhall commit or ſend ſuch priſoner to ward, ſhall take the examination of ſuch priſoner, and information of thoſe that bring him, of the fact and circumſtances thereof, and the ſame, or as much thereof as ſhall be material to prove the felony, ſhall be put in writing, within two days after the ſaid examination, and the ſame ſhall certify in ſuch manner and form, and at ſuch time as they ſhould and ought to do; if ſuch priſoner ſo committed or ſent to ward had been bailed, or let to mainprize; upon ſuch pain as in 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13. is limited and appointed, for not taking or not certifying ſuch examinations, &c. And it is further enacted, That the ſaid juſtices ſhall have authority to bind all ſuch by recognizance or obligation as do declare any thing material to prove the manſlaughter or felony, to appear at the next general gaol delivery to be holden within the county, city, or town corporate where the trial of the ſaid manſlaughter or felony ſhall be, then and there to be given in evidence againſt the party; and that the ſaid juſtices ſhall certify the ſaid bonds taken before them, in like manner as they ought to certify bonds mentioned in ſaid former act, &c.

A juſtice of the peace may detain a priſoner a reaſonable time, in order to examine him; and it is ſaid that three days is a reaſonable time for this purpoſe. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119. Dalt. c. 125. 2 Inſt. 52, 591.

Every commitment muſt be in writing, and under the hand and ſeal, and ſhew the authority of him that made it, and the time and place, and muſt be directed to the keeper of the priſon. Hawk. P. C. 119. It may be either in the King's name, and only teſted by the juſtice, or in the juſtice's name. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119.

It may command the gaoler to keep the party in ſafe and cloſe cuſtody; for this being what he is obliged to do by law, it can be no fault to command him ſo to do. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119.

It ought to ſet forth the crime with convenient certainty, whether the commitment be by the privy council, or any other authority, otherwiſe the officer is not puniſhable by reaſon of ſuch mittimus for ſuffering the party to eſcape; and the court, before whom he is removed by habeas corpus, ought to diſcharge or bail him; and this doth not only hold where no cauſe at all is expreſſed in the commitment, but alſo where it is ſo looſely ſet forth, that the court cannot adjudge whether it were a reaſonable ground for impriſonment. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119.

A commitment for high treaſon or felony in general, without expreſſing the particular ſpecies, has been held good. 2 Hawk. P. C. 119. But now ſince the habeas corpus act, it ſeems that ſuch a general commitment is not good; and therefore where A. and B. were committed for aiding and abetting Sir James Montgomery to make his eſcape, who was committed by a warrant of a Secretary of State for high treaſon, on a habeas corpus they were admitted to bail, becauſe it did not appear what ſpecies of treaſon Sir James was guilty of. Skin. 596. 1 Salk. 347. S. C.

It is ſafe to ſet forth that the party is charged upon oath; but this is not neceſſary; for it hath been reſolved, that a commitment for treaſon, or for ſuſpicion of it, without ſetting forth any particular accuſation or ground of the ſuſpicion, is good. 2 Hawk. P. C. 120.

Every ſuch mittimus ought to have a lawful concluſion, viz. that the party be ſafely kept till he be delivered by law, or by order of law, or by due courſe of law, or that he be kept till further order, (which ſhall be intended of the order of law) or to the like effect; and if the party be committed only for want of bail, it ſeems to be a good concluſion of the commitment, that he be kept till he find bail; but a commitment till the perſon who makes it ſhall take further order, ſeems not to be good; and it ſeems that the party committed by ſuch or any other irregular mittimus may be bailed. 2 Hawk. P. C. 120.

Alſo a commitment grounded on an act of parliament ought to be conformable to the method preſcribed by ſuch ſtatute; as where the churchwardens of Northampton were committed on the 43 Eliz. cap. 2. and the warrant concluded in the common form, viz. Until they be duly diſcharged according to law; but the ſtatute appointing, that the party ſhould there remain until he ſhould account, for want of ſuch concluſion they were diſcharged. Carth. 152, 153.

So where one Bracey was committed by the commiſſioners of bankrupts for refuſing to anſwer, and they concluded their warrant, viz. Until he conform himſelf to our authority, and be thence delivered by due courſe of law; and upon the return of habeas corpus, he was diſcharged; for the ſtatute only impowers them to commit until he ſubmit himſelf to be by them examined. 1 Salk. 348.

So where the warrant returned of a commitment by commiſſioners of bankrupt for refuſing to be examined by them, was, viz. or otherwiſe diſcharged by due courſe of law, it was held naught; for the ſtatute is, he ſhall be committed until he ſubmit himſelf to be examined by the commiſſioners. 1 Salk. 351.

Defendant was committed, upon a conviction for deerſtealing, for a year, and till ſuch time as he ſhould be ſet in the pillory, whereas the act ſays for a year only, and therefore he was diſcharged. Comb. 395.

Record of commitment ſhould be the in preſent tenſe; per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 516.

Mr.

Mr. Baxter being committed by two juſtices of the peace of Middleſex to Clerkenwell priſon, was brought by habeas corpus to C. B. the gaoler returns, that he keeps him by virtue of a warrant from the juſtices of the peace, in theſe words, Whereas it hath been proved unto us, upon oath, that Richard Baxter, clerk, hath taken upon him to preach in an unlawful aſſembly, conventicle, or meeting, under colour or pretence of exerciſe of religion, contrary to the laws and ſtatutes of this realm, at Acton, where he now liveth in the ſaid county, not having ſubſcribed the oath by act of parliament in that caſe appointed to be taken; and whereas we having tendered to him the oath and declaration appointed to be taken by ſuch as ſhall offend againſt the ſaid ſtatute, which he has refuſed to take, we therefore ſend you herewith the body of Richard Baxter, ſtrictly charging and commanding you, in his Majeſty's name, to receive him the ſaid Richard Baxter into his Majeſty's ſaid priſon, and him there ſafely to keep ſix months, without bail or mainprize; and hereof, &c. This return the court held inſufficient, the warrant being vicious throughout. Firſt, There is nothing in the warrant to certify to the court on what ſtatute the juſtices proceed. Secondly, Admit they did proceed on the ſtatute 17 Car. 2. (which they muſt intend, if any) yet the commitment is ill, for ſeveral reaſons. Firſt, It does not appear that Baxter was guilty of any offence at all againſt this act. This law does not forbid conventicles, nor enjoin the taking of any oath, nor ſubſcribing any declaration; (nay, there is no ſuch thing as a declaration in the act) the preaching at conventicles is only one of the deſcriptions that are there given of ſuch perſons as are not to come within five miles, &c. and the taking the oath is only allowed them as a remedy to ſecure themſelves againſt the penalty of the law; the only offence then is, of perſons ſo deſcribed, to come within five miles of a corporation, or the place where they have taken upon them to preach, &c. Now it does not appear by the warrant, that Mr Baxter did either of theſe; it is only ſaid that he took upon him to preach at Acton, where he now liveth, which laſt words are only the ſuggeſtion of the juſtices, and not any part of that which is proved unto them, upon oath, as the crime intended to be puniſhed by the law muſt be. Secondly, It does not appear that he preached, &c. ſince the act of oblivion; neither is there any other deſcription given of him to make him the perſon intended to be reſtrained by the act; the time ſhould have been expreſſed. Thirdly, It is not ſaid who made the oath before the juſtices; ſo that the priſoner can have no remedy in caſe the oath were falſe. Fourthly, If his being at Acton were proved after, &c. yet it does not appear how long he continued there; poſſibly he might be ſent for before the juſtices, and committed immediately after his preaching, and then he could not be guilty of any reſidence puniſhable within this act; and for theſe reaſons he was diſcharged. 1 Bac. Abr. 382. See Bail.

3. Charges of the commitment, and duty of the gaoler.

By ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. cap. 10. it is enacted, "That every perſon and perſons that ſhall be committed to the common or uſual gaol within any county or liberty within this realm, by any juſtice or juſtices of the peace, for any offence or miſdemeanor, having means or ability thereunto, ſhall bear their own reaſonable charges for ſo conveying or ſending them to the ſaid gaol; and the charges alſo of ſuch as ſhall be appointed to guard them to ſuch gaol, and ſhall ſo guard them thither; and if any ſuch perſon or perſons ſo to be committed, ſhall refuſe, at the time of their commitment, and ſending to the ſaid gaol, to defray the ſaid charges, or ſhall not then pay or bear the ſame, that then ſuch juſtice or juſtices of the peace ſhall and may, by writing under his or their hand and ſeal, or hands and ſeals, give warrant to the conſtable or conſtables of the hundred, or conſtable or tithingman of the tithing or townſhip where ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall be dwelling and inhabit, or from whence he or they ſhall be committed, or where he or they ſhall have any goods within the county or liberty, to ſell ſuch and ſo much of the goods and chattels of the ſaid perſons, as by the diſcretion of the ſaid juſtice or juſtices of the peace ſhall ſatisfy and pay the charges of ſuch his or their conveying or ſending to the ſaid gaol; the appraiſement to be made by four of the honeſteſt inhabitants of the pariſh or tithing where ſuch goods or chattels ſhall remain and be; and the overplus of the money which ſhall be made thereof, to be delivered to the party to whom the ſaid goods ſhall belong.

And it is further enacted, "That if the ſaid perſons ſhall not have or be known to have any goods or chattels which may be ſold for the purpoſe aforeſaid, within the county or liberty, an indifferent aſſeſſment ſhall be made by the conſtables and churchwardens, and two or three other honeſt inhabitants of the pariſh or tithing where ſuch offenders ſhall be taken or apprehended; the ſaid taxation being allowed under the hand of one or more juſtice or juſtices of the peace, if there be ſuch conſtables or churchwardens there inhabiting; and in default of them, by four of the principal inhabitants of the ſaid pariſh, townſhip, or tithing, where ſuch offender ſhall be taken or apprehended; and if any ſo aſſeſſed ſhall refuſe to pay their ſaid taxation, then the juſtice or juſtices of the peace by whom the ſaid offender ſhall be committed to priſon, or any juſtice of the peace near adjoining, ſhall and may give warrant as aforeſaid to the conſtable, tithingman, or other officer, there to diſtrain the goods of any ſo aſſeſſed which ſhall refuſe to pay the ſame, and to ſell the ſame; and that ſuch perſon or perſons ſo authorized ſhall have full power ſo to diſtrain; and by appraiſement of four ſubſtantial inhabitants of the ſaid place, to ſell a ſufficient quantity of the goods and chattels of the perſon ſo refuſing for the levying of the ſaid taxation; and if any overplus of the money come by the ſale thereof, the ſame to be delivered to the owner."

By ſtat. 27 Geo. 2. c. 3. When any perſon, not having goods or money in the county where he is taken ſufficient to bear the charges of himſelf and of thoſe who convey him, is committed to gaol, or to the houſe of correction, by warrant from a juſtice, then on application by the conſtable or other officer who conveyed him, to any juſtice for ſuch county or place, ſuch juſtice ſhall upon oath examine into and aſcertain the reaſonable expences, and ſhall without fee by his warrant order the treaſurer to pay the ſame. But in Middleſex, the ſame ſhall be paid by the overſeers of the poor of the pariſh where the perſon was apprehended.

By the habeas corpus act, the charges of conveying an offender is limited not to exceed 12*d.* a mile; which may be an argument for allowing as much in this caſe, eſpecially as ſecurity is to be given before a man is removed on that act by habeas corpus, that he ſhall not eſcape by the way, which renders guards in that caſe not ſo neceſſary.

By ſtat. 3 Hen. 7. cap. 3. it is enacted, "That every ſheriff, bailiff of franchiſe, and every other perſon having authority or power of keeping of gaol, or of priſoners for felony, do certify the names of every ſuch priſoner in their keeping, and of every priſoner to them committed for any ſuch cauſe, at the next general gaol-delivery, in every county or franchiſe where any ſuch gaol ſhall be, there to be calendered before the juſtices of the deliverance of the ſame gaol, whereby they may, as well for the King as for the party, proceed to make deliverance of ſuch priſoners according to the law; on pain to forfeit to the King for every default there recorded, one hundred ſhillings.

4. How party committed may be diſcharged.

A perſon legally committed for a crime, certainly appearing to have been done by ſome one or other, cannot be lawfully diſcharged by any other but by the King, till he be acquitted on his trial, or have an ignoramus found by the grand jury, or none to proſecute him on a proclamation for that purpoſe, by the juſtices of gaol-delivery. 2 Hawk. P. C. 121.

But

But if a perſon be committed on a bare ſuſpicion, without any appeal or indictment for a ſuppoſed crime, where afterwards it appears that there was none; as for the murder of a perſon thought to be dead, who afterwards is found to be alive, it hath been holden that he may be ſafely diſmiſſed without any farther proceeding; for that he who ſuffers him to eſcape is properly puniſhable only as an acceſſory, where there can be no principal; and it would be hard to puniſh one for a contempt founded on a ſuſpicion appearing in ſo unconteſted a manner to be groundleſs. 2 Hawk. P. C. 121.

Committee, Is he or they to whom the conſideration or ordering of any matter is referred, either by ſome court, or conſent of parties to whom it belongeth. As in parliament, a bill being read, is either conſented unto and paſſed, or denied, or neither, but referred to the conſideration of ſome diſcreet men appointed by the houſe farther to examine it, who thereupon are called committees: Committee of the King. Weſt. Par. 2. Symb. tit. Chancery, ſect. 144. This word ſeemeth to be ſomething ſtrangely uſed in Kitchin, fol. 160. where the widow of the King's tenant being dead, is called The committee of the King; that is, one committed by the ancient laws of the land to the King's care and protection.

Common (Commune, i. e. quod ad omnes pertinet) Signifies that ſoil or water whereof the uſe is common to this or that town or lordſhip; as common of paſture, (commune paſturæ). Bracton, lib. 4. cap. 19 & 40. Common of fiſhing (commune piſcariæ). Idem, lib. 2. c. 34. Common of turbary, (commune turbariæ, i. e. of digging turves). Idem, lib. 4. c. 41. Common of eſtovers (commune eſtoveriorum). Kitch. fol. 94, &c.

Common is a right or privilege which one or more perſons claim to take or uſe, in ſome part or portion of that which another man's lands, waters, woods, &c. do naturally produce, without having an abſolute property in ſuch land, waters, wood, &c. It is called an incorporeal right, which lies in grant, as if originally commencing on ſome agreement between lords and tenants for ſome valuable purpoſes, which by age being formed into a preſcription continues, although there be no deed or inſtrument in writing which proves the original contract or argeement. 4 Co. 37. 2 Inſt. 65. 1 Vent. 387.

1. Of the ſeveral kinds of commons.

2. How far owner of the ſoil is intereſted.

3. How far the commoner is intereſted in the ſoil; and of the remedies given him by law.

4. Of approvement, incloſure, apportionment, and extinguiſhment.

1. Of the ſeveral kinds of commons.

The general diviſion of common, according to ſome books is into, firſt, Common of Paſture, which is a right or liberty that one or more have to feed or fodder their beaſts or cattle in another man's lands; ſecondly, A common of Turbary, or a liberty of cutting turves in another man's land or ſoil; thirdly, Common of Piſcary, or a right and liberty of taking fiſh in another's fiſh-pond, pool, or river; fourthly, Common of Eſtovers, which is a right of taking trees or loppings, ſhrubs, underwood in another's woods, coppices, &c. and fifthly, A liberty which in ſome manors the tenants have of digging and taking ſand, gravel, ſtone, &c. in the lord's ſoil. 1 Bac. Abr. 385.

But the word common is uſually underſtood of common of paſture, of which there are four kinds; firſt, Common appendant; ſecondly, Common appurtenant; thirdly, Common in groſs; fourthly, Common by reaſon of vicinage.

Common appendant and common appurtenant are in a manner confounded, as appears by Fitz. Nat. Br. fol. 180. and are defined to be a liberty of common appertaining to, or depending on, ſuch and ſuch a freehold, which common muſt be taken with beaſts commonable, as horſes, oxen, kine, and ſheep, being accounted fitteſt for the ploughman; and not of goats, geeſe, and hogs. But ſome make this difference, that common appurtenant may be ſevered from the land whereunto it appertains, but not common appendant; which (according to Sir Edward Coke, lib. 4. f. 37.) had this beginning: ——When a lord enfeoffed another in arable lands, to hold of him in ſocage, the feoffee, to maintain the ſervice of his plough, had at firſt, by the courteſy or permiſſion of his lord, common in his waſte for neceſſary beaſts, to ear and compoſt his land; and that for two cauſes: one, for that it was tacitly implied in the feoffment, by reaſon the feoffee could not till or compoſt his land without cattle, and cattle could not be ſuſtained without paſture; ſo by conſequence the feoffee had, as a thing neceſſary and incident, common in the waſtes and land of the lord. And this appears by the ancient books, temp. Ed. 1. tit. Common 24. and 17 Ed. 2. tit. Common 23. and 20 Ed. 3. tit. Admeaſurement 8. and by the ſtatute of Merton, c. 4. The ſecond reaſon was, for maintenance and advancement of tillage, which is much regarded and favoured by the law.

Common appendant of common right belongs to arable lands for beaſts that ſerve for maintenance of the plough; as horſes and oxen to plough the land, kine and ſheep to compoſt it; and for ſuch common there is no need to preſcribe. Co. Lit. 122. a. 26 Hen. 8. 4.

This kind of common is regularly appendant only to arable land, yet it may be claimed by that name, as appendant to a manor, farm, a plough-land, or a carve of land, though it may contain paſture, meadow, and wood; for it ſhall be preſumed to have been all originally arable land, though afterwards converted into meadow, paſture, &c. 1 Bac. Abr. 386.

It can only be for ſuch catle as are neceſſary in tillage; as oxen and horſes to plough the land, and cows and ſheep to compoſt it; and therefore a preſcription to have common appendant for all manner of cattle is not good, becauſe it comprehends goats, geeſe, and ſuch like, which is more properly common appurtenant. 1 Bac. Abr. 386.

Common appendant may by uſage be limited to any certain number of cattle. 1 Bac. Abr. 386.

A man may have common appendant for thirty cattle in one place, and to the ſame land common appendant alſo in another place, for part of his ſaid cattle, and ſo may take it where he pleaſes. 1 Bac. Abr. 386.

Common appendant may be through all the year, ſaving at a certain time in which the lord uſes it. 1 Bac. Abr. 386.

So it may be to common in the meadow, carried off till Candlemas. 1 Bac. Abr. 387.

If an inhabitant of one pariſh hath common appendant in certain waſte grounds, which lie in another pariſh, he ſhall be aſſeſſed and pay taxes in that pariſh where his farm lies, and not in that in which he hath common; for the common is only incident to it, and will paſs by a grant of the common; and is therefore to be conſidered as part of the farm to be taxed the higher. 1 Salk. 169.

A man preſcribed for common for all commonable beaſts as to his houſe appertaining, and in arreſt after verdict the court ſaid, that upon demurrer it might perhaps have been ill; but after verdict, though it be neither appendant nor appurtenant, &c. in ſtrictneſs of law, yet it is good enough, and they ought to intend it appurtenant; and judgment for the plaintiff. 2 Sid. 87. Trin. 1658. Stoneby v. Muſſenden.

A preſcription in common for all cattle, levant and couchant, as appendant to his cottage, which was held a good preſcription, by Holt Ch. J. and the court; and by Powell J. a cottage contains a curtilage, and ſo there may be a levancy and couchancy upon a cottage, and it has been ſo ſettled, and there is no difference between a meſſuage and a cottage as to this matter; the ſtatute De extentis Manerii ſays, that a cottage contains a curtilage, and that they will ſuppoſe a cottage has at leaſt a court to it. 2 Ld. Raym. Rep. 1015.

In replevin the plaintiff declares for taking 64 ſheep in a place called Somer-Lees in the pariſh of D. in Somerſet-ſhire

ſtire. The defendant avow the taking, for the place where, &c. contains 100 acres of land; that at and before the taking Rich. Bowes was ſeiſed in fee, &c. and that the cattle were damage feaſant, and that they diſtrained them as his bailiffs. The plaintiff in bar to this avowry pleads, that long before, and at the time when, &c. one Philip Biggs was ſeiſed in fee of a certain acre of land called Old Haſter, ſituate in D. and that he, and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he hath, have uſed to have a right of common for all manner of ſheep, &c. as appendant to the ſaid acre; and that the ſaid Biggs being ſo ſeiſed on the —— day of —— 5 W. 3. made a demiſe to J. S. for 99 years, if three lives ſo long lived; and that afterwards in 1704 J. S. made an under-leaſe to the plaintiff's father Robert Bennet for the reſidue of the term, who entered and was poſſeſſed, and afterwards died, leaving the plaintiff his executor, who thereupon, as ſuch, entered, and then avers that the lives are ſtill in being; and the ſaid plaintiff being ſo poſſeſſed upon the 28th of Sept. 1737, (being the day of the ſuppoſed taking) did put his cattle in the ſaid place to depaſture, and enjoy the common appendant to the ſaid acre; and that while they were ſo depaſturing the defendant ſeized them, and this he is ready to verify. The defendants reply, proteſting as to the common, and ſay, that before and at the time of the taking, the ſaid ſheep, nor any of them, were not levant or couchant on the land. To this the plaintiff demurs, and the defendants join in demurrer. Per cur. The ſingle queſtion upon this demurrer is, whether levancy and couchancy is incident to common appendant as well as to common appurtenant? If it be incident, then the plaintiff having by his plea in bar ſet forth, that they were levant and couchant, the defendant's replication has put a material matter in iſſue, and the demurrer muſt be over-ruled. Whether the plaintiff was bound to have pleaded levancy and couchancy is another queſtion, and might be very doubtful; but that is not now neceſſary to be determined, ſuppoſing the defendant's replication material, as we think it is. So likewiſe as to ſome other objections which have been made to the defendant's plea, I ſhall paſs them over as of no great weight. And as to the point in queſtion, I think it could never have been made a doubt at the bar, had the nature and original of common appendant been rightly underſtood. It was ſaid, that common appendant took its riſe from hence, that tenants of manors being by their tenure obliged to plough and till the lord's land, therefore they had the liberty of putting their cattle to be maintained in the lord's waſte, as they were to be employed in his ſervice. But I think that this opinion is a miſtake, and not warranted either by law or reaſon, and that were it to prevail, it would be attended with the utmoſt abſurdity and inconvenience. I admit that common appendant is incident only to arable land; ſo is Co. Litt. 122. b. and ſo are all the books as to this point, though in other matters of common appendant they differ widely. Therefore, as it is incident, it cannot be ſevered from the land, and then the conſequence of that will be, that if land be divided into never ſo many parts or parcels, the tenant of each diſtinct parcel has a right to ſuch common, as appendant to the land, in the ſame extent and degree as the tenant of the whole land had before the tenancy was divided; and ſo every tenant of the manor muſt keep the ſame number of horſes or oxen to plough and cultivate the lord's land, and on that account to feed them on the waſte, whether he be tenant of 100 acres or only of a ſingle acre, which ſhews the abſurdity of ſuch an opinion, and as fell out to be the very caſe at preſent. There is another anſwer to be given againſt that opinion, and that is, that a man may have common appendant for cows and ſheep as well as horſes and oxen, as appears by 1 Roll. Abr. 397. and ſeveral other books, and was admitted by the plaintiff's counſel very rightly; becauſe elſe, this being a replevin for ſheep, they would have made an end of their own caſe. But if there may be common appendant for ſheep, then ſuch common can never be enjoyed upon account of keeping them to plough the lord's land, becauſe they are not capable of being uſed in that manner. But I take this to be the true reaſon, that every tenant had a right to this common for his own benefit, and that, as he had no place for keeping his cattle after they had done ploughing his land, he might turn ſuch cattle as were employed by him that way upon the waſte of the lord, till the hay or corn was cut and the ground cleared; and this appears to be the caſe in Co. Litt. 122. before cited, and ſeems to be a clear and intelligible account of the matter. For if this account be true, that it was a right of common for ſuch cattle as were employed in ploughing the tenant's land, then it can extend to ſuch only as are levant and couchant on it: and there will be no abſurdity as in the former caſe; for then if the land be divided into parcels, the common will be divided into parcels likewiſe; and a tenant of one acre of land will never be able to claim common for 64 ſheep, as in the preſent caſe, becauſe the original tenant (perhaps) of 100 acres had a right to it. The conſequence of this will likewiſe be, that a tenant ſhall not be at liberty to borrow a ſtranger's cattle and put them on the common, at leaſt unleſs borrowed for a conſiderable time, ſo as to be employed, and be levant and couchant on the tenant's own land at other times. Having thus explained the nature and origin of common appendant, it becomes a very plain caſe for the defendants; but I will juſt add a caſe or two in confirmation of our opinion, tho' I think the caſe does not need it; and that is 4 Co. 38. b. and 1 Rol. Abr. 398. with ſeveral year-books there cited, all to prove, that common appendant is only for cattle levant and couchant on the land, for the reaſons I have before mentioned. Therefore we are all of opinion, that there muſt be judgment for the defendants. 4 Vin. 583. cites MS. Rep. Mich. 14 Geo. 2. in C. B.

Common appurtenant can only be claimed by preſcription, and is a right of commonage for beaſts, not only commonable, as horſes, oxen, cows, and ſheep, but likewiſe for beaſts not commonable, as ſwine, goats, and geeſe. Co. Litt. 122.

He that claims a common by force of a preſcription, as an inhabitant of a town, ſhall have no other cattle to common there, but what are levant and couchant within the ſame town. 1 Rol. Abr. 398.

If a man claims common by preſcription for all manner of commonable cattle in the land of another, as belonging to a tenement, this is a void preſcription; becauſe he does not ſay that it is for cattle levant and couchant upon the land to which he claims it to be appurtenant; for a man cannot have common ſans number appurtenant to land; and when he claims the common for all cattle commonable, and does not ſay for cattle levant and couchant upon the tenement, this ſhall be intended common ſans number, according to the words; for there is not any thing to limit it, when it does not ſay for cattle levant and couchant. 1 Rol. Abr. 398.

It ſeems agreed, that if a man has a grant of common for a certain number of beaſts, that the commoner may take the beaſts of a ſtranger, and put them upon the common, ſo that it exceed not the number. 1 Bac. Abr. 387.

Alſo in caſe of a common appurtenant it is ſaid, that where the number of the beaſts to be commoned is certain, the commoner may grant over the commonage of part, and reſerve the reſt for himſelf. 1 Jones 375. Cro. Car. 342.

It is clear, that if a commoner borrows cattle to manure his land, he may uſe the common with them; for by the borrowing he has a ſpecial property in them. 2 Aſſ. 84. 1 Rol. Abr. 396, 402. S. P.

It was ruled by Holt Ch. J. at Wincheſter Lent aſſize, 10 Will. 3. that a man cannot preſcribe for common appurtenant to a farm, becauſe it is uncertain of what a farm conſiſts, perhaps of 10 acres, or of 100 acres; but the preſcription ought to be laid to a meſſuage, and ſo many acres of land. But if there is an ancient farm, and the ſame lands always occupied with it, a man may have common of paſture to depaſture his cattle tilling that farm. Ld. Raym. Rep. 726. Hockley v. Lamb.

If there are two manors in one vill, the tenants of each may intercommon; and this is likewiſe called common by reaſon of vicinage. See 2 Bulſt. 87.

Every common by reaſon of vicinage is common appendant, and therefore a man need not preſcribe in a common pur cauſe de vicinage; but it is ſufficient to ſay, that he and all thoſe whoſe eſtate, &c. have uſed to intercommon cauſa vicinagii. 1 Rol. Abr. 399.

Common in groſs is a right of commonage which muſt be claimed by deed or preſcription, and has no relation to any land belonging to the commoner; it may be for a certain number of cattle, or ſans number. Co. Litt. 122. 2 Inſt. 427.

He that hath common in groſs for a certain number of cattle, may put in the cattle of a ſtranger, and uſe the common with them. 11 Hen. 6. 22. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 402. S. C.

Common appendant cannot be made common in groſs; for this is for cattle levant upon the land, to which, &c. and therefore it cannot be ſevered without extinguiſhment. 1 Rol. Abr. 401.

So common appurtenant for cattle levant and couchant upon the land cannot be made in groſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 402.

If A. and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he hath in the manor of D. have had time out of mind a fold-courſe, ſſ. common of paſture for any number of ſheep, not exceeding 300 in a certain field, as appurtenant to the ſaid manor, he may grant over his fold-courſe to another, and ſo make it in groſs; becauſe the common is for a certain number, and by the preſcription the ſheep are not to be levant and couchant upon the manor, but it is a common for ſo many ſheep appurtenant to the manor, which may be ſevered from the manor as well as an advowſon, without any prejudice to the owner of the land where the common is to be taken. 1 Rol. Abr. 402.

Common by reaſon of vicinage or neighbourhood is a liberty that the tenants of one lord in one town have to common with the tenants of another lord in another town. Thoſe that challenge this kind of common (which is uſually called intercommoning) may not put their cattle in the common of the other town; for then they are diſtrainable; but turning them into their own fields, if they ſtray into the neighbour common, they muſt be ſuffered. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Common by reaſon of vicinage is but an excuſe of treſpaſs, and no man can put his beaſts into the land in which he has ſuch common, but they muſt eſcape thither themſelves, and either of the parties that has ſuch neighbouring grounds may incloſe againſt the other. Co. Lit. 122. a.

But if there be common by reaſon of vicinage between two manors, and the lord of one manor incloſes, yet he ſhall not bind a copyholder of the ſame manor, but that he may have common pur cauſe de vicinage as he had before. 1 Rol. Abr. 399.

If there be common by reaſon of vicinage between the towns of A. and B. and A. hath 50 acres of common, and B. hath 100 acres of common, the inhabitants of A. cannot put more cattle into their common than the 50 acres will depaſture, without any regard to the common of B. for the original cauſe of this common was not the profit of either town, but to prevent ſuits in open countries for reciprocal eſcapes from one field into the other. 7 Co. 3. b.

2. How far owner of the ſoil is intereſted.

The lord of the ſoil hath ſuch an intereſt therein, that it ſeems agreed, that a cuſtom or preſcription totally to exclude him from all manner of profit is void, as unreaſonable and againſt law. Co. Lit. 122. a.

But one may preſcribe or alledge a cuſtom to have ſolam veſturam terræ, from ſuch a day to ſuch a day, and exclude the owner of the ſoil. Co. Lit. 122. a.

Alſo it ſeems by the better opinion, that a preſcription for ſol. & ſeparal' paſtur' at all times, ſo as to exclude the lord from feeding there, is good; for this does not exclude the lord of all the profits, for he ſhall have the mines, trees, &c. and is not like a preſcription for the the whole common to exclude the lord, for that is repugnant. See 1 Vent. 383. Vaugh. 251. 1 Sand. 350. 1 Lev. 268.

The lord without preſcription cannot agiſt the cattle of a ſtranger in the common. 1 Rol. Abr. 396.

But he may licenſe a ſtranger to put in his cattle, if he leaves ſufficient common for the commoners. 12 Mod. 6, 7.

If the lord alien in fee the ſoil where the common is taken, ſaving his power of paſture as lord, he ſhall have common there as lord; aliter without any ſaving; but the alienee of the ſoil may depaſture it, as the lord had done before. 1 Rol. Abr. 396.

If A. grants common to B. in a certain place, A. cannot afterwards erect a rick there; for by the grant the cattle of B. are to range over the whole place without reſtraint, and it ſhall not be in the power of A. to defeat his own grant. Cro. Jac. 271.

3. How far the commoner is intereſted in the ſoil; and of the remedies given him by law.

A commoner hath only a ſpecial and limited intereſt in the ſoil, but yet he ſhall have ſuch remedies as are commenſurate to his right, and therefore may diſtrain beaſts damage-feaſant, bring an action on the caſe, &c. but not being abſolute owner of the ſoil he cannot bring a general action of treſpaſs for a treſpaſs done upon the common. See Bridg. 10, 11. Godb. 123, 124. 2 Leon. 201, 202.

A commoner cannot regularly do any thing on the ſoil which tends to the melioration or improvement of the common, as cutting down of buſhes, fern, &c. 1 Sid. 251. 12 Hen. 8. 2. 13 Hen. 8. 15.

Therefore if a common every year in a flood is ſurrounded with water, the commoner cannot make a trench in the ſoil to avoid the water, becauſe he has nothing to do with the ſoil, but only to take the graſs with the mouth of the cattle. 1 Rol. Abr. 405. 2 Bulſt. 116.

Every commoner may break the common if it be incloſed, and although he does not put his cattle in at the time, yet his right of commonage ſhall excuſe him from being a treſpaſſer. Lit. Rep. 38. See 1 Rol. Abr. 406.

If a tenant of the freehold ploughs it, and ſows it with corn, the commoner may put in his cattle, and therewith eat the corn growing upon the land; ſo if he lets his corn lie in the field beyond the uſual time, the other commoners may notwithſtanding put in their beaſts. 2 Leon. 202, 203.

In treſpaſs by the lord, the defendant juſtified the taking the cattle damage-feaſant, ſetting forth a cuſtom that the plaintiff, who was lord of the manor, had the ſole right to the place where, &c. entirely to himſelf until Lammas day, but that afterwards it was common to the tenants, ſo as the plaintiff could put in three horſes, and no more; and becauſe after Lammas day, &c. he put in more, the defendant took them damage feaſant. This cuſtom was found for the defendant. It was moved, that defendant being only a commoner, could not take cattle, and the place where, &c. is the ſoil of the plaintiff, ſo as his cattle cannot be damage-feaſant on his own ſoil. Two juſtices held the taking good, becauſe the lord is to be excluded by cuſtom for all but his ſtint, and the commoners have no other remedy to preſerve their right; but two other judges doubted, becauſe the commoners ought not only to ſhew the cuſtom, but alſo the uſage to diſtrain the lord's cattle damage-feaſant when he exceeded his ſtint. Cro. J. 201. pl. 1. Trin. 6 Jac. B. R. Kenrick v. Pargiter.

If a grant be made to J. S. of common, and after the the ſaid grant the grantor erects a ſtack of corn there, the grantee may put in his cattle to uſe his common, and may uſe the whole place for his common, and eat the hay. Reſolved. But for want of ſhewing the indenture of grant, which is the ground of his title, judgment was given againſt him. Yelv. 201. Hill. 8 Jac. B. R. Farmer v. Hunt.

Treſpaſs for carrying away thirty load of thorns in a place called the common waſte; the defendant juſtifies for that he was ſeiſed of a meſſuage and three acres of land, and that he and all thoſe, &c. have uſed to cut down omnes ſpinas creſcentes upon the ſaid place, to ſpend

in their houſes, or about the ſaid lands, as pertaining to the ſaid houſe and lands; the plaintiff replied, that R. S. was ſeiſed in fee of the manor of C. whereof, &c. and granted licence to him to take the thorns, whereupon he cut them down, and the defendant afterwards took them. It was held, that the lord may not cut down any thorns, nor licenſe any other to cut them, for that his preſcription excludes the lord; but if the defendant had claimed common of Eſtovers only, then if the lord had firſt cut down the thorns, the commoner might not take them; wherefore it was adjudged for the defendant. Cro. J. 256. pl. 15. Mich. 8 Jac. B. R. Douglas v. Kendal.

A man had common for his cattle levant and couchant upon his land in a field called B. when it was ſowed with corn, and he put in his cattle when part of it was ſowed; the court held, that ſowing parcel of the field ſhould not hinder him from uſing his common in the reſidue, becauſe part of the field might be ſowed by covin, on purpoſe to hinder the commoner from taking his common. Brownl. 189. Mich. 8 Jac. Truelock v. Rigsby.

A commoner cannot generally juſtify the cutting and carrying away buſhes from the common, but by a ſpecial preſcription he may juſtify the ſame; per tot. cur. Godb. 182. pl. 258. Mich. 9. Jac. C. B. Anon'.

The lord or commoner may drive the beaſts of a commoner mixed with the beaſts of a ſtranger to a convenient place to ſever them, and may drive the beaſts of the ſtranger out of the common without any cuſtom. 3 Lev. 40. Hill. 33 Car. 2. C. B. Thomas v. Nichols.

If a ſtranger who had no right of common put in cattle, any commoner might diſtrain. Freem. Rep. 273. pl. 300. Paſch. 1698. Dixon v. James.

If a commoner finds conies on the ſoil ſpoiling the graſs, he may kill and take them, though they are put there by the lord of the manor; for he has no remedy by way of action againſt the lord; but this was a matter long doubted of, becauſe the property was thought to be in the lord ratione ſoli, and the beaſts were not at their natural liberty; but it was allowed, that there could be no incloſure on the common to diſturb the right of commoning; and ſo in reſpect of the commoner the beaſts were uninclоſed. 1 Rol. Abr. 405. 1 Bac. Abr. 390.

It is a general rule, that a commoner cannot diſtrain or chaſe out the cattle of the lord, or tertenant, damage-feaſant, and that if the lord ſurcharges the common, his proper remedy is an action on the caſe. See 2 Leon. 203. Yelv. 104, 129. Cro. Jac. 208. 1 Brownl. 187. Godb. 182.

And if there be a cuſtom, that a cloſe ought to lie freſh and hained every ſecond year till Lady-day after the corn cut and carried away; and J. S. hath uſed time out of mind to have common in the ſaid cloſe after Lady-day, till it is ſowed again with corn, for his cattle levant and couchant upon a certain tenement as appurtenant thereto; in this caſe, if the lord of the ſoil of the ſaid cloſe puts in his cattle in the ſaid cloſe, againſt the cuſtom, when it ought to lie freſh and hained by cuſtom, the ſaid J. S. though he be but a commoner, yet he may take the cattle of the lord there damage-feaſant, and juſtify in an action of treſpaſs brought againſt him by the lord of the cloſe where he took the cattle; for if the lord may eat the graſs before the common is to be taken purſuant to the cuſtom, the tenant would be defeated of all the benefit of his common. 1 Rol. Abr. 405, 406.

If I have common of Eſtovers in the woods of J. S. and J. S. cuts part, or all the wood, yet I cannot take any part of this which is cut, but ſhall be put to my aſſiſe, or caſe, as my eſtate is. 1 Rol. Abr. 406. Cro. Eliz. 826. S. P.

The writ of admeaſurement lies by one commoner againſt another; but if the tenant ſurcharges the common, the lord ſhall not have a writ of admeaſurement againſt the tenant. F. N. B. 125.

So if the lord ſurcharge the common, or approve without leaving ſufficient, the tenant ſhall not have a writ of admeaſurement againſt him, but an aſſiſe. F. N. B. 125.

No writ of admeaſurement lies againſt a commoner ſans number, nor ſhall his common be admeaſured. F. N. B. 125.

One commoner cannot diſtrain the cattle of another, for the right of commonage which every commoner has, runs through the whole land. Style 428. Yelv. 104. 2 Lutw. 1240. 22 Aſſ. pl. 25.

A commoner may juſtify the taking of the cattle of a ſtranger damage-feaſant upon the common in his own name, for the intereſt which he has in the common. 1 Rol. Abr. 405, 320. Yelv. 130. Godb. 185. Jenk. 144.

But in his avowry he muſt alledge a particular damage, as that he could not have common in tam amplo modo quo debuit & conſuevit, for without a particular damage he can no more diſtrain the beaſts of a ſtranger than bring an action upon the caſe. 3 Lev. 104.

If in an action of treſpaſs brought by a commoner againſt a ſtranger, for putting his cattle in the common, per quod communiam in tam amplo modo habere non potuit, the defendant pleads a licence from the lord to put his cattle there, but does not aver there is ſufficient common left for the commoners; this is a good plea; for though it may be objected, the plaintiff may reply thereto, yet being the very giſt of the action, the defendant ſhould have pleaded thereto. 2 Mod. 6.

But in an action againſt the lord, the plaintiff muſt particularly ſhew the ſurcharge. 2 Mod. 7.

4. Of approvement, incloſure, apportionment, and extinguiſhment.

By the order of the common law, there could be no approvement, becauſe the common iſſued out of the whole waſte. 2 Inſt. 85. See the ſtat. of Merton, 20 Hen. 3. c. 4. ſtat. Weſt. 2. c. 46. and ſtat. 3 Ed. 6. c. 3. under title Approvement.

Judgment was had againſt the inhabitants of S. to repair at their own proper coſts the fences and dykes thrown down, and becauſe it was not done, a writ of inquiry of damages iſſued, and 500 l. damages found, and diſtringas to the ſheriff to levy it upon the vills; upon which they came by their counſel, and prayed to have liberty to plead, inaſmuch as by this way they are condemned unheard, and that by an inqueſt againſt which no attaint lies. And it was doubted, whether a ſcire facias ought to have iſſued before the diſtringas; but upon conſideration the court thought, that the diſtringas ought to have contained a ſcire facias in it, and ſo they obtained leave to plead. Sid. 107. pl. 19. Hill. 14 & 15 Car. 2. *B. After money levied by diſtringas containing fieri facias grounded on W. 2. cap. 46. for throwing down incloſures, and inquiſition taken by the ſheriff; Jones prayed that the money might be brought into court, and remain, and that he might have time to plead, which the court granted. Keb. 479. pl. 7. Paſch. 15 Car. 2. B. R. The King v. The inhabitants of the foreſt of Dean.

Upon an inquiſition for throwing down fences, and 80 l. damages aſſeſſed, a diſtringas iſſued, and defendants came in, and pleaded, that it was not done nocłanter, which was found againſt them, and ſecond damages given; and it was moved to ſet aſide the firſt damages, firſt, Becauſe the inquiſition is only to aſcertain what vills have done it, to the intent that a diſtringas may go out, and it was never intended to conclude any in point of damages, being only an inqueſt of office, againſt which no attaint lies. Secondly, Becauſe thoſe damages are aſſeſſed upon us before we were ſummoned, and ſo we were not heard for our excuſe, and to mitigate them, but condemned and concluded not heard, nor not ſummoned, and they cited Cro. C. 280. and Cro. E. 859. 2 Inſt. 477. Cro. Car. 580. And they ſaid, that they might plead to the right upon the diſtringas, ſo that it is not reaſon that they ſhould be concluded as to the damages by the inquiſition; but per cur. The firſt damages ſhould ſtand, and ſhall not be vitiated by the ſecond, becauſe the ſecond verdict as to the damages is void, inaſmuch as the ſole matter to be inquired upon the ſecond iſſue is the nocłanter; but for better ſecurity they directed the proſecutors to releaſe the ſecond damages, and as to the miſchief objected, that the damages being aſſeſſed by inqueſt of office no attaint lies, that is true, but cannot be properly ſaid miſchief, becauſe it is ſo enacted by parliament, that the damages ſhall be aſſeſſed as before; yet if they are exceſſive, the party is not without remedy; for when they come in to plead to the nocłanter, if the damages were outragious, they ought to have taken in their plea, viz. Proteſtando, that the damages were outragious; and after might have pleaded, firſt, The damages were only of ſuch a value, and upon this other iſſue ſhould be taken; wherefore the counſel for the defendants in this cauſe moved, that they may now plead to the exceſſiveneſs of the damages; but inaſmuch as they have not taken it by proteſtando before the firſt iſſue found againſt them, the court would not ſuffer them, but gave judgment for the plaintiff, and that the 80 l. being levied upon the diſtringas, they ſhall have it out of the court, notwithſtanding the ſecond damages given by the ſecond verdict. Sid. 212. pl. 10. Trin. 16 Car. 2. *B. A releaſe of common in one acre, is an extinguiſhment of the whole common. See 4 Co. 37.

A copyholder had common in his lord's waſte, the lord grants and confirms the copyhold land and meſſuage to him and his heirs cum pertinentiis; it was reſolved, that the common was extinct, for it was annexed to his cuſtomary eſtate by the cuſtom: which eſtate being determined, the common is alſo gone, and cannot continue without words to that intent, and cum pertinentiis will not do, for the common was not appurtenant to the freehold eſtate granted by the lord. Hob. 190. *Cro. But if A. as appurtenant to a certain meſſuage and twenty acres of land, hath common in the lands of B. and after B. enfeoffs A. of the ſaid lands in which, &c. per quod the common is extinguiſhed; and after A. leaſes to B. the ſaid meſſuage and twenty acres of land, with all commons, profits, and commodities thereto appertaining, vel occupat' vel uſitat' cum præd' meſſuagio, this is a good grant of a new common for the time; for though it were not common in the hands of the leſſor, yet it is quaſi common uſed therewith; and although it be not the ſame common as was uſed before, yet it is like the common; but yet becauſe it was not there averred, that this common was therewith uſed at the time of the leaſe, it was adjudged againſt the defendant who claimed the common. Cro. Eliz. 570.

A copyholder that has common of paſture in the waſtes of the lord out of the manor, has the ſame, as belonging to his land, and if he enfranchiſe the copyhold eſtate, ſtill his common remains; but where a copyholder has common in the waſtes within the manor, that belongs to his eſtate, and if the eſtate be enfranchiſed, the common is extinct. 1 Salk. 170, 364.

Alſo it hath been ruled in equity, that if the lord of the manor enfranchiſes a copyhold with all commons thereunto belonging or appertaining, and afterward buys in all the other copyholds, and then diſputes the right of common with the copyholders he had enfranchiſed, and recovers at law; tho' the common be extinct at law, yet it ſhall ſubſiſt in equity, and the ſame right of common as belonged to the copyhold will be decreed. 2 Vern. 250.

In a nocłanter the defendants pleaded, that the manor of F. is parcel of the demeſnes of the duchy of Cornwall, and that the King, &c. was ſeiſed of the manor in fee, as parcel of the ſaid duchy, and that H. common, in which, &c. was parcel of the ſaid manor, and that all the tenants of any tenements held of the ſaid manor lying in the vill of H. have, time out of mind, had common of paſture for all the cattle levant and couchant, &c. at all times of the year in Hermitage Common, and that the proſecutor de ſon tort had encloſed it, ſo as they could not enter, &c. and had not left them ſufficient common, and iſſue was taken upon this preſcription modo & forma, &c. and upon evidence at the bar it appeared, firſt, that all the tenements in Hermitage, unto which the common of paſture was claimed, were heretofore parcel of the abbey of Sarum, and that by the diſſolution of that abbey, the ſame came to H. 8. before the birth of Ed. 6. ſo that the duchy of Cornwall was likewiſe, at the ſame time, in the poſſeſſion of H. 8. for want of a Duke of Cornwall, and hereby an unity of poſſeſſion, both of the tenements to which the common of paſture appertained, and alſo of Hermitage Common (the place where the common of paſture was to be had) was at that time in poſſeſſion of King H. 8. and it likewiſe appeared, that the tenements in Hermitage were granted to the ſeveral tenants after the unity of poſſeſſion, and thereupon the counſel of the proſecutor inſiſted, that by this unity the preſcription was deſtroyed, and the common of paſture quite extinct. But after much debate it was unanimouſly reſolved, per Holt Ch. J. and the whole court, that this was not ſuch an unity of poſſeſſion as would deſtroy the preſcription; for though King H. 8. had an eſtate in fee in the lands a qua, and alſo in the lands in qua, yet he had not as perdurable an eſtate in one as he had in the other; for the quality of the eſtate differed; becauſe in the manor of Fordington, which was a parcel of the duchy of Cornwall, and in Hermitage Common in qua, &c. which was a parcel of that manor, King H. 8. had only a fee determinable on the birth of a Duke of Cornwall, which is a baſe fee; but in the tenements in Hermitage parcel of the abbey a qua, he had a pure fee ſimple indeterminable jure coronæ, and therefore an unity of ſuch eſtates work no extinguiſhment; for where an unity of poſſeſſion doth extinguiſh a preſcriptive right, it is requiſite that the party ſhould have an eſtate in the lands a qua, and in the lands in qua, equal in duration, quality, and all other circumſtances

Communia placita inter ſubditos ex jure noſtro, quod commune vocant, in hoc diſceptantur, that is, the pleas or controverſies between common perſons are there tried. And the juſtices of that court in legal records are termed juſticiarii de banco. Coke on Littl. fo. 71. b. See Common Pleas.

Common day in plea of land (Mentioned in 13 Rich. 2. ſtat. 1. cap. 17.) Signifies an ordinary day in court, as Octabis Hillarii, Quindena Paſchæ, &c. which you may ſee in the ſtatute of 51 H. 3. concerning general days in the bench.

Common fine (Finis communis.) of this Fleta, lib. 1. c. 48. ſect. Quibus, hath theſe words, Quibus expeditis (ſpeaking of the buſineſs finiſhed by juſtices in eyre) conſueverunt juſticiarii imponere villatis, juratoribus, hundredis & toti comitatui concelamentum, et omnes ſeparatim amerciare, quod videtur voluntarium, cum de perjurio & concelamento non fuerint convicti, ſed potius diſpenſandum eſſet cum eis quod animas in ſtatera poſuerint pro pacis conſervatione. And a little following he ſaith, Quod communes miſericordiæ, vel fines comitatuum amerciatorum in finibus itinerum juſticiariorum, &c. Common fine is a certain ſum of money which the reſiants, within the view of ſome leets, pay to the lord thereof, called in divers places head-ſilver, in others cert-money, or certum letæ, and head-pence; and was firſt granted to the lord towards the charge of his purchaſe of the court-leet, whereby the reſiants had now the eaſe to do their ſuit royal nearer home, and not to be compelled to go to the ſheriff's turn: as in the manor of Sheapſhead, in com. Leic. every reſiant pays 1 d. per poll to the lord at the court held after Michaelmas, which is there called common fine. There is alſo common fine of the county; for which ſee Fleta, lib. 7. c. 48. and the ſtatute of 3 Ed. 1. cap. 18. But the clerk of the market ſhall take no common fine, ſtat. 13 R. 2. cap. 4. For common fine the lord cannot diſtrain without a preſcription. Godfrey's caſe, Coke's Reports. See Cert-money.

Commons houſe of parliament, Is ſo called, becauſe the commons of the realm, that is, knights, citizens, and burgeſſes repreſenting them, do ſit there. Cromp. Juriſd. 9.

Common intendment, Is common underſtanding or meaning according to the ſubject matter, not ſtrained to an exotick ſenſe. Bar to common intendment is an ordinary or general bar, which commonly diſables the declaration of the plaintiff. Of common intendment, a will ſhall not be ſuppoſed to be made by colluſion. Coke on Littl. fol. 78. b. See Intendment.

Common law. After the decay of the Roman empire, three ſorts of the German people invaded the Britons, viz. the Saxons, the Angles, who were a neighbouring people, and the Jutes: from the laſt came the Kentiſh men, and the inhabitants of the iſle of Wight; from the Saxons came the people called Eaſt, South, and Weſt Saxons; and from the Angles came the Eaſt Angles, Mercians, and Northumbrians. As the people had different cuſtoms, ſo they inclined to the different laws by which their anceſtors were governed; but the cuſtoms of the Weſt Saxons and Mercians, who dwelt in the midland counties, being preferred before the reſt, were for that reaſon called Jus Anglorum; but the particular names were Weſt Saxonlage, and Merchenlage; and by theſe laws thoſe people were governed for many ages. But the Eaſt Saxons being afterwards ſubdued by the Danes, their cuſtoms were introduced, and a third law was ſubſtituted, which was called Dane-lage.

The Danes being overcome by the Normans, Henry biſhop of Wincheſter, who was nearly related to the Conqueror, told our hiſtorian Gervas of Tilbury that upon due conſideration of all thoſe laws and cuſtoms, the Conqueror abrogated ſome, and eſtabliſhed others; to which he added ſome of his country laws, which he adjudged moſt to conduce to the preſervation of the peace, and the quiet and eaſe of the people. And this is what we now call the Common law. But this was not the original of the Common law; for Ethelbert, the firſt Chriſtian king of this nation, who lived in the 6th century, made the firſt Saxon laws, which were publiſhed in Engliſh by the advice of ſome wiſe men, whom he called to his aſſiſtance, and which continue to this day. It is true, King Alfred, who lived 300 years afterwards, is called Magni Juris Anglicani Conditor; not becauſe he firſt made that law, but becauſe, being the firſt ſole monarch after the Heptarchy, he collected all the Saxon laws (which were made in the ſpace of 300 years) into one book; that is, he collected the beſt, and rejected the reſt, and commanding them to be obſerved through the whole kingdom, which before affected only ſeveral parts thereof, it was therefore properly called the Common law, becauſe it was common to the whole nation; and ſoon after it was called the folc right, i. e. the people's right. The word Common law hath three ſignifications: firſt, it is taken for the laws of this realm ſimply, without any other law joined to it; as when it is diſputed what ought of right to be determined by the Common law, and what by the Spiritual law, or Admiral's court, or the like. Secondly, For the King's court, as the King's Bench or Common Pleas, only to ſhew a difference between them and the baſe courts, as cuſtomary courts, court-barons, county-courts, piepowders, and ſuch like; as when a plea of land is removed out of ancient demeſne becauſe the land is frank-fee, and pleadable at the Common law, that is, in the King's court, and not in ancient demeſne, or any other baſe court. Thirdly, and moſt uſually, By the Common law is underſtood ſuch laws as were generally taken and holden for law, before any ſtatute was made to alter the ſame; as, neither tenant for life, nor for years, were puniſhable by the Common law for doing waſte till the ſtatute Glouc. cap. 5. was made, which gives action of waſte againſt them: but tenant by courteſy, and tenant in dower, were puniſhable for it before the ſaid ſtatute.

In the reign of Ed. 1. Britton wrote his learned book of the Common law of this realm, which was done by the King's command, and runs in his name, anſwerable to the Inſtitutions of the Civil law, which Juſtinian aſſumes to himſelf, though compoſed by others. Staundf. Prærog. 6, 21. This Britton is mentioned by Gwin to be biſhop of Hereford. Bracton, a great lawyer, in the time of Hen. 3. wrote a very learned treatiſe of the Common law of England, held in great eſtimation: and he is ſaid to be Lord Chief Juſtice of the kingdom. And the famous and learned Glanvil, Lord Chief Juſtice in the reign of Hen. 2. wrote a book of the Common law, which is ſaid to be the moſt ancient compoſition extant on that ſubject. Beſides theſe, in the time of Ed. 4. the renowned lawyer Littleton wrote his excellent book of Engliſh Tenures. In King James the Firſt's reign, the great oracle of the law Sir Edward Coke publiſhed his learned and laborious Inſtitutes of our law, and Commentaries on Littleton. About the ſame time likewiſe, Dr. Cowell, a civilian, wrote an Inſtitute of our law. And in the reign of King George the Firſt, Dr. Thomas Wood, a civilian and common lawyer, and at laſt a divine, wrote an Inſtitute of the laws of England, which is ſomething after the manner of the Inſtitutes of the Civil law.

Common Pleas, Communia placita, Is the King's court now held in Weſtminſter-hall, but in ancient time moveable; as appears by Magna charta, cap. 11. and alſo 2 Ed. 3. cap. 11. & Pupilla oculi, part 5. cap. 22. But Mr. Gwin in the Preface to his Reading ſaith, that until the time that Henry the Third granted the Great charter, there were but two courts in all, called the King's courts; whereof one was the Exchequer, the other the King's Bench, which was then called Curia Domini Regis, and Aula Regia, becauſe it followed the King and court; and that upon the grant of that charter, the court of Common Pleas was erected, and ſettled in one certain place, viz. Weſtminſter. And becauſe this court was ſettled at Weſtminſter, therefore after that all writs ran, Quod ſit coram juſticiariis noſtris apud Weſtmonaſterium; whereas before it was, Coram me vel juſticariis meis, ſimply without addition of place, as he well obſerveth out of Glanvil and Bracton: the one writing in Henry the Second's time, before the court was erected; the other in the later time of Henry the Third, who erected this court. All civil cauſes, both real and perſonal, are or were in former times tried in this court according to the ſtrict law of the realm. And by Forteſcue, cap. 50. it ſeemeth to have been the only court for real cauſes. The chief judge of that court is called The Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, aſſiſted with three aſſociates, which are created by letters patent from the King, and, as it were, inſtalled or placed upon the bench by the Lord Chancellor and Lord Chief Juſtice of the court; as appeareth by Forteſcue, cap. 51. who expreſſes all the circumſtances of this admiſſion. The reſt of the officers belonging to this court are the cuſtos brevium, the prothonotaries and their ſecondaries, the clerk of the warrants, clerk of the eſſoins, 14 filazers, four exigenters, a clerk of the juries, the chirographer, clerk of the King's ſilver, clerk of the treaſury, clerk of the ſeal, of outlawries, and the clerk of the inrolment of fines and recoveries, clerk of the errors, &c.

The cuſtos brevium is the chief clerk in this court, who receives and keeps all writs returnable therein; and all records of niſi prius, which are delivered to him by the clerks of the aſſize of every circuit, &c. and he files the rolls together, and carries them into the treaſury of records: he alſo makes out exemplifications, and copies of all writs and records, &c. The prothonotaries enter and inrol all declarations, pleadings, judgments, &c. and they make out all judicial writs, writs of execution, writs of privilege, procedendo's, &c. The ſecondaries are aſſiſtants to the prothonotaries in the execution of their offices; and they take minutes, and draw up all orders and rules of court. The filazers, who have the ſeveral counties of England divided among them, make out all meſne proceſs, as capias, alias, pluries, &c. between the original writ and the declaration; and they make all writs of view, &c. The exigenters, appointed for ſeveral counties, make out all exigents and proclamations in order to outlawry. The clerk of the warrants enters all warrants of attorney, inrols deeds of bargain and ſale, and eſtreats all iſſues. The clerk of the eſſoins keeps the roll of the eſſoins, wherein he enters them, and nonſuits, &c. The clerk of the juries makes out all writs of habeas corpora jurator', for juries to appear; and he enters the continuance till the verdict given. The clerk of the Treaſury keeps the records of the court, and makes exemplifications of records, copies of iſſues, judgments, &c. The clerk of the ſeals ſeals all writs and meſne proceſs; alſo writs of outlawry and ſuperſedeas, and all patents. The clerk of the outlawries makes out the writs of capias utlagatum. The clerk of the errors is for the allowance of writs of error, &c. The clerk of the Inrolments of fines and recoveries returns all writs of covenant, writs of entry and ſeiſin, and inrols and exemplifies fines, &c. The clerk of the King's ſilver enters the ſubſtance of the writ of covenant. And the chirographer ingroſſeth all fines, and delivers the indentures to the parties, &c. And to theſe officers may be added, a proclamator, a keeper of the court, cryer, and tipſtaffs; beſides the warden of the Fleet. There are attornies of this court, whoſe number is unlimited; and none may plead at the bar of the court, or ſign any ſpecial pleadings, but ſerjeants at law.

Common Prayer (Preces Publicæ) Is the liturgy, or prayers uſed in the church of England. It is the particular duty of clergymen every Sunday, &c. to uſe the publick form of prayer preſcribed by the book of Common Prayer: and if any incumbent be reſident upon his living, as he ought to be, and keep a curate, he is obliged by the act of uniformity once every month at leaſt, to read the common prayers of the church, according as they are directed by the book of Common Prayer, in his pariſh church, in his own perſon, or he ſhall forfeit 5 l. for every time he fails therein. Stat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 4. Alſo by that ſtatute the book of Common Prayer is to be provided in every pariſh, under the penalty of 3 l. a month: and the Common Prayer muſt be read before every lecture; the whole appointed for the day, with all the circumſtances and ceremonies, &c. and, by one of the canons of the church, miniſters before all ſermons are to move the people to join in a ſhort prayer for the catholick church; and the whole congregation of chriſtian people, &c. for the King and royal family; the miniſters of God's word, nobility, magiſtrates, and whole commons of the realm, &c. and concludes with the Lord's prayer. Can. 55. Refuſing to uſe the Common Prayer, or uſing any other open prayers, &c. is puniſhable by ſtat. 1 Eliz. c. 2. See Church, Publick Worſhip Service and Sacraments.

Common Recovery. See Fine.

Common weal, Is underſtood in our law to be bonum publicum, and is a thing much favoured; and therefore the law doth tolerate many things to be done for common good, which otherwiſe might not be done: and hence it is, that monopolies are void in law; and that bonds and covenants to reſtrain free trade, tillage, or the like, are adjudged void. 11 Co. Rep. 50. Plowd. 25. Shep. Epit. 270.

Commorancy (Commorantia, from Commoner) An abiding, dwelling, or continuing in any place; as an inhabitant of a houſe in a vill, &c. And commorance for a certain time may make a ſettlement in a pariſh. Dalt. See Poor.

Commorth. See Comorth.

Commote (from the Britiſh Cwmmwd, i. e. Provincia) in Wales, Is half a cantred or hundred, containing fifty villages. Stat. Walliæ, 12 Ed. 1. and 21 H. 8. c. 26. Wales, was anciently divided into three provinces, North Wales, South Wales, and Weſt Wales, otherwiſe called Powyſland; and each of theſe were again ſubdivided into cantreds, and every cantred into commotes. Sir Jo. Dodridge's Hiſtory of Wales, fol. 2. So Brecknockſhire is found to have three cantreds, and eight commotes. Hiſtory of Wales. It ſignifies alſo a great ſeigniory, and may include one or divers manors. Coke on Lit. fol. 5. It is Sir Henry Spelman's opinion, that a commote is half an hundred; but Silveſter Giraldus, in his Itinerary of Wales, tells us it is but a quarter of an hundred, viz. Gruffino filio Reſi unius commoti ſolum, id eſt, quartæ partis cantredi, &c. Itinerar. lib. 1. c. 2.

Communance, The commoners, or tenants and inhabitants, who had the right of common, or commoning in open fields, or woods, were formerly called the communance, and commaunce, communa or communia paſturæ, the common paſture: and communare, to enjoy the right of common.

Commune. See Comminalty.

Commune Concilium Regni Angliæ. The common council of the King and people aſſembled in parliament. See Parliament.

Communia placita non tenenda in ſcaccario, Is a writ directed to the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer, forbidding them to hold plea between common perſons in that court, where neither of them belong thereto. Reg. of Writs, fol. 187. b.

Communication (Communicatio) A talking, conſultation, or conferring with. Where there is only a parley betwixt two, and no perfect agreement, that is, no ſuch contract between them as on which to ground an action, it is called a communication.

Communi cuſtodis, Is a writ that did lie for that lord whoſe tenant, holding by knight's ſervice, died, and left his eldeſt ſon under age, againſt a ſtranger that entered the land, and obtained the ward of the body. Old Nat. Br. fol. 89. But this writ is become obſolete ſince wardſhips were taken away by the ſtat. 12 Car. 2 c. 24.

Communion. See Lord's Supper.

Communitas Regni. Tota terræ communitas, regni totius communitas. Theſe phraſes have been of late years thought to ſignify the ordinary people and freeholders; or at beſt knights and gentlemen, under the degree of barons, as if they were the community of the land, and had been always eſteemed. But anciently the barons only, and tenants in capite, or military men, were the community nity of the kingdom, and those only meant, taken and reputed as such in our most ancient historians and records. See Dr. Brady's Glossary, at the end of his Introduction to Eng. Hist.

Community of the kingdom. See Communitas regni.

Comorth (Comortha) from the British Cymmorth, (subsidium) a contribution; subsidium a pluribus collatum. Stat. 4 H. 4. c. 27. 26 H. 8. c. 6. prohibits the levying any such in Wales, or the marches, &c. It seems this comorth was gathered at the marriages, and when young priests said or sung their first masses, and sometimes for redemption of murders or felonies.

Companage, Fr. all kind of food, except bread and drink. Some tenants of the manor of Feskerton in Com. Nott. when they performed their boons or work-days to their lord, had three boon loaves with companage allowed them. Reg. de Thurgarton, cited in the Antiquity of Nottinghamshire. Yet the learned Spelman interprets it to be Quicquid cibi cum pane sumitur. But in the Cartular. Abbat. Glaston. MS. pag. 74. we find In pane, vino, & cervisia, pisce, sive alio quocunque genere companagii, sive leguminis.

Companion of the garter, Is one of the knights of that most honourable order. 24 H. 8. c. 15. See Garter.

Compellativum, An adversary or accuser. Among the laws of King Athelstan we read that the bishop should in compellativum adlegiationem docere nequis alium perperam cogat jurejurando vel in ordalio.

Compertorium, A judicial inquest in the Civil law, made by delegates, or commissioners to find out, or relate the truth of a cause.——Et in carnibus porcinis emptis pro clericis domini archiepiscopi super compertorium apud Burcestre.——Paroch. Antiq. p. 575.

Composition (Compositio) An agreement or contract between a parson, patron, and ordinary, &c. for money or other things in lieu of tithes. Land may be exempted from the payment of tithes, where compositions have been made: and real compositions for tithes are to be made by the concurrent consent of the parson, patron, and ordinary. Real compositions are distinguished from personal contracts; for a composition called a personal contract is only an agreement between the parson and the parishioners to pay so much instead of tithes; and though such agreement is confirmed by the ordinary, yet that doth not make it a real composition, because he ought to be a party to the deed of composition. March's Rep. 87. The compositions for tithes made by the consent of the parson, patron, and ordinary, by virtue of 13 Eliz. c. 10. shall not bind the successor unless made for twenty-one years or three lives, as in case of leases of ecclesiastical corporations, &c. Compositions were at first for a valuable consideration, so that though in process of time, upon the increase of the value of the lands such compositions do not amount to the value of the tithes, yet custom prevails, and from hence arises what we call a modus decimandi. Hob. 29. The word composition hath likewise another meaning, i. e. decisio litis. See Tithes.

Compositio mensurarum, Is the title of an ancient ordinance for measures, not printed, and mentioned in the statute of 23 H. 8. cap. 4.

Compostum, Compost, or dung. Compostare, to lay on such compost.——Walterus archiepiscopus Cantuar. remisit H. priori & conventus ecclesiæ Cantuar. manerium suum de Caldecote,——& prædicti prior & conventus——terras prædicti manerii faldabunt & compostabunt de exitu bestiarum ibidem. Dat. 15 Jul. 1326. Reg. Ecclesiæ Christi Cantuar. MS.

Compriut, Properly signifies to print together; but as it is used in common speech among dealers in books, it intends a surreptitious printing of another's copy, to make a gain thereby to himself. This is contrary to the stat. made 14 Car. 2. cap. 33. 16 Car. 2. cap. 6. and 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 7. and 17 Car. 2. cap. 4. apud Oxon.

Compromise (Compromissum) We usually say compromise is a mutual promise of two or more parties at difference, to refer the ending of their controversies at the arbitrament and equity of one or more arbitrators. West. Par. 2. Symb. tit. Compromise, sect. 1. defines it thus; A compromise or submission is a faculty or power of pronouncing sentence between parties at controversy, given to arbitrators by the parties mutual private consent, without publick authority.

Compurgator, One that by oath justifies another's innocence. See Law and Oath.

Computation, Is used in the Common law for the true and indifferent account and construction of time, so that neither the one party or the other shall do wrong, nor the determination of times referred at large be taken one way or other, but computed according to the just judgment of the law. As if indentures of demise are ingrossed, bearing date the 11th of May 1669. To have and to hold the land in S. for three years from henceforth, and the indentures are delivered the 4th day of June in the year aforesaid; in this case, from henceforth shall be accounted from the day of the delivery of the indentures, and not by any computation from the date: And if the said indenture be delivered at four of the clock in the afternoon of the said fourth day, this lease shall end in the third day of June in the third year, for the law in this computation rejects all fractions, or divisions of the day, for the uncertainty, which always is the mother of contention; so where the statute of inrolments, made anno 27 H. 8. c. 16. is, that the writings shall be inrolled within six months after the date of the same writings indented; if such writings have date, the six months shall be accounted from the date, and not from the delivery; but if it want date, then shall it be accounted from the delivery. Co. lib. 5. fol. 1. If any deed be shewed to a court in Westminster, the deed, by judgment of law, shall remain in court all the term in which it is shewed, for all the term in law is but as one day. Co. lib. 5. fol. 1. If a church be void, and the true patron doth not present within six months, then the bishop of the diocese may collate his chaplain; but these six months shall not be computed according to 28 days to the month, but according to the Calendar: and there is a great diversity in our common speech in the singular number, as a twelvemonth, which includes all the year, according to the Calendar; and twelve months, which shall be computed according to 28 days to every month. Co. lib. 6. fol. 61. b.

Computo, Is a writ so called of the effect, because it compelleth a bailiff, receiver, or chamberlain to yield his account. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 58. Con, The same with Ken.

Conable (Fr. convenable, i. e. convenient or fitting) — "We ordain, that there be made a hache or conabyl heythe, crestyd with pikes of herne, to fore the entry of your kechyne, that no strange peopille may enter with certain clekets, advised by you, and be your steward to such persons, as you and them think honest and conable. Artic. Decani & Capit. Sti, Pauli Priorat. S. Helenæ dat. 21 Junii 1439.

Conragii, The barony of Kendall.

Concealers (Concelatores) Are such as find out concealed lands, that is, such lands as are privily kept from the King by common persons, having nothing to shew for their title or estate therein. Stat. 39 Eliz. cap. 22. and 21. Jac. cap. 2. They are so called from concelando, as mons from movenda, per Antiphrasin. See 3 part Inst. fol. 188. where the author calls them Turbidum hominum genus.

Concess, A word of frequent use in conveyances, creating a covenant in law; as dedi makes a warranty Co. on Littleton, fol. 384. This word is of general extent, and said to amount to a grant, feoffment, lease and release, &c. 2 Saund. 96.

Concionator,

Concionator, A common-council-man, a mot-worthy, a freeman called to the hall, or aſſembly.——Quodam tempore cum conveniſſent concionatores Angliæ apud Londoniam, &c. Hiſtor. Elien. edit. Gale, cap. 46.

Concluſion (Concluſio) Is when a man upon his own act upon record hath charged himſelf with a duty, or other thing. As if a freeman confeſs himſelf to be the villain of A. upon record, and afterward A. takes his goods, he ſhall be concluded to ſay in any other action or plea afterwards, that he is free, by reaſon of his own confeſſion. So if the ſheriff, upon a capias to him directed, returns that he hath taken the body, and yet hath not the body in court at the day of the return, he ſhall be amerced; and if it were upon a capias ad ſatisfac. the plaintiff may have his action againſt the ſheriff for the eſcape; for by ſuch returns the ſheriff hath concluded himſelf. And this word concludes is taken in another ſenſe, as for the end or latter part of any declaration, bar, replication, &c. As where to the bar there ought to be a replication, the concluſion of his plea ſhall be, Et hoc paratus eſt verificare. If in dower, the tenant plead, that he was never ſeized to render dower, the concluſion ſhall be Et de hoc ponit ſe ſuper patriam. And in what manner the concluſion ſhall be, according to the nature of ſeveral actions, ſee Kitchin, fol. 219, 220.

Concord (Concordia) Is the common law, by a peculiar ſignification, defined to be the very agreement between parties, that intend the levying of a fine of lands one to the other, how, and in what manner the land ſhall paſs; in the form whereof many things are to be conſidered. Weſt. part 2. Symb. tit. Fines and Concords, ſect. 30. whom read at large. Concord is alſo an agreement made upon any treſpaſs committed between two or more, and is divided into a concord executory, and concord executed. See Plowd. fol. 5 & 6. Reniger and Fogaſſa's caſe, where it appeareth by ſome opinions, that the one bindeth not, as being imperfect; the other abſolute, and ties the parties: and yet by ſome opinions in the ſame caſe, it is affirmed, that agreements executory are perfect, and no leſs bind than agreements executed, fo. 8. b.

Concubaria, A fold, a pen, or place where cattle lie together.——Willielmus de Putot concedit hoſpitali de Thelesford unam dimidiam virgatæ terræ in Eſſora—— quiete & integre in viis, ſemitis, terris, pratis, concubariis & paſturis, cum omnibus ayſiamentis.——Cartular. de Thelesford. MS.

Concubinage (Fr.) Signifies properly the keeping a whore for one's own filthy uſe: but it is uſed as an exception againſt her who ſues for dower, alledging thereby, that ſhe was not a wife, lawfully married to the party, in whoſe lands ſhe ſeeks to be endowed, but his *concubine. Condis, A ridge of land: Quandam parcellam cujuſdam condis juxta campum ipſorum. Du Freſne.

Condition (Conditio) Is a reſtraint or bridle annexed to a thing, ſo that by the not performance, the party to it ſhall receive prejudice and loſs, and by the performance, commodity and advantage. Weſt. part 1. Symb. lib. 2. ſect. 156. and Co. lib. 3. Pennant's caſe, fol. 64. Of theſe conditions there are divers kinds, condition collateral, condition in fact, condition in law, condition expreſt, and condition implied, &c. Condition collateral is that which is annexed to any collateral act, as that the leſſee ſhall not go to Canterbury. Co. lib. 3. fol. 65. Condition in fact is that which is expreſt in plain words in any feoffment, leaſe, or grant: Condition in law is implied, though not at all expreſt in the grant. Alſo conditions are either precedent and going before the eſtate, and are executed, or elſe ſubſequent and executory. Condition precedent doth get and gain the thing or eſtate made upon that condition, by the performance of it. Condition ſubſequent keeps and continues the thing or eſtate made upon condition, by the performance of it. Condition precedent is, when a leaſe is made for life to one upon condition, that if the leſſee will pay to the leſſor 20*l.* at ſuch a day, then he ſhall have fee-ſimple. Here the condition precedes the eſtates in fee-ſimple, and upon performance of the condition gains the fee-ſimple. Condition ſubſequent is, when one grants to J. S. his manor of Dale in fee-ſimple, upon condition, that the grantee ſhall pay to him at ſuch a day 20*l.* or elſe that his eſtate ſhall ceaſe; here the condition is ſubſequent, and following the eſtate in fee, and upon the performance thereof continues the eſtate. Cowell, edit. 1727.

By the word condition is uſually underſtood ſome quality annexed to a real eſtate, by virtue of which it may be defeated, enlarged, or created upon an uncertain event. Co. Lit. 201.

Alſo qualities annexed to perſonal contracts and agreements are frequently called conditions, and theſe muſt alſo be interpreted according to the real intentions of the parties, and are uſually taken moſt ſtrongly againſt the party to whom they are meant to extend, leſt by the obſcure wording of his own contract he ſhould find means to evade and elude it. 1 Bac. Abr. 395.

Lord Coke ſays, that by inſerting the very word condition or ſub conditione, conditions are moſt properly created, but there are alſo others, ſays he, that will do as effectually as the word proviſo, but then it muſt not depend upon another ſentence; alſo it muſt be the words of the grantor, and compulſory to enforce the grantee to do ſome act. Co. Lit. 203.

It is ſaid to have been adjudged, that a feoffment ea intentione does not make a condition, and it is only a confidence or truſt, unleſs an expreſs re-entry be limited. 1 Rol. Abr. 407.

Recoveries to an uſe before 27 Hen. 8. leaſed by indenture for ninety-nine years, and the leſſee, by the ſame deed, covenanted with the recoverors to pay the rent to ceſtui que uſe, his heirs and aſſigns; proviſo ſemper, that if ceſtui que uſe makes not his heirs male his aſſigns, that then he ſhall pay his rent to the recoverors, their heirs and aſſigns; this proviſo makes not a condition, but only abridges the covenant. Cro. Eliz. 73.

If a man leaſes to a woman for forty years, upon condition that ſi illa tamdiu viveret & cuſtodiret ſe ipſam a ſole widow, and ſhould inhabit upon the premiſſes; this is not any condition, for the word ſi makes the intention uncertain, whether another thing was intended beſides the ceſſer of the term, or the re-entry. 1 Rol. Abr. 410.

So if a man leaſes lands to another, proviſo ſi the rent be arrear, this is not a condition, becauſe the word ſi makes the intention uncertain; for where the proviſo is hypothetical, it ought to be ſhewed what he would have. 1 Rol. Abr. 410.

If

If a man leaſes land to another, proviſo if the rent be behind, it ſhall be lawful for him to reſtrain, and not being ſufficient, the ground to re-enter into the premiſſes, and the ſame to have again in his former eſtate; that is no good condition, for the words are not, that he ſhall reſtrain the goods upon the tenement; nor is it known what is intended by the word ſufficient, ſcilicet, ſufficient reparation, rent, &c. and the words the ground to re-enter into the premiſſes, are inſenſible. 1 Rol. Abr. 410.

A. and B. were bound to ſtand to the award of certain perſons, who awarded that A. ſhould pay unto B. 20 s. per ann. during ſix years, towards the education and bringing up of ſuch a one an infant, and within the two firſt years of the ſaid term the infant died, ſo as now there needeth not any ſupply towards his education; yet it was adjudged, that the yearly ſum ought to be paid for the whole term after, for the words (towards his education) are but to ſhew the intent and conſideration of the payment of that ſum, and no words of condition, &c. 2 Le. 154. in pl. 186. 19 Eliz. C. B. Anon'.

In ſome caſes this word pro does not make a condition; as if before the ſtat. of Will. 3. land was given pro homagio ſuo, there, if the homage be not done, the feoffor could nor re-enter, but he ought to diſtrain. Arg. 2 Le. 128. Mich. 29 Eliz.

Divers words of themſelves make eſtates upon condition; among which is ſub conditione; as if A. enfeoffs B. to have to B. and his heirs, upon condition that B. and his heirs pay, &c. to the ſaid A. annually ſuch a rent, &c. the feoffee has an eſtate upon condition. Litt. ſ. 328.

Regularly the word (pro) does not import a condition, tho' it has the force of a condition when the thing granted is executory, and the conſideration of the grant is a ſervice, or ſome ſuch thing, for which there is no remedy, but the ſtopping the thing granted, as in the caſe of an annuity granted pro conſilio, or for executing the office of a ſteward of a court, or the ſervice of a captain or keeper of a fort; here the failure of giving counſel, or performing the ſervice, is a kind of eviction of that which is to be done for the annuity, the grantor having no means either to exact the counſel, or recompence for it, but by ſtopping the annuity; and in theſe caſes the condition is not precedent, and therefore the performance thereof need not be averred when the annuity is demanded. Per Hobart Ch. J. Hob. 41. Mich. 10 Jac. in the caſe of Cowper v. Andrews.

Leaſe of land paying rent is no condition; ſo a power to dig up trees, making up the hedge again, is not a condition, but covenant lies for not repairing the hedge. 2 Show. 202. pl. 209. Paſch. 34 Car. 2. B. R. Anon'.

If A. enfeoffs B. upon condition that he ſhall render to C. and his heirs, a yearly rent of 20 s. and if B. and his heirs fail of payment thereof, that then A. and his heirs may enter, this is a good condition; for though a rent cannot be reſerved to a ſtranger, yet yearly rent in this caſe ſhall be intended of a yearly ſum of 20 s. in groſs. Lit. ſect. 345. Co. Lit. 213. a.

If A. being ſeiſed in fee of the manor of B. and of divers lands in C. then in the poſſeſſion of D. for ſeveral years to come, makes a feoffment thereof to E. to the uſe of himſelf in tail male, remainder to F. in tail male, &c. provided that F. or the heirs male of his body, in whomſoever of them the inheritance in tail of all the premiſſes ſhall happen to be, ſhall pay to the daughter of A. 200 l. according to the laſt will of A. and A. makes a letter of attorney to J. S. to enter into the manor of B. and the lands in C. and in his name to take poſſeſſion and deliver it to E. whereupon poſſeſſion is given to C. of all but what was in the poſſeſſion of D. and D. never attorns, ſo that the lands in C. paſſed not; and after A. by will bequeaths 200 l. to his daughter, and dies without iſſue, yet F. is not bound by this condition, becauſe he hath not all the land according to the purport of the condition, which was, that he that had all ſhould pay, &c. and a condition ought to be taken ſtrictly. Poph. 102, 103.

If the condition of an obligation be in this manner, viz. The condition of this obligation is ſuch, that if the obligor ſhall appear coram Domino Rege apud Weſtmon' ſuch a day, ad reſpond', &c. then the condition of this obligation ſhall be void, or elſe the ſame ſhall be in full power and virtue; yet this is a good condition, for the ſenſe is perfect without theſe laſt words, and they ſhall be rejected for their abſurdity and repugnancy. 2 Sand. 78.

As the intent of the teſtator chiefly governs in wills, ſuch conſtruction is always made of the words as will beſt ſupport his intent, and therefore theſe words ad faciendum, faciendo ea intentione, ad effectum, &c. in a will create a condition. Co. Lit. 204. a. See Deviſe, Will.

So if a man ſeiſed of ſocage lands, having two daughters, deviſes it to one of the daughters, to have and to hold to her and her heirs, to pay to her ſiſter a certain ſum of money at a certain day; theſe words make a condition; ſo that the other ſiſter, if the money is not paid, may enter in moiety for the condition broke, becauſe otherwiſe ſhe ſhall be remedileſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 410, 411. Cro. Eliz. 146.

But if a man deviſes lands to B. for life, paying to C. 6 l. rent yearly, which he wills to be paid at two feaſts half-yearly, and if it be arrear, then it ſhall be lawful to C. to diſtrain; it ſeems this word paying makes not a condition, inaſmuch as a diſtreſs is limited for non-payment thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 411.

If a man deviſes land to his executor to ſell, and to make diſtribution of the money for his ſoul, and dies; if the executor does not ſell it, the heirs may enter, for this creates a condition. 1 Rol. Abr. 410. 38 Aſſ. 3.

A. deviſed lands in London to B. and C. to hold in common, upon condition to pay a rent to his wife at the four uſual feaſts of the year; and if the rent be behind by ſix weeks, being lawfully demanded, that it ſhall be lawful for the wife to diſtrain; and added, that his full intent was that ſhe ſhould be annually paid the ſaid rent accordingly. The queſtion was, if the entry of the heir be lawful or not? or if the penalty of the expreſs condition be deſtroyed by the penalty of the diſtreſs, and ſo a limitation of the payment of the rent to the feme, and the heir to take no advantage of the breach of the condition? Manwood and Mounſon held, that the heir ſhould not enter for the breach; but Dyer and Harper e contra clearly; and ſo was the opinion of Wray Ch. J. and Saunders Ch. B. in præſentia Manwood ad Menſam, and that both penalties, viz. the condition and re-entry, and the diſtreſs to the feme for non-payment, are good remedies and ſecurities for the firm payment of the rent to the feme according to the intent of her baron; and as to the demand of the rent, they thought ſhe need not make any ſuch demand, but that it is payable by the deviſees at their peril, if they would ſave their land; but that the feme ought to demand it before ſhe makes any diſtreſs. D. 348. a. b. pl. 13. Hill. 18 Eliz. Anon'.

A. ſeiſed of land in fee, by his will in writing granted a rent-charge of 5 l. per ann. out of it to his younger ſon, towards his education and bringing-up in learning; and if in pleading the deviſee ought to aver, that he was brought up in learning, was the queſtion; and it was holden by Dyer, Manwood, and Mounſon, that ſuch averment needs not, for the deviſe is not conditional, and therefore, altho' he be not brought up in learning, yet he ſhall have the rent. 2 Le. 154. pl. 186. 19 Eliz. C. B. Anon'.

A man deviſed land to his wife, proviſo my will is, that ſhe ſhall keep it in good repairs, cited per cur. to have been adjudged. Le. 174. in pl. 242. Trin. 30 Eliz.

A. deviſed lands to B. paying 40 l. to C. it is a good condition; for C. has no other remedy, and a will ought to be expounded according to the intent of the deviſor, per Wray. Le. 174. pl. 242. Trin. 30 Eliz. B. R.

A man deviſed a houſe in London to his wife, provided if ſhe clearly departs out of London, and dwells in the country, that ſhe ſhall have a rent out of the ſame, &c. It was agreed, that this was a good proviſo to determine her eſtate, though there be no words that the eſtate ſhall ceaſe, *&c. Concionator, A common-council-man, a mot-worthy, a freeman called to the hall, or aſſembly.——Quodam tempore cum conveniſſent concionatores Angliæ apud Londoniam, &c. Hiſtor. Elien. edit. Gale, cap. 46.

Concluſion (Concluſio) Is when a man upon his own act upon record hath charged himſelf with a duty, or other thing. As if a freeman confeſs himſelf to be the villain of A. upon record, and afterward A. takes his goods, he ſhall be concluded to ſay in any other action or plea afterwards, that he is free, by reaſon of his own confeſſion. So if the ſheriff, upon a capias to him directed, returns that he hath taken the body, and yet hath not the body in court at the day of the return, he ſhall be amerced; and if it were upon a capias ad ſatisfac. the plaintiff may have his action againſt the ſheriff for the eſcape; for by ſuch returns the ſheriff hath concluded himſelf. And this word concludes is taken in another ſenſe, as for the end or latter part of any declaration, bar, replication, &c. As where to the bar there ought to be a replication, the concluſion of his plea ſhall be, Et hoc paratus eſt verificare. If in dower, the tenant plead, that he was never ſeized to render dower, the concluſion ſhall be Et de hoc ponit ſe ſuper patriam. And in what manner the concluſion ſhall be, according to the nature of ſeveral actions, ſee Kitchin, fol. 219, 220.

Concord (Concordia) Is the common law, by a peculiar ſignification, defined to be the very agreement between parties, that intend the levying of a fine of lands one to the other, how, and in what manner the land ſhall paſs; in the form whereof many things are to be conſidered. Weſt. part 2. Symb. tit. Fines and Concords, ſect. 30. whom read at large. Concord is alſo an agreement made upon any treſpaſs committed between two or more, and is divided into a concord executory, and concord executed. See Plowd. fol. 5 & 6. Reniger and Fogaſſa's caſe, where it appeareth by ſome opinions, that the one bindeth not, as being imperfect; the other abſolute, and ties the parties: and yet by ſome opinions in the ſame caſe, it is affirmed, that agreements executory are perfect, and no leſs bind than agreements executed, fo. 8. b.

S.* to enter into the manor of B. and the lands in C. and in his name to take poſſeſſion and deliver it to E. whereupon poſſeſſion is given to C. of all but what was in the poſſeſſion of D. and D. never attorns, ſo that the lands in C. paſſed not; and after A. by will bequeaths 200 l. to his daughter, and dies without iſſue, yet F. is not bound by this condition, becauſe he hath not all the land according to the purport of the condition, which was, that he that had all ſhould pay, &c. and a condition ought to be taken ſtrictly. Poph. 102, 103.

If the condition of an obligation be in this manner, viz. The condition of this obligation is ſuch, that if the obligor ſhall appear coram Domino Rege apud Weſtmon' ſuch a day, ad reſpond', &c. then the condition of this obligation ſhall be void, or elſe the ſame ſhall be in full power and virtue; yet this is a good condition, for the ſenſe is perfect without theſe laſt words, and they ſhall be rejected for their abſurdity and repugnancy. 2 Sand. 78.

As the intent of the teſtator chiefly governs in wills, ſuch conſtruction is always made of the words as will beſt ſupport his intent, and therefore theſe words ad faciendum, faciendo ea intentione, ad effectum, &c. in a will create a condition. Co. Lit. 204. a. See Deviſe, Will.

So if a man ſeiſed of ſocage lands, having two daughters, deviſes it to one of the daughters, to have and to hold to her and her heirs, to pay to her ſiſter a certain ſum of money at a certain day; theſe words make a condition; ſo that the other ſiſter, if the money is not paid, may enter in moiety for the condition broke, becauſe otherwiſe ſhe ſhall be remedileſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 410, 411. Cro. Eliz. 146.

But if a man deviſes lands to B. for life, paying to C. 6 l. rent yearly, which he wills to be paid at two feaſts half-yearly, and if it be arrear, then it ſhall be lawful to C. to diſtrain; it ſeems this word paying makes not a condition, inaſmuch as a diſtreſs is limited for non-payment thereof. 1 Rol. Abr. 411.

If a man deviſes land to his executor to ſell, and to make diſtribution of the money for his ſoul, and dies; if the executor does not ſell it, the heirs may enter, for this creates a condition. 1 Rol. Abr. 410. 38 Aſſ. 3.

A. deviſed lands in London to B. and C. to hold in common, upon condition to pay a rent to his wife at the four uſual feaſts of the year; and if the rent be behind by ſix weeks, being lawfully demanded, that it ſhall be lawful for the wife to diſtrain; and added, that his full intent was that ſhe ſhould be annually paid the ſaid rent accordingly. The queſtion was, if the entry of the heir be lawful or not? or if the penalty of the expreſs condition be deſtroyed by the penalty of the diſtreſs, and ſo a limitation of the payment of the rent to the feme, and the heir to take no advantage of the breach of the condition? Manwood and Mounſon held, that the heir ſhould not enter for the breach; but Dyer and Harper e contra clearly; and ſo was the opinion of Wray Ch. J. and Saunders Ch. B. in præſentia Manwood ad Menſam, and that both penalties, viz. the condition and re-entry, and the diſtreſs to the feme for non-payment, are good remedies and ſecurities for the firm payment of the rent to the feme according to the intent of her baron; and as to the demand of the rent, they thought ſhe need not make any ſuch demand, but that it is payable by the deviſees at their peril, if they would ſave their land; but that the feme ought to demand it before ſhe makes any diſtreſs. D. 348. a. b. pl. 13. Hill. 18 Eliz. Anon'.

A. ſeiſed of land in fee, by his will in writing granted a rent-charge of 5 l. per ann. out of it to his younger ſon, towards his education and bringing-up in learning; and if in pleading the deviſee ought to aver, that he was brought up in learning, was the queſtion; and it was holden by Dyer, Manwood, and Mounſon, that ſuch averment needs not, for the deviſe is not conditional, and therefore, altho' he be not brought up in learning, yet he ſhall have the rent. 2 Le. 154. pl. 186. 19 Eliz. C. B. Anon'.

A man deviſed land to his wife, proviſo my will is, that ſhe ſhall keep it in good repairs, cited per cur. to have been adjudged. Le. 174. in pl. 242. Trin. 30 Eliz.

A. deviſed lands to B. paying 40 l. to C. it is a good condition; for C. has no other remedy, and a will ought to be expounded according to the intent of the deviſor, per Wray. Le. 174. pl. 242. Trin. 30 Eliz. B. R.

A man deviſed a houſe in London to his wife, provided if ſhe clearly departs out of London, and dwells in the country, that ſhe ſhall have a rent out of the ſame, &c. It was agreed, that this was a good proviſo to determine her eſtate, though there be no words that the eſtate ſhall ceaſe, &c. Cro. E. 238. pl. 5. Trin. 33 Eliz. B. R. Allen v. Hill.

2. Of conditions precedent and ſubſequent.

Conditions precedent are ſuch as muſt be punctually performed before the eſtate can veſt; but on a condition ſubſequent the eſtate is immediately executed; yet the continuance of ſuch eſtate dependeth on the breach or performance of the condition. Co. Lit. 218. Eq. Abr. 108.

As if I grant, that if A. will go to ſuch a place about my buſineſs, that he ſhall have ſuch an eſtate, or that he ſhall have 10 l. &c. this is a condition precedent. 1 Roll. Abr. 414.

So if I retain a man for 40 s. to go with me to Rome, this is a condition precedent, for the duty commences by going to Rome. 1 Roll. Abr. 914.

So if a man by will deviſes certain legacies, and then deviſes all the reſidue of his eſtate to his executor, after debts, legacies, &c. paid and diſcharged, this is a condition precedent; ſo that the executor cannot have the reſidue of the eſtate before the debts and legacies are diſcharged. 1 Roll. Abr. 415. 1 Jones 327. Cro Car. 335.

But if a man deviſes a term to A. and that if his wife ſuffers the deviſee to enjoy it for three years, that ſhe ſhall have all his goods as executrix; but if ſhe diſturbs A. then he makes B. executor, and dies, his wife is executrix preſently; for though in grants the eſtate ſhall not veſt till the condition precedent is performed, yet it is otherwiſe in a will, which muſt be guided by the intent of the parties; and this ſhall not be conſtrued as a condition precedent, but only as a condition to abridge the power of being executrix, if ſhe perform it not. Cro. Eliz. 219.

If A. tenant for life, and R. in reverſion in fee, covenant to levy a fine, and that it ſhall be to the uſe of A. and his heirs, ſi R. does not pay 10 s. to A. the tenth of September after; and if he does pay, then to the uſe of A. for life, and after to the uſe of R. in fee; in this caſe, this word ſi, &c. is a condition ſubſequent, and not precedent; ſo that A. hath an eſtate in fee till R. pays the 10 s. becauſe there is a day limited for the payment of the 10 s. and the ſubſequent words explain the intent to be a ſubſequent condition, ſſ. And if he pays it, then it ſhall be to A. for life, and after to the uſe of R. in fee, which ſhews the intent to be that A. ſhall have an eſtate in fee till the 10 s. paid. 1 Roll. Abr. 415, 416.

Deviſe to the firſt ſon of A. if he takes my name, if not to B. A. dies without iſſue. B. ſhall take; for the refuſal of A.'s ſon is not a condition precedent, but a precedent eſtate attended with theſe limitations. Per Treby Ch. Juſtice, and judgment accordingly. 1 Salk. 230. pl. 8. Trin. 9 Will. 3. C. B. Scattergood v. Edge.

Where the one promiſe is the conſideration of the other, and where the performance and not the promiſe is, muſt be gathered from the words and nature of the agreement, and depends intirely thereupon; for, if in caſe there were a poſitive promiſe that one ſhould releaſe his equity of redemption, and on the other ſide that the other would pay 7 l. then the one might bring his action without any averment of performance; but where the agreement is, that the plaintiff ſhould releaſe his equity of redemption, in conſideration whereof the defendant was to pay him 7 l. ſo that the releaſe is the conſideration, and therefore being executory, it is a condition precedent, which muſt be averred. 12 Mod. 455, 460. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. by Holt Ch. Juſtice, in delivering the opinion of the court in the caſe of Thorp v. Thorp.

If there be a day ſet for the payment of money, or doing the thing which one promiſes, agrees, or covenants to do for another thing, and that day happens to incur before the time, the thing for which the promiſe, agreement, or covenant is made, is to be performed by tenor of the agreement, there, though the words be, that the party ſhall pay the money, or do the thing for ſuch a thing, or in conſideration of ſuch a thing; after the day is paſt the other ſhall have action for the money, or other thing, though the thing for which the promiſe, agreement, or covenant was made be not performed; for it would be repugnant there to make it a condition precedent: and therefore they are in that caſe left to mutual remedies, on which, by the expreſs words of the agreement, they have depended. Per Holt Ch. Juſtice. 12 Mod. 461. Paſch. 13 W. 3. in the caſe of Thorp v. Thorp.

M. agrees to give A. ſo much for the uſe of a coach and horſes for a year, and A. agreed further with M. to keep the coach in repair; it was averred the coach and horſes were delivered to M. but nothing of the repair; and Holt Ch. Juſtice held upon this evidence, that repairing was not a condition precedent, and therefore need not be averred. Per Holt Ch. Juſtice at Guildhall, and judgment pro querente. 12 Mod. 503. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. Atkinſon v. Morrice.

But if the agreement had been that A. had agreed to give M. a coach and horſes for a year, and to repair the coach, and that for that M. promiſed ſo much money, then the repairing had been a condition precedent neceſſary to be averred. Per Holt Ch. Juſtice. 12 Mod. 503. Paſch. 13 W. 3. in S. C.

Condition that A. ſhall do, and for the doing B ſhall pay, is a condition precedent, but time fixed for payment will verify the condition; per Holt Ch. Juſtice. 1 Salk. 171. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. B. R. Thorp v. Thorp.

Where an award conſiſts of divers things, and one of them is void, and it be expreſly ſaid, that upon performance of that void thing, the other party ſhall do ſuch a thing, there the doing of the void thing is a condition precedent, and muſt be averred before action againſt the other for not doing his part; but where there be ſeveral things in an award, and ſome are good, and others not, and it is further ſaid, that upon performance præmiſſorum the other ſhall releaſe for the purpoſe, there it ſuffices to make averment of performance of what is well awarded without more; per Powell Juſtice. 12 Mod. 588. Mich. 13 W. 3. in C. B. Lee v. Elkins.

A copyholder in a borough engliſh ſurrenders to the uſe of himſelf for life, and after to the uſe of his eldeſt ſon and his heirs, if he lives twenty-one years; provided that upon condition, that if he dies before twenty-one, that it ſhall remain to the ſurrenderer and his heirs; though by the firſt words it ſeems to be a condition precedent; yet, upon all the words taken together, it is not, but a ſurrender to the uſe of the eldeſt ſon, to be defeated by a condition ſubſequent. 3 Lev. 132.

If A. makes a leaſe for five years to B. upon condition, that if B. pays him 10 l. within two years, that then he ſhall have a fee-ſimple in the lands, and make livery and ſeiſin to B. this paſſes the freehold immediately, and B. has a fee conditional; becauſe if the freehold was not to veſt in B. till the condition performed, it would be difficult to determine in whom the freehold lay; for conditions may be inſerted in ſuch deeds as are perfected privately, as might prove greatly prejudicial to ſtrangers. Lit. ſect. 350. Co. Lit. 216, 217.

But in caſe of a leaſe for life, with ſuch a condition, the freehold paſſes not before the condition performed; becauſe the livery may preſently work upon the freehold.

But if a man grants an adowſon, &c. (which lie in grant) for years upon ſuch condition, the grantee ſhall have no fee till the condition performed. Co. Lit. 217.

If A. leaſes to B. for years, upon condition, that if B. pays money to A. or his heirs, at a day that B. ſhall have the fee, and before the day A. is attainted of treaſon and executed; now though the condition became impoſſible by the act and offence of A. yet B. ſhall not have a fee, becauſe a precedent condition to increaſe an eſtate muſt be performed; and if it becomes impoſſible, no eſtate ſhall riſe. Co. Lit. 210.

Alſo in equity, with reſpect to conditions precedent and ſubſequent, the prevailing diſtinction ſeems to be, to relieve againſt the breach or non-performance, whether the condition be precedent or ſubſequent, where a compenſation can be made. 1 Vern. 79, 167.

As if A. conveys lands to B. &c. and their heirs, upon truſt, that if C. the ſon of A. within ſix months after the death of A. ſhould ſecure to truſtees 500 l. for the younger children of C. then after ſuch ſecurity given, to convey to C. and his heirs, and until the time for giving ſuch ſecurity, in truſt for the eldeſt ſon of C. and in default of ſuch ſecurity, to convey to ſuch eldeſt ſon and his heirs, if C. dies before any ſuch ſecurity given, yet this condition, though precedent, being only in nature of a penalty, the intent of the truſt ſhall be regarded, which was to ſecure 500 l. for the younger children. 1 Chan. Ca. 89.

A leaſe for years to Sir Edward Waldgrave and lady, on truſt to raiſe 900 l. for a feme ſole, in caſe ſhe did not marry contrary to good liking of Sir Edward and lady; if ſhe did, then to go to ſuch perſons as Sir Edward and lady, or ſurvivor, ſhould nominate, and for want of nomination to Sir Edward and lady, or ſurvivor of them; ſhe marries without their conſent, they die without nomination; bill was preferred by Sandall, who had a general deed of gift by lady W. who ſurvived, of all her goods and chattels, againſt F. Copledite, who had adminiſtration to the feme, and lady W. to have the benefit of this leaſe; which was decreed for Copledite. Comyn's Rep. 739, 740. Paſch. 13 Geo. 2. in caſe of Harvey v. Aſten, cites Chan. Caſes 58. [Mich. 16 Car. 2.] Fleming v. Waldgrave.

The daughter of Lord Kilmury and the ſon of Lord K. prefer a bill to have the benefit of a ſettlement made by Lord K. and his ſon, whereby truſtees were to raiſe 1500 l. a-piece for portions of two daughters, the plaintiffs and the ſiſters, payable at their marriage with conſent of truſtees, or major part of them, and maintenance in mean time; and if truſtees had raiſed the portions before they married, they were to improve them to the beſt advantage, till they might receive the increaſe for maintenance till marriage; and if they married without conſent, the portion of her ſo marrying ſhould remain over to another. The truſtees received the rents ever ſince the death of Lord K. and raiſed the portions; and the plaintiffs being in years, and intending not to marry, would lay out their portions in purchaſe of annuities for their larger maintenance. Queſtion was, whether plaintiffs ought to have portions at their own diſpoſal before they married with conſent? And it being admitted, if either died before marriage, her portion ſhould go to her executor or adminiſtrator, and they offering ſecurity to indemnify truſtees from claim by defendants, who were infants, children of Charles Lord K. to whom the portions after marriage without conſent were limited by the ſettlement, the court decreed it on giving ſuch ſecurity. Comyn's Rep. 740, 741. Lord Ch. B. Comyn's cites Fin. Rep. 62. [Hill. 25 Car. 2] Needham v. Vernon.

A ſettlement was made by W. by deed and will, reciting a marriage intended between A. and B. the daughter of W. and then comes a clauſe, that if B. ſhould live to 16 years of age, and ſhould refuſe to marry A. then A. ſhould have 20,000 l. out of the perſonal eſtate; and afterwards comes another clauſe, that if it happen that the ſaid intended marriage be not had till after B.'s age of 16 years, then the real and perſonal eſtate is ſettled on A. and B. for their lives, &c. The marriage was had before B. was 16 years old, but ſhe lived to 16, and died before 17, without iſſue. It was urged, that A. and B. marrying before 16, the perſonal eſtate was not veſted ſo as to intitle the adminiſtrator of B. and that the grantor's intent was to reſtrain B. from marrying before 16; but Lord Jeffries took it, that a marriage between A. and B. was the chief intent, and of the 20,000 l. penalty for refuſal, and that the latter clauſe was only to bring back that 20,000 l. into the perſonal eſtate to be ſettled to the ſame uſes with the reſt, in caſe the marriage ſhould be after 16, and decreed an account. Vern. 338. pl. 332. Mich. 1685. Duke of Southampton v. Crammer & al'.

A. by marriage ſettlement provided 2000 l. a-piece. and after, by will, directs the making up their portions 3000 l. a piece, and charges his real and perſonal eſtate, provided they marry with conſent of their mother; per Lord Wright and Maſter of the Rolls, it is a condition ſubſequent. Ch. Prec. 226. pl. 186. Trin. 1703. Aſhton v. Aſhton.

A. by will leaves his grand-daughter 200 l. provided ſhe continued with his executors until 21, but if taken from them by her father, who was a papiſt, before 21, or if ſhe married againſt the conſent of his executors, then he gave her but 10 l. and made B. and C. executors. She was placed by the executors with D. a clergyman, and before ſhe was 21, D. and one of the executors conſented that ſhe ſhould make a viſit to her father, when the father, unknown to the executors, married her to a papiſt. Decreed at the Rolls for payment of the 200 l. to the daughter; but on appeal Lord Cowper decreed her only the 10 l. he held that the continuance with D. by direction of the executors was well, and that this was a marriage againſt their conſent, they not having opportunity to declare their diſlike before marriage, and declaring it upon notice after; and that the condition, deſcribing the qualifications of the perſon who was to take, was in its nature a condition precedent. 2 Vern. 572. pl. 518. Hill. 1706. Creagh and ux' v. Wilſon.

The teſtator deviſed his eſtate to the defendants, in truſt, for the uſe and benefit of the plaintiff; but declared his will to be, that the plaintiff ſhould have no benefit of the deviſe, unleſs the plaintiff's father ſhould ſettle on the plaintiff two full thirds of the eſtate ſettled on the father on his marriage; and in default thereof the eſtate to the defendants: the father made no ſettlement on the plaintiff, but deviſed all his eſtate to him for life, but ſubject to the payment of debts; it was admitted, and ſo adjudged by the court, that this eſtate was executed in the plaintiff by the ſtatute of uſes; and conſequently that this is a condition ſubſequent; yet the court declared, that though conditions ſubſequent, which are to diveſt an eſtate, need not be literally performed; yet, even in ſuch caſe, if the party cannot be compenſated in damages, it would be againſt conſcience to relieve; and therefore ordered the maſter to examine the value of the eſtate deviſed, and the amount of the debts which that eſtate was charged with, and to report to the court, whether after debts paid there would be two full thirds of the father's eſtate, which was ſettled on him in marriage, left to the plaintiff; and upon a re-hearing, would not vary the former order, declaring that the difference was, whether this caſe lay in compenſation or not; and if a compenſation was made, he would relieve againſt the breach of the condition; but in caſe a ſufficient compenſation was made, he would then conſider farther of it.

If a feme covert, having power by will to deviſe lands, deviſes them to her executors, to pay 500 l. out of them to her ſon; provided, that if the father gives not a ſufficient releaſe of certain goods to her executors, that then the deviſe of the 500 l. ſhould be void, and go to the executors, and after her death a releaſe is tendered to the father, and he refuſes, yet upon making the releaſe after, the money ſhall be paid to the ſon; for it was ſaid to be the ſtanding rule of the court, that a forfeiture ſhould not bind where a thing may be done after, or a compenſation made for it; as where the condition is to pay money, &c. and though it is generally binding, where there is a deviſe over, yet here, it being to go to the executors, it is no more than the law implies. 2 Vent. 352.

If a man deviſes lands to J. S. upon condition to pay 20,000 l. to his heir at law, viz. 1000 l. per annum for the firſt ſixteen years, and 2000 l. per ann. after till the whole ſhould be paid, and the heir enters for non-payment of one of the 1000 l. per ann. J. S. ſhall be relieved upon payment of the 1000 l. together with the intereſt from the time it became payable, without any deduction for taxes; the court declaring, that whereever they can give ſatisfaction or compenſation for the breach of a condition, they can relieve. 1 Salk. 156.

If one having three daughters, deviſes lands to his eldeſt, upon condition that ſhe, within ſix months after his death, pay certain ſums of money to her two other ſiſters; and if ſhe failed, then he deviſed the land to the ſecond daughter on the like condition, &c. The court may inlarge the time of payment, though the lands are deviſed over; and in all caſes that lie in compenſation, the court may diſpenſe with the time, though even in caſe of a condition precedent. 2 Vern. 222.

So where one deviſed lands to J. S. his kinſman, paying 1000 l. a-piece to his two daughters, who were his heirs at law, and J. S. made default, and the daughters recovered in ejectment, yet J. S. was relieved on payment of principal, intereſt, and coſts; though it was inſiſted, ſſted, that this was a condition precedent, and to the diſinheriſon of the heir at law, and in favour of a voluntary deviſee. 2 Vern. 366.

A man having two daughters, deviſed to each of them 2000 l. payable at the age of twenty-five years; but if they, or either of them married before the age of ſixteen, or if the marriage were without the conſent of their mother and truſtees, then they ſhould loſe 1000 l. of the portion, which ſhould go to his other children; one of them married before the age of ſixteen, but with the conſent of all the parties; and it was held, that the time being only a circumſtance might be diſpenſed with. Skin. 285.

A. deviſed his lands to truſtees for three years, and if within the three years there happened a marriage between G. who was a diſtant relation, and of the ſame blood with the teſtator, and W. his niece, and heir at law, then to W. for life, remainder to her firſt ſon, &c. in tail male, by G. to be begotten; but if the marriage ſhould not take effect within the three years; or if the marriage ſhould be before the years of conſent, and not ratified, when of competent age, then to F. in tail, who was likewiſe a remote relation of the teſtator, but not of the ſame blood; the marriage between G. and W. did not take effect, though the ſeveral propoſals were within the time made by her friends to his guardians, but not accepted by them; and though ſhe herſelf had preſſed the match as far as the modeſty of her ſex would permit. She afterwards married the plaintiff, and by her bill prayed the benefit of the deviſe; the condition being anſwered by her to what ſhe was capable of doing, having married a perſon, as was urged, equal in circumſtances, &c. but her bill was diſmiſſed by the advice of Holt and Treby, Ch. Juſtices. 3 Chan. Ca. 129.

3. What ſhall excuſe the performance of conditions, viz. the act of God, act of the law, act of the parties, and act of a ſtranger.

Regularly, If a condition, which was poſſible at the making thereof, becomes impoſſible by the act of God, the obligation is diſcharged. 1 Rol. Abr. 449.

If a man be let to mainprize, it is a good plea at the day when the manucaptors ought to have the body, &c. for the manucaptors to ſay, that he who was let to mainprize was dead before the day, ſo that they could not have his body at the day. 1 Rol. Abr. 449.

If a man covenants to build an houſe before ſuch a day, and after the plague is there before the day, and continues there till after the day, this ſhall excuſe him from the breach of the covenant, for the not doing thereof before the day; for the law will not compel a man to venture his life for it, but he may do it after. 1 Rol. Abr. 450.

If the condition conſiſts of two parts in the disjunctive, in which the party hath an election which of them to perform, and both poſſible at the time of making the condition, and one becomes impoſſible afterwards by the act of God, this ſhall excuſe the performance of that and the other alſo; for otherwiſe his election ſhould be taken away by the act of God. 5 Co. 22.

But it hath been held, where the condition was to make the obligee a leaſe for life by ſuch a day, or pay him 100 l. that though the obligee die before the day, that his executor ſhall have the 100 l. and the ground of Laughter's caſe was denied to be univerſal. 1 Salk. 170.

If a condition conſiſts of two parts, of which one was not poſſible at the making of the condition to be performed, he ought to perform the other. 5 Co. 22.

As if the condition be to enfeoff J. S. or his heirs, when he comes to ſuch place, he is bound to enfeoff J. S. when he comes, becauſe the other is not poſſible; for he cannot have an heir during his life, and ſo he had not any election. 1 Rol. Abr. 450.

If a condition of an obligation be to make an aſſurance of certain lands to the obligee and his heirs, and after the obligee dies, yet he ought to make the aſſurance to his heir; for this copulative and his heirs ſhall have the ſignification of a disjunctive. 1 Jones 180. Palm. 252. See Cro. Eliz. 399.

If the condition of an obligation be to enfeoff two before ſuch a day, and one dies before the day, yet he ought to enfeoff the other. 1 Rol. Abr. 451.

Condition that A. (a ſtranger) ſhall pay ſo much ſuch a day, or perſonally appear ſuch a day at ten in the morning at B.'s houſe; though Ægrotus fuit ex viſitatione Dei, &c. is a good plea as to that part of the disjunctive, yet being in the caſe of a ſtranger the other part ought to be performed. Raym. 373. Trin. 32 Car. B. R. Soham v. Pannel.

Debt upon bond conditioned to give the plaintiff a true account of all money received by him, &c. by the 28th day of November, &c. or render his body to priſon at the plaintiff's ſuit in any action he ſhall then commence againſt him, then, &c. The defendant pleaded, that he was always ready to render an account; but farther, that the plaintiff had not commenced any action againſt him ad vel ante 28th of November præd', whereupon he might render himſelf to priſon; the plaintiff replied, that 300 l. was due to him, &c. and that after the ſaid 28th of November, viz. 12 Aprilis, he ſued out an original in account; and the defendant not appearing he ſued out a capias, whereof he gave the defendant notice, and required to render himſelf according to the condition. Upon a demurrer, judgment was given per tot. cur. for the defendant; becauſe he being to do the firſt act, has election either to give an account, or render himſelf on the action; beſides, the breach is not well aſſigned; for the defendant is not obliged to render himſelf on an action which ſhall not be ſued againſt him 28th of November; the word in the condition being (then commenced) and is not to be conſtrued then, or from thenceforth; for that would be to give the plaintiff liberty to commence an action at any time during his life; and conditions are always made for the advantage of the obligor. 3 Lev. 137. Mich. 35 Car. 2. C. B. Stanley v. Fern.

If A. binds himſelf apprentice to B. for ſeven years, and B. enters into a bond to A. conditioned to pay A. his executors or aſſigns, 10 l. at the time of the end or determination of his apprenticeſhip, and A. ſerves ſix years, and then dies, the money ſhall not be paid to his executor, though it was objected, that his apprenticeſhip ended at his death. 2 Brownl. 97.

If A. enters into a bond to B. conditioned that C. ſhall perform an award to be made between B. and C. and it is awarded that C. ſhall pay to B. 10 l. at Michaelmas, and 10 l. at Lady-day, yet becauſe the ſum awarded is a duty, it is as if a condition of a bond had been for the payment of the money; and if not paid, the bond is forfeited. 2 Leon. 155.

But if the condition of an obligation be, that the obligor ſhall enfeoff the obligee at ſuch a day, and before the day the obligor dies, and the land deſcends to his heir, the condition is become impoſſible by the act of God, and the performance thereof excuſed. 2 Leon. 155.

But it has been held in equity, that if the condition of a bond be to ſettle certain lands in ſuch a manor by ſuch a day, though the obligor die before the day, by which the bond is ſaved at law, yet an execution ought to be decreed in ſpecie. Eq. Abr. 18.

One deviſed to his eldeſt daughter, upon condition ſhe ſhould marry his nephew on or before ſhe attained the age of twenty; the nephew died young, and the daughter never refuſed, and indeed never was required to marry him; after the death of the nephew, the daughter being about ſeventeen, married J. S. and it was adjudged that the condition was not broken, being become impoſſible by the act of God. 1 Salk. 170.

C. binds himſelf apprentice to S. for ſeven years, and S. bound himſelf to pay C. his executors or aſſigns, 10 l. at the time of the end or determination of his apprenticeſhip. C. ſerves ſix years, and dies; the money ſhall not be paid to his executor. The whole court (abſente the Ch. J.) held, that the obligation was diſcharged, and that the money ſhould not be paid. Brownl. 97. Mich. 5 Jac. Cheney v. Sell.

If

If leſſee covenants to repair a houſe, though it be burnt by lightning, or thrown down by enemies, yet he muſt repair it; for when the party by his own contract creates a duty or charge upon himſelf, he is bound to make it good if he can, notwithſtanding any accident by inevitable neceſſity, becauſe he might have provided againſt it by his contract. Allen 29. Mich. 23 Car. B. R. Paradine v. Jane.

The condition of the bond was, that whereas Chriſtopher the anceſtor did affirm, that he had paid 60l. to H. L. which H. L. did deny, if Chriſtopher by the 10*th of November did not legally prove the money paid, then if he paid the money the ſaid* 10*th of November the bond ſhould be void.* The defendant pleaded, that Chriſtopher died before the 10*th of November.* The plaintiff demurred; but the court held this was not like a disjunctive condition, though it did depend upon a condition, and the party having undertaken to make proof, it was at his peril if he did not; and though he was prevented by the act of God, yet the bond was forfeited; judgment pro quer'. Freem. Rep. 269. pl. 297. Hill. 1679. Vinier v. Joyner.

If an annuity be granted upon condition that the grantee ſhall be attorney for the grantor in all pleas, if he be after made ſheriff, yet this ſhall not excuſe him from the performance of the condition; but he ought to be his attorney; otherwiſe the condition is broken. 1 Rol. Abr. 451.

If A. deviſes lands to B. and his heirs, upon condition that he, his heirs and aſſigns, with the iſſues and profits of the land, ſhall pay yearly ſo much for certain charitable uſes, and dies, and after the deviſee dies, his heir within age, and in ward to the King, the payment ſhall be excuſed during the time the King hath him in ward; for by the intent of the condition, the payment ought to be made with the iſſues and profits, which are transferred by act in law, to the King. 1 Rol. Abr. 451.

If a recognizance be conditioned for the appearance of B. at the next aſſize held for the county of S. and before the next aſſize, B. ſues a certiorari out of the King's Bench to remove the recognizance, and at the next aſſizes delivers the certiorari to the judge, yet this does not excuſe his appearance; for though the certiorari was the command of the King, yet the purchaſe thereof was the act of B. and he could by no ſuch ſlight ſave his recognizance. Yelv. 207.

If a man hath good title to lands by virtue of a fine, and ſells the ſame, and covenants with the vendee, his heirs and aſſigns, that he ſhall enjoy againſt him and B. and all claiming under him; and after by an act of parliament, reciting that B. had ſettled this eſtate upon C. and that certain perſons had unduly procured the ſaid fine from her, it is enacted, that the fine ſhall be void, and that every perſon may enter, as if no ſuch fine had been; and after one enters, claiming title under C. this is a breach of the covenant; for the act makes no new title, but removes the obſtruction of the old; and it was ſaid, that doubtleſs B. was named in the covenant for this purpoſe, in caſe this fine unduly obtained ſhould be avoided. 2 Lev. 26.

If the condition of an obligation be, that the obligor ſhall enfeoff the obligee of the land before ſuch a day, and after before the day the obligee diſſeiſes the obligor, and keeps it by force till after the day, ſo that the obligor cannot enter, this will excuſe the performance of the condition. 8 Co. 92.

If leſſee for years covenants to drain the water which is upon the land before ſuch a day, and after the leſſor enters before the day, and there continues till the day is paſt, yet this ſhall not excuſe the performance of the covenant, becauſe this is collateral to the land. 1 Rol. Abr. 453.

If a man be bound to build a houſe, &c. he is excuſed if the obligee will not ſuffer him to build it; for he cannot come upon the land againſt his will. 1 Rol. Abr. 453.

So if a condition be to repair a houſe, he is excuſed thereof, if a ſtranger, by the command of the obligee himſelf, diſturbs him, and will not ſuffer him to do it. 1 Rol. Abr. 453.

If the condition be to erect a mill, and after he comes to the obligee, and ſays all is ready for the erecting thereof, and demands of him when he ſhall come with the mill to erect it; if the obligee ſays he will not have the mill, and entirely diſcharges him of the mill, this ſhall excuſe him of the performance. 1 Rol. Abr. 453, 454.

If leſſee for years of a houſe covenants to repair it, and to leave it in as good plight as he found it, and after certain ſparks of fire came out of the chimney of the leſſor into a houſe not much remote, by which the houſe of the leſſee is burnt, this will excuſe the performance of the covenant to the leſſee; ſo that he is not bound to rebuild, becauſe this comes by the act of the leſſor himſelf. 1 Rol. Abr. 454.

If a leaſe be made upon condition that the leſſee ſhall not permit to harbour any whore within the houſe to him let, and that if he ſuffers ſuch woman to ſtay there ſix weeks after warning, &c. it ſhall be lawful for the leſſor to enter; and after the leſſee ſuffers ſuch woman to be there, and warning is given him by the leſſor, although after the leſſor commands the woman to ſtay there ſix weeks, yet this ſhall not excuſe the performance of the condition, becauſe the leſſor did not do any act; and notwithſtanding the command the leſſee might have removed her. 8 Co. 91. b.

But if the leſſor ouſts the leſſee, and with force, and againſt the will of the leſſee, puts in the woman, and violently makes her ſtay there with force, againſt the will of the leſſee, for ſix weeks, this ſhall excuſe the performance of the condition. 8 Co. 92.

If A. is bound to B. that J. S. ſhall marry Jane G. before ſuch a day, and before the day B. marries her, he ſhall take no advantage of the condition, becauſe by his means it could not be performed. Co. Lit. 206. b.

If a man makes a feoffment in mortgage, upon condition to be void upon payment of money by the feoffor, &c. to the feoffee at a day, if at the day the feoffee is out of the realm, the feoffor is not bound to ſeek him, or to go out of the realm to him; and therefore becauſe the feoffee is the cauſe that the feoffor cannot tender the money, the feoffor may enter into the land, as if duly tendered. Co. Lit. 210. b.

Regularly, if the condition be to be performed by a ſtranger, and he refuſes, the obligation is forfeited; for the obligor has taken upon him that the ſtranger ſhall do it. 1 Rol. Abr. 452.

As, if the condition be that my ſon ſhall ſerve J. S. if he will not, my obligation is forfeited. 22 E. 4. 26. b.

A. and B. ſubmit themſelves to the award of C. and A. enters into an obligation to C. to ſtand to the award, and B. alſo, and C. awards A. to pay 10*s.* to B. who tenders it, and B. refuſes, the obligor is excuſed becauſe B. is not a mere ſtranger, but privy, and ſo is the obligee. 1 Rol. 452.

But if the condition be, that the ſon of the obligor ſhall marry the daughter of the obligee, if the daughter of the obligee refuſes the ſon, yet the condition is forfeited; for the daughter is a mere ſtranger, and the obligor hath taken upon him that his ſon ſhall marry her. Hutt. 48. Winch 30. 3 Bulſ. 30.

So if the condition be to enfeoff a ſtranger, who refuſes, yet the obligation is forfeited. Co. Lit. 209.

If there be a feoffment upon condition to enfeoff a ſtranger, if the ſtranger refuſes, yet the condition is broke; becauſe the intent was not that the feoffee ſhould retain it. Co. Lit. 209.

But otherwiſe it had been, if the condition was to make a gift in tail to a ſtranger, and he refuſes; for there the intent was that he ſhould have the reverſion. Co. Lit. 209.

In debt on obligation conditioned to make ſuch a releaſe at Mich. term next, as the judge of the prerogative court ſhould think meet, the defendant ſaid, that J. S. was judge there at that time, and that he did not appoint or deviſe any releaſe; adjudged no plea, becauſe not alledged that he cauſed a releaſe to be drawn and tendered to the judge, for he ought to get ſuch a leaſe drawn as the judge ſhall allow of. Cro. E. 716. pl. 41. Mich. 41 & 42 Eliz. C. B. Lamb v. Brownwent.

ſſted, that this was a condition precedent, and to the diſinheriſon of the heir at law, and in favour of a voluntary deviſee. 2 Vern. 366.

A man having two daughters, deviſed to each of them 2000 l. payable at the age of twenty-five years; but if they, or either of them married before the age of ſixteen, or if the marriage were without the conſent of their mother and truſtees, then they ſhould loſe 1000 l. of the portion, which ſhould go to his other children; one of them married before the age of ſixteen, but with the conſent of all the parties; and it was held, that the time being only a circumſtance might be diſpenſed with. Skin. 285.

A. deviſed his lands to truſtees for three years, and if within the three years there happened a marriage between G. who was a diſtant relation, and of the ſame blood with the teſtator, and W. his niece, and heir at law, then to W. for life, remainder to her firſt ſon, &c. in tail male, by G. to be begotten; but if the marriage ſhould not take effect within the three years; or if the marriage ſhould be before the years of conſent, and not ratified, when of competent age, then to F. in tail, who was likewiſe a remote relation of the teſtator, but not of the ſame blood; the marriage between G. and W. did not take effect, though the ſeveral propoſals were within the time made by her friends to his guardians, but not accepted by them; and though ſhe herſelf had preſſed the match as far as the modeſty of her ſex would permit. She afterwards married the plaintiff, and by her bill prayed the benefit of the deviſe; the condition being anſwered by her to what ſhe was capable of doing, having married a perſon, as was urged, equal in circumſtances, &c. but her bill was diſmiſſed by the advice of Holt and Treby, Ch. Juſtices. 3 Chan. Ca. 129.

3. What ſhall excuſe the performance of conditions, viz. the act of God, act of the law, act of the parties, and act of a ſtranger.

Regularly, If a condition, which was poſſible at the making thereof, becomes impoſſible by the act of God, the obligation is diſcharged. 1 Rol. Abr. 449.

If a man be let to mainprize, it is a good plea at the day when the manucaptors ought to have the body, &c. for the manucaptors to ſay, that he who was let to mainprize was dead before the day, ſo that they could not have his body at the day. 1 Rol. Abr. 449.

If a man covenants to build an houſe before ſuch a day, and after the plague is there before the day, and continues there till after the day, this ſhall excuſe him from the breach of the covenant, for the not doing thereof before the day; for the law will not compel a man to venture his life for it, but he may do it after. 1 Rol. Abr. 450.

If the condition conſiſts of two parts in the disjunctive, in which the party hath an election which of them to perform, and both poſſible at the time of making the condition, and one becomes impoſſible afterwards by the act of God, this ſhall excuſe the performance of that and the other alſo; for otherwiſe his election ſhould be taken away by the act of God. 5 Co. 22.

But it hath been held, where the condition was to make the obligee a leaſe for life by ſuch a day, or pay him 100 l. that though the obligee die before the day, that his executor ſhall have the 100 l. and the ground of Laughter's caſe was denied to be univerſal. 1 Salk. 170.

If a condition conſiſts of two parts, of which one was not poſſible at the making of the condition to be performed, he ought to perform the other. 5 Co. 22.

As if the condition be to enfeoff J. S. or his heirs, when he comes to ſuch place, he is bound to enfeoff J. S. when he comes, becauſe the other is not poſſible; for he cannot have an heir during his life, and ſo he had not any election. 1 Rol. Abr. 450.

If a condition of an obligation be to make an aſſurance of certain lands to the obligee and his heirs, and after the obligee dies, yet he ought to make the aſſurance to his heir; for this copulative and his heirs ſhall have the ſignification of a disjunctive. 1 Jones 180. Palm. 252. See Cro. Eliz. 399.

If the condition of an obligation be to enfeoff two before ſuch a day, and one dies before the day, yet he ought to enfeoff the other. 1 Rol. Abr. 451.

Condition that A. (a ſtranger) ſhall pay ſo much ſuch a day, or perſonally appear ſuch a day at ten in the morning at B.'s houſe; though Ægrotus fuit ex viſitatione Dei, &c. is a good plea as to that part of the disjunctive, yet being in the caſe of a ſtranger the other part ought to be performed. Raym. 373. Trin. 32 Car. B. R. Soham v. Pannel.

Debt upon bond conditioned to give the plaintiff a true account of all money received by him, &c. by the 28th day of November, &c or render his body to priſon at the plaintiff's ſuit in any action he ſhall then commence againſt him, then, &c. The defendant pleaded, that he was always ready to render an account; but farther, that the plaintiff had not commenced any action againſt him ad vel ante 28th of November præd', whereupon he might render himſelf to priſon; the plaintiff replied, that 300 l. was due to him, &c. and that after the ſaid 28th of November, viz. 12 Aprilis, he ſued out an original in account; and the defendant not appearing he ſued out a capias, whereof he gave the defendant notice, and required to render himſelf according to the condition. Upon a demurrer, judgment was given per tot. cur. for the defendant; becauſe he being to do the firſt act, has election either to give an account, or render himſelf on the action; beſides, the breach is not well aſſigned; for the defendant is not obliged to render himſelf on an action which ſhall not be ſued againſt him 28th of November; the word in the condition being (then commenced) and is not to be conſtrued then, or from thenceforth; for that would be to give the plaintiff liberty to commence an action at any time during his life; and conditions are always made for the advantage of the obligor. 3 Lev. 137. Mich. 35 Car. 2. *C. If A. binds himſelf apprentice to B. for ſeven years, and B. enters into a bond to A. conditioned to pay A. his executors or aſſigns, 10 l. at the time of the end or determination of his apprenticeſhip, and A. ſerves ſix years, and then dies, the money ſhall not be paid to his executor, though it was objected, that his apprenticeſhip ended at his death. 2 Brownl. 97.

If A. enters into a bond to B. conditioned that C. ſhall perform an award to be made between B. and C. and it is awarded that C. ſhall pay to B. 10 l. at Michaelmas, and 10 l. at Lady-day, yet becauſe the ſum awarded is a duty, it is as if a condition of a bond had been for the payment of the money; and if not paid, the bond is forfeited. 2 Leon. 155.

But if the condition of an obligation be, that the obligor ſhall enfeoff the obligee at ſuch a day, and before the day the obligor dies, and the land deſcends to his heir, the condition is become impoſſible by the act of God, and the performance thereof excuſed. 2 Leon. 155.

Confederacy (Confœderatio) Is when two or more confederate or combine themſelves to do any damage to another, or to commit any unlawful act. And though a writ of conſpiracy does not lie, if the party be not indicted, and in lawful manner acquitted, for ſo are the words of the writ; yet falſe confederacy between divers perſons ſhall be puniſhed, though nothing be put in execution; which appears by the book of 27 Aſſiſ. Placit. 44. where two were indicted of confederacy, each to maintain the other, whether their matter were true or falſe; and though nothing were ſuppoſed to be put in practice, the parties were enjoined to anſwer, ſince the thing is forbidden by law. So in the next article, in the ſame book, enquiry ſhall be made of conſpirators and confederators which bind themſelves together, &c. This confederacy, puniſhable by law before it be executed, ought to have four incidents: Firſt, It muſt be declared by ſome matter of profecution, as by making of bonds or promiſes the one to the other. Secondly, Malicious, as for unjuſt revenge. Thirdly, It ought to be falſe, againſt an innocent. Laſtly, To be out of court, voluntarily. Terms de la Ley.

Confeſſion of offence, Is when a priſoner is appealed or indicted of treaſon or felony, and brought to the bar to be arraigned, and his indictment is read unto him; and the court demands what he can ſay thereto, then either he confeſſes the offence, and the indictment to be true, or pleads Not guilty, or elſe gives an indirect anſwer, and ſo in effect ſtands mute. Confeſſion may be made in two ſorts, and to two ſeveral ends. The one is, he may confeſs the offence whereof he is indicted openly in the court before the judge, and ſubmit himſelf to the cenſure and judgment of the law, which confeſſion is the moſt certain anſwer, and beſt ſatisfaction that may be given to the judge to condemn the offender; ſo that it proceeds freely of his own accord, without any threats, force, or extremity uſed: for if the confeſſion ariſe from any of theſe cauſes, it ought not to be recorded. As if a woman was indicted for the feloniouſly taking of bread to the value of two ſhillings, and being thereof arraigned, ſhe confeſt the felony, and ſaid, That ſhe did it by the commandment of her huſband; and the judges, in pity, would not record her conceſſion, but cauſed her to plead Not guilty to the felony; whereupon the jury found, that ſhe ſtole the bread by compulſion of her huſband againſt her will, for which cauſe ſhe was diſcharged. 27 Aſſiſ. pl. 50. The other kind of confeſſion is, when a priſoner confeſſes the indictment to be true, and that he committed the offence whereof he is indicted, and then becomes an approver, that is, an accuſer of others who have committed the ſame offence whereof he is indicted, or offences with him; and then prays the judge to have a coroner aſſigned him, to whom he may make relation of thoſe offences, and the full circumſtances thereof. There is alſo a third kind of confeſſion made by an offender in felony, which is not in court before the judge, as the other two are; but before a coroner in a church, or other privileged place, upon which the offender, by the ancient law of the realm was to abjure. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Confeſſion, according to ſome writers, is twofold, either expreſs, or implied.

An expreſs confeſſion is, where a perſon directly confeſſes the crime with which he is charged; which is the higheſt conviction that can be. 2 Haw. 333.

But it is uſual for the court, eſpecially if it be out of clergy, to adviſe the party to plead and put himſelf upon his trial, and not preſently to record his confeſſion, but to admit him to plead. 2 H. H. 225.

An implied confeſſion is, where a defendant, in a caſe not capital, doth not directly own himſelf guilty, but in a manner admits it by yielding to the King's mercy, and deſiring to ſubmit to a ſmall fine; which ſubmiſſion the court may accept of if they think fit, without putting him to a direct confeſſion. 2 Haw. 233.

It ſeems that the confeſſion of the defendant taken upon examination before juſtices of the peace, or in diſcourſe with private perſons, may be given in evidence againſt the party confeſſing, but not againſt others. 2 Haw. 429.

All thoſe who on their examination own themſelves guilty of a felony alledged againſt them, and are charged in their mittimus with the felony ſo confeſſed, ſeem to be excluded from bail; for bail is only proper where it ſtands indifferent whether the party be guilty or innocent. 2 Haw. 97.

For the effect of confeſſion in civil pleas, ſee 5 Vin. Abr. title Confeſſion.

Confeſſor, Confeſſarius, à Confeſſionibus. The prieſt, who received the auricular confeſſion had the title of confeſſor; feſſor; though improperly; for he is rather the confeſſee, ing the perſon paſſive, to whom the confeſſion is made, or at leaſt the confeſſary, who receives the confeſſion, or the confeſſionar. This receiving the confeſſion of a penitent, was in the old Engl. to ſhreve, or ſhrive, Sax. ſcrifan; whence the party confeſſed was beſcrifen; whence our Engl. beſhrieved, or looking like a confeſſed or ſhrieved perſon, impoſed ſome uneaſy penance; hence to beſhrew is to imprecate, or denounce the curſe of ſin as confeſſion. The act of confeſſion was called ſcrifde, whence poſſibly to ſhift, or ſhuffle in diſcourſe, like people who are aſhamed or afraid to tell all their faults. The moſt ſolemn time of confeſſing was the day before Lent, which from thence is called Shrove-Tueſday. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Confirmation, (Confirmatio) From the verb confirmare, quod eſt firmum facere; and therefore it is ſaid, That confirmatio omnes ſupplet defectus, licet id quod actum eſt, ab initio non valuit. Co. on Litt. lib. 3. cap. 9. ſect. 515. It is a conveyance of an eſtate or right in eſſe, whereby a voidable eſtate is made ſure and unavoidable, or whereby a particular eſtate is increaſed: nay, it is a ſtrengthening of an eſtate formerly, and yet voidable, though not preſently void. For example, a biſhop granteth his chancellorſhip by patent for the term of the patentee's life; this is no void grant, but voidable by the biſhop's death, except it be ſtrengthened by the confirmation of the dean and chapter. Quælibet confirmatio aut eſt perficiens, creſcens aut diminuens. 1. Perficiens, as if a feoffee upon condition make a feoffment, and the feoffor confirm the eſtate of the ſecond feoffee: ſo if diſſeiſee confirm the eſtate of the diſſeiſor, or his feoffee. 2. Creſcens, doth always enlarge the eſtate of a tenant; as tenant at will to hold for years; or tenant for years to hold for life. 3. Diminuens, as when a lord of whom the land is holden confirms the eſtate of his tenant to hold by a leſs rent. See more of this in Weſt. Symb. part 1. lib. 1. ſect. 2. 500. F. N. B. fol. 169, 226, 271. and Litt. lib. 3. cap. 9. Co. 9. Rep. Beaumont's Caſe.

Confiſcate, Confiſcatus, May be derived either from the Lat. confiſcare, or the French confiſquer; that is, in publicum adducere. All theſe words are drawn from fiſcus, which (as Minſhew ſaith) originally ſignifieth a hamper or baſket, but metonymically, the emperor's treaſure; becauſe it was anciently kept in hampers. And though our King doth not put his treaſure in ſuch things; yet as the Romans have ſaid, that ſuch goods as are forfeited to the emperor were bona confiſcata; in like manner do we ſay of ſuch goods as are forfeited to the King's Exchequer. And the title to have theſe goods is given to the King by ſuch law, when they are not claimed by ſome other. As if a man be indicted, that he feloniouſly ſtole the goods of another man, when in truth they are the proper goods of him indicted; and they are brought into court againſt him as the manner is, and he is then aſked, what he ſays to the ſaid goods, to which he diſclaims; by this diſclaimer he ſhall loſe the goods, although afterwards he be acquitted of the felony, and the King ſhall have them as confiſcated: but otherwiſe it is, if he do not diſclaim them. The ſame law is, where goods are found in the felon's poſſeſſion, which he diſavows, and afterwards is attainted of other goods, and not of them, there the goods which he diſavows are confiſcated to the King; but had he been attainted of the ſame goods, they ſhould have been ſaid to be forfeited, and not confiſcate, notwithſtanding his diſavowment. So if an appeal of robbery be brought, and the plaintiff leaves out ſome of his goods, he ſhall not be received to enlarge his appeal, and foraſmuch as there is none to have the goods ſo left out, the King ſhall have them as confiſcate, according to the old rule, Quod non capit Chriſtus, capit fiſcus; and as in the caſe aforeſaid, the law puniſhes the owner for his negligence and connivancy, ſo alſo the law abhors malice in ſeeking the life of any without juſt cauſe. And therefore if A. hath the goods of B. by delivery or finding, and B. brings an appeal againſt A. for taking them felonioufly, and it is found, that they were the plaintiff's goods, and that the defendant came lawfully by them: in this caſe the goods are not confiſcate to the King, becauſe of the falſe and malicious appeal. See more in Staundf. Pl. Cor. l. 3. ca. 24. 3 Inſt. f. 227. Note, Confiſcare and forisfacere are ſynonyma's; and bona confiſcata are bona forisfacta.

Congeable, Is derived from the French conge, that is, venia; and ſignifies in our common law as much as lawful, or lawfully done, or done with leave; as, the entry of the diſſeiſee is congeable, and ſo Littleton uſes it in his 410 ſection, and Cro. 2 par. fol. 31.

Conge d'accorder, Signifies leave to accord or agree; it is mentioned in the ſtatute of fines, 18 Ed. 3. in theſe words, when the original writ is delivered in preſence of the parties before the juſtices, a pleader ſhall ſay this, Sir Juſtice, conge d'accorder; and the juſtice ſhall ſay to him, What will Sir R. give? and ſhall name one of the parties, &c. See Ruff. Stat. vol. 9. page 1. of Pref.

Conge d'Eſlire, Venia Eligendi, Is French, and ſignifieth in our common law the King's permiſſion royal to a dean and chapter, in time of vacation, to chooſe a biſhop; or to an abbey or priory of his own foundation to chooſe the abbot or prior. F. N. B. fol. 169, 170. Touching this matter, Gwin in his Preface to his Readings, ſaith, That the King of England, as ſovereign patron of all archbiſhopricks and other eccleſiaſtical benefices, had of ancient time free appointment of all eccleſiaſtical dignities, whenſoever they chanced to be void, inveſting them firſt, per Bacculum & Annulum, and afterwards by his letters patent; and in proceſs of time, he made the election over to others, under certain forms and conditions; as, that they ſhould at every vacation, before they chooſe, demand of the King conge d'Eſlire; that is, licence to proceed to election, and then after election to crave his royal aſſent, &c. And further, he affirmeth by good proof, out of common law books, that King John was the firſt that granted this, and that it was afterwards confirmed by Weſt. 1. cap. 1. which ſtatute was made An. 3. Ed. 1. And again, by the ſtat. Articuli Cleri, cap. 2. which was ordained, 25 Ed. 3. ſtat. 3. It is certain all the prelacies in England were conferred at the pleaſure of the prince, and the perſons were inveſted by the King's delivery of a ſtaff and ring, till archbiſhop Anſelm denied this royal prerogative, and prevailed with pope Paſchal to abrogate this cuſtom by a ſolemn canon; after which, the firſt biſhop who came in by a regular election, was Roger biſhop of Saliſbury, in 3 H. 1. An. 1102.

By ſtat. 25 Hen. 8. c. 20. No man is to be preſented to the ſee of Rome for the dignity of a biſhop, &c. but election is to be by the King's conge d'eſlire, or licence, to elect the perſon named by the King; which the dean and chapter muſt do in twenty days, or they will incur a præmunire: and if they fail to make election, the King is to nominate by his letters patent. The ſtat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 6. ouſted the writ of conge d'eſlire, and impowered the King to collate to an archbiſhoprick or biſhoprick abſolutely by letters patent. But this ſtatute was repealed by ſtat. 1 Ma. c. 2.

Conjurare, Is where ſeveral confirm a thing by oath.

Conjuratio, Is an oath; and conjuratus is the ſame with conjurator, viz. one who is bound with the ſame oath. Ernaldus mareſcallus juratus idem dicit per omnia quod filius Andreæ conjuratus ſuus, &c. Mon. 1 tom. pag. 207.

Conjuration (Conjuratio) Is a compound of con and juro, and ſo it ſignifieth a plot or compact made by men, combining themſelves together by oath or promiſe to do any publick harm: but in our Common law it is eſpecially uſed for ſuch as have perſonal conference with the Devil or evil ſpirits, to know any ſecret, or to effect any purpoſe. Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 16. And the difference between conjuration and witchcraft ſeems to be this, that the one by prayers and invocations of God's powerful names, compels the Devil to ſay or do what he commandeth him; the other dealeth rather by a friendly and voluntary conference and agreement between him or her and the Devil or familiar, to have her or his deſires or turns ſerved, in lieu of blood or other gift offered unto him, eſpecially of his or her ſoul. And both theſe differ from enchantments or ſorceries, becauſe they are perſonal conferences with the Devil, as is already ſaid; but theſe are but medicines, and ceremonial forms of words, called commonly charms, without apparition. Cowell.

Mr. Serjeant Hawkins, in his Pleas of the Crown, lib. 1. pag. 5. ſays, that conjurors are thoſe who by force of certain magick words endeavour to raiſe the Devil, and oblige him to execute their commands. Witches are ſuch who by way of conference bargain with an evil ſpirit to do what they deſire him: and ſorcerers are thoſe who by the uſe of certain ſuperſtitious words, or by the means of images, &c. are ſaid to produce ſtrange effects above the ordinary courſe of nature. All which were anciently puniſhed in the ſame manner as hereticks, by the writ de hæretico comburendo, after a ſentence in the eccleſiaſtical court: and they might be condemned to the pillory, &c. upon an indictment at Common law. 3 Inſt. 44. H. P. C. 38. But by ſtat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 12. theſe offenders are divided into two degrees; and thoſe in the firſt degree, and their acceſſaries before, and ſhall ſuffer as felons without benefit of clergy; and theſe are the four following ſpecies. 1. Such as ſhall uſe any invocation or conjuration of any evil ſpirit. 2. That conſult, covenant with, entertain, employ, or reward any evil ſpirit to any intent. 3. As take up any dead perſon's body, or any part thereof, to be uſed in any manner of witchcraft. 4. Or that exerciſe any witchcraft, inchantment, charm, or ſorcery, whereby any perſon ſhall be killed, deſtroyed, conſumed, or lamed in his body, or any part thereof. And if a ſpirit doth not actually appear upon invocation, &c. or if a dead perſon or part of it be taken up to be uſed, and not actually uſed, they are within the ſtatute: but one muſt actually effect the miſchief to be within the clauſe of killing, laming, &c. 3 Inſt. 45. H. P. C. 6, 7. Thoſe in the ſecond degree ſhall for the firſt offence ſuffer a year's impriſonment and the pillory; and for the ſecond, be adjudged felons, excluded clergy. And theſe offenders are divided into the following kinds, ſuch as take upon them by witchcraft, charm, &c. to tell where treaſure, or things loſt or ſtolen, may be found; or to do any thing to the intent to provoke any perſon to unlawful love; or to hurt any perſon in his body; or whereby any cattle or goods of any perſon ſhall be deſtroyed or impaired, &c. but thoſe who take upon them to do the laſt, are not within the act, unleſs they actually accompliſh it. 3 Inſt. 46. Stat. 1 Jac. 1. c. 12. This ſtatute of King James 1. againſt conjuration and witchcraft is repealed; and no proſecution ſhall be commenced on the ſame: but where perſons pretend to exerciſe any kind of witchcraft or conjuration, &c. or undertake to tell fortunes, or from their ſkill in any crafty ſcience to diſcover where goods ſtolen or loſt may be found, upon conviction, they ſhall be impriſoned a year, and ſtand in the pillory once in every quarter in ſome market town, and may be ordered to give ſecurity for their good behaviour, by ſtat. 9 Geo. 2. c. 5.

Action lies for calling one baſtard whoſe grandfather had lands in tail, though the plaintiff was youngeſt ſon of the father; yet being offered a ſum of money by a purchaſer to join in the ſale, and afterwards the purchaſer refuſing to give him any thing by reaſon of thoſe words; it was held, though he has no preſent title, yet it appears he is, by a poſſibility to join in the aſſurance; but it being afterwards refuſed to be given him by reaſon of thoſe words, is a preſent damage, and he may receive prejudice thereby in futuro, in caſe he were to claim any land by deſcent. Though a man does a lawful thing, yet if any damage do thereby befal another, he ſhall anſwer if he could have avoided it; and this holds in all civil caſes. As if a man lops a tree, and the boughs fall upon another ipſo invito, yet an action lies. So if a man ſhoots at butts, and hurts another unawares. So if I have land through which a river runs to your mill, and I lop the ſallows growing on the river-ſide, which accidentally ſtop the water, ſo as your mill is hindered. So if I am building my own houſe, and a piece of timber falls on my neighbour's houſe, and breaks part of it. So if a man aſſaults me, and I lift up my ſtaff to defend myſelf, and ſtrike another in lifting it up. But it is otherwiſe in criminal caſes, for there actus non facit reum niſi mens ſit rea. Per Raymond J. Arg. Raym. 422, 423. Hill. 33 & 34 Car. 2. B. R.

Conſervator of the peace (Conſervator vel cuſtos pacis) Is he that hath an eſpecial charge, by virtue of his office, to ſee the King's peace kept; which peace Lambard in effect defineth to be a with-holding or abſtinence from that injurious force and violence which boiſterous and unruly perſons are in their natures prone to uſe towards others, were they not reſtrained by laws, and fear of puniſhment. Of theſe conſervators he farther ſaith thus, that before the time of King Edward the Third, who firſt erected juſtices of peace, there were ſundry perſons, that by the Common law had intereſt in keeping the peace: of thoſe ſome had that charge, as incident to their offices which they did bear, and ſo included within the ſame; that they were nevertheleſs called by the name of their office only: ſome others had it ſimply, as of itſelf, and were therefore named cuſtodes pacis, wardens, or conſervators of the peace: the former and latter ſort he again ſubdivideth, which read in his Eirenarcha, lib. 1. cap. 3. Conſervator of the truce and ſafe-conducts (Conſervator induciarum & ſalvorum Regis conductuum) Was an officer appointed in every port of the ſea by the King's letters patent, and had 40 l. for his yearly ſtipend at the leaſt. His charge was to enquire of all offences done againſt the King's truce and ſafe conducts upon the main ſea, out of the liberties of the Cinque ports, as the admirals by cuſtom were wont to do, and ſuch other things as are declared in 2 H. 5. cap. 6. touching this matter. Conſideratio curiae. It is often mentioned in law-pleadings; Ideo conſideratum eſt per curiam, i. e. It is adjudged by the court; for conſideratio curiæ is the judgment of the court, viz. as in Matt. Pariſ. Addit. pa. 97. Semper paratus eſt ſtare ad conſiderationem parium ſuorum; and in the 2 Mon. pa. 221. Abſtulit ei dictam terram per conſiderationem curiæ ſuæ, &c.

Conſideration (Conſideratio) Is the material cauſe of a contract, without which it would not be effectual or binding. This conſideratien is either expreſſed, as if a man bargain to give twenty ſhillings for a horſe; or elſe implied, as when the law itſelf enforceth a conſideration; as if a man come into a common inn, and there ſtaying ſome time, taking both meat and lodging for himſelf and his horſe, the law preſumeth that he intends to pay for both, though nothing be farther covenanted between him and his hoſt; and therefore, if he diſcharge not the houſe, the hoſt may ſtay his horſe. Fulbeck's Parall. Tract. Contract. fol. 6. Alſo there is a conſideration of nature and blood, and valuable conſideration: and therefore if a man be indebted to divers others, and yet in conſideration of natural affection gives all his goods to his ſon or couſin, this ſhall be conſtrued a fraudulent gift, within the act of 13 Eliz. c. 5. becauſe this act intends a valuable *conſideration. Nudum pactum will not raiſe an uſe, nor can an uſe be raiſed without a conſideration; agreed. Arg. Cart. 141. Mich. 18 Car. 2. C. B.

If leſſee for life or years aſſigns his eſtate, there needs no conſideration, becauſe the aſſignee is ſubject to the ancient forfeitures and to payment of the rent, and that a loan is ſufficient to veſt an uſe in him; but otherwiſe in caſe of a fee-ſimple; per North Ch. J. Mod. 263. pl. 15. Trin. 29. Car. 2. C. B. in the caſe of Barker v. Keate.

A leaſe for a year upon no other conſideration than reſerving a pepper-corn, if it be demanded, is a ſufficient conſideration to raiſe a uſe, and ſhall operate as a bargain and ſale, and ſo make the leſſee capable of a releaſe. 2 Vent. 35. Paſch. 32 Car. 2. C. B. Barker v. Keate.

A voluntary ſettlement may be ſurrendered without conſideration, and ſuch ſurrender may be aided in a court of equity, and an agreement ſo to do will be decreed; per Ld. Somers. Ch. Prec. 69. pl. 62. Hill. 1696. Wentworth v. Deverginy.

Bargain and ſale, proviſo you pay to me at a future day 100 l. This, though ſet down in form of a condition, is as effectual as if formally expreſſed in the uſual terms. Arg. Le. 6. pl. 10. Mich. 25 & 26 Eliz. B. R. in caſe of Stonely v. Bracebridge.

Love is not a conſideration on which an action may be grounded on a promiſe to pay money, and the ſame of friendſhip; per cur'. 2 Le. 30. pl. 35. Trin. 30 Eliz. B. R. Harford v. Gardiner.

A bargain and ſale was pleaded of land, without ſaying pro quadam pecuniæ ſumma, and exception being taken thereto, the court doubted of it, and demanded of the prothonotaries what is their form of pleading; and by Nelſon chief prothonotary, theſe words pro quadam pecuniæ ſumma ought to be in the pleading. Scot prothonotary contra. Anderſon conceived it was either way good, but pro quadam pecuniæ ſumma is the beſt; and ſo Leonard cuſtos brevium conceived. And the opinion of the juſtices was, that a bargain and ſale for divers cauſes ond conſiderations is not good without a ſum of money. And by Wyndham, bargain and ſale pro quadam pecuniæ ſumma, although no money be paid, is enough, for the payment or not payment is not traverſable; and by Periam, if pro quadam pecuniæ ſumma be not in the indenture of bargain and ſale, yet the payment thereof is averrable; and for this exception the judgment was ſtaid. Le. 170. in pl. 237. Mich. 30 & 31 *Eliz. Other conſiderations being but general parlance imply nothing, except expreſs conſiderations were ſhewn; for otherwiſe none ſhall be intended; per cur'. Cro. E. 344. Mich. 36 & 37 Eliz. B. R. in caſe of Lacy v. Whetſtone.

An uſe is raiſed upon conſiderarion of blood, but the conſideration of blood will not create a debt, though a deed will, without mentioning a conſideration. An aſſumpſit to pay A. his couſin 100 l. is void, if there be no other conſideration; the reaſon of the difference is, the land goes to the blood, but ſo do not the debts. Jenk. 81, 82. in pl. 60.

A leſs conſideration will ſerve to raiſe an uſe than to deſtroy an uſe; per Bacon C. 2 Roll. Rep. 106. Trin. 17 Jac. in Canc. in caſe of Reynolds v. Peacock.

A bargain and ſale was pro diverſis conſiderationibus generally, and this was admitted in evidence to prove money really paid, and if it be paid by one of the bargainees, it is ſufficient for all to raiſe the uſe to all. Vide, if it is to one of the bargainees, if that be not good alſo. Clayt. 145. pl. 263. Mich. 1650. Harley v. Thompſon.

Conuſee of a ſtatute extended the land, and in conſideration of 3000 l. received by the conuſor (which was the money due on the ſtatute) the conuſor conveyed part of lands abſolutely; and this debt being ſatisfied by ſuch conveyance, the conuſee aſſigned the reſt of the lands to the conuſor; this is a good and valuable conſideration, and it is is as effectual as if he had been a purchaſer with money. N. Ch. R. 91. 15 Car. 2. Churchill v. Grove.

Five ſhillings is a valuable, but yet no equitable conſideration for a purchaſe of lands. Arg. Chan. Caſes 34. Mich. 15 Car. 2. in caſe of More v. Mayhow.

Loſs is as good a conſideration for a promiſe as a benefit or profit. Chan. Caſes 78. Mich. 18 Car. 2. in caſe of Underwood v. Staney.

In conſideration that one was bound for him for money owing, he did bargain and ſell; this is no good conſideration. But per Hale Ch. J. In purchaſes the queſtion is not, whether the conſideration be adequate, but whether it is valuable; for if it be ſuch a conſideration as will make a defendant a purchaſer within the ſtatute of Queen Eliz. and bring him within the protection of that law, he ought not to be impeached in equity; per Finch K. *Fin. A pepper corn (in a leaſe for a year) if demanded, is conſideration ſufficient for a bargain and ſale to make the leſſee capable of a releaſe, and ſuch reverſion is ſufficient conſideration to raiſe a uſe, as by bargain and ſale. 2 Vent. 35 Paſch. 32 Car. 2. C. B. Barker v. Keate.

Where there are ſeveral conſiderations, and one is good, that will ſupport the whole deed at law; but it is not ſo in Chancery. Arg. Ch. Prec. 105, 106. Mich. 1699.

If an annuity is granted by one to his houſekeeper, with a bond for payment of it, and the bond is loſt, equity will decree payment of the annuity; for ſervice is a conſideration, and no turpis contractus ſhall be preſumed, unleſs proved. *Abr. Conſign, Is a word uſed by merchants, where goods are aſſigned, or ſent or delivered to a factor. Lex Mercat'.

Conſilium (Dies conſilii) Was a time allowed for the accuſed to make his defence, and anſwer the charge of the accuſer. — In aliis quærat accuſatus conſilium, & habeat ab amicis & paribus ſuis, quod nullo jure debet defendi, &c. Leges H. 1. cap. 46. Conſiſtory (Conſiſtorium) Signifies as much as prætorium, or tribunal. It is commonly uſed for a council-houſe of eccleſiaſtical perſons, or the place of juſtice in the court-chriſtian; a ſeſſion or aſſembly of prelates. Every archbiſhop and biſhop of every dioceſe hath a conſiſtory court held before his chancellor or commiſſary in his cathedral church, or other convenient place of his dioceſe, for eccleſiaſtical cauſes. See 3 Inſt. fol. 338.— Sciatis vos omnes & cæteri Dei fideles qui in Anglia manent, quod epiſcopales leges, quæ non bene ſecundum ſanctorum canonum præcepta, uſque ad meâ tempora, in regno Anglorum fuerunt, communi concilio archiepiſcoporum meorum & cæterorum epiſcoporum & abbatum & omnium principum regni mei, emendendas judicavi. Propterea mando & regia authoritate præcipio, ut nullus epiſcopus vel archidiaconus de legibus epiſcopalibus amplius in hundret placita teneant, nec cauſam, quæ ad regimen animarum pertinet, ad judicium ſecularium hominum adducant, &c. This law, made by the Conqueror, ſeems to give the original of the biſhop's conſiſtory, as it ſits with us, divided from the hundred or county court, wherewith in the Saxon time it was joined. And, in the ſame law of his is further added, Hæc etiam defendo, ut nullus laicus homo de legibus quæ ad epiſcopum pertinent, ſe intromittat, &c. Selden's Hiſt. of Tithes, p. 413, 414.

Conſolidation (Conſolidatio) It is uſed for uniting two benefices in one. Broke, tit. Union, and ſtat. 37 H. 8. c. 21. This is taken from the Civil law, where it ſignifies properly an uniting of the poſſeſſion or profit with the property. For example; If a man have by legacy uſum-fructum fundi, and afterwards buy the property or fee-ſimple of the heir, hoc caſu conſolidatio fieri dicitur. See Union and Unity of poſſeſſion, and the ſtat. 22 Car. 2. cap. 11.

Conſpiracy (Conſpiratio) Though both in Latin and French it is uſed for an agreement of men to do any thing either good or bad; yet in Common law it is always taken in pejorem partem. It is defined by ſtat. 33 Ed. 1. ſtat. 2. to be an agreement of ſuch as do confeder, and bind themſelves by oath, covenant, or other alliance, that every one of them ſhall bear and aid the other falſly and maliciouſly to indict, or falſly to move or maintain pleas; and alſo ſuch as cauſe children within age to appeal men of felony, whereby they are impriſoned and ſo grieved; and ſuch as retain men in the countries with liveries or fees to maintain their malicious enterprizes: and this extendeth as well to the takers, as to the givers. And ſtewards and bailiffs of great lords, which by their ſeigniory, office, or power, undertake to bear or maintain quarrels, pleas, or debates that concern other parties, than ſuch as touch the eſtate of their lords, or themſelves. See 4 Ed. 3. cap. 11. 3 H. 7. cap. 13. and alſo 1 H. 5. cap. 3. and 18 H. 6. cap. 12. and the New Book of Entries, verb. Conſpiracy. In the places before mentioned, conſpiracy is taken more generally, and is confounded with maintenance and champerty: but in a more ſpecial ſignification, it is taken for a confederacy of two at the leaſt, falſly to indict one, or to procure one to be indicted of felony.

From the above definition of conſpiracy by ſtat. 33 Ed. 1. it ſeems clearly to follow, contrary to the opinion of Lord Coke, that not only thoſe who actually cauſe an innocent man to be indicted, and alſo to be tried upon the indictment, whereupon he is acquitted, are properly conſpirators, but that thoſe alſo are guilty of this offence, who barely conſpire to indict a man falſely and maliciouſly, whether they do any act in proſecution of ſuch conſpiracy or not. 1 Haw. 189. Ld. Raym. 1169.

But an action will not lie for the conſpiracy, unleſs it be put in execution; for in ſuch caſe, the damage is the ground of the action. L. Raym. 378.

Alſo it plainly appears from the words of the ſtatute, that one perſon alone cannot be guilty of conſpiracy, within the purport of it; from whence it follows, that if all the defendants who are proſecuted for ſuch a conſpiracy be accquitted but one, the acquittal of the reſt is the acquittal of that one alſo: and upon the ſame ground it hath been holden, that no ſuch proſecution is maintainable againſt a huſband and wife only, becauſe they are eſteemed but as one perſon in law; but it is certain, that an action on the caſe, in the nature of a conſpiracy, may be brought againſt one only. Alſo, it hath been reſolved, that if ſuch an action be brought againſt ſeveral perſons, and all but one be acquitted, yet judgment may be given againſt that one only. 1 Haw. 192.

In the caſe of K. againſt Kinnerſly and Moore, Trin. 5 Geo. 1. an information was brought, ſetting forth, that the defendants, being evil diſpoſed perſons, in order to extort money from my Lord Sunderland, did conſpire together to charge my Lord with endeavouring to commit ſodomy with the ſaid Moore. The defendant Kinnerſly only appears, and pleads to iſſue, and is found guilty. And now exception was taken in arreſt of judgment, that to every conſpiracy there muſt be two perſons at leaſt, whereas here is only one brought in and found guilty, and the other poſſibly may be acquitted. But it was anſwered, that this is arguing from what has not happened, and probably never will; for though Moore may have an opportunity to acquit himſelf, and is not concluded by the verdict as Kinnerſly is, yet as the matter now ſtands, Moore himſelf is found guilty, for the conſpiracy is found as it is laid, and therefore judgment may be given againſt one before the trial of the other. And a caſe was quoted, where ſeveral were indicted for a riot, with many others, and two only were found guilty; and it was objected, that there muſt be three to make a riot; but upon the words, with many others, judgment was given againſt the defendants. And the court over-ruled the exception, and the defendant had ſentence. And in the Eaſter term following, Moore alſo was convicted, and had judgment. Stra. 193.

And, Eaſt. 18 Geo. 2. K. againſt Eliz. Niccols. She was indicted for conſpiring with Tho. Bygrave unjuſtly to charge William Frankland with a robbery, and for that purpoſe going before a juſtice, where Bygrave ſwore it upon him. Niccols only came in, and pleaded Not guilty. And the jury found that ſhe was guilty, but that Bygrave died before the indictment was preferred. Exception was taken, that one alone cannot be guilty of a conſpiracy, and here is but one convicted. But the court over-ruled this, on the authority of Kinnerſly's caſe, in which caſe there was a poſſibility of contradictory verdicts, which here cannot be. Str. 1227.

A conſpiracy ought to be falſo & malitioſe, otherwiſe it will not be a conſpiracy, and ſuch malice ought to be proved; for if A. travelling on the highway be robbed by B. and he knows not B. if afterwards A. accuſes J. S. who is found Not guilty, action of conſpiracy will not lie againſt A. For though J. S. was falſly accuſed, he was not maliciouſly accuſed, and it may be he took J. S. to be the robber, becauſe he was like B. Per Coke Ch. J. and the Lord Chancellor. Godb. 206. pl. 293. Mich. 11 Jac. in the Star-chamber, Miller v. Reynolds and Baſſet.

Conſpiracy (to ſpeak properly) lies only for procuring a man to be indicted of treaſon or felony, where life was in danger; per Holt Ch. J. Ld. Raym. Rep. 379. Mich. 10 W. 3. in caſe of Savil v. Roberts.

Several people may lawfully meet and conſult to proſecute a guilty perſon; otherwiſe, if two charge one that is innocent, right or wrong, for that is indictable, and though nothing be done in proſecution of it, it is a compleat and conſummate offence of itſelf; and whether the conſpiracy be to charge a temporal or eccleſiaſtical offence on any innocent perſon, it is the ſame thing; agreed per cur'. 1 Salk. 174. Trin. 3 Anne, B. R. The Queen v. Beſt & al'. 3 Mod. 137. S. C. and per cur. the giſt is the conſpiring to change falſly, and indictment lies for the falſhood before the party is acquitted of it; but caſe lies not till acquittal, and the indictment in that caſe being for charging with a baſtard-child, the court ſaid, that it was an offence too frequent to be quaſhed upon a motion, and that they would no more quaſh it than they would for baretrry, or keeping a bawdy-houſe.

It is clear, that thoſe who are convicted of conſpiracy at the ſuit of the party, ſhall have judgment of fine and impriſonment, and to render the plaintiff his damages. 1 Haw. 193.

Alſo it is certain, that he who is convicted at the ſuit of the King of a conſpiracy to accuſe another of a matter which may touch his life, ſhall have judgment that he ſhall loſe the freedom and franchiſe of the law (whereby he is diſabled from being put upon any jury, or to be ſworn as a witneſs, or even to appear in perſon in any of the King's courts) and alſo that his houſes, lands, and goods ſhall be ſeized into the King's hands, and his houſes and lands ſhall be ſtripped and waſted, his trees rooted up, and his body impriſoned. And this is commonly called villainous judgment, and is given by the Common law, and not by any ſtatute, and is ſaid generally in ſome books to be the proper judgment upon every conviction of conſpiracy at the ſuit of the King, without any reſtriction to ſuch as endangered the life of the party; but this point doth not ſeem to be any where ſettled. 1 Haw. 193.

In the caſe of Kinnerſly and Moore above-mentioned, Kinnerſly was fined 500 l. a year's impriſonment, and to find ſureties for his good behaviour for ſeven years. Moore was ſentenced to ſtand in the pillory, ſuffer a year's imprisonment, and to find ſureties for ſeven years. Str. 196.

Conſpiratione, Is a writ that lies againſt conſpirators. F. N. B. fol. 114. d. Cromp. de Juriſd. d. fol. 209. See alſo the Regiſter fol. 134.

A writ of conſpiracy lieth where two, three, or more perſons of malice and covin do conſpire and deviſe to indict any perſon falſely, and afterwards he who is ſo indicted is acquitted, now he ſhall have his writ of conſpiracy againſt them who ſo indicted him. F. N. B. 114. 3 Inſt. 143. cap. 66. in principio S. P. if the party is lawfully acquitted by the verdict of 12 men.—— But ſerjeant Hawkins in his Pleas of the Crown, 1 lib. 189, 190. cap. 72. very much queſtions its being requiſite that there be a lawful acquittal, and ſays, that it is certain that an acquittal by verdict is not always neceſſary to maintain ſuch a writ; for it appears by the Regiſter itſelf, that where one brought ſuch a writ in the uſual form, having it in the words quouſque acquietatus fuiſſet, &c. againſt one who had been nonſuited in a malicious appeal of felony brought againſt him, his writ was abated, becauſe ſuch a nonſuit would not make good the words quouſque acquietatus fuiſſet, and yet he afterwards brought a new writ, wherein he uſed the words quietus receſſit, inſtead of acquietatus fuiſſet, and recovered; and why may not a writ as well be formed in any other caſe, which is as much within the miſchief of the ſtatute as this. Hawk. Pl. 190. cap. 72. ſ. 2.

But the writ lieth againſt two perſons at the leaſt who do ſo conſpire; for if one perſon of malice and falſe imagination do labour, and cauſe another falſly to be indicted, the party who is ſo indicted ſhall not have a writ of conſpiracy, &c. but an action upon the caſe againſt him who ſo cauſed him falſly to be indicted. *F. Conſtable (Conſtabularius,) Is a Saxon word, compounded of cyning or cyng, and ſtaple, which ſignify the ſtay and hold of the King. Lamb. Duty of Conſtables, num. 4. But ſome have derived it from comes ſtabuli; which ſeems more probable, becauſe we had this officer, and many others, from the Cæſarean laws and cuſtoms of the empire, as well as from the Saxons. But this dignity, which originally was to take care of the King's ſtables, was afterwards made military; and the comes ſtabuli was then the chief general, called by our Saxon anceſtors Heretochii.

The word is diverſly uſed: Firſt, for the Conſtable of England; of whoſe great dignity and authority we find many proofs in our ſtatutes and chronicles. His function conſiſts in the care of the common peace of the land, in deeds of arms, and matters of war. Lamb. ubi ſupra. With whom agrees the ſtatute of 13 R. 2 cap. 2. ſtat. 1. which ſays, To the court of the Conſtable and Marſhal it appertains to have the conuſance of contracts, and deeds of arms and of war out of the realm, and alſo of things that touch war within, as combats, blaſonry of arms, &c. But it may not meddle with battle in appeals, nor generally with any other thing that may be tried by the laws of the land. See Forteſcue, cap. 32. and 4 Inſt. fol. 123. and eſpecially Pryn's Animad. on 4 Inſt. fol. 71. Anciently he was called Princeps militiæ domus Regis. The Conſtable of England was firſt created by William the Conqueror, and continued till 13 H. 8. It was an hereditary dignity, and deſcended to females; and the Conſtable held ſeveral manors of the King, as being Conſtable of England. But it being ſo powerful a dignity, it became troubleſome to the crown, and therefore was laid aſide by Henry 8. and not created ſince, but upon particular occaſions.

Out of this high magiſtracy of Conſtable of England, (ſays Lambard,) were drawn thoſe inferior conſtables, which we call conſtables of hundreds and franchiſes; and firſt ordained by the ſtatute of Weſtminſter, 13 Ed. 1. which appoints, for conſervation of the peace, and view of armour, two conſtables in every hundred and franchiſe, who in Latin are called conſtabularii capitales, high conſtables, becauſe in proceſs of time, the increaſe both of people and offences, under theſe made others in every town called petit conſtables, in Latin ſub-conſtabularii, who are of like nature, but of inferior authority to the others. The making a petty conſtable belongs to the lords of divers manors jure feudi. Of theſe read Smith de Rep. Angl. lib. 2. c. 22. Beſides theſe, there are officers of particular places, called by this name, as Conſtables of the Tower. Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol. 152. anno 1 H. 4. c. 13. Conſtable of the Exchequer, anno 51. Conſtable* of the caſtle of London (for ſo Baynard's caſtle was anciently called) and Robert Fitz Walter was conſtable thereof, and banner-bearer of that city by inheritance. But theſe are Caſtellani properly, as Lambard notes, though confounded in name with the other. See the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 38. ——Manwood par. 1. cap. 13. mentions a conſtable of the foreſt. And Henry Lord Beaumont was conſtable of the King's army. 10 Ed. 3. Baronage of England, 2 part, fol. 51. b. Cowell, edit. 1727.

As to high and petty conſtables, they appear to have been officers of great antiquity; for by the laws of King Alfred, the freemen were to diſtribute themſelves into decennaries and hundreds, and every ten freeholders choſe an annual officer, whom they called conſtable, horſholder, tithingman or headborough, as head of the decennary; theſe in every hundred where there was a feudal lord, were ſworn in, and admitted by the lord or his ſteward, in his leet; but where there was no ſuch feudal lord, the ſheriff in his torn had the ſwearing and placing of them in; alſo if there was no feudal lord of the hundred, an annual officer was choſen, who was to preſide over the whole hundred, who was called the high conſtable; but if the hundred was feudal, as it often anciently was, then ſuch lord of the hundred adminiſtred the office himſelf. 1. Bac. Abr. 438.

At Common law, before the making of the ſtatutes by which juſtices of peace were ordained to keep the peace, the Chief Juſtice of England was appointed by the King, and he had authority, and was ordained to determine matters touching the crown, and for conſervation of the peace throughout the realm, and he thereby is the Ch. J. of peace. Alſo by the Common law, before there was any juſtice of the peace, conſtables of every town were keepers of the peace within their towns. Kitch. of Courts 96.

An high conſtable is not ſuch an officer or conſervator of the peace whereof the Commo n law takes any notice; for he is not mentioned in any book; per Anderſon. Cro. E. 375. pl. 25. Hill. 37 Eliz. in the caſe of Sarrock v. Hannamer.

High conſtables were not ab origine, but came in with juſtices of peace; per Twiſden J. Mod. 13. pl. 26. Mich. 21 Car. 2. B. R.

As to the antiquity of the office of a conſtable, it ſeems to be the better opinion, that both conſtables of hundreds, which are commonly called high conſtables, and alſo conſtables of tithings, which are at this day commonly called petit-conſtables or tithingmen, and were anciently called chief pledges, were by the Common law, and not firſt ordained by the ſtatute of Wincheſter, cap. 6. as it is holden by ſome that they were; for that ſtatute does not ſay there ſhall be ſuch officers conſtituted, but clearly ſeems to ſuppoſe that there were ſuch before the making of it. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 61. ca. 10. ſ. 33.

1. Who is obliged to ſerve as conſtable, and how puniſhed for not ſerving.
2. By whom choſen, appointed, ſworn and removed.
3. His power and authority without a warrant.
4. His power and duty in executing warrants.
5. How favoured and protected in his office, or puniſhed for neglect of duty.

1. Who is obliged to ſerve as conſtable, and how puniſhed for not ſerving.

It ſeems agreed, that all ſworn attornies, and all other officers, whoſe attendance is required in the courts of Weſtminſter Hall, are not obliged to ſerve or execute any inferior pariſh office, and that where they are choſen, though by a particular cuſtom, with reſpect to their eſtates or otherwiſe, they may have a writ of privilege; for no cuſtom ſhall be intended to be more ancient than the uſages of thoſe courts, and therefore ſhall give way to them. 1 Bac. Abr. 440.

So if an alderman of London has an houſe at D. in the county of Eſſex, and he as an inhabitant there is choſen conſtable, yet he is not compellable to ſerve, for that as an alderman he is bound to be preſent in the city, for the good government thereof. Cro. Car. 585. 1 Jones 462. S. C.

But a captain of the King's guards, being preſented to ſerve as conſtable, in purſuance of a cuſtom in reſpect of his lands in a town, cannot claim this privilege; for though by his office he is bound to a perſonal attendance on the King, yet ſuch office being of late inſtitution, ſhall not prevail againſt an ancient cuſtom. See Keb. 309. 1 Sid. 272, 355. 1 Lev. 233. 1 Keb. 933.

Yet if ſuch an officer, or a gentleman of quality, who hath no ſuch office, or a practiſing phyſician be choſen conſtable of a town, which has ſufficient perſons beſides to execute this office, and no ſpecial cuſtom concerning it, againſt ſeveral perſons, and all but one be acquitted, yet judgment may be given againſt that one only. 1 Haw. 192.

In the caſe of K. againſt Kinnerſly and Moore, Trin. 5 Geo. 1. an information was brought, ſetting forth, that the defendants, being evil diſpoſed perſons, in order to extort money from my Lord Sunderland, did conſpire together to charge my Lord with endeavouring to commit ſodomy with the ſaid Moore. The defendant Kinnerſly only appears, and pleads to iſſue, and is found guilty. And now exception was taken in arreſt of judgment, that to every conſpiracy there muſt be two perſons at leaſt, whereas here is only one brought in and found guilty, and the other poſſibly may be acquitted. And a caſe was quoted, where ſeveral were indicted for a riot, with many others, and two only were found guilty; and it was objected, that there muſt be three to make a riot; but upon the words, with many others, judgment was given againſt the defendants. And the court over-ruled the exception, and the defendant had ſentence. And in the Eaſter term following, Moore alſo was convicted, and had judgment. Stra. 193.

And, Eaſt. 18 Geo. 2. K. againſt Eliz. Niccols. She was indicted for conſpiring with Tho. Bygrave unjuſtly to charge William Frankland with a robbery, and for that purpoſe going before a juſtice, where Bygrave ſwore it upon him. Niccols only came in, and pleaded Not guilty. And the jury found that ſhe was guilty, but that Bygrave died before the indictment was preferred. Exception was taken, that one alone cannot be guilty of a conſpiracy, and here is but one convicted. But the court over-ruled this, on the authority of Kinnerſly's caſe, in which caſe there was a poſſibility of contradictory verdicts, which here cannot be. Str. 1227.

Out of this high magiſtracy of Conſtable of England, (ſays Lambard,) were drawn thoſe inferior conſtables, which we call conſtables of hundreds and franchiſes; and firſt ordained by the ſtatute of Weſtminſter, 13 Ed. 1. which appoints, for conſervation of the peace, and view of armour, two conſtables in every hundred and franchiſe, who in Latin are called conſtabularii capitales, high conſtables, becauſe in proceſs of time, the increaſe both of people and offences, under theſe made others in every town called petit conſtables, in Latin ſub-conſtabularii, who are of like nature, but of inferior authority to the others. The making a petty conſtable belongs to the lords of divers manors jure feudi. Of theſe read Smith de Rep. Angl. lib. 2. c. 22. Beſides theſe, there are officers of particular places, called by this name, as Conſtables of the Tower. Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol. 152. anno 1 H. 4. c. 13. Conſtable of the Exchequer, anno 51. H. 3. ſtat. 5. Conſtable of Dover Caſtle, Cam. Britan. pag. 239. Conſtable of the caſtle of Windſor; Conſtable of the caſtle of Carnarvon; Conſtable of the caſtle of Conway; Conſtable of the caſtle of Hardlaigh, in the county of Merioneth; Conſtable of the caſtle of Beaumaris; Conſtable of the caſtle of Caermarthen; Conſtable of the caſtle of Cardigan; Conſtable of the caſtle of Launceſton; Conſtables of the caſtles of Rothlan, Cheſter, and Flint, &c. Conſtable of the caſtle of London (for ſo Baynard's caſtle was anciently called) and Robert Fitz Walter was conſtable thereof, and banner-bearer of that city by inheritance. But theſe are Caſtellani properly, as Lambard notes, though confounded in name with the other. See the ſtatute 32 H. 8. c. 38. ——Manwood par. 1. cap. 13. mentions a conſtable of the foreſt. And Henry Lord Beaumont was conſtable of the King's army. 10 Ed. 3. Baronage of England, 2 part, fol. 51. b. Cowell, edit. 1727.

As to high and petty conſtables, they appear to have been officers of great antiquity; for by the laws of King Alfred, the freemen were to diſtribute themſelves into decennaries and hundreds, and every ten freeholders choſe an annual officer, whom they called conſtable, horſholder, tithingman or headborough, as head of the decennary; theſe in every hundred where there was a feudal lord, were ſworn in, and admitted by the lord or his ſteward, in his leet; but where there was no ſuch feudal lord, the ſheriff in his torn had the ſwearing and placing of them in; alſo if there was no feudal lord of the hundred, an annual officer was choſen, who was to preſide over the whole hundred, who was called the high conſtable; but if the hundred was feudal, as it often anciently was, then ſuch lord of the hundred adminiſtred the office himſelf. 1. Bac. Abr. 438.

At Common law, before the making of the ſtatutes by which juſtices of peace were ordained to keep the peace, the Chief Juſtice of England was appointed by the King, and he had authority, and was ordained to determine matters touching the crown, and for conſervation of the peace throughout the realm, and he thereby is the Ch. J. of peace. Alſo by the Common law, before there was any juſtice of the peace, conſtables of every town were keepers of the peace within their towns. Kitch. of Courts 96.

An high conſtable is not ſuch an officer or conſervator of the peace whereof the Common law takes any notice; for he is not mentioned in any book; per Anderſon. Cro. E. 375. pl. 25. Hill. 37 Eliz. in the caſe of Sarrock v. Hannamer.

High conſtables were not ab origine, but came in with juſtices of peace; per Twiſden J. Mod. 13. pl. 26. Mich. 21 Car. 2. B. R.

As to the antiquity of the office of a conſtable, it ſeems to be the better opinion, that both conſtables of hundreds, which are commonly called high conſtables, and alſo conſtables of tithings, which are at this day commonly called petit-conſtables or tithingmen, and were anciently called chief pledges, were by the Common law, and not firſt ordained by the ſtatute of Wincheſter, cap. 6. as it is holden by ſome that they were; for that ſtatute does not ſay there ſhall be ſuch officers conſtituted, but clearly ſeems to ſuppoſe that there were ſuch before the making of it. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 61. ca. 10. ſ. 33.

1. Who is obliged to ſerve as conſtable, and how puniſhed for not ſerving.
2. By whom choſen, appointed, ſworn and removed.
3. His power and authority without a warrant.
4. His power and duty in executing warrants.
5. How favoured and protected in his office, or puniſhed for neglect of duty.

1. Who is obliged to ſerve as conſtable, and how puniſhed for not ſerving.

It ſeems agreed, that all ſworn attornies, and all other officers, whoſe attendance is required in the courts of Weſtminſter Hall, are not obliged to ſerve or execute any inferior pariſh office, and that where they are choſen, though by a particular cuſtom, with reſpect to their eſtates or otherwiſe, they may have a writ of privilege; for no cuſtom ſhall be intended to be more ancient than the uſages of thoſe courts, and therefore ſhall give way to them. 1 Bac. Abr. 440.

So if an alderman of London has an houſe at D. in the county of Eſſex, and he as an inhabitant there is choſen conſtable, yet he is not compellable to ſerve, for that as an alderman he is bound to be preſent in the city, for the good government thereof. Cro. Car. 585. 1 Jones 462. S. C.

But a captain of the King's guards, being preſented to ſerve as conſtable, in purſuance of a cuſtom in reſpect of his lands in a town, cannot claim this privilege; for though by his office he is bound to a perſonal attendance on the King, yet ſuch office being of late inſtitution, ſhall not prevail againſt an ancient cuſtom. See Keb. 309. 1 Sid. 272, 355. 1 Lev. 233. 1 Keb. 933.

Yet if ſuch an officer, or a gentleman of quality, who hath no ſuch office, or a practiſing phyſician be choſen conſtable of a town, which has ſufficient perſons beſides to execute this office, and no ſpecial cuſtom concerning it, it, perhaps he may be relieved by the King's Bench. 2 Hawk. 63.

By ſtat. 5 H. 8. cap. 6. The wardens and fellowſhip of ſurgeons infranchiſed in London, and all barbar-ſurgeons admitted and approved according to the ſtatute made in that behalf, not exceeding the number of twelve, ſhall be diſcharged of conſtableſhip and watch, &c.

By ſtat. 33 Hen. 8. cap. 43. The preſident of the commonalty and fellowſhip of phyſick in London, and the commons and fellows of the ſame, ſhall not be choſen conſtables in the city of London, or ſuburbs of the ſame, &c.

By ſtat. 6 W. & M. cap. 4. All perſons uſing the art of an apothecary, who have been brought up, and ſerved as apprentices in the ſaid art for ſeven years, according to the ſtatute of 5 Eliz. ſhall be freed and exempted from the office of conſtable.

A. was indicted for not taking on him the office of high conſtable; and the queſtion on a ſpecial verdict was, whether a tenant in ancient demeſne may be made conſtable of an hundred, which reaches farther than the demeſnes; and it was adjudged that it might. 2 Show. 754. 1 Vent. 344. S. C.

By ſtat. 1 Will. & M. c. 18. ſect. 7. If any perſon diſſenting from the church of England, ſhall be choſen conſtable, and ſhall ſcruple to take upon him the office, in regard of the oaths, or any other matter required to be done in reſpect of ſuch office; he may execute it by a ſufficient deputy by him to be provided, to be allowed by ſuch perſons, and in ſuch manner, as ſuch officer ſhould have been allowed. And by ſect. 11. of the laſt mentioned ſtatute, every teacher or preacher in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, in a congregation tolerated by law, ſhall from the time of his ſubſcription and taking the oaths, be exempted from the office of conſtable.

By ſtat. 10 & 11 W. 3. c. 23. ſect. 2, 3. The proſecutor of a felon to conviction, or perſon to whom he ſhall aſſign the certificate thereof, ſhall be diſcharged from the office of conſtable.

The privilege of exemption from being ſworn conſtable extends to a parliament man's ſervant; agreed and admitted by Twiſden J. but he ſaid he did not think it extended to his tenant. Mod. 13. pl. 36.

By ſtat. 5 Hen. 6. c. 6. The ſurgeons of London are exempt from bearing the office of conſtable; and the act likewiſe extends to barber-ſurgeons approved and admitted according to the ſtatute of 3 Hen. 8. c. 11. ſo that they exceed not the number of twelve perſons.

Mr. Serjeant Hawkins ſays, it ſeems, that by the equity of this ſtatute, and the ancient cuſtom of the realm, all ſurgeons have been allowed the like privilege. 2 Hawk. P. C. 64.

A ſurgeon was indicted for refuſing to ſerve the office of conſtable, whereupon a noli proſequi was moved for and granted niſi; and the reporter ſays, that no cauſe was ſhewn, as ever he heard. Comyn. Rep. 312. pl. 161.

A perſon duly elected conſtable, refuſing to take upon him the office, may, if preſent, be fined by the court, and if abſent, on having a certain time and place appointed him for the taking of the oath before a juſtice of peace, may, after notice of ſuch appointment and preſentment at the next court, be amerced. Cro. Car. 567. Co. Ent. 572. 5 Mod. 130. Salk. 175. 8 Co. 38.

Alſo in either caſe he may be indicted, either before juſtices of oyer and terminer, or at the ſeſſions of the peace; but ſuch indictment ought ſpecially to ſet forth the manner of every ſuch election, appointment, notice and refuſal, and before whom the court was holden. 2 Hawk. P. C. 64.

Neither is an indictment, for not finding a ſufficient perſon to ſerve the office of conſtable, good, unleſs ſuch indictment ſhew that the party refuſed to ſerve it himſelf. 1 Keb. 416. 2 Hawk. P. C. 64.

It ſeems by the better opinion, that a cuſtom in a town, that the inhabitants thereof ſhall ſerve the office of a conſtable by turns, is good, and that the objection, that by ſuch means it may come to a woman's turn to ſerve, is of no force, ſince ſhe is allowed to make a deputy, or procure one to ſerve for her, who ſhall be conſidered as the proper officer. 2 Keb. 304. 1 Sid. 355. 2 Hawk. P. C. 63. Cro. Car. 389. cont.

2. By whom choſen, appointed, ſworn and removed.

The office of conſtable being neceſſary for the preſervation of the peace, juſtices of the peace, have by an uninterrupted uſage, not now to be diſputed, taken upon them not only to ſwear conſtables who have been choſen at a torn or leet, but alſo to nominate and ſwear conſtables, where none have been ſworn at ſuch courts, through the neglect of the ſheriff or lord, and alſo to diſplace thoſe who have been ſo choſen; and this point has been carried ſo far as to allow the ſeſſions of the peace to ſwear one conſtable who had been elected at the leet, and unduly rejected by the ſteward, who had ſworn another in his place. 1 Bac. Abr. 439.

And by the ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. par 15. reciting, "That the laws and ſtatutes for apprehending rogues and vagabonds, had not been duly executed, ſometimes for want of officers, by reaſon lords of manors do not keep court leets every year for making of them; it is enacted, "That in caſe any conſtable, headborough, or tithingman, ſhall die, or go out of the pariſh, any two juſtices of the peace may make and ſwear a new conſtable, headborough, or tithingman, until the lord ſhall hold a court or until next quarter-ſeſſions, who ſhall approve of the ſaid officers ſo made and ſworn as aforeſaid, or appoint others, as they ſhall think fit; and if any officer ſhall continue above a year in his or their office, that then in ſuch caſe the juſtices of the peace in their quarter-ſeſſions may diſcharge ſuch officers, and may put another fit perſon in his or their place, until the lord of the manor ſhall hold a court as aforeſaid."

The juſtices of the peace of the county of Northampton, at their general ſeſſions choſe a conſtable for Holmby, and for not coming in to take the oath, proceeded againſt him; which proceeding being removed by certiorari into B. R. it was moved on affidavits that there had not been a conſtable there for fifty years before, and that he might be diſcharged, alledging likewiſe, that Holmby was a privileged place, and that all the inhabitants were the Duke of York's tenants: But the court held, that they could not diſcharge him on motion, and ſaid, that they muſt determine the matter by action of falſe impriſonment, or ſome other way, and inclined ſtrongly, that he could not any way be diſcharged; for per cur', though originally conſtables were choſen in leets; yet the conſtable being an officer, whoſe duty it is to keep the peace, the juſtices may chooſe him in caſes of neceſſity; as in the Hamlets about the Tower, the juſtices, by reaſon of the increaſe of buildings, where there was formerly but one conſtable, did chooſe five; and it was ruled they might do ſo; and they ſeemed to incline, that tho' formerly there had been none, yet they might chooſe one if they ſhould think it convenient. 1 Bac. Ab. 439. 1 Mod. 13. S. C. 2 Keb. 557. S. C.

Information againſt K. for refuſing to take the oath of a conſtable of the hundred, being choſen in the leet. The defendant pleads that W. is an ancient borough, and that they have a leet there, and uſed to chooſe their own officers, &c. within the borough. The queſtion was, Whether the living within the juriſdiction of an inferior leet ſhould exempt a man from being choſe high conſtable in the hundred. Hale Ch. J. ſaid, the caſe will be very different if this be really a borough, and if it be an upland town; for formerly in England every hundred uſed to ſend their jury, and every borough to ſend four men of their own, and conſtables were before the ſtatute, but that gives them view of armour; and he ſaid that the ſuperior leet ſhall not meddle in the inferior, of matters inquirable there, unleſs it be in caſe of omiſſion; but he ſaid, a conſtable of an hundred was an article that the inferior court could not meddle in, becauſe it is an office that that extends beyond their juriſdiction, and ſo judgment was againſt the defendant niſi. Frem. Rep. 348, 349. pl. 433. Mich. 1675. Keen's Caſe.

And an information was brought againſt King for refuſing the office of conſtable of Nortonferris within which was an ancient borough that had a leet, viz. Wincanton, and he pleaded, that he being within, and reſiant in the leet of the borough, ought not to do the office of conſtable of the hundred; but judgment was given againſt him, and it was ſaid, that if there were a ſpecial cuſtom to be diſcharged, it might be good. 3 Keb. 197, 230, 231. Trin. & Mich. 25 Car. 2. B. R. King v. King.

A ſpecial verdict found, that within the manor of the hundred of Farnham there are ſeveral other manors belonging to divers lords, the inhabitants whereof uſed to be elected for the ſaid hundred; they find alſo, that there is the manor of the town of Farnham, within the manor of the ſaid hundred, in which there is a court-leet, and that the defendant is an inhabitant within the ſaid town of Farnham, & non alibi; and that no inhabitant of the town of Farnham ever ſerved as high conſtable for the hundred of Farnham. The queſtion ariſing upon the ſpecial verdict was, Whether the defendant, being in a particular leet, is excuſed from ſerving as high conſtable of the hundred? And on debate the court held, that he is not excuſed. 11 Mod. 215. pl. 3. Paſch. 8 *Ann. Seſſions may chooſe a conſtable, and the order here appointing him to take the oaths is an election of him, &c. Per tot. cur. He may be a perſon not living within any leet. The ſteward of the leet uſually certifies under his hand what perſon is choſe, which certificate is carried to a juſtice of peace, and if the party refuſe, the juſtice ſends his warrant to compel him, but the ſteward may, during the court, ſwear the conſtable as well as a juſtice of peace after. 5 Mod. 128. Mich. 7 W. 3. in the caſe of Fletcher v. Ingram.

At common law all conſtables were choſen at the leet, and where there is no leet, at the torn, but whether by the ſteward or the homage has made a great queſtion; but without queſtion, a corporation of common right cannot chooſe a conſtable; by cuſtom they may, but then they muſt preſcribe for it. Per Holt. 2 Salk. 502. pl. 2. Mich. 8 W. 3. *B. The village of C. having no conſtable, the juſtices by order of ſeſſions appointed one to ſerve there; and per Holt Ch. J. The juſtices have all along exerciſed this power, and the court will intend they have a ſufficient authority for it; but the 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. gives them authority to do it only in particular caſes. 1 Salk. 175, 176. pl. 2. Trin. 11. W. 3. *B. High conſtables are removable as well as petty conſtables, and the juſtices of peace at ſeſſions are the beſt judges of that matter; per cur'. 1 Salk. 150. pl. 19. Paſch. 4 Ann. B. R. in the caſe of The Queen v. White.

The mayor of A. ſet up a cuſtom, that the court-leet there ought to make a liſt every year of five perſons to be preſented to the mayor, and that he ought to chooſe one out of them for conſtable, and that the jury ſhould chooſe the other out of the remaining four: Now this year the jury had made no liſt, but the pariſhioners choſe conſtables themſelves. Upon the mayor's applying to the ſeſſions, they made an order of diſcharge of one of the conſtables, and that the mayor's conſtable, whom he nominated in default of the jury's giving him a liſt, ſhould be confirmed. The court now quaſhed this order; for they ſaid, the only ſtatute that gives the juſtices power at all in relation to conſtables, is the ſtatute of 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. ſ. 15. and that act only gives juſtices power to put in conſtables in default of the court-leet, but does not impower them to diſcharge conſtables already put in. Accordingly the order was quaſhed. Barnard. Rep. in B. R. 51. Paſch. 1 Geo. 2. The King v. Burden and Wakeford.

By ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. ſt. 2. c. 13. High conſtables are to take the oaths of allegiance, ſupremacy, and abjuration, as other perſons who qualify for offices.

3. His power and authority without a warrant.

As conſtables were originally inſtituted for the better preſervation of the peace, they may by the Common law arreſt felons, and all ſuſpicious perſons that go abroad in the night and ſleep by day, or reſort to bawdy-houſes, or keep ſuſpicious company. 2 Hawk. P. C. 61, 62.

Alſo by the ancient Common law, the conſtable was to preſent at the torn or leet, all thoſe within his precinct who were not admitted into ſome tithing, and who had not ſworn to the King's allegiance; and it ſeems, that by the law in uſe at this day, he ought to preſent all offences inquirable in the torn or leet. 1 Bac. Abr. 441.

A conſtable is not only impowered, as all private perſons are, to part an affray in his preſence, but is bound at his peril to endeavour it, not only by doing his utmoſt himſelf, but alſo by demanding the aſſiſtance of others, which they are bound to give him, under pain of fine and impriſonment, 1 Bac. Abr. 441.

And it is ſaid, that if he ſee perſons actually engaged in an affray, whether the violence were done or offered to another, or even to himſelf, or ſee them upon the very point of entering upon an affray; as where one threatens to beat another, &c. he may either carry the offender before a juſtice of peace, in order to his finding ſureties for the peace, &c. or may impriſon him himſelf a reaſonable time till the heat be over, and afterwards detain him till he give ſuch ſurety by bond; but he ſeems to have no power to commit the offender in any other manner, or for any other purpoſe, for he cannot commit him to gaol till he ſhall be puniſhed; neither ought he to lay hands on thoſe who barely contend with words, without any threats of perſonal hurt; but all he can do in ſuch caſe is to command them, under pain of impriſonment, not to fight. 1 Bac. Abr. 441.

If an affray be in a houſe, the conſtable may break open the doors to preſerve the peace, and if affrayers fly to a houſe, and he freſhly follow, he may break open the doors to take them. 1 Bac. Abr. 441.

But he cannot of his own authority compel a man to find ſureties who is delivered into his hands, as having broken the peace in his abſence, but ought to carry him before a juſtice of the peace; neither can he arreſt a man for an affray out of his view, without warrant from a juſtice of the peace, unleſs a felony were done, or likely to be done. 1 Bac. Abr. 441, 442.

If a conſtable ſee a perſon expoſe an infant in the ſtreet who refuſes to take it away, he may lawfully apprehend and detain ſuch perſon till he or ſhe ſhall conſent to take care of it. 2 Hawk. P. C. 77.

Common fame is enough to apprehend any man; but if you arreſt a man poſſeſſed of money, and he dies, you are chargeable with the money; per Williams J. cites 2 H. 7. And where in the principal caſe the conſtable took from the felon the money of which he had robbed the party, and was afterwards robbed of it himſelf, trover and converſion lies for the party againſt the conſtable for the money, but not treſpaſs. Ow. 121. Mich. 3 Jac. Walgrave v. Skinner.

A. was poſſeſſed of corn in S. and W. the ſervant of B. by command of B. carried away the corn. A. prayed the conſtable to detain W. till he could procure a warrant from a juſtice of peace, which he did; but held, that a conſtable cannot detain any perſon but for felony. Brownl. 198. 11 Jac. Ringhall v. Wolſey.

An action of falſe impriſonment brought againſt a conſtable, who pleaded Not guilty, and ſhewed in evidence, that he came to ſearch in time of the plague for lodgers in the town, and found a ſtranger and queſtioned him which way he came into the town; who anſwered, Over the bridge; and the judge conceived this to be a ſcornful anſwer to an officer; and becauſe he had not a paſs, but travelled without one, and gave ſuch a ſcornful anſwer, the defendant did offer to apprehend him, and the plaintiff thereupon, being preſent, ſaid to the defendant, he ſhall not go to priſon, but yet offered to paſs his word for his forthcoming, upon which the defendant did commit the plaintiff; and it was ruled upon evidence, that there was good cauſe to commit the plaintiff for oppoſing the conſtable, though but verbally, in his office, who is ſo ancient an officer in the commonwealth. Clayt. 10. pl. 9. before Davenport Ch. Conſtable has no power to require aſſiſtance of whom he pleaſes in ſearching for nets and other engines to take conies, &c. Comb. 309. Mich. 6 W. & M. in B. R. The King v. Wildbore.

Whenever a conſtable may take up any perſon, it muſt be an actual breach of the peace, or upon good grounds of ſuſpicion, and the cauſe of his ſuſpicion muſt be ſhewn, becauſe it is traverſable; and in caſe of ſuſpicion, where there is a felony done, there is no difference between a publick and a private perſon; agreed. 11 Mod. 248. Mich. 1709. 8 Ann. B. R. in caſe of The Queen v. Tooly.

4. His power and Duty in executing warrants.

As the conſtable is the proper officer to a juſtice of peace, he is bound to execute his warrants. Hence it hath been reſolved, that where a ſtatute authorizes a juſtice of the peace to convict a man of a crime, and to levy the penalty by warrant of diſtreſs, without ſaying to whom ſuch warrant ſhall be directed, or by whom it ſhall be executed, the conſtable is the propet officer to ſerve ſuch warrant, and indictable for diſobeying it. 1 Bac. Abr. 442.

Yet inaſmuch as the office of conſtable is wholly miniſterial, and no way judicial, it ſeems that he may appoint a deputy to execute a warrant directed to him, when by reaſon of ſickneſs, abſence, or otherwiſe, he cannot do it himſelf; but without ſome ſuch ſpecial cauſe a conſtable cannot make a deputy. 1 Bac. Abr. 442.

A ſworn conſtable, in executing a warrant, need not ſhew it to the party, although he demand a ſight of it; but in making an arreſt, he ought to acquaint him with the ſubſtance of it. 6 Co. 54. 9 Co. 69.

An unlawful arreſt, without a juſtice's warrant cannot be made good by a warrant taken out afterwards. 1 Bac. Abr. 442.

If the conſtable, after he hath arreſted the party by force of a warrant, ſuffer him to go at large on his promiſe to return again, he cannot, by force of the ſame warrant, arreſt him again. 1 Bac. Abr. 442.

A conſtable cannot juſtify an arreſt by force of a warrant from a juſtice of the peace, which expreſsly appears in the face of it to be for an offence, whereof a juſtice of peace hath no juriſdiction, or to bring the party before him, at a place out of the county for which he is juſtice. 1 Bac. Abr. 442.

But it ſeems that he ought to execute a general warrant to bring a perſon before a juſtice, to anſwer ſuch matters as ſhall be objected againſt him on the part of the King. 1 Bac. Abr. 442.

Alſo by the better authorities it ſeems holden, that it is not material whether the party arreſted by virtue of a warrant from a juſtice of peace, were guilty or innocent, or whether the felony, &c. were actually committed or not; for it would be a great diſcouragement to officers to ſubject them to actions in ſuch caſes, for doing what they apprehend to be their duty; and the liberty of the ſubject ſeems ſufficiently ſecured by ſubjecting the juſtice to an action. 1 Bac. Abr. 442.

A conſtable is an officer but for his own particular will, and though he may execute warrants in any other part of the county, (as any other perſon may) yet he is not compellable to do it, though the contrary is practiſed in London by cuſtom. Per Holt. Ch. J. Cumb. 446. Trin. 9 W. 3. B. R. Anon'.

If a warrant be directed to a conſtable by name, he may execute it out of his precinct; [that is, any where within the juriſdiction of the juſtice of peace, 11 Mod. 246.] per Holt Ch. J. 1 Salk. 176. Trin. 11 W. 3. B. R. in Chorly Vill.'s caſe.

But if a warrant is directed to all conſtables generally, ſuch warrant cannot be executed by any conſtable out of the precincts of his pariſh, for he is a conſtable no where elſe. Carth. 508. Hill. 11 W. 3. B. R. in caſe of The King v. Chandler.

One might take a warrant to ſearch a ſuſpicious houſe upon a felony committed, but it is at his peril to execute it in due time, and at ſuſpected houſes only; and though a conſtable may by virtue of ſuch a warrant ſearch the houſe, and do all other things that his warrant doth authoriſe him to do, yet if he goes beyond his warrant, by which any body is damaged, he is anſwerable for it; per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 344. Mich. 11 W. 3. at Niſi prius.

When a conſtable has a warrant, he is tied up to that warrant, to act only as that directs. 11 Mod. 248. Mich. 1709. in caſe of The Queeen v. Tooly.

It ſeems that a conſtable may and ought to execute a general warrant to bring a perſon before the juſtice of peace, to anſwer ſuch matters as ſhall be objected againſt him on the part of the King; for that the officer ought to preſume, that the juſtice has a juriſdiction of the matter which he takes conuſance of, unleſs the contrary appear, and it may often endanger the eſcape of the party to make known the crime he is accuſed of; but it ſeems to be very queſtionable, whether a conſtable can juſtify the execution of a general warrant to ſearch for felons or ſtolen goods, becauſe ſuch warrant ſeems to be illegal on the very face of it; for that it would be extremely hard to leave it to the diſcretion of a common officer, to arreſt what perſons, and to ſearch what houſes he thinks fit; and if a juſtice cannot legally grant a blank warrant for the arreſt of a ſingle perſon, leaving it to the party to fill it up, ſurely he cannot grant ſuch a general warrant which might have the effect of a hundred blank warrants. 2 Haw. Pl. C. 81, 82. cap. 15. ſect. 10.

He cannot juſtify an arreſt by force of a juſtice's warrant for a matter appearing to be out of his juriſdiction. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 81. cap. 13. ſ. 10.

He may juſtify by force of a general warrant expreſſing no certain time. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 81. cap. 13. ſ. 10.

It ſeems that the arreſt of an innocent perſon may be juſtified by the warrant of a juſtice of peace particularly naming him. 2 Hawk. Pl. C. 82. cap. 13. ſect. 11.

5. How

5. How favoured and protected in his office; or puniſhed for neglect of duty.

Stat. 7 Jac. 1 cap. 5. If any action is brought againſt a conſtable, for any thing done by virtue of his office, he, and alſo all others which in his aid, or by his command, ſhall do any thing concerning his office, may plead the general iſſue, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence, and if he recovers he ſhall have double coſts.

Stat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 12 ſect. 5. An action brought againſt a conſtable, headborough, or tithingman for any matter done by virtue of their office, ſhall be laid in the county where the fact was committed, and not elſewhere.

Stat. 24 Geo. 2. cap. 44. ſect. 6. No action ſhall be brought againſt any conſtable or other perſon acting by his order, and in his aid, for any thing done in obedience to the warrant of a juſtice of the peace, until demand hath been made, or left at the uſual place of his abode, by the party, or by his attorney, in writing, ſigned by the party demanding the ſame, of the peruſal and copy of ſuch warrant, and the ſame hath been refuſed or neglected for ſix days after ſuch demand: And if after compliance, any ſuch action ſhould be brought, without making the juſtice who ſigned ſuch warrant defendant, on producing and proving ſuch warrant at the trial, the jury ſhall give their verdict for the defendant, notwithſtanding any defect of juriſdiction in the juſtice. And if ſuch action be brought jointly againſt the juſtice and conſtable; on proof of ſuch warrant, the jury ſhall find for the conſtable, notwithſtanding ſuch defect of juriſdiction as aforeſaid; and if the verdict be given againſt the juſtice, the plaintiff ſhall recover his coſts againſt him, to be taxed in ſuch manner by the proper officer, as to include ſuch coſts as the plaintiff is liable to pay to ſuch defendant, for whom ſuch verdict ſhall be found as aforeſaid.

Sect. 8. No action ſhall be brought againſt any conſtable, but within ſix months after the act committed.

Stat. 27 Geo. 2. cap. 20. ſect. 2. The conſtable executing a juſtice's warrant for levying a penalty, or other ſum of money directed by any act of parliament, by diſtreſs, may deduct his own reaſonable charges of taking, keeping, and ſelling the goods diſtrained; returning the overplus on demand, after ſuch penalty or ſum of money, and charges deducted. See Commitment, Countyrate, Juſtices of peace.

C. was indicted for that a burglary was committed in the night by perſons unknown, and J. S. gave notice to him being conſtable, and required him to make hue and cry, and he refuſed, but becauſe he did not ſhew the place of notice the party was diſcharged. Cro. E. 654. pl. 16. Hill. 41 Eliz. B. R. Crowther's caſe.

Another exception was taken to the matter of the indictment, becauſe it has been adjudged, that an hundred ſhall not be charged with a robbery committed in the night, for they be not bound to give attendance; no more ought a conſtable to do it in the night. But all the court held the indictment to be good notwithſtanding; for it is not like the caſe of an hundred; becauſe it is the conſtables duty upon notice given unto him, preſently to purſue. Cro. E. 16, 17. pl. 16. Hill. 41 Eliz. Crowther's caſe.

Several conſtables were indicted for refuſing to execute the warrant of a juſtice of peace directed to them to apprehend one for a contempt, and the indictment was allowed. 2 Roll. Rep. 78. Hill. 16 Jac. B. R. Coleman's caſe.

A conſtable is not ſuable out of the county for what he does in execution of his office. Held per cur'. Sty. 393. Mich. 1653. B. R. Anon'.

The defendant being a conſtable was indicted for that he contemptuouſly and voluntarily neglected to execute diverſa præcepta et warranta directed to him by juſtices of peace under their hands and ſeals; but it was quaſhed, becauſe it did not ſet forth the nature and tenor of the warrants, for unleſs the defendant can know what particularly he is charged with, he cannot tell how to make his defence. Vent. 305. Hill 28 & 29 *Car. In an habeas corpus and certiorari for the body of J. S. who had been impriſoned for not paying of a fine of 20*l.* ſet at the quarter ſeſſions, the return was, that he, being conſtable and demanded by the court to preſent an highway, which was ſworn before him by two witneſſes to be out of repair, ſaid in contempt of the court, that he would not preſent it; for which and certain other contemptuous words, a fine was ſet on him. The court were of opinion, that the fine was not well ſet; for conſtables are to preſent upon their own knowledge, and the two witneſſes ſhould have been carried to the grand jury; for the conſtable was not obliged to preſent upon their teſtimony. Vent. 336. Paſch. 31 Car. 2. *B. Motion to quaſh an indictment againſt divers inhabitants in Derby, for refuſing to meet and make a rate upon the ſeveral pariſhes in Derby to pay the conſtables tax; firſt, becauſe they are not compellable, but the ſtatute only ſays that they may, ſo they have their election and no coercion ſhall be; ſed non allocatur; for may in the caſe of a publick officer is tantamount to ſhall, and if he does not do it, he ſhall be puniſhed upon an information, and though he may be commanded by a writ, this is but in aggravation of his contempt; but the court refuſed to quaſh it. Skinner 370. pl. 17. Mich. 5 *W. & M. in B. If a juſtice of the peace adjudged that to be an offence which is no offence, the inferior officer ſhall anſwer; as if one be adjudged the putative father of a baſtard, where after it appears to be born in matrimony, this is void, & *coram non judice, &c. Falſe impriſonment againſt a conſtable for executing a warrant of Sir James Butler, after he was out of the commiſſion of the peace. Per Holt, Conſtable at his peril is to take notice, that his warrant is by one in commiſſion; but all the favour we can do is, ſince it was a warrant executed a day or two after Sir James was out of commiſſion, that if he has behaved himſelf honeſtly and civilly, to be mild to him; and he ſaid, the conſtable ought to ſhew the juſtice of peace's commiſſion, though heretofore it were held, common reputation would be enough; and here the conſtable coming out of his own pariſh to execute the warrant, betrays his officiouſneſs. 12 Mod. 347. Mich. 11 W. 3. Normond v. Mills.

A conſtable was indicted, for that one Naſh was convicted of deer ſtealing upon the ſtatute 3 & 4 W. 3. cap. 10. and that the defendant being a conſtable, the juſtice directed his warrant to him to levy the penalty, which he did, but had not returned the warrant, or made any certificate thereof; he was found guilty; and it being removed by certiorari, it was reſolved, that though the conſtable is not named in the ſtatute, yet the juſtices may command him to execute the warrant, becauſe, as at Common law a conſtable was a ſubordinate officer to the conſervator of the peace, ſo he is now a proper officer to the juſtice; and that where an officer neglects a duty incumbent upon him, either by the common law or ſtatute, he is indictable, and further that the conſtable need not return the warrant itſelf; becauſe it may be neceſſary for him to keep it in his own defence; but he muſt either return that or certify what he has done upon it; for otherwiſe the proſecutor cannot attain the end of his proſecution, and the defendant cannot be diſcharged. 1 Salk. 380. pl. 28. 2 Ann. B. R. The Queen v. Wyatt. 11 Mod. 53. pl. 30. Paſch. 4 Ann the S. C. Exception was taken that there ought to have been a time and place, when and where the conſtable ſhould have returned his warrant to the juſtices; for he is not bound to travel over England to find them. But judgment was given againſt the defendant, diſſentiente Holt Ch. J. not but that he ſaid it was an offence; but he ſaid, that in all proceſs, there out to be a place and time for the return.——2 Ld. Raym. Rep. 1189. S. C. adjudged for the Queen by three juſtices.———If an officer be negligent in doing of his office, it is an offence at Common law, and upon the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 10. an high conſtable was indicted for not returning his warrant, and theſe points were reſolved, that a conſtable was an officer at Common law; and per Powell, ſo was an high conſtable, contra to the opinion opinion of Coke in his 4th Inſtitute; and he is a ſubordinate officer to a juſtice of peace, and whenever a juſtice of peace is commanded to do any thing, he is the perſon who is to put this in execution for the juſtice cannot command the ſheriff or the party, unleſs there be expreſs words of an act of parliament for it; and matters being left ſo indifferent, if the conſtable doth not do his duty, he is puniſhable at Common law. 2dly. That the indictment reciting the record of conviction, need not conclude patet per recordum, for this is but matter of inducement, and where nul tiel record cannot be pleaded, there need, not proof per recordum. 3dly, Here is a great offence, for the warrant ſays, that the officer ought to return the warrant, becauſe by the act the juſtice is to do ſome other thing afterwards, in caſe there be not goods out of which the penalty can be levied; and though no place is mentioned where the warrant is to be returned, it is well enough, for the officer is to find out the juſtice, and to give him an account what he has done upon his warrant, as the juſtice may require him to do; and upon Not guilty pleaded, the officer may prove that he went to ſeek the juſtice, but could not find him; and this will be a good excuſe per three juſtices as to this laſt point, againſt the Ch. Juſtice, who thought, that both a place where, and the time when the return ſhould be, ought to be mentioned. 4thly, If the offender have but 50 l. worth of goods, and the ſum is 100 l. the officer cannot levy the 50 l. only. The act doth not require that the juſtices muſt diſtribute the money themſelves, but the officer may well do it, as the act directs. If there be three ſeveral convictions, and the offender hath no more goods than will anſwer two of thoſe convictions, he may pay the two, and ſtand in the pillory for the other; the money cannot be levied by parcels. So it is in caſe there be but two convictions and the offender hath only goods to anſwer one of them, he may be pilloried for the other. 5thly, That though the indictment were that he did never return the warrant, nor cauſe it to be returned, yet this was well enough, for the neglect was the offence. 6thly, That the juſtice muſt make a warrant to levy the penalty, and that the juſtice cannot do it himſelf. The Queen v. Wyatt.

Conſtables of London (which city is divided into twenty-ſix wards, and every ward into the like number of precincts, in each whereof is a conſtable) are nominated by the inhabitants of each precinct on St. Thomas's day, and confirmed, or otherwiſe, at the court of wardmote; and after they are confirmed, they are ſworn in their offices at a court of aldermen, on the next Monday after Twelfth day; the ſubſtance of their oath is, to keep the King's peace, to the utmoſt of their power; to arreſt affrayers, rioters, and ſuch as make conteſts to the breach of the peace, and carry them to the houſe of correction, or compter of one of the ſheriffs; and in caſe of reſiſtance, to make outcry on them, and purſue them from ſtreet to ſtreet, and from ward to ward, till they are arreſted: To ſearch for common nuſances, in their reſpective wards, being required by ſcavengers, &c. And upon requeſt to aſſiſt the beadle and raker in collecting their ſalaries and quarterage; to preſent to the lord mayor and miniſters of the city, defaults relating to the ordinances of the city; to certify once a month into the mayor's court, the names and ſurnames of all freemen deceaſed; and alſo of the children of ſuch freemen, being orphans: And by the articles of the wardmote inqueſt, conſtables are to certify the names, ſurnames, place of dwelling, poſſeſſion and trade of every perſon, who ſhall newly come to inhabit in their precincts, and to keep a roll thereof; in order to which they are to make inquiry at leaſt once a month into what perſons are come to loge, and ſojourn there; and if they find by their own confeſſions, or the record of the alderman's books, that ſuch new comers are ejected from any other ward for bad living, or any miſdemeanor, and refuſe to find ſureties for their good behaviour, warning is to be given to them and their landlords, that they depart; and on refuſal, they may be impriſoned, and the landlords fined a year's rent agreed for by ſuch new comers. Calth. Rep. 129, 138. Conſtables of London in each ward are to attend the watch by turns, and go the rounds; and with the beadles every night are to warn ſuch perſons as are to ſerve upon the watch in their precincts; and if they refuſe to appear, the conſtable may hire others in their ſtead, and they ſhall pay him according to the cuſtom of the city: But the common council appoint the watchmen. Watchmen are to apprehend night-walkers, vagabonds, perſons going armed, &c. and may arreſt ſtrangers in the night, and carry them before the conſtable to be examined, and finding cauſe of ſuſpicion ſecure them till the morning; and whether they are horſemen or footmen, or drivers of carriages, or perſons that carry burdens, the watch may ſtay them till the morining, unleſs they can render a good account of themſelves, their company, and carriage, &c. And conſtables &c. are to be aiding and aſſiſting to the watch; and the watchmen are to obey their orders, in conveying offenders to the Compter, which is the common priſon for offenders for the breach of the peace, till they are examined, and puniſhed by the lord mayor, &c. But conſtables ought to be careful whom they ſend to the Compter, for fear of action for falſe impriſonment, proſecution for damages, &c. If any will not obey the arreſt of the watch, they may make hue and cry after them; and for ſuch arreſt of a ſtranger, (eſpecially one ſuſpected) none is liable to puniſhment. Dalt. 240. The court of common council are to meet the firſt of October yearly, and order a proper number of watchmen, beadles, and night conſtables, for the city of London and liberties, and determine ſums to be levied to bear the charge thereof upon each ward; and for raiſing money, the aldermen and common council-men of wards, ſhall make a rate and aſſeſſment upon the inhabitants by diſtreſs; and ſhall appoint their watchmen, ſet down in writing their ſtands and number of rounds, and make orders for regulating the watch, &c. Conſtables to keep watch and ward, from the 10th of September, to the 10th of March from nine in the evening till ſeven the next morning; and from the 10th of March to the 10th of September, from ten in the evening till five next morning. The conſtables ſhall uſe their beſt endeavours, for preventing fires, robberies and diſorders, and arreſt malefactors; and go twice or oftener about their wards, in every night; and the watchmen are to apprehend all ſuſpected perſons, &c. and deliver them to the conſtable of the night, who ſhall carry them before a juſtice of peace; conſtables miſbehaving themſelves, to forfeit 20 s. and the lord mayor, and two juſtices for the city, may hear and determine offences, and levy penalties by diſtreſs and ſale of goods, &c. Stat. 10 Geo. 2. cap. 22. Conſtables are to certify to the lord mayor, and common council of the city, the names of all ſuch perſons as ſhall interrupt them in the diſcharge of their offices: And a conſtable of London has power to execute warrants, &c. thoughout the whole city, upon occaſion. Such as are choſen into the office are obliged to place the King's arms, and the arms of the city over their doors; and if they reſide in alleys, at the end of ſuch alleys, toward the ſtreets, to ſignify that a conſtable lives there, and that they may be the more eaſily found when wanted.

Conſtat, Lat. Is the name of a certificate, which the clerk of the Pipe, and the auditors of the Exchequer, make at the requeſt of any perſon who intends to plead or move in that court, for diſcharge of any thing. Anno 3 & 4 Ed. 6. cap. 4. and 13 Eliz. c. 6. The effect of a conſtat is the certifying what does conſtare upon record, touching the matter in queſtion; and the auditor's fee for it is 13*s.* 4*d.*

A conſtat his held to be ſuperior to a certificate; becauſe this may err or fail in its contents, that cannot; as certifying nothing but what is evident upon record. Alſo the exemplification under the great ſeal of the inrolment of any letters patent is called a conſtat. Coke on Littl. fol. 225. b. The difference between a conſtat, inſpeximus, and vidimus, you may read at large in Page's caſe. 5 Report.

Conſuetudinarius, A ritual or book, containing the rites and forms of divine offices, or the cuſtoms of abbies and monaſteries. 'Tis mentioned in Brompton, who writing

Conſuetudinibus & ſerviciis, Is a writ of right cloſe, which lies againſt the tenant that deforceth his lord of the rent or ſervice due to him. Of this ſee more in Old Nat. Br. fol. 77. Fitz. Nat. Br. fol 151. and Reg. of Writs, fol. 159.

Conſuetudo, Dies de Conſuetudine, A day's work to be done for the Lord, as a cuſtomary ſervice by the tenant.—— i. e. debent redditum & quinque dies, conſuetudine——i. e. five days work in a year. Paroch. Antiq. pag. 229.

Conſul, in our law books, ſignifies an earl: For Bracton, lib. 1. cap 8. tells us, that as comes is derived from comitatu, ſive a ſocietate, ſo conſul is derived from conſulendo; reges enim tales ſibi aſſociant, ad conſulendum & regendum populum Dei. So in the laws of Edward the Confeſſor, c. 2. Quod modo vocatur comitatus, olim apud Britones temporibus Romanorum vocabatur conſulatus, & qui modo vicecomites, tunc temporis viceconſules vocabantur.

Conſulta eccleſia, A church full, or provided for. ——Abbas dicit quod prædicta eccleſia eſt conſulta deipſo abbate & conventu qui eam tenent in proprios uſus.———— Cartular. Rading. MS. fol. 211. a.

Conſultation, Conſultatio, Is a writ whereby a cauſe being formerly removed by prohibition from the eccleſiaſtical court, or court chriſtian, to the King's court, is returned thither again; for the judges of the King's court, if upon comparing the libel with the ſuggeſtion of the party, they do find the ſuggeſtion falſe, or not proved, and therefore the cauſe to be wrongfully called from the court chriſtian, then upon this conſultation or deliberation, they decree to be returned again: Whereupon the writ in this caſe obtained, is called a conſultation. Of this you may read the Reg. Orig. 44, 45. uſque ad 58. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 32. F. N. B. fol. 50. See alſo the ſtatute of the writ of Conſultation Anno 24 Ed. 1. and 1 Inſt. fol. 105. See Prohibition.

Contempt, (Contemptus) Is a diſobedience to the rules and order of a court, which hath power to puniſh ſuch offence: And one may be impriſoned for a contempt done in court; but not for a contempt out of court, or a private abuſe. Cro. Eliz. 689. Attachment alſo lies againſt one for contempt to the court, to bring the offender to an anſwer on interrogatories, &c. and if he cannot acquit himſelf, ſhall be fined. 1 Lill. 305. If a ſheriff being required to return a writ directed to him, doth not return the writ, it is a contempt: And this word is uſed for a kind of miſdemeanor, by doing what one is forbidden; or not doing what he is commanded. 12 Rep. 36. And as this is ſometimes a greater, and ſometimes a leſſer offence; ſo it is puniſhed with greater or leſs puniſhment, by fine, and ſometimes impriſonment. Dyer 177, 128. 1 Bulſt. 85. Contenement (Contenementum, as, ——ſalvo contenemento ſuo) Signifies his countenance, credit, or reputation, which he hath, together with, and by reaſon of his freehold. And in this ſenſe does the ſtatute of 1 Ed. 3. and 34 Ed. 3. c. 7. and Old Nat. Br. uſe it, where countenance is uſed for contenement. The armour of a ſoldier is his countenance; the book of a ſcholar, his countenance, and the like. Coke, 2 part. Inſt. fol. 28. Bracton. lib. 3. tract, 2. cap. 1. numb. 3. And Sir Henry Spelman ſays, Contenementum eſt æſtimatio & conditionis forma, qua quis in repub. ſubſiſtit.

But contenement ſeems rather to ſignify that which is neceſſary for the ſupport and maintenance of men according to their ſeveral qualities, conditions, or ſtate of life: For in Magna Charta, cap. 14. you have theſe words, A freeman ſhall not be amerced for a ſmall fault, but after the quantity of the fault, and for a great fault after the manner thereof, ſaving to him his contenement, or freehold. And a merchant likewiſe ſhall be amerced, ſaving to him his merchandiſes; and a villain, ſaving to him his waynage. And Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 1. nu. 3. hath theſe words, Et ſciendum quod miles & liber homo non amerciabitur niſi ſecundum modum delicti, ſecundum quod delictum fuit magnum vel parvum, & ſalvo contenemento ſuo, mercator vero non niſi ſalva merchandiſa ſua, & villanus niſi ſalvo wainagio: Which mercy ſeemeth to have been learned from the Civil law, where Executio non poteſt fieri in boves, aratra, aliave inſtrumenta ruſticorum. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Contingent uſe, Is a uſe limited in a conveyance of land, which may, or may not happen to veſt, according to the contingency expreſſed in the limitation of ſuch uſe: A uſe in contingency is ſuch which by poſſibility may happen in poſſeſſion, reverſion or remainder. 1 Rep. 121. A contingent remainder is where an eſtate is limited to take place in futuro, upon an uncertain event; as where a particular eſtate which doth ſupport a remainder, may or may not determine before the remainder may commence. 10 Rep. 85. A remainder contingent is ſaid to be an eſtate veſted; but on ſuch remainder in executory deviſes, the eſtate deſcends till the contingency happens, and nothing is veſted till then. 1 Vent. 119.

Continual claim, Is a claim made from time to time within every year and day, to land or other thing, which, in ſome reſpect, we cannot attain without danger. As if I be diſſeiſed of land, into which, though I have right unto it, I dare not enter, for fear of death or beating. It behoveth me to hold on my right of entry at the beſt opportunity of me and mine heir, by approaching as near it as I can once every year, as long as I live; and ſo I ſave the right of entry to my heir. Termes de le Ley. Again, if I have a ſlave or villain taken from me, and remaining any where within the demeſne of the King, being in the hands of the King, I cannot maintain the writ De nativo habendo, as long as he continueth there; but if I claim him within the year and day, and ſo continue my claim, until I can find him without that compaſs, I may lawfully lay hold of him as mine own. F. N. B. fol. 7, 9. See more in Lit. verb. Continual Claim. And the New Book of Entries, tit, Eodem; and Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 53. See Littl. lib. 3. c. 7. and ſtat. 32 H. 8. cap. 33. See Deſcent.

Continuance is the ſame as prorogatio in the Civil law: Example; continuance until the next aſſiſe. Fitz. Nat. Br. fol. 154. F. and 244. D. in both which places it is ſaid, if a record in the Treaſury be alledged by the one party, and denied by the other, a certiorari ſhall be ſued to the treaſurer, and the chamberlain of the Exchequer; who, if they certify not in the Chancery that ſuch a record is there, or that it is likely to be in the Tower, the King ſhall ſend to the juſtices, repeating the certificate, and will them to continue the aſſiſe. In this ſignification it is likewiſe uſed by Kitchin, fol. 202, and 199. and an. 11 H. 6. ca. 4. and continuuce of a writ or action is from one term to another, in caſe where the ſheriff hath not returned or executed a former writ, iſſued out in the ſaid action. See Diſcontinuance.

Continuando is a word uſed in a ſpecial declaration of treſpaſs, when the plaintiff would recover damages for ſeveral treſpaſſes in the ſame action: For, to avoid multiplicity of ſuits, a man may in one action of treſpaſs recover damages for forty or more treſpaſſes, laying the firſt to be done with a continuance to the whole time in which the reſt of the treſpaſſes were done; and is in this form, Continuando tranſgreſſionem prædictam, &c. a prædicto die, &c. uſque ſuch another day, including the laſt treſpaſs.

In treſpaſs with a continuando of divers things, though of ſome of thoſe things there could be no continuando; yet, yet it ſhall be good for thoſe things for which the continuando could be, and not for the others: but if the continuando had been particularly of ſuch things whereof a continuando could not be, then it had been naught. 3 Lev. 94. Every day's treſpaſs is ſaid to be a ſeveral treſpaſs; though a continuando may not be of a man's continuing a treſpaſs day and night, for ſome time together; for mankind muſt take ſome reſt: Where cattle do treſpaſs upon ground, they are continually treſpaſſing night and day, and therefore the continuando in that caſe is good. 1 Lill. Abr. 307. Treſpaſs for breaking an houſe with a continuando, is good; and until a re-entry is made, the continuation of the poſſeſſion is a continuation of the treſpaſs. Lutw. 1312. It is uſual in practice to lay the continuando for longer time than you can prove; but damages ſhall be given only for what can be proved. 2 Mod. 253.

Contracauſator, A criminal, or one proſecuted for a crime. 'Tis mentioned in Leg. H. 1. cap. 61.

Contract, is a covenant or agreement with a lawful conſideration or cauſe. Weſt. Symb. part. 1 lib. 1. ſect. 10. Or elſe one thing muſt be given for another, which is called quid pro quo; as if I ſell my horſe for money, or covenant to make you a leaſe of my manor of Dale, in conſideration of twenty pounds; theſe are good contracts, becauſe one thing is given for another. But if a man make a promiſe to me, that I ſhall have twenty ſhillings, and that he will be debtor to me thereof, and after I aſk the twenty ſhillings, and he will not deliver it; yet I ſhall never have an action to recover, becauſe the promiſe was no contract, but a bare promiſe; and, ex nudo pacto non oritor actio. But if any thing were given for the twenty ſhillings, tho' it were but to the value of a penny then had it been a good contract. Uſurious contract is contract to pay more intereſt for money than the laws and ſtatutes of this realm allow. It is a devaſtavit in an executor to pay a debt upon an uſurious contract. Noy's Reports, fol. 129.

A contract is an agreement entred into by ſeveral perſons, inducing an obligation by it's nature, and the obligations ariſing from contracts are divided and diſtinguiſhed according as they are perfected, either by the ſole conſent of the contractors, or by the intervention or tradition of things, or laſtly by word or writing, and are either ex re, from a thing done; ex verbis, from words; ex literis, from writing; ex conſenſu, from conſent. But as all obligations cannot be bound up under general and regular names of contracts, the law allows ſome obligations to paſs under the name of quaſi contractus, becauſe they have ſome reſemblance, and are of the nature of contracts. 5 Vent. Abr. 504.

If A. ſells a horſe to B. for 10l. and has no horſe, yet A. ſhall have an action of debt for it; but if A. has a horſe, B. may take it, and ſo it may be a perfect contract, and yet there is not quid pro quo. Br. Contracts, pl. 17. cites 37 H. 6. 8.

Leaſe for years rendering rent is a contract. Br. Contract. pl. 43. 7 H. 7. 4.

An agreement concerning perſonal things is a mutual aſſent of the parties, and ought to be perfect, full and compleat; for when it concerns perſonal things 'tis the mutual conſent of the parties, and ought to be executed with recompence, or elſe to be ſo certain as to give an action or other remedy for a recompence, otherwiſe it is a naked communication without effect. *Pl. A forced agreement of the party is accounted to be no agreement, and therefore the court will not compel him that did thus agree to perform his agreement; (22 Car. 1. B. R.) for the law abhors all force and violence. L. P. R. 48.

Contrafactio, Counterfeiting. As contrafactio ſigilli Regis counterfeiting the King's ſeal. Blount.

Contra formam collationis, Is a writ that lies, where a man hath given lands in perpetual alms to any late houſes of religion, as to an abbot and convent, or to the warden or maſter of an hoſpital and his convent, to find certain poor men, and do other divine ſervice; if they alien the land, then the donor or his heirs ſhall have the ſaid writ to recover the lands. But this writ ſhall be always brought againſt the abbot or his ſucceſſor, and not againſt the alienee, altho' he be tenant; but in all other actions, where a man demands freehold, the writ ſhall be brought againſt the tenant of the land. This is founded upon the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 1. and of this ſee Reg. Orig. f. 238. and F. N. B. fol. 210.

Contra formam feoffamenti, Is a writ that lies for the heir of a tenant, infeoffed of certain lands and tenements, by charter of feoffment of a lord, to make certain ſervices and ſuits to his court, and is afterwards diſtrained for more than is contained in the ſaid charter. Reg. Orig. f. 176. Old Nat. Brev. 162. This writ lies not for the plaintiff, who claims by purchaſe from the firſt feoffee, but for the heir to the firſt feoffee.

Contra formam ſtatuti, (againſt the form of the ſtatute) is the uſual concluſion of every indictment, &c. for an offence created by ſtatute.

If an offence be at Common law, and alſo prohibited by ſtatutes, the indictment may conclude contra formam ſtatuti, or ſtatutorum; thus in barretry, though there be no direct ſtatute againſt it by that name, yet the general tenor of the ſeveral acts running againſt it by circumlocutions, the indictment concluding contra formam ſtatuti, or diverſorum ſtatutorum is good, and it is the uſual form. 2 Hale's Pl. C. 191.

P. was indicted upon the ſtatute of 5 Ed. 6. cap. 4. for drawing his dagger in the church of B. againſt J. S. and does not ſay (according to the ſtatute) to the intent to ſtrike him; for this cauſe it was void; but then it was moved, if this were not good as for an aſſault, that he might be fined upon it; but per curiam it is void in all; for being indicted upon the ſtatute, it is void as to an offence at the Common law. Cro. E. 231. pl. 23. Paſch. 33 Eliz. B. R. Penhallo's caſe.

In an indictment on the ſtatute of 8 H. 6. the ſtatute was miſrecited, and the concluſion was contra formam ſtatuti, and therefore held inſufficient; but then it was moved, that though the indictment was void for the entry with force, yet it being that they with others riotoſe and routoſe entred, &c. it ſhould be good for the riot; but curia contra; for the indictment beginning with the ſtatute of 8 H. 6. and concluding contra formam ſtatuti this this can have no relation to any offence except upon this ſtatute. Cro. E. 307. pl. 10. Mich. 35 & 36 Eliz. B. R. Hall v. Gawen & al'.

Information upon the ſtatute 33 H. 8. cap. 16. and 1 Ed. 6. c. 6. for buying of worſted yarn, not being a weaver, and the information concluded contra formam ſtatuti; it was ſaid it was not good, but it ought to be contra formam ſtatutorum; but the court as to that held it good, but becauſe he did not ſhew in his information, that it was not yarn ſpun upon the rock (for otherwiſe it is not an offence) it was held the information was not good. Cro. E. 750. pl. 6. Paſch. 42 Eliz. B. R. Dingley v. Moore.

If one ſtatute be relative to another, as where the former makes the offence, the latter adds a penalty, as the ſtatutes of 1 & 23 Eliz. the indictment ought to conclude contra formam ſtatutorum. 2 Hale's Pl. C. 173. cap. 24. cites Paſch. 42 Eliz. B. R. Croke, n. 6. Dingley v. Moore.

Where there are ſeveral ſtatutes, and it does not appear on which the information is founded, the concluding contra formam ſtatuti is ill. Cro. J. 142. pl. 19. Mich. 4 Jac. B. R. Broughton v. Moor, cites as is adjudged in the caſe of Talbot & al'.

But Dy. 347. pl. 9. contra, Topcliff v. Waller, cites 5 H. 7.——If there are divers ſtatutes in the point of information, contra formam ſtatuti is good; becauſe the beſt ſhall be taken for the King; per Coke. Ow. 135. Trin. 9 Jac. cites New Book of Entries 182. and 5 H. 7. 17. and 8 Ed. 3. 47. a.

Where one act makes the offence, and another gives the penalty, an information muſt be contra formam ſtatutorum, and cited 33 Eliz. Talbot v. Sheldon, who was indicted for recuſancy contra formam ſtatuti, 23 Eliz. and the judgment was reverſed becauſe the penalty was demanded; for the 10 Eliz. made the offence, and the 23d gave the penalty; but if the information be for the offence only, it had been good; per Coke. Ow. 135. Trin. 9 Jac. See 5 Vin. Abr. 552—556.

Contramandatio placiti. In Leg. H. 8. c. 59. it ſeems to ſignify a reſpiting, or giving the defendant further time to anſwer: an imparlance, or countermanding what was formerly ordered.

Contramandatum, Is ſaid to be a lawful excuſe, which the defendant in a ſuit by attorney alledgeth for himſelf, to ſhew that the plaintiff hath no cauſe of complaint. Blount.

Contrapoſitio, A plea to anſwer. Si quis in placito per juſtitium poſito ſui vel ſuorum cauſam injuſtis conterminationibus vel contrapoſitionibus difforciet, hanc perdat. Leg. H. 1. cap. 34.

Contrarients. Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, taking part with the barons againſt King Edward the Second, it was not thought fit in reſpect of their power, to call them rebels or traitors, but contrarients: And accordingly we have a record of thoſe times, called Rotulus Contrarientium.

Contratenere, To withhold. Si quis decimas contrateneat. Leg. Alfredi apud Brompton, cap. 9.

Contribules, (Contribunales,) Kindred, or couſins. Si quiſquam cognationis ſuæ firmet eum poſtea, reus ſit omnium quæ habebit erga Regem, & portet faidam erga contribunales mortui; that is, let him be accounted as an enemy to the kindred of the dead man. Lamb. pag. 75.

Contribution, (Contributio) Is where every one pays his ſhare, or contributes his part to any thing. One parcener ſhall have contribution againſt another; one heir have contribution againſt another heir, in equal degree; and one purchaſer have contribution againſt another. Alſo conuſors in a ſtatute ſhall be equally charged, and not one of them ſolely extended. 3 Rep. 12, 13, &c. On a ſtatute or recognizance, there is a contribution and ſtay till the full age of the heir, &c. and this doth extend to the leſſee for life or years of the conuſor, who has part of the land liable, and the heir within age the reſidue: for the land of every one of them ought to be charged equally, becauſe the whole is liable to the judgment; and this cannot be, if during the nonage the burden ſhall fall upon one only. Jenk. Cent. 36. If lands are mortgaged, and then deviſed to one perſon for life, with remainder to another; both deviſees ſhall make contribution to payment of the mortgage-money. Chan. Caſ. 224, 271. Where goods are caſt into the ſea for the ſafeguard of a ſhip, or other goods, &c. aboard, in a tempeſt, there is a contribution among merchants towards the loſs of the owners. 32 H. 8. c. 14. And where a robbery is committed on the highway, and damages are recovered againſt one or a few perſons, in action againſt the hundred, the reſt of the inhabitants ſhall make contribution to the ſame. 27 Eliz. cap. 13. See title Average, and 5 Vin. Abr. tit. Contribution and average.

Contributione faciendâ, Is a writ that lieth where more are bound to one thing, and yet one is put to the burden. Fitz. Nat. Brev. fol. 162. bringeth theſe examples; If joint-tenants, or tenants in common, hold a mill pro indiviſo, and equally take the profits thereof, the mill falling to decay, and one or more of them refuſing to contribute towards the reparation, the reſt ſhall have this writ to compel them. And if there be three coparceners of land that owe ſuit to the lord's court, and the eldeſt perform the whole, then may ſhe have this writ to compel the other two to a contribution of the charge or to one of them, if one only refuſe. The Old Nat. Brev. frameth this writ to a caſe, where one only ſuit is required for land, and that land being ſold to divers, ſuit is required of them all, or ſome of them by diſtreſs, as intirely as if all were ſtill in one, fol. 103. See Reg. Orig. fol. 167.

Controller, (Contrarotulator,) Is deriv'd from the Fr. contreroleur, antigraphus, which in Rome was us'd for him, Cui id muneris injunctum erat, ut obſervet pecuniam. quam in uſam principis vel civitatis collegerunt exactores. Budæus in Annot. prio. in Pand. tit. De quæſtoris officio. In England we have divers officers of this name, as Controller of the King's houſe, Staundf. Pl. Cor. 52. and 6 H. 4. 3. Controller of the King's navy, 35 El. c. 4. Controller of the Cuſtoms, Cromp. Juriſd. f. 105. Controller of Calais, 21 R. 2. cap. 18. Controller of the Mint, 2 H. 6. 12. Controller of the caſtle of Cheſter; Controllor of North Wales; Controller of the Exciſe, &c.

Controller of the hamper, who is an officer in the Chancery, daily attending in term-time on the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, to take all things ſealed from the Clerk of the hamper to note the juſt number and effect of all things ſo received, and to enter the ſame into a ſpecial book, with all the duties appertaining to his Majeſty, and other officers for the ſame, and ſo chargeth the Clerk of the hamper therewith.

Controller of the pipe, (Contrarotulator pipæ,) Is an officer of the Exchequer, that writeth out ſummons twice every year to the ſheriffs, to levy the farms and debts of the pipe; and alſo keepeth a contra-rollment of the pipe.

Controller of the pell, Is an officer in the Exchequer, of which ſort there are two, viz. the two chamberlains clerks, that do, or ſhould keep a controllment of the pell of of receipts and goings-out. See Fleta, lib. 1 c. 18. and 12 Ed. 3. ca 3. who ſay, This officer was originally one that took notes of any other officer's accounts of receipts, to the intent to diſcover him, if he dealt amiſs; and was ordained for the Prince's better ſecurity, however the ſame ſince may be in ſome things otherwiſe apply'd.

Conventicle, (Conventiculum,) A little private aſſembly or meeting for the exerciſe of religion; firſt attributed in diſgrace to the ſchools of Wickliff in this nation, above 200 years ſince; and now applied to the illegal meetings of the non-conformiſts, and is mentioned in the ſtat. 2 H. 4. c. 15. 1 H. 6. c. 3. 16 Car. 2. c. 4. And by ſtat. 22 Car. 2. c. 1. it is enacted, That if any perſons of the age of ſixteen years, ſubjects of this kingdom, ſhall be preſent at any conventicle, where there are five or more aſſembled, they ſhall be fined 5*s.* for the firſt offence, and 10*s.* for the ſecond; and perſons preaching incur a penalty of 20*l.* Alſo ſuffering a meeting to be held in a houſe, &c. is liable to 20*l.* penalty. Juſtices of peace have power to enter ſuch houſes and ſeize perſons aſſembled, &c. And if they neglect their duty, they ſhall forfeit 100*l.* And if any conſtable, &c. know of ſuch meetings, and do not inform a juſtice of peace or chief magiſtrate, &c. he ſhall forfeit 5*l.* But 1 W. & M. cap. 18. ordains, That the proteſtant diſſenters ſhall be exempted from penalties: though if they meet in a houſe, with the doors lock'd, barr'd, or bolted, ſuch diſſenters ſhall have no benefit from the 1 W. & M. Officers of the government, &c. preſent at any conventicle, at which there ſhall be ten perſons, if the Royal Family be not prayed for in expreſs words, ſhall forfeit 40*l.* and be diſabled. Converſos. The Jews here in England were formerly called converſos, viz. becauſe they were converted to the chriſtian religion. Henry III. built an houſe for them in London, and allowed them a competent proviſion or ſubſiſtence for their lives; and this houſe was called domus converſorum. 'Tis mentioned by our hiſtorians Mat. Pariſ. and Matt. Weſt. Anno 1244. But by reaſon of the vaſt expences of the wars, and the increaſe of theſe converts they became a burthen to the crown; and therefore they were placed in abbies and monaſteries for their ſupport and maintenance. But the Jews being afterwards baniſhed, Edward III. in the fifty-firſt year of his reign, gave this houſe for the keeping of the rolls; and 'tis the ſame which is at this time poſſeſſed by the Maſter of the Rolls. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Conveyance, Is a deed which paſſes land from one to another. Conveyance by feoffment and livery, was the general conveyance at Common law; and if there was a tenant in poſſeſſion, ſo that livery could not be made, then was the reverſion granted, and the tenant always attorned: Alſo upon the ſame reaſon, a leaſe and releaſe was held to be a good conveyance, to paſs an eſtate; but the leſſee was to be in actual poſſeſſion, before the releaſe. And by the Common law, when an eſtate did not paſs by feoffment, the vendor made a leaſe for years, and the leſſee actually entered; and the leſſor granted the reverſion to another, and the leſſee attorned: Afterwards, when an inheritance was to be granted, then likewiſe was a leaſe for years uſually made, and the leſſee entered (as before) and then the leſſor releaſed to him: But after the ſtatute of uſes, it became an opinion, that if a leaſe for years was made upon a valuable conſideration, a releaſe might operate upon it without an actual entry of the leſſee, becauſe the ſtatute did execute the leaſe, and raiſed an uſe preſently to the leſſee. And Serjeant Moor was the firſt who practiſed this way. 2 Mod. 251, 225. The moſt common conveyances now in uſe are deeds of gift, bargain and ſale, leaſe and releaſe, fines and recoveries, ſettlements to uſes, &c. A ſon did give and grant lands to his mother, and her heirs; though this was a defective conveyance at Common law, yet it was adjudged good by way of uſe to ſupport the intention of the donor; and therefore by theſe words an uſe did ariſe to the mother by way of covenant to ſtand ſeiſed. 2 Lev. 225. A feoffment without livery and ſeiſin, will not inure as a grant; but where made in conſideration of a marriage, &c. it has been adjudged, that it did inure as a covenant to ſtand ſeized to uſes. 2 Lev. 213. Tenant in fee, in conſideration of marriage, covenanted, granted and agreed all that meſſuage to the uſe of himſelf for life, then to his wife for life, for her jointure, then to their firſt ſon in tail male, &c. Now by theſe words it appeared, that the huſband intended ſome benefit for his wife, wherefore the court ſupplied other words to make the conveyance ſenſible. 1 Lutw. 782. The words give and grant, &c. are proper for a conveyance at Common law; but it has been held, that tho' ſome books warrant that conveyances ſhall operate according to the words, yet of late the judges have a greater conſideration of the paſſing the eſtate, than the manner by which 'tis paſſed. 2 Lutw. 1209. A conveyance cannot be fraudulent in part, and good as to the reſt: For if it be fraudulent and void in part, it is void in all, and it cannot be divided. 1 Lill. Abr. 311. Fraudulent conveyances to deceive creditors; defraud purchaſers, &c. are void, by ſtat. 50 Ed. 3. cap. 6. 13 Eliz. c. 5. 27 Eliz. cap. 4. See Deeds, and Wood's Convey. vol. 1.

Convict, Convictus, Is he that is found guilty of an offence by verdict of the jury. Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol. 186. See Attaint.

Conviction, Is either when a man is outlawed, or appeareth and confeſſeth, or elſe is found guilty by the inqueſt. Cromp. Juſt. 9.

The law implies a conviction, before puniſhment, though not mentioned in a ſtatute: And where any ſtatute makes a ſecond offence felony, or ſubject to a heavier puniſhment than the firſt, it is always implied that ſuch ſecond offence ought to be committed after a conviction for the firſt. 1 Hawk. P. C. 13, 107. Judgment amounts to a conviction; though it doth not follow that ever one who is convict, is adjudged. 1 Hawk. P. C. 14. See Acquittal.

Conviction, before juſtices of peace. When an act of parliament orders the conviction of offenders before juſtices of peace, &c. it muſt be intended after ſummons to bring them in, that they may have an opportunity of making their defence; and if it be otherwiſe the conviction ſhall be quaſhed. Mod. Ca. 41. Mich. 2 Ann. B. R.

All acts, which ſubject men to new and other trials, than thoſe by which they ought to be tried by the Common law, being contrary to the rights and liberties of Engliſhmen, as they were ſettled by Magna Charta, ought ought to be taken ſtrictly, and the court of King's Bench will require, that it do appear upon the face of ſuch proceedings, that the fact was an offence within the act, and that the juſtices have proceeded accordingly. M. 1 An. K. and Chandler. 1 Salk. 378. L. Raym. 581.

Therefore the particular manner of the offence ought to be ſet forth. Thus in the caſe of ſwearing, before the legiſlature by the act of the 19 Geo. 2. had directed a ſummary form of words for the conviction, it was required not only to ſet forth that the perſon had curſed or ſworn in general, but the particular oaths and curſes were to be ſet forth, that the court might judge thereupon, whether they were indeed oaths and curſes or not. H. 8 Geo. K. and Sparling. Str. 497.

And in the caſe of K. and Roberts, M. 11 Geo. which was a conviction for ſwearing 150 oaths in theſe words by God, and curſing 150 curſes in theſe words God damn you, this matter was carried ſo far, that it was inſiſted this was not ſufficient, but that the oaths and curſes ought to have been ſet forth 150 times each. But the oaths and curſes being all only in the ſame words over again, the court held the conviction good. Str. 608. L. Raym. 1376.

And it ſeemeth, that a conviction on a penal ſtatute ought expreſsly to ſhew, that the defendant is not within any of its proviſo's; for ſince no plea can be admitted to ſuch a conviction, and the defendant can have no remedy againſt it, but from an exception to ſome defect appearing in the face of it, and all the proceedings are in a ſummary manner; it is but reaſonable that ſuch a conviction ſhould have the higheſt certainty, and ſatisfy the court, that the defendant had no ſuch matter in his favour, as the ſtatute itſelf allows him to plead. 2 Haw. 250.

But in the caſe of K. and Ford, T. 9 Geo. there was a conviction on the 3 C. cap. 3. for keeping an alehouſe without licence; and it was objected, that in the act there is a proviſo to exempt perſons who have been puniſhed by the former law of the 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 25. and therefore it ſhould have been ſaid, he had not been proceeded againſt upon that act: But by the court, that coming in by way of proviſo, he ſhould have inſiſted on it in his defence; it appears he was aſked what he had to ſay, and therefore we may reaſonably preſume he had on ſuch defence to make, and the conviction was confirmed. Str. 555.

And in the caſe of K. and Bryan, M. 12 Geo. 2. the defendant was convicted on the gin act; and an exception was taken, that there was no averment, that it was not ſold to be uſed in medicine: And the caſes on the game act were mentioned, where in convictions it is neceſſary to exclude all the qualifications for killing game. On the other hand it was inſiſted, that the reaſon of that was, becauſe theſe were in the enacting clauſe, whereas this about medicine comes in by way of proviſo, and is by way of defence to be ſhewn on the defendant's part: And for that purpoſe was cited, M. 11. Geo. K. and Theed; where in a conviction for obſtructing an exciſe officer on the 8 Ann. cap. 9. it was objected, that it not being averred to be in the day, it ſhould have been ſhewn that there was a conſtable preſent, which is made neceſſary in the night; but was held to be well, and its being in the night, ſhould have been ſhewn on the defendant's part. And by the court, this is brought within the general enacting clauſe: And the true diſtinction is, where the extenuation comes in by way of proviſo, or exception. And the conviction was confirmed. Str. 1101.

In the caſe of K. and Venables, Trin. 11. Geo 1. The court were unanimouſly of opinion, that the party ought to be heard, and for that purpoſe ought to be ſummoned in fact; and that if the juſtices proceeded againſt a perſon without ſummoning him, it would be a miſdemeanor in them, for which an information would lie. L. Raym. 1406.

And in the caſe of K. and Allington, H. 12 G. on affidavit that no ſummons was had, the court granted an information againſt the juſtice who made the conviction. Str. 678.

The defendant was convicted for keeping a gun. And exception was taken, that there was not a reaſonable ſummons; for it was made to appear the ſame day, which might be impoſſible upon account of the diſtance, or the ſummons being ſerved late, and his witneſſes might not be got together on ſo ſhort a warning: Then it was to appear at the pariſh aforeſaid, whereas there were two pariſhes mentioned before; ſo the man might have gone to one, whilſt they were convicting him at the other. It was anſwered, that the defendant appeared at the time, and made defence; ſo that cures all defects in the ſummons. And by the court, the anſwer is right. Str. 261. Hil. 6. Geo. 1. K. and Johnſon.

The defendant was convicted for deer ſtealing; and the conviction ſet forth, that he had been ſummoned to appear before the juſtices, but it did not appear he ever was before them. Exception was taken to this, that as no appeal lies in this caſe, the juſtices ſhould not have proceeded in the abſence of the party, eſpecially where it may end in a corporal puniſhment, as it may do here for want of a diſtreſs. And at another day, on conſideration, Parker Ch. J. delivered the reſolution of the court: We are all of opinion, the offender may be convicted without appearing. The ſtatute is ſilent as to the method of proceeding, and the law of England, it is true, in point of natural juſtice, always requires the party charged with any offence, to be heard before he be condemned in judgment; but that rule muſt have this exception, unleſs it is through his own default; were it otherwiſe every criminal might avoid conviction. Str. 44. Hil. 3. Geo. 1. K. and Simpſon.

But generally it is not neceſſary to ſet forth the ſummons in the conviction; for although no ſummons is ſet forth, yet the court will intend one: But where a ſummons is ſet forth, and that ſummons appears to be irregular, the court will quaſh the conviction, there being then no room to intend any other ſummons. 11 G. K. and Venables, Seſſ. C. v. 1. 210. L. Raym. 1405.

In all convictions, being in the nature of judgments, the whole evidence ought to be ſet forth, or at leaſt ſo much thereof as is ſufficient to warrant the conviction; and the court of King's Bench may judge of the ſufficiency thereof; but otherwiſe it is in orders, which are authoritative. And ſo it was laid down in the caſe of K. and Floyd, M. 8. G. 2. which was thus; A motion was made to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made under the ſtatute of the 1 W. c. 21. ſ. 6. whereby the defendant was adjudged guilty upon full proof of the charge againſt him, and that he be diſcharged from his office of clerk of the peace, upon the objection that the evidence is not ſet out: But it was adjudged after conſideration, that this was an order, and therefore the evidence need not be ſhewn; but that it would be otherwiſe if it was on a conviction. Andr. 82. Str. 996.

Convict recuſant, Is one that hath been legally preſented, indicted, and convict for refuſing to come to church to hear the common prayer, according to the ſeveral ſtatutes of 1 Eliz. 2. 23 El. 1 and 3 Jac. 1.

Convivium, Signifies the ſame thing amongſt the laity, as procuratio doth amongſt the clergy; i. e. when the tenant, by reaſon of his tenure, is bound to provide meat and drink for his lord once or oftner in the year.—Potentibus vero non cauſa convivandi, ſed pro monaſterii utilitate quoties expedierit, obviandi intra infraque monaſterium licentiam habent. Selden in Eadmer. p. 150.

Convocation, (Convocatio,) Is the aſſembly of all the clergy to conſult of eccleſiaſtical matters in time of parliament: And as there are two houſes of parliament, ſo are there two houſes of convocation; the one called The higher convocation-houſe, where all the archbiſhops and biſhops ſit ſeverally by themſelves; the other The lower convocation-houſe, where all the reſt of the clergy ſit; that is, all the deans and archdeacons, one proctor for every chapter, and two proctors for all the clergy of each dioceſs; in all 166 perſons. Anno 25 H. 8. cap. 19.

Each convocation-houſe hath a prolocutor, choſen from among themſelves, and that of the lower houſe is preſented to the biſhops, &c. the archbiſhop of Canterbury is the preſident of the convocation, and prorogues and diſſolves it by mandate from the King. The convocation exerciſes juriſdiction in making canons, with the aſſent of the King: For by the ſtat. 25 H. 8. the convocation is not only to be aſſembled by the King's writ, but the canons are to have the Royal aſſent. They have the examining and cenſuring of heretical and ſchiſmatical books, and perſons, &c. but appeal lies to the King in Chancery, or to his delegates. 4 Inſt. 322. 2 Roll. Abr. 225. Conuſance of pleas, Is when one living within a juriſdiction, may implead another within it for a cauſe ariſing there; per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 643. Hill. 13 Will. 3. in the caſe of Croſs v. Smith.

Where a franchiſe, either by letters patent or preſcription, hath a privilege of holding pleas within their juriſdiction, if the courts at Weſtminſter intrench on their privileges, they muſt demand conuſance, that is, deſire that the cauſe may be determined before them. Gilb. H. C. B. 191.

There are three ſorts of inferior juriſdictions, one whereof is tenere placita, and this is the loweſt ſort; for it is only a concurrent juriſdiction, and the party may ſue there, or in the King's courts, if he will. The ſecond is conuſance of pleas, and by this a right is veſted in the lord of the franchiſe to hold the plea, and he is the only perſon who can take advantage of it. The third ſort is an exempt juriſdiction, as where the King grants to a great city, that the inhabitants thereof ſhall be ſued within their city, and not elſewhere; this grant may be pleaded to the juriſdiction of this court, if there be a court within that city which can hold plea of the cauſe, and no-body can take advantage of this privilege but a defendant, for if he will bring a certiorari, that will remove the cauſe, but he may wave it if he will, ſo that the privilege is only for his benefit. 3 Salk. 79, 80. pl. 4. Hill. 1 Ann B. R. Croſſe v. Smith.

King Hen. 8. by letters patent of the 14th of his reign, and confirmed by parliament, granted to the univerſity of Oxford conuſance of pleas, in which a ſcholar or ſervant of a college ſhould be party, Ita quod juſticiarii de utroque banco ſe non intromittant. An attorney of C. B. ſued a ſcholar in C. B. for battery; per cur. This general grant does not extend to take away the ſpecial privilege of any court without ſpecial words. Litt. Rep. 304. Mich. 5 C. C. B. Oxford (Univerſity's) caſe.

If a ſcholar of Oxford or Cambridge be ſued in Chancery for a ſpecial performance of a contract to leaſe lands in Middleſex, the univerſity ſhall not have conuſance, becauſe they cannot ſequeſter the lands. Gild. Hiſt. of C. B. 194. cites 2 Vent. 363.

Conuſance muſt be demanded before an imparlance, and the ſame term the writ is returnable, after the defendant appears, becauſe till he appears there is no cauſe in court, otherwiſe there would be a delay of juſtice; for if after imparlance, when the defendant has a day already allowed him, he would have two days, ſince when the conuſance is allowed, the franchiſe prefixes a day to both parties to appear before them, and it is the lords laches if he does not come ſoon enough not to delay the parties. Gilb. Hiſt. of C. B. 196.

In indeb. aſſ. the bail was put in in Eaſter term. The 5th day in Trinity term the univerſity of Cambridge came and demanded conuſance, (in a proper manner). The entry is of the laſt term. It being objected, that this was irregular, becauſe the defendant not pleading within four days of Trin. term, he ought to have an imparlance; to which it was anſwered, that the demand of conuſance was ſo late becauſe of an agreement between the plaintiff and defendant's attorney; but it was ſaid per cur. That the demanding a conuſance is a tranſaction between the two courts, and it muſt be done in court, and not between the attornies. It muſt be demanded either by the party that claims it, or by his bailiff or attorney. and not by the defendant. (N. B. The record here was entered up without an imparlance, but it was now pray'd to be done). This cannot be a plea of Eaſter term, becauſe it came not within four days. The ancient practice was, to make all pleading at the bar, but now the giving the pleadings to the plaintiff's attorney in writing is inſtead thereof. In this matter the former method is to be purſued, becauſe the court may ſee that there is juſt ground of conuſance. The party may reply, that the cauſe does not come within the conuſance demanded, but ſtill the court is concerned; for a day muſt be given over; the defendant's attorney cannot confeſs this, but the party, who claims it, muſt come into court, and produce his letters patents; here the plaintiff might reject the imparlance, and yet upon praying that imparlance, an allowance of conuſance is demanded. This demand by the attorney is nothing. It is a queſtion of juriſdiction between the two courts. If the court here ſees that there is ſuch a juriſdiction, they are to ſend a tranſcript of the record to the court below, and to give the parties a day. If the lord will not proceed at the day given, the court here may ſummon the party, &c. Hereupon a rule was made, that the record ſhould be ſet right, and an imparlance entred, and then it will be the ſame thing as if the lord had come into court the 5th day. Mich. 11 Ann. B. R. Pern v. Manners.

And in Hill. term the charters were produced, and an exemplification of an act of parliament which confirmed them. It appeared, that this was an excluſive juriſdiction granted, &c. viz. That no juſtices or judges ſhould intermeddle, &c. and that the party ſhould be ſued before the Chancellor, &c. ſolummodo & non allibi. There is a difference between a conuſance generally, and an excluſive conuſance; for the latter may be either demanded by the lord, or pleaded by the party; the lord ought to come the day he knows that his franchiſe is invaded. The juriſdiction here granted by the charter being ſuch as was inconſiſtent with the Common law, there wanted an act of parliament, or elſe the charter could not ſubſiſt. There is no hardſhip in coming in the firſt day, viz. the day the declaration is delivered, which day is enlarged, and if the party comes in within four days of the ſubſequent term, it is as if he came in of the former term; if the party lives within the juriſdiction, it muſt be known when he was arreſted; if he did not live there, no juſtice can be done by them; the caſe of an eſſoin is the ſame with the caſe here; for that is an excuſe to the court to let them know he cannot come, and therefore it would be odd that he ſhould be excluded from pleading any plea that he lawfully might; but though this is the firſt day to the party, it is the ſecond day to the lord; ſo it is in caſe of imparlance, for that is the ſecond day to the lord. As to the manner and time of demanding it, the charters and act are ſilent, but every thing ought to be laid before the court, together with the condition and circumſtances of the party, whether he be a member or ſervant of the univerſity; this is a fact triable by the court here. The lord need not come at the return of the writ, for nothing in this caſe appears, till the declaration, how the debt did ariſe; but if he might come at any time, the plaintiff would be at a great diſadvantage. The authority of Hard. 505. 506. as to what Ld. Ch. B. Hale ſays, is of little weight, neither is there any thing in that caſe to the purpoſe here; what Hale ſays, that any one may demand conuſance, cannot be maintained; it is not only the right of the univerſity, but it is alſo of the party, if he will plead it; and ſhall a ſtranger come and obtain this? The proceedings here, in caſe of an excluſive juriſdiction, are not merely null and void, though the charter ſays, that all writs ſhall be null; it is but a franchiſe which doth not take away the juriſdiction of Weſtminſter-hall, unleſs it be claimed; a conuſance generally muſt be demanded, but an excluſive one may be either pleaded by the party, or demanded by the lord. If it were a mere nullity, treſpaſs would lie againſt the ſheriff or officer; but it is a franchiſe, which muſt be claimed, and if it is ſo, it ſhall be allowed, but it doth not take away the juriſdiction of the courts here. In caſe of a bare conuſance, a day is given to the parties only, and a tranſcript is ſent hence; and if upon this there is a failure of juſtice below, there ſhall be a re-ſummons, but in the other caſe there is a ſtop, for there is no day given, as where the party pleads it. The crown could not grant pleas to proceed ſecundum leges & conſuetudines of that place, but it could be only to proceed according to law, and therefore the act was of uſe to enable them to proceed by another method than the law did allow of, whereupon coſts were prayed; ſed non allocatur. Hill 11 Ann. B. R. Pern v. Manners, alias Cambridge (univerſity's) caſe. 5 Vin. Abr. 588.

An action of treſpaſs was brought in Trin. term 12 & 13 Geo. 2. for an aſſault and battery, and falſe impriſonment, by an attorney of this court.

Defendant in the ſame term pleaded a joint plea, viz. as to the wounding, and part of the impriſonment, Not guilty, and as to the reſt, they pleaded ſpecially the priviledges of the univerſity of Oxford, and ſet forth the charter, and the act of parliament of the 13 Eliz. by which the charter is confirmed; the defendant Trahern is proctor of the univerſity, and, as ſuch, has power to apprehend any perſon making diſturbance within the univerſity; that finding the plaintiff making an affray late at night, he commanded him to keep the peace, but that inſtead thereof the plaintiff beat the defendant, whereupon the defendant laid his hands gently upon him, and committed him to gaol; that the other defendant Etty, is a gaoler of the gaol, and received him, being ſo lawfully committed, and traverſe their being guilty of any other treſpaſs.

Plaintiff imparles till Mich. term, and the nreplies, and admits the privileges of the univerſity, &c. but denies the facts for which they impriſoned him, and ſays, they took him of their own wrong without ſuch cauſe, and tenders an iſſue upon the fact of the diſturbance.

After this the univerſity of Oxford, (by the Chancellor) comes and claims conuſance, ſetting forth the privileges of the univerſity, and relying principally upon a charter of the 1ſt of April 14 H. 8. by which the King grants to the univerſity the conuſance of all cauſes, where either plaintiff or defendant is a member thereof, though the cauſe of action ariſe in any part of the kingdom, with an excluſive cauſe, that no juſtice (and particularly mentions the judges of this court) ſhall preſume to intermeddle in any caſe ariſing within the juriſdiction of the univerſity. They then ſet forth the ſtat. of Eliz. which confirms all their privileges, and conſequently this of the excluſive juriſdiction, and that this conuſance was allowed to them in Eaſter term, 9 Ann. B. R. and thereupon claim conuſance of the cauſe. Willes Ch. J. delivered the opinion of the court.

Upon this two queſtions ariſe, 1ſt, Whether the univerſity have claimed this conuſance in time or not? 2dly, If they have, whether they are intitled to the conuſance of this particular cauſe?

But the firſt only has been ſpoke to, becauſe if we are of opinion againſt the univerſity upon that, it will be unneceſſary to determine the ſecond.

And upon great conſideration we are of opinion, that the univerſity have not claimed in time, both from the reaſon of the thing, and from ſeveral authorities in which this had been determined.

The time required for the univerſity to come in is before imparlance, whereas in this caſe they have not come till after plea and replication.

And though this is ſaid to be hard upon the univerſity, becauſe they may not know any cauſe was depending, and therefore could not come ſo early, yet we think it would be much harder, on the other ſide, if it was otherwiſe; for if not till after imparlance, or plea pleaded, when are they to come? they may as well come at any time before judgment; and this would create great delay and expence, if after matters are brought to a ſingle iſſue to be tried, the univerſity can come and make all go for nothing.

Beſides, the univerſity, when they come to judge, muſt judge not according to the law of the land, but the Civil law, and though it muſt be that the party be tried by another law then that of the land, when an act of parliament gives ſuch a juriſdiction, and 'tis not in the power of the courts of Weſtminſter to help it, yet we are to take care to keep it in due bounds, and that it be claimed in proper time. This juriſdiction is ſo contrary to the laws of the land, that it could not be granted even by the King himſelf, unleſs by act of parliament? for it has been determined, that it is not in the power of the crown to create a new court of equity, becauſe ſuch a court does not proceed according to the rules of law. And the ſame reaſon holds as to this court of the univerſity, which determines men's properties without juries, and by a different law; ſo that without an act of parliament, no ſuch conuſance at all could be allowed to the univerſity; and this was the opinion of the court in the caſe of Bourne v Manners, Hill. 11 Ann. B. R. where the univerſity came five days after imparlance, and the court held it was too late; that they ought to come the firſt day, to prevent a delay of juſtice, and becauſe it took away the law of the land; and accordingly the claim was diſallowed. Indeed, it was not the caſe of this univerſity but of Cambridge; but upon comparing the two charters, that of Cambridge has rather, if poſſible, a larger excluſive juriſdiction, ſo that it is a caſe in point.

In that caſe were cited two caſes in the year-books, one in 6 H. 7. 9. b. the other in 16 H. 7. 16. a. where it was expreſsly adjudged, that to claim conuſance the party muſt come before imparlance.

This caſe was cited and allowed, and the court were of the ſame opinion in the caſe of——— v. Warren 12 Geo. 1. B. R.

The ſame point was determined in the caſe of this univerſity, Trin. 1 Geo. 2. Wood v. Graham, according to a note I have had of it from a gentleman at the bar.

As to the caſes cited, that in Latch 83, 84. where 'tis ſaid, that an ancient demeſne may be pleaded after imparlance, was cited as a parallel caſe. But it is remarkable, that the court in allowing it admitted it to be a ſingle caſe, and ſaid it was otherwiſe in all other caſes except that; and when one conſiders the particular caſe of ancient demeſne, it ſtands upon a quite different reaſon, inſomuch that a man may come after judgment; for though a fine be perfected, or a judgment in a real action given, yet the tenant may come and reverſe the fine or judgment by writ of deceit; and the reaſon is, becauſe if he was not allowed to do it, he would loſe the privilege of ancient demeſne for ever; for ſo long as ſuch fine or judgment ſtands in force, it appears to be land pleadable at Common law. But the preſent caſe is very different, for though we ſhould diſallow this claim of conuſance, the univerſity will only loſe it as to this particular caſe; but their juriſdiction remains the ſame in any other cauſe, provided they come in time.

Another caſe was laid before me, determined ſo long ago as Hill. 12 Ed. 3. in the court of Exchequer, where in an action of treſpaſs, the court granted a writ, directed to the univerſity of Oxford, to have the conuſance of the cauſe, non obſtante that they did not claim it at the return of the writ, but ſtaid till the parties had pleaded; but this determination is expreſsly contrary to the opinion we are of, and eſpecially as it is not only before the ſtat. of Queen Eliz. but even before the charter of H. 8. upon which the univerſity put their caſe, ſo that I can pay no regard to the authority of it, but muſt conſider it as the effect of power, and not of judgment.

One more was mentioned, and that was the caſe of Aldridge v. Dr. Stradtford, in Canc. Trin. 12 Ann. where Lord Harcourt determined contrary to our opinion; but as it was a judgment given without one ſingle reaſon, and contrary to ſtrong and unanſwerable reaſons given by himſelf a little before in the ſame cauſe, I have no regard to it. I ſhall never pay any regard to a judgment founded either on fear or favour.

As to the ſecond queſtion, whether the univerſity's privilege will hold in the caſe of an attorney, as we have rejected the claim of conuſance, being made too late, it is not neceſſary to ſay any thing upon it, but as it may hereafter come into queſtion, I would mention ſome caſes which may be proper to be conſidered, viz. in Litt. R. 304. 1 Rol. 489. 3 Leon. 149. The privilege of an attorney's ſuing in his proper court will be preferred; for it is a privilege time out of mind, and is for the ſake of juſtice, and all the people of England, and that therefore a King's charter will not deprive him of it, nor even an act of parliament, without expreſs words.

I ſhall be as tender of the privileges of the univerſity as any man living, and have a great veneration for that body, yet I ſhall always endeavour to ſupport trials by juries upon which all that we have, our liberties and properties, and lives depend, and prevent the incroachment of any juriſdiction whatever. The conuſance was diſallowed per Willes Ch. J. Mich. 14 Geo. 2. C. B. Wells v. Trahern and Etty. 5 Vin. Abr. 590.

By ſtat. 9 Hen. 4. cap. 5. Coopers. Stat. 23 Hen. 8. cap. 4. ſect. 10. No brewer, that ſhall brew to ſale beer or ale, ſhall occupy the miſtery of coopers, nor make any barrels or other veſſels whereby they ſhall put their beer or ale to ſale: But all ſuch barrels, and other veſſels of wood, ſhall be made and marked by the coopers, upon pain to forfeit for every ſuch barrel, or other veſſel, 3*s.* 4*d.*

Sect. 2. Every cooper, that will make any of the ſaid veſſels for beer or ale to be put to ſale, ſhall make the ſame of good and ſeaſonable wood, and put his mark upon them: And every barrel for beer ſhall contain thirty-ſix gallons, every kilderkin for beer eighteen gallons, and every firkin for beer nine gallons, of the King's ſtandard. And every barrel of ale ſhall contain thirty-two gallons, every kilderkin for ale ſixteen gallons, and every firkin for ale eight gallons. And no cooper ſhall make any other veſſel for beer or ale to be ſold of greater or leſſer number of gallons, unleſs he cauſe to be marked upon every ſuch veſſel the true number of gallons ſuch veſſel ſhall contain.

Sect. 3. No cooper ſhall inhance the prices of ſuch barrels or veſſels, but keep the prices as hereafter enſueth, upon pain to forfeit for every barrel, kilderkin, and firkin, defective or inhanced in price 3*s.* 4*d. viz.* for every beer-barrel 9*d.* for every beer-kilderkin 5*d.* and for every beer-firkin 3*d.* and the ale-barrel 16*d.* and the ale-kilderkin 9*d.* and the ale-firkin 5*d.*

Sect. 4. No beer-brewer, nor ale-brewer, ſhall put their beer or ale to be ſpent within this realm in barrels, or veſſels of wood, other than ſhall be made and marked by a cooper.

Sect. 5. Every beer-brewer and ale-brewer ſhall not take for ſuch barrel, kilderkin or firkin, of ale and beer, but after ſuch prices as ſhall be thought convenient by the juſtices of peace; and in every city and town where there be mayors, ſheriffs or other head officers, the ſame prices to be ceſſed by them, and the ſaid ale-brewers or beer-brewers ſhall not ſell their beer nor ale at any higher prices upon pain to forfeit for every barrel 6*s.* for every half-barrel or kilderkin 3*s.* 4*d.* and for every firkin 2*s.* and for every veſſel containing greater number of gallons 10*s.* and for every veſſel containing leſſer number of gallons 12*d.* the one half to the King, and the other half to him that will ſue for the ſame.

Sect. 6. Sope-makers which ſhall put to ſale any ſope by barrel, half-barrel, firkin or other veſſel, ſhall make their barrels and other veſſels according to the contents accuſtomed, viz. every empty barrel to hold thirty-two gallons or above, and to be in weight twenty-ſix pounds, and every half-barrel empty to be in weight thirteen pounds, and to hold ſixteen gallons; and every firkin empty to weigh ſix pounds and a half, and to hold eight gallons, upon pain of forfeiture for every ſuch barrel or other veſſel 3*s.* 4*d.*

Sect. 7. The wardens of the miſtery of coopers in London, taking with them an officer of the mayor's, ſhall have power to ſearch and gauge all ſuch barrels and other veſſels to be made for ale, beer and ſope, to be put to ſale in London, and within two miles without the ſuburbs; and to mark every ſuch barrel and other veſſel with St. Anthony's croſs. The ſame wardens to have, for the ſearch and gaging of every ſuch barrel and other veſſel, one farthing of the owners or makers, and ſhall have authority to retain every ſuch veſſel as they ſhall ſo gage and mark, until they be ſatisfied thereof. And in caſe they ſhall find any of the ſaid veſſels defective, they may ſeize and retain every ſuch veſſel, and cauſe the ſame to be marked or amended, or elſe to be burned.

Sect. 8. The owner of ſuch veſſel ſhall forfeit for every ſuch veſſel not being of the full contents, 12*d.* to be recovered and imployed as aboveſaid.

Sect. 9. In all other cities and towns wherein no wardens of coopers be, the mayors, ſheriffs, bailiffs, conſtables, or other head officers, ſhall have power to ſearch and gauge all ſuch barrels and other veſſels, and to have all ſuch advantage thereby as the wardens of coopers in London may have.

Sect. 10. Every beer-brewer may keep in his houſe one or two ſervants of the miſtery of coopers, to hoop and mend his veſſels.

Sect. 11. If any perſon do diminiſh any barrel, kilderkin or firkin, to the deceit of any, by taking out the head of ſuch veſſel, or taking out of any ſtaff, every ſuch veſſel ſhall be burnt, and the offender forfeit 3*s.* 4*d.* one moiety to the King, and the other to him that will ſue for the ſame, &c. And the party offending ſhall be further puniſhed by the diſcretion of the head officers before whom ſuch default ſhall be preſented.

Sect. 12. It ſhall be lawful to every ale-brewer to have in his ſervice one perſon of the miſtery of coopers, to exerciſe the craft, in binding, hooping and pinning his maſters ale-veſſels.

Sect. 13. Every cooper, which ſhall make any ale-veſſel, ſhall make ſuch veſſel according to the aſſiſe ſpecified in the treatiſe called Compoſitio menſurarum, viz. every barrel for ale to contain thirty-two gallons, of which eight gallons make the buſhel, every kilderkin for ale ſixteen gallons, and every firkin eight gallons or above, upon pain of forfeiture of 3*s.* 4*d.* for every veſſel untruly made; the one half to the King, and the other to him that will ſue for the ſame.

Sect. 14. Every cooper ſhall mark his veſſel with his own mark, on pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* to be levied as aboveſaid. And no perſon for gauging any veſſel ſhall put out the ale, whereby the ſame ſhall be worſe. And it ſhall be lawful to every ale-brewer to bring their ale to honourable men's houſes, in tuns, hogſheads, or other veſſels of larger quantity; and to bring their ale to every man's houſe in barrels, kilderkins and firkins, holding their true contents.

Stat. 8 Eliz. cap. 9. ſect. 3. As much of the ſtatute 23 Hen. 8. cap. 4. as doth concern the prices of barrels and other veſſels, for ſuch places as new prices ſhall be ſet, ſhall be repealed.

Sect. 4. The prices of barrels and other veſſels for ale, beer or ſope, to be uttered therein, ſhall be rated by mayors, bailiffs, and other head officers of every city and town corporate, where ſuch veſſels ſhall be made, or offered to be ſold.

Sect.

Sect. 5. Where ſuch veſſels ſhall be made or ſold out of any city or town corporate the prices ſhall be rated by the juſtices of peace in quarter ſeſſions yearly after Eaſter.

Sect. 6. If the coopers ſhall not make ſale according to ſuch prices as ſhall be rated after proclamation thereof made; every perſon offending ſhall incur the forfeitures mentioned in the ſaid ſtatute 23 H. 8. cap. 4.

Coparceners, Participes, Are otherwiſe called parceners, and in Common law are ſuch as have equal portions in the inheritance of their anceſtor; and as Littleton in the beginning of his third book ſaith, parceners be either by law, or by cuſtom: Parceners by law, are the iſſue female, which (there being no heir male) come in equally to the lands of their anceſtors. Brac. lib. 2. cap. 30. Parceners by cuſtom, are thoſe that by cuſtom of the country challenge equal part in ſuch lands; as in Kent, by the cuſtom called gavel-kind. This among the Feudiſts is called adæquatio, Hot. in verbis Feud. verb. adæquatio. See Lit. lib. 3. c. 2, 3. and Britton, cap. 27. intitled, De Heritage diviſable. The crown of England is not ſubject to coparcenary. 25 H. 8. cap. 22.

If one ſeiſed of an eſtate of inheritance die, leaving only daughters, ſiſters, aunts, or other females of kin in equal degree, and the eſtate deſcends to any of theſe, they are ſaid to hold in coparcenary, and to make but one heir to their anceſtor. Bract. lib. 2. c. 30. Co. Lit. 241.

In this inheritance ſometimes the deſcent is in capita; as where a man hath iſſue two daughters, and dies, the deſcent is in capita; therefore each ſhall inherit alike; and ſometimes the deſcent is in ſtirpes; as if a man hath iſſue two daughters, and dies, and the eldeſt daughter hath iſſue three daughters, and the youngeſt one daughter; all theſe four ſhall inherit, but the daughter of the youngeſt ſhall have as much as the three daughters of the eldeſt. Co. lit. 164. b.

If a man hath iſſue two daughters, and the eldeſt hath iſſue ſeveral ſons and daughters, and the youngeſt hath iſſue ſeveral daughters, the eldeſt ſon of the eldeſt daughter, ſhall only inherit his anceſtor, but all the daughters of the youngeſt ſhall hold their mother's moiety in coparcenary with him. Co. Lit. 164. b.

If a man ſeiſed of lands in fee, hath iſſue two daughteers, and one of them is attainted of felony, and the father dies, both daughters being alive, one moiety ſhall deſcend to the innocent daughter, and the other moiety ſhall eſcheat; but if a man make a leaſe for life, remainder to the right heirs of A. being dead, who hath iſſue two daughters, whereof one is attainted of felony, it ſeems the remainder is not good for a moiety, but void for the whole. Co. Lit. 163.

Parceners, in reſpect of their anceſtors make but one heir; and therefore to recover the poſſeſſion of the common anceſtor, they muſt join in the præcipe; ſo when they come into poſſeſſion before partition, they are ſeiſed of an undivided poſſeſſion, though having a right to a writ De partitione faciendo, they have a right to ſever and divide the poſſeſſion that before was joint in them. Co. Lit. 164.

In replevin, the plaintiff declared for taking of bricks, &c. and the defendant made conuzance as bailiff to one John Bennet and Grace his wife, ſetting forth, that one Simon Bennet was ſeized in fee of the lands, &c. and made a leaſe thereof for forty years, rendring rent, and died, the lands deſcended to his daughters and coheireſſes, one whereof married the ſaid John Bennet, and the other was counteſs of Saliſbury, and ſo made conuzance for a moiety of the rent; and upon demurrer judgment was given for the plaintiff, becauſe one coparcener cannot make avowry for a moiety of the rent before partition, though they have ſeveral inheritances. 5 Mod. 141. For more matter concerning Coparceners, ſee 1 *Bac. Cope, By Domeſday-Book, as Mr. Agar hath interpreted it, ſignifies a hill. It denotes alſo, according to Mr. Manlove, in his Treatiſe of the Liberty and Cuſtoms of the Mint, &c. printed 1653, a cuſtom or tribute due to the lord of the ſoil, or elſe to the King, out of the lead-mines in ſome part of Devonſhire: His words are theſe,— ——Egreſs and regreſs to the King's highway,

The miners have; and lot and cope they pay.
The thirteenth diſh of oar within their mine,
To the lord for lote, they pay at meaſuring time.
Sixpence a load for cope the lord demands,
And that is paid to th' berghmaſter's hands, &c.

See alſo Sir John Pettus's Fodinæ Regales, on this ſubject. And cope is taken for the ſupreme cover, as the cope of heaven. It is alſo uſed for the roof and covering of a houſe; the upper garment of a prieſt, &c.

Coppa,

Coppa, A cock of graſs, hay, or corn, ſo divided into tithable portions. This is the true ſenſe of the word in that paſſage of Will. Thorn, inter x ſcript. col. 1820. An. 1177.——Pacti ſunt homines de Halmoto de Menſtre in Thaneto——furges omnes ſuas coppare extunc & deinceps, (i. e. to ſet out their hay and corn into copps or cocks) & ſic per coppas omnes decimas ſuas ipſi & hæredes ſui a modo, & in æternum legitime dare, i. e. by a juſt and equal proportion of tithing to pay the tenth cock. This authority the learned Du Freſne cites in voce coppa; but ſeems to underſtand it only of cutting down their corn; whereas it ſtrictly denotes the gathering or laying up the corn in copes or heaps, (as they do barley, oats, &c. not bound up) that it might be the more fairly and juſtly tithed. In Kent they ſtill retain the word, a cap of hay, a cap of peaſe, a cap of ſtraw.

Copy, (Copia) Is in a legal ſenſe the tranſcript of an original writing; as the copy of a patent, of a charter, deed, &c. A clauſe out of a patent, taken from the chapel of the Rolls cannot be given in evidence; but you muſt have a true copy of the whole charter examined: it is the ſame of a record. And if upon a trial, you will give part of an office copy in evidence to prove a deed, which deed is to prove the party's title to the land in queſtion, the court will not admit of it: for the court will have a copy of the whole given, or no part of it ſhall be admitted. 1 Lill. Abr. 312, 313. Where a deed is inrolled, certifying an atteſted copy is proof of the inrollment, and ſuch copy may be given in evidence. 3 Lev. 387. A common deed cannot be proved by a copy or counterpart, where the original may be procured. 10 Rep. 92. Copyhold, (Tenura per copiam rotuli curiæ) Is a tenure for which the tenant hath nothing to ſhew but the copy of the rolls made by the ſteward, as he inrolleth and maketh remembrances of all other things done in the lord's court; ſo he doth alſo of ſuch tenants as are admitted in the court, to any parcel of land or tenement belonging to the manor; and the tranſcript of this is called The copy of the court-roll, which is all the tenant taketh from him, and keeps as his only evidence. Co. lib. 4. f. 25. b. This tenure is called a baſe tenure, becauſe he holdeth at the will of the lord, Kitchen fol. 80. cap. Copyholds. F. N. B. f. 12. where 'tis ſaid, that it is wont to be called tenure in villenage, and that of copyhold is but a new name: yet it is not ſimply at the will of the lord, but according to the cuſtom of the manor; ſo that if a copyholder break not the cuſtom of the manor, and thereby forfeit his tenure, he ſeemeth not ſo much to ſtand at the lord's courteſy for his right, that he may be diſplaced at his pleaſure. Theſe cuſtoms of manors are infinite, varying in one point or other almoſt in every ſeveral manor: Firſt, ſome copyholds are fineable at will, and ſome certain: that which is fineable at will, the lord taketh at his pleaſure; but if it exceed two years revenue, the Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, may reduce them to reaſon. That which is certain, is a kind of inheritance, and called in many places cuſtomary, becauſe the tenant dying, and the hold being void, the next of blood, paying the cuſtomary fine, as two ſhillings for an acre, or ſuch like, may not be deny'd his admiſſion. Secondly, Some copyholders have by cuſtom, the wood growing upon their own land, which by law they could not have. Kitchin, ubi ſupra. Thirdly, Some copyholders are ſuch as hold by the verge in ancient demeſne; and altho' they hold by copy, yet are they accounted a kind of freeholders; for if ſuch a one commit felony, the King hath annum, diem & vaſtum as in caſe of freehold. Some others hold by common tenure, called mere copyhold, and they committing felony, their land eſcheateth to the lord of the manor. Kitchin f. 81. cap. Lamb. Explication of Saxon words, verbo Terræ ex ſcripto. Weſt. Symb. par. 1. lib. 2. ſect. 646. defines a copyholder thus; Tenant by copy of court-roll, is he which is admitted a tenant of any lands or tenements within a manor, that, time out of mind, by uſe and cuſtom of the manor, have been demiſable, and demiſed to ſuch as will take the ſame in fee, or fee-tail, for life, years, or at will according to the cuſtom of the manor; by copy of court-roll of the ſaid manor; where you may read more of theſe things. Cowell, edit. 1727.

1. Of the nature of copyhold eſtates.

2. Of intailing copyhold eſtates, and the ſtatutes concerning them.

1. Of the nature of copyhold eſtates.

The original of this tenure aroſe from grants of lands made by lords to their villains to hold of them by baſe tenure; thoſe villains or tenants were capable of taking no greater eſtate than at the will of the lord; for otherwiſe they had been infranchiſed; yet to prevent the frequent ending of theſe eſtates, they granted them in fee, but ſtill at the will of the lord; who notwithſtanding ſuch grant, might have ouſted them when he pleaſed, which being a very great inconvenience, was, it ſeems, altered by ſome poſitive law, (though ſuch law does not now appear) which preſerved their eſtates to them and their heirs, doing their ſervices, but yet in other reſpects left them only eſtates at will. 1 Bac. Abr. 457.

Land, parcel of the manor of C. in Wilts, and parcel of the dutchy of Cornwall, although they paſs by ſurrender and copy of court-roll, yet if by the rolls or copies they appear only to have been granted tenendum ſecundum conſuetudinem manerii, and not ad voluntatem domini manerii, they are not copyhold, but a cuſtomary freehold. 1 Bac. Abr. 457.

The biſhop of N. 10 H. 8. was ſeiſed of the manor of N. in the right of his biſhoprick, and at a court holden within the ſame manor, granted parcels of the demeſnes of the ſaid manor to one T. and his heirs, by copy; whereas in truth the land was never demiſed before, and ſo the land continued in copy till 23 Hen. 8. when T. committed a forfeiture, and the biſhop ſeiſed the land, and granted the ſame again by copy to T. in fee, from which time it continued in copy till the 8th of Eliz. which was forty-ſeven years; and it was held by the whole court, that fifty years continuance is requiſite to faſten a cuſtomary condition upon the land againſt the lord, and that though the original commencement of granting thoſe lands by copy, was 10 Hen. 8. from which time to 8 Eliz. was above ſixty years; yet that the ſeiſure for a forfeiture which happened 23 H. 8. interrupted utterly the continuance from the time, which might by the law have perfected the cuſtomary intereſt; ſo that the commencement of the copyhold was to be reckoned from the 23 H. 8. which not being ſufficient time to make good a cuſtom, the lord might enter upon the copyholder as upon his tenant at will. 3 Leon. 107. Style 141.

Lord Coke ſays, that copyholders have only a fee ſimple, ſecundum quid, that though they are tenants at will, yet their eſtates ſhall deſcend to their heirs, and ſuch deſcent ſhall be governed by the rules of Common law; but not ſimpliciter to have all the collateral qualities of eſtates in fee ſimple. 4 Co. 22 a. Co. Copyh. 114.

Therefore where a copyholder by licence made a leaſe for years, and the leſſee entred, and the leſſor died, having iſſue a ſon and a daughter, by one venter, and a ſon by another, the eldeſt ſon dies, it was adjudged the daughter of the whole blood ſhould inherit; for the poſſeſſion of the leſſee for years was the poſſeſſion of the elder brother, who may have poſſeſſion before admittance. 2 Co. 21. a. Moor 125.

But

But though it be governed by the rules of Common law, concerning deſcents, yet it partakes not of the nature of freehold lands in other reſpects; for it is not aſſets in the heir's hands; neither ſhall a woman be endowed of it, nor a man be tenant by the courteſy unleſs by ſpecial cuſtom; nor ſhall a deſcent take away entry. 4 Co. 23. a. 30. b. 6 Mod. 64.

A man ſeiſed of copyhold lands, in right of his wife, ſurrenders to the uſe of another in fee, this is no diſcontinuance, but the wife may enter after the death of her huſband; for this is not like a feoffment at Common law, which by the notoriety of it took away the entry of the wife, for the benefit of ſtrangers, that they might not be at a loſs againſt whom to bring their præcipes; but in caſe of copyhold lands, as there is no ſuch inconvenience, ſo the nature of the conveyance will not admit of ſuch expoſition. 4 Co. 23. Co. Copyh. 141.

So if a tenant for life ſurrender to the uſe of another in fee, it is no forfeiture; for it may be ſeen by the court rolls who is tenant; and ſo the ſtranger is at no loſs to ſue. Moor 753. 4 Co. 23.

If a copyholder in fee ſurrenders to the uſe of A. and B. and the longer liver of them, and that for want of iſſue of A. the lands ſhould remain to the youngeſt ſon of J. S. in this caſe A. has but an eſtate for life; for an eſtate tail in copyhold lands ſhall not paſs by implication. Co. Copyh. 97. Cro. Car. 366. 1 Brownl. 127. Noy 152.

A man may ſurrender a copyhold eſtate to the uſe of his wife; for ſhe takes the eſtate from the lord, as an inſtrument to convey the eſtate to her; and ſo it comes not within the reaſon of other caſes, that they being but one perſon cannot contract; for he gives the eſtate to the Lord, and he admits the feme to it. Style 145. 4 Co. 29. b.

There can be no occupant of a copyhold eſtate, becauſe of the prejudice it would do the lord; and therefore if a copyholder being tenant pur auter vie die, the lord ſhall enter. 1 Salk. 188.

2. Of intailing copyhold eſtates, and the ſtatutes concerning them.

The intailing of copyholds, and whether they are within the ſtatute De donis, appears to have been matter of great controverſy; and it ſeems now agreed, that the ſtatute De donis creates no intail of copyhold lands, becauſe they are intirely ſubject to the cuſtom of the manor, and governable by it; and becauſe they are not within the word tenementa, which comprehends only an eſtate of freehold. 1 Bac. Abr. 459.

Alſo it ſeems now agreed, that if the cuſtom of the manor has admitted of limitations of remainders upon ſuch gifts, that then the cuſtom of the manor; purſuing the model of the ſtatute, creates a good intail; but ſuch intail doth not ariſe by virtue of the ſtatute; but it ſhall be preſumed there was the ſame law of that manor by cuſtom time immemorial, as began in the kingdom by the ſtatute. 1 Bac. Abr. 459.

A copyhold was ſurrendered to the uſe of the copyholder's laſt will, who deviſed it to J. S. in tail, &c. J. S. hath iſſue, and ſurrenders to the uſe of his wife for life; and it was adjudged, that ſince the jury found it was not the cuſtom of the manor to have an eſtate tail in the copyhold, that J. S. had a fee conditional; and that by his having of iſſue he had performed the condition; and the ſurrender to the uſe of his wife was good. Cro. Car. 44, 45.

But though by cuſtom, time out of mind, copyholds may be intailed, yet it is no proof of ſuch cuſtom, that an eſtate hath been granted to a man and the heirs of his body; for that may be a fee conditional; but it muſt be ſhewn that a remainder hath been limited over and enjoyed, or that the iſſue hath recovered after the alienation of his anceſtor, or the like. 3 Co. 8. b. Co. Lit. 60.

Theſe intails, like all others, may be docked; but the manner of doing it differs according to the cuſtom of the manor; the more common way of barring ſuch intails is by recovery in the lords courts, which is always allowed where the cuſtom of intailing prevails, to avoid the danger of perpetuity in ſuch copyholds. Co. Lit. 60. 1 Sid. 314. Moor 358.

Alſo, according to the cuſtom of ſome manors, a ſurrender to the lord is equivalent to a recovery at Common law, and ſhall bar ſuch intails. Co. Lit. 60. b. Moor 188. 2 Vern. 705.

And in ſome manors; a forfeiture committed by tenant in tail, of the copyhold, and the lord's making three proclamations, and ſeizing the copyhold, and re-granting it to the copyholder, has been allowed a good cuſtom to bar the intail. So it is if tenant in tail ſurrender to the purchaſer and his heirs, who commits a forfeiture, and the lord as before ſeized it, and makes proclamations, this is a bar of the intail, and the cuſtom allowed good. Co. Copyh. 135. Style 450. 1 Sid. 314. 2 Sand. 422.

The general rule laid down for the expoſition of ſtatutes, as to their extending or not extending to copyhold eſtates, is this, that where an act of parliament alters any eſtate, intereſt, tenure or cuſtom, or ſervice of the manor, or doth any thing in prejudice either to the lord or tenant, there the general words of an act of parliament will not extend to copyhold eſtates; but when an act is generally for the public good, and no prejudice accrues to the lord, &c. there copyholders are bound by them. 1 Bac. Abr. 460.

Copyholders are within the ſtatute of limitation; for that is an act made for the preſervation of the publick quiet, and no ways tending to the prejudice of the lord or tenant. Moor 410. But debt for a fine is not within the ſtatute of limitations. 2 Keb. 536.

It ſeems formerly to have been the better opinion, that grantees or ſurrendrees of reverſions of copyholds could not take advantage of a covenant broken, by 32 H. 8. becauſe he comes in the poſt, and not in the per; and the lord would have a tenant put upon him without his admittance; but it has been ſolemnly adjudged, that this being a beneficial law, it ſhall extend to copyholds. 1 Bac. Abr. 460.

The ſtat. 38 H. 8. cap. 28. of the huſband's diſcontinuing of the wife's land, extends to copyhold eſtates. Co. Copyh. 152. 4 Co. 23.

Copyholds are not within the 11 Hen. 7. cap. 20. which makes the alienation of the wife void of any eſtate which ſhe hath in dower, for life or in tail, jointly with her huſband, &c. for thereby an entry being given to the next heir, he would come in to be tenant, without the admittance of the lord. 2 Sid. 41. 73. 2 Lev. 327. 4 Mod. 85.

The 27. H. 8. For uniting uſes to the poſſeſſion, extends not to copyholds, neither doth that branch of the act concerning jointures extend to them; for that if a jointure be made to a woman of copyhold lands, that will be no bar to her dower. Cro. Car. 44. 4 Mod. 85.

But yet the ſtatute of Merton, that gives damages in a writ of dower, where the huſband died ſeiſed, extends to copyholds, though the word ſeiſed is properly applicable to freeholds; but this is by force of the equity of the ſtatute. 2 Inſt. 325. Cro. Car. 43. 4 Co. 30. b. Co. Copyh. 152.

The ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 3. in all its branches extends to copyhold lands, for it is an act made to redreſs wrong, and no way prejudicial to the intereſt either of the lord or tenant, either in the cui in vita given to the wife upon the huſband's diſcontinuance, the receipt of the wife, &c. or quod ei deforciat to particular tenants. Co. Lit. 369. b. Co. Copyh. 152. 4 Mod. 84. 3 Lev. 327.

It is enacted by 31 H. 8. cap. 13. That if any abbot, &c. ſhall make any leaſe of lands, &c. in the which any eſtate for life, &c. then had its being and continuance, then every ſuch leaſe to be void. A copyhold was let by copy for life, and then the religious houſe granted a leaſe of it to another for eighty years; and the queſtion was whether a copyhold eſtate for life was within the words of the act, in the which any eſtate or intereſt, &c. and if was reſolved, that the leaſe was void, and that the copyholder had an eſtate or intereſt for life. 3 Co. 7. 1 Leon. 4. Moor 128. Cro. Car. 42, 43.

The 32 H. 8. cap. 9. againſt Champerty, extends to copyholds, for the words if any bargain, buy or ſell any right or title; ſo that they are within the words of the act, being made to ſuppreſs wrong, and within the equity of it, neither lord nor tenant being prejudiced by it. Co. Lit. 369. Co. Copyh. 152. 4 Mod. 84. 3 Lev. 327.

The 31 & 32 H. 8. concerning partitions, extends not to copyholds, becauſe the act provides it ſhall be done by writ of partition; and copyhold lands are not impleadable at Common law. Cro. Car. 44. Co. Copyh. 151. 4 Mod. 85.

The ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 20. which gives the elegit, extends not to copyhold lands; for then the lord would have a tenant brought in upon him without his admittance or conſent. 3 Co. 9. Co. Copyh. 149.

By the 2 Ed. 6 cap. 8. it is expreſsly provided, that copyholders ſhall have the like traverſe and remedy where their intereſt is not found by the office, as freeholders and others have; and ſo alſo upon 12 Eliz. cap. 8. Co. Copyh. 145.

By the 1 Ed. 6. cap. 14. it is expreſsly provided, that no copyhold ſhould come into the King's hands by diſſolution of monaſteries; which clauſe was put in for the benefit of lords of manors. Co. Copyh. 146.

The forging of court-rolls is expreſsly within 5 Eliz. cap. 14. as well as forging any other charter, deed, or writing ſealed, whereby to defeat a copyholder or freeholder. Co. Copyh. 146.

Copyholds are within the ſtatutes of bankrupts; for the ſtatute of 13 Eliz. expreſsly mentions them; and though other ſtatutes do not, yet they being made for further remedy, are to be expounded by the former, eſpecially ſince that hath taken care that no prejudice ſhould happen to the lord. Cro. Car. 550, 568. Co. Copyh. 146.

Copyholds are within the 35 Eliz. cap. 5. againſt recuſancy, and forfeitable for the recuſant's life, but the forfeiture goes to the lord, not to the King, by the expreſs words of the ſtatute; but it ſeems that copyholds are not within the 29 Eliz. or 3 Jac. 1. in reſpect of the prejudice that would accrue to the lord by the loſs of his ſervices. 1 Bac. Abr. 461.

The 16 Rich. 2. cap. 5. which makes it a forfeiture of lands, &c. to purchaſe bulls of the Pope, extends not to copyhold lands for the prejudice the lord would ſuſtain, if the King ſhould have the lands. Co. Copyh. 149.

The ſtatute of fines extends to copyhold lands, becauſe it was made to avoid controverſies, and is no ways prejudicial to the lord. 9 Co. 105. a. Co. Copyh. 153.

Copyholds are not within 31 Eliz. cap. 7. of cottages. 1 Bulſt. 50.

The ſtat. 27 Ed. 2. cap. 10. which giveth the wardſhip of ideots lands to the King, he finding them convenient maintainance out of the profits thereof, extends not to copyhold lands, for the prejudice that would thereby enſue to the lord: but yet all alienations made by an ideot of his copyhold land, after office found, ſhall be avoided by the King. Co. Copyh. 152. 4 Co. 126. b.

A copyholder is not within the ſtatute 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. to diſpoſe of the cuſtody of his infant heir; becauſe of the meanneſs of his eſtate, and the prejudice that would accrue to the lord of the manor; and therefore the lord, or thoſe intitled by the cuſtom, ſhall have the cuſtody of him. 3 Lev. 395. 2 Lutw. 1181. Comb. 243.

Stat. 9 Geo. 1. cap. 29. ſect. 1. Where any perſons under the age of twenty-one years, or femes covert, ſhall be intitled by deſcent, or ſurrender to the uſe of a laſt will, to be admitted tenants of any copyhold tenements, ſuch infant or feme covert, in their proper perſons, or ſuch feme covert by her attorney, or ſuch infant by his guardian, or in caſe he have no guardian, then by his attorney (for which purpoſe they are impower'd, by writ to appoint attornies) ſhall appear at one of the three next courts, which ſhall be kept for ſuch manor, whereof ſuch tenements ſhall be parcel, and ſhall there tender themſelves to be admitted tenants; and in default of ſuch appearance and of acceptance of ſuch admittance, the lord or his ſteward, after three courts holden and proclamations made, may nominate at any ſubſequent court any fit perſon to be guardian or attorney for ſuch infant or feme covert, for that purpoſe only; and by ſuch guardian or attorney may admit ſuch infant or feme covert, and impoſe ſuch fine as might have been impoſed, if ſuch infant had been of full age, or ſuch feme covert unmarry'd.

Sect. 2. The fine ſet thereon may be demanded by the bailiff, by a note ſign'd by the lord and his ſteward, to be left with ſuch infant or feme covert, or with the guardian of ſuch infant, or huſband of ſuch feme covert, or with the tenant of the tenements to which they were admitted; and if the fine be not paid to the lord or his ſteward within three months after demand, the lord may enter upon ſuch copyhold eſtate, and hold the ſame and receive the rents; but without liberty to ſell any timber; till by ſuch rents he be paid the fine with coſts, although ſuch infant or feme covert happen to die before ſuch coſts and fine be raiſed; of all which rents received, the lord ſhall yearly on demand render an account, and pay the ſurplus to ſuch perſons as ſhall be intitled.

Sect. 3. As ſoon as ſuch fine and coſts be ſatisfied, or if after ſuch ſeizure and entry, the fine and coſts ſhall be tender'd, then ſuch infant or feme covert, or other perſon intitled, may enter and take poſſeſſion; and if the lord, after the fine and coſts ſatisfy'd or tender'd, ſhall refuſe to deliver poſſeſſion, he ſhall be liable to make ſatisfaction for all damages and coſts.

Sect. 4. Where any infant or feme covert ſhall be admitted to any copyhold tenements, if the guardian of ſuch infant, or huſband of ſuch feme covert, ſhall pay the lord the fine and the coſts, then the guardian or the huſband, their executors, &c. may enter into and hold the ſaid copyhold tenements, and receive the rents, till they be ſatisfy'd all the money they ſhall diſburſe on the account aforeſaid, notwithſtanding the death of ſuch infant or feme covert.

Sect. 5. No infant or feme covert ſhall forfeit any copyhold for neglect or refuſal to come to any court, and be admitted; or for the omiſſion or refuſal, to pay any fine impoſed on their admittance.

Sect. 6. If the fine impoſed in any of the caſes beforementioned ſhall not be warranted by the cuſtom of the manor, ſuch infant or feme covert ſhall be at liberty to controvert the legality of ſuch fine, as they might have done if this act had not been made.

Stat. 31 Geo. 2. cap. 14. ſect. 1. No perſon who holds his eſtate by copy of court-roll, ſhall be intitled thereby to vote at the election of any knight of the ſhire in England or Wales: And if any perſon vote in any ſuch election contrary to the intent hereof, every ſuch vote ſhall be void; and every perſon ſo voting, ſhall forfeit to any candidate for whom ſuch vote ſhall not have been given, and who ſhall firſt ſue for the ſame 50*l.* to be recovered by him his executors and adminiſtrators, with coſts, by action of debt in any court of record at Weſtminſter, wherein no eſſoin, &c. ſhall be allowed; and in every ſuch action the proof ſhall lie on the perſon againſt whom ſuch action ſhall be brought.

Sect. 2. It ſhall be ſufficient for the plaintiff in any ſuch action of debt, to ſet forth in the declaration, that the defendant is indebted to him the ſum of 50*l.* and to alledge the offence for which the action is brought, and that the defendant hath acted contrary to this act; without mentioning the writ of ſummons to parliament or the return thereof: and upon trial the plaintiff ſhall not be obliged to prove the writ of ſummons to parliament or the return thereof, or any warrant to the ſheriff grounded upon any ſuch writ of ſummons.

Sect. 3. Provided that every ſuch action be commenced within nine calendar months next after the fact upon which the ſame is grounded.

Sect. 4. All the ſtatutes of jeofails ſhall extend to all proceedings in any ſuch action.

Sect. 5. In caſe the plaintiff in ſuch action diſcontinue or be nonſuited, or judgment be given againſt him, the defendant ſhall recover treble coſts.

Corn. Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 12. ſect. 4. No badger, lader, kidder, carrier, buyer, or tranſporter of corn or grain ſhall be licenſed only in the open ſeſſions of the ſhire where he hath dwelt for three years laſt paſt; and no perſon ſhall be licenſed but only ſuch who is or hath been a married man, and is an houſholder, and not an houſehold ſervant, nor retainer to any perſon, and of the age of thirty years at the leaſt. Such licence ſhall be only of force for one year.

Sect. 5. Which licence ſhall bear date of the day and place where the ſeſſions ſhall be holden, and ſhall be ſigned and ſealed by three juſtices at ſuch ſeſſions, one whereof to be of the quorum; and any perſon taking licence contrary to this act, ſhall forfeit to the King five pounds; and the licence ſhall be void.

Sect. 6. And the juſtices at ſuch ſeſſions may take recognizance that the perſons licenſed ſhall not, by colour thereof foreſtall or ingroſs, or do any thing contrary to the act againſt foreſtalling, ingroſſing, and regrating, of the 5 & 6 Ed. 6. cap. 14. and the licence and recognizance ſhall be written by the clerk of the peace, or his deputy, and no other perſon; for which he ſhall have 12*d.* for the licence, and 8*d.* for the recognizance, and for regiſtring them both 4*d.* for which fee he ſhall alſo keep a regiſter book, and therein enter the names and dwelling-places of the perſons licenſed, with a brief declaration of the licence, and of the day, time, and place when granted; which book he ſhall have at the ſeſſions.

Sect. 7. And no perſon, by authority of ſuch licence, ſhall buy corn out of open fair or market, to ſell again, unleſs he be thereunto particularly licenſed, and have ſpecial and expreſs words in the licence, that he may ſo do; on pain of five pounds, half to the King, and half to him that will ſue.

Sect. 8. And the ſeſſions may hear and determine the offences aforeſaid, by inquiſition, preſentment, bill, or information, and by examination of two witneſſes, and make proceſs thereupon, as upon indictment, and eſcheat the King's moiety, and award execution of the other moiety to the party, by fieri facias, or capias, as the courts at Weſtminſter may do.

Sect. 9. Provided, that nothing in this act ſhall extend to prejudice the liberty of a city or town corporate, but that they may licence purveyors, for the proviſion thereof, as before this act.

Stat. 13 Eliz. cap. 25. ſect. 20. No perſon ſhall be a buyer, badger, kidder, or carrier of corn, in other manner than is contained in the ſtatute made in the 5 Eliz. c. 12. nor ſhall be any other ways admitted or licenſed to be a buyer, badger, kidder, or carrier as aforeſaid, than is mentioned and appointed by the ſaid ſtatute.

Stat. 43 Eliz. cap. 7. ſect. 1. Every perſon who ſhall unlawfully cut or take away corn or grain growing, being convicted thereof by confeſſion, or oath of one witneſs, before one juſtice, ſhall for the firſt offence pay ſuch damages as the juſtice ſhall appoint: And if the juſtice ſhall think him not able or ſufficient, or if he do not pay ſuch damages, he ſhall commit him to the conſtable where the offence is committed, or where the party is apprehended, apprehended, to be whipped; and for every other offence he ſhall in like manner be whipped. The conſtable refuſing ſhall be committed by the juſtice, till he conform.

Stat. 15 Car. 2. cap. 7. ſect. 2. When the prices of corn Wincheſter meaſure do not exceed the rates following, viz. the quarter of wheat 48*s.* of barley or malt 28*s.* of buck-wheat 28*s.* of oats 13*s.* 4*d.* of rye 32*s.* of peaſe or beans 32*s.* it ſhall be lawful for all perſons to tranſport the ſaid corn to any parts beyond ſea as merchandiſe.

Sect. 3. When the prices of the ſaid corns do not exceed the rates abovementioned at the place where they ſhall be imported, there ſhall be paid for cuſtom of every quarter of wheat 5*s.* 4*d.* of rye 4*s.* of barley or malt 2*s.* 8*d.* of buck-wheat 2*s.* of oats 1*s.* 4*d.* and for peaſe or beans 4*s.*

Sect. 4. When the prices do not exceed the ſaid rates, it ſhall be lawful for all perſons (not foreſtalling or ſelling the ſame in the ſame market within three months after the buying) to buy in open market, lay up, and ſell again, ſuch corn aforeſaid, as ſhall have been bought at or under the prices before expreſſed.

Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 7. If any perſon ſhall, in the night-time, maliciouſly and wilfully burn or cauſe to be burnt, any rick or ſtack of corn, he ſhall be guilty of felony: But to avoid judgment of death, he may make his election to be tranſported for ſeven years. And three juſtices, one whereof to be of the quorum, may determine the ſame. See the 9 Geo. 1. cap. 22. under Black act.

Stat. 22 Car. 2. cap. 8. ſect. 2. If any perſon ſhall ſell corn otherwiſe than by Wincheſter meaſure, ſealed and ſtriken by the brim, he ſhall forfeit forty ſhillings on conviction before one juſtice, on the oath of one witneſs, to be levied by the churchwardens and overſeers, or ſome of them, to the uſe of the poor, by diſtreſs and ſale: And in default of diſtreſs to be impriſoned till paid.

Sect. 3. And if any mayor, or other head officer, ſhall knowingly permit the ſame, he ſhall, upon conviction thereof at the county ſeſſions, forfeit five pounds, half to the proſecutor, and half to the poor, by diſtreſs and ſale; and for want of diſtreſs to be impriſoned by warrant of the juſtices till payment be made.

Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 12. ſect. 2. Every perſon who ſhall buy or ſell corn without meaſuring, being thereunto required, or in other manner than is by 22 Car. 2. cap. 8. directed, and that without ſhaking of the meaſure by the buyer, he ſhall, beſides the penalty of that act, forfeit all the corn ſo bought or ſold, or the value thereof, to the party complaining.

Sect. 3. And on complaint made to a juſtice of the peace, that corn hath been bought, ſold or delivered contrary to this act, the proof ſhall lie upon the defendant, to make it appear by the oath of one witneſs, that he ſold or bought the ſame lawfully; wherein if he ſhall fail, he ſhall forfeit as is ſaid before, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale; which ſhall by the juſtices be diſtributed, half to the poor and half to the informer.

Stat. 22 Car. 2. cap. 13. ſect. 1. It ſhall be lawful for every perſon, native or foreigner, at any time to tranſport as merchandize all ſorts of corn, although the prices exceed the rates in 15 Car. 2. c. 7. and when the prices of corn, at the places where the ſame ſhall be imported, exceed not the rates following, there ſhall be paid for cuſtom theſe rates, viz. for every quarter of wheat when the ſame ſhall not exceed 53*s.* 4*d.* 16*s.* when the ſame ſhall exceed 53*s.* 4*d.* and not exceed 4*l.* there ſhall be paid 8*s.* for every quarter of rye when the ſame doth not exceed 40*s.* 16*s.* for every quarter of barley, malt or buckwheat, when the ſame doth not exceed 32*s.* 16*s.* for every quarter of oats when the ſame doth not exceed 16*s.* 5*s.* 4*d.* for every quarter of peas and beans when the ſame doth not exceed 40*s.* 16*s.* each quarter to contain eight buſhels, and each buſhel eight gallons.

Sect. 2. When the prices of corn ſhall exceed the rates aforeſaid, there ſhall be paid the duties payable before the making of this act.

Sect. 3. There ſhall be paid for the cuſtom of every hundred weight of French or pearl barley, 5*s.*

Stat. 1 Jac. 2. cap. 19. ſect. 3. The juſtices of peace for the ſeveral counties wherein foreign corn may be imported, are required at their quarter ſeſſions after Michaelmas and Eaſter yearly, by the oath of two ſubſtantial perſons of the counties, being neither merchants nor factors for importing corn, nor intereſted in the corn imported, and each having a freehold eſtate of 20*l.* or a leaſehold of 50*l.* per annum, and by ſuch other ways as to them ſhall ſeem fit, to determine the common market prices of middling Engliſh corn of the reſpective ſorts in the act 20 Car. 2. cap. 13. mentioned; and to certify the ſame, with two ſuch oaths made as aforeſaid in writing annexed, to the chief officer and collector of the cuſtoms reſiding in the ports where corn ſhall be imported, to be hung up in the cuſtom-houſe.

Sect. 4. The cuſtom of foreign corn imported ſhall be paid according to the prices contained in ſuch certificates.

Sect. 5. All that is to be done by the juſtices of peace at their quarter ſeſſions in the counties, ſhall be done in like manner in London in October and April yearly, by the mayor, aldermen and juſtices; and the perſons making ſuch oaths ſhall be no corn-chandler, meal-man, factor, merchant or perſon intereſted in ſuch corn to be imported, but ſhall be ſubſtantial houſe-keepers in Middleſex or Surry, qualified as aforeſaid.

Continued as 22 Car. 2. cap. 13.

Stat. 11 Will. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 12. ſect. 2. When malt or barley ſhall be at 24*s.* per quarter, rye at 32*s.* per quarter, and wheat at 48*s.* per quarter, or under, in any part of this kingdom, every perſon who ſhall put on board in Engliſh ſhipping, the maſter and two thirds of his mariners being their Majeſties ſubjects, any ſorts of the corn aforeſaid, with intent to export the ſame, ſuch perſon ſhall bring a certificate under his hand containing the quantity and quality of corn ſo ſhipped, to the collectors of the cuſtoms; and upon proof of ſuch certificate by one perſon upon oath, and upon bond given of 200*l.* for every hundred tons of corn ſhipped, that the ſaid corn (danger of the ſeas excepted) ſhall be exported beyond ſea, and not again landed in England, Wales, Guernſey, Jerſey, or Berwick; every merchant ſo ſhipping, &c. ſhall receive from the collectors for every quarter of barley or malt 2*s.* 6*d.* for rye 3*s.* 6*d.* for wheat ground or unground 5*s.* without any fee. And upon certificate returned under the common ſeal of the chief magiſtrate of any place beyond ſea, or under the hands and ſeals of two known Engliſh merchants upon the place, that ſuch corn was there landed, or upon proof that ſuch corn was taken by enemies, or periſhed upon the ſeas, the bond ſhall be delivered up without fee.

Stat. 1 Will. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 24. ſect. 18. Where malt or barley of Engliſh growth ſhall be at 24*s.* the quarter or under, rye at 32*s.* wheat at 48*s.* in Berwick; every perſon who ſhall put in Engliſh ſhipping, the maſter and two thirds of his mariners being their Majeſties ſubjects, any of the corn aforeſaid from the port of Berwick; to export the ſaid corn, and ſhall purſue the methods preſcribed by the 1 Will. & Mar. cap. 12. ſhall have the benefit of the ſaid act.

Stat. 11 & 12 Will 3. cap. 20. ſect. 4. The ſubſidy, and all duties payable upon exportation of wheat, rye, barley, malt, beans, peaſe and other corn, ground or unground, bread, biſcuit and meal, ſhall ceaſe.

Stat. 12 & 13 Will. 3. cap. 10. ſect. 23. If the collector of the cuſtoms have not ſufficient in his hands to ſatisfy ſuch money as ſhall be due to any exporter of corn by 1 Will. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 12. ſuch collector ſhall give the perſon demanding ſuch money, without fee, a certificate of what is due to ſuch perſon for the corn exported from ſuch port, certifying to the commiſſioners that he hath not money ſufficient; which certificate

cate being affixed to the debenture for the corn, and produced, the commiſſioners are required to cauſe the monies to be paid in three months by the general receiver, out of monies ariſing out of ſuch duties in the port of London as are chargeable with the ſame.

Stat. 5 Ann. cap. 29. ſect. 10. For all oatmeal and grain called beer or bigg, which ſhall be exported from England, Wales, or Berwick, there ſhall be the like premium given upon exportation, as is to be given by the articles of union upon exportation of oatmeal and beer from Scotland; the merchant bringing a certificate under his hand, containing the quantity of ſuch oatmeal and beer, to the collector of the cuſtoms, and making proof of ſuch certificate by one perſon upon oath, and giving bond in 10*l.* for every ton of oatmeal, and for every forty buſhels of beer, that the ſame ſhall be exported beyond ſea, and not relanded, which premium the merchant ſhall receive of ſuch collector; and upon certificate returned under the common ſeal of the chief magiſtrate in any place beyond ſea, or under the hands and ſeals of two known Engliſh merchants upon the place, that ſuch oatmeal or beer was there landed, the bond ſhall be delivered up without fee.

Sect. 15. Every perſon exporting malt made of wheat ſhall receive of the collectors of the cuſtoms, &c. 5*s.* for every quarter ground or unground.

Stat. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 18. ſect. 3. If the juſtices of peace ſhall neglect to determine the prices of corn at their quarter ſeſſions after Michaelmas and Eaſter yearly, and to certify the ſame to the chief officer and collector of the cuſtoms, reſiding in the ports where foreign corn may be imported, to be hung up in the cuſtom-houſe as is directed by 1 Jac. 2. cap. 19. in ſuch caſe the collector of the cuſtoms at the port of importation is impowered to receive the duties of the corn imported, according to the loweſt price of the ſame ſort of corn mentioned in 22 Car. 2. cap. 13.

Sect. 4. The officers of the cuſtoms ſhall admeaſure all corn whereon there is an allowance payable for exportation; and ſuch admeaſurement ſhall be made by a meaſure containing four Wincheſter buſhels; and if ſuch corn ſhall be brought to be ſhipped in ſacks, the officers are to make choice of two of theſe ſacks, out of any number not exceeding twenty, before the ſame ſhall be put on board, and thereby compute the quantity intended to be ſhipped; and according to ſuch computation the allowance ſhall be paid to the exporter, upon his producing a certificate from the officers of the cuſtoms, atteſting the quantity and quality of the corn ſhipped for exportation.

Sect. 5. The like regulations ſhall be extended to the aſcertaining the prices and quantity of beer or bigg, oatmeal and wheat meal intended for exportation. Provided, that nothing in this act ſhall alter the preſent practice of ſhipping corn from the port of London; but the ſame may be meaſured by ſworn meters, by whoſe certificate the ſearchers or other officers of the cuſtoms are to certify the quantity of corn ſhipped for exportation, as hath been practiſed.

Stat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 12 ſect. 1. It ſhall be lawful for the juſtices of peace for the ſeveral counties within England, Wales and Berwick, wherein foreign corn ſhall be imported, at their quarter ſeſſions, to give in charge to the grand jury, to make preſentment of the market prices of middling Engliſh corn, of the ſorts mentioned in an act 22 Car. 2. cap. 13.

Sect. 2. Such preſentment ſhall be certified by the juſtices to his majeſty's chief officers of the cuſtoms in every port where ſuch corn ſhall be imported, and be hung up in the cuſtom-houſe.

Sect. 3. The duty of foreign corn imported, ſhall be paid according to the prices contained in ſuch certificates.

Sect. 4. Nothing in this act ſhall prejudice the authority given by the act 1 Jac. 2. cap. 19. to the mayor, aldermen and juſtices of peace in the city of London.

Sect. 5. No warrant, cocket, &c. ſhall be granted for carrying to ſea from any port within England, Wales, and Berwick, to any port of the ſame, any foreign corn after importation thereof; and no perſon ſhall tranſport any foreign corn, or foreign corn mixed with Engliſh, under penalty that all ſuch corn that ſhall be tranſported or laden contrary to this act ſhall be forfeited, and every offender ſhall forfeit 20*s.* for every buſhel of ſuch corn, and the ſhip upon which ſuch corn ſhall be laden ſhall be forfeited; one moiety of which forfeitures ſhall be to the King, and the other moiety to them who will ſue for the ſame; and the maſter and mariners of ſuch ſhip wherein ſuch offence ſhall be committed, knowing ſuch offence, and aſſiſting thereunto, ſhall be impriſoned three months.

Stat. 11 Geo. 2. cap. 22. ſect. 1. If any perſons ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly beat, wound, or uſe any other violence to any perſon, with intent to deter or hinder him from buying of corn: or ſhall unlawfully ſtop or ſeize upon any waggon, cart or other carriage, or horſe loaded with wheat, flour, meal, malt or other grain, in the way to or from any city, market-town or ſea-port, and wilfully and maliciouſly break, cut, ſeparate or deſtroy the ſame, or any part thereof, or the harneſs of the horſes; or ſhall unlawfully take off, drive away, kill or wound any of ſuch horſes, or unlawfully beat or wound the drivers in order to ſtop the ſame; or ſhall ſcatter ſuch wheat, flour, meal, malt or other grain, or ſhall take or carry away, ſpoil or damage the ſame, or any part thereof; every ſuch perſon being thereof convicted before any two juſtices of peace ſhall be ſent to the common gaol or houſe of correction, to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three months, nor leſs than one month; and ſhall by the juſtices be ordered to be once publickly whipped by the keeper of ſuch gaol or houſe of correction, on the firſt convenient market-day, at the market-place, between the hours of eleven and two.

Sect. 2. If any perſon ſo convicted ſhall commit any of the offences aforeſaid a ſecond time, or if any perſon ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly pull, throw down, or otherwiſe deſtroy any ſtorehouſe or place where corn ſhall be then kept in order to be exported; or ſhall unlawfully enter any ſuch place and carry away any corn, flour, meal or grain, or ſhall throw abroad, or ſpoil the ſame; or ſhall unlawfully enter on board any ſhip, barge or veſſel, and wilfully and maliciouſly take and carry away, caſt or throw out therefrom, or otherwiſe ſpoil or damage, any meal, flour, wheat or other grain therein intended for exportation; every perſon ſo offending, and being thereof convicted, ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony, and ſhall be tranſported for ſeven years; and if ſuch offender ſhall return into this kingdom before the expiration of the ſeven years, he ſhall ſuffer death without benefit of clergy.

Sect. 3. No attainder for any offence made felony by this act ſhall work corruption of blood, loſs of dower or diſinheritance of heirs.

Sect. 4. No perſon puniſhed for any offence by this act ſhall be puniſhed for the ſame offence by any other law.

Sect. 5. The inhabitants of every hundred in England, wherein any ſuch offence ſhall be committed, ſhall make ſatisfaction to all perſons, their executors and adminiſtrators, for the damages they ſhall have ſuſtained by any injury done to their properties by any offender againſt this act; the ſum to be recovered not exceeding 100*l.* ſuch damages to be levied by the like methods as are preſcribed in caſe of actions for robberies on the highway, by 27 Eliz. cap. 13. and 8 Geo. 2. cap. 16. except ſo much thereof as relates to giving notice, or making freſh ſuit and hue and cry, or any other matter otherwiſe provided for by this act.

Sect. 6. Provided, that no perſons be enabled to recover damages by this act, unleſs they be themſelves or their ſervants, within two days after damage done, ſhall give notice of ſuch offence to one of the conſtables of the hundred, or to the conſtable, borſholder, headborough or tithingman of the town, hamlet or tithing, in or near which ſuch fact ſhall be committed; and ſhall within ten days after ſuch notice, give in their examination upon oath, or the examination upon oath of their ſervants, apprehended, to be whipped; and for every other offence he ſhall in like manner be whipped. The conſtable refuſing ſhall be committed by the juſtice, till he conform.

Stat. 15 Car. 2. cap. 7. ſect. 2. When the prices of corn Wincheſter meaſure do not exceed the rates following, viz. the quarter of wheat 48*s.* of barley or malt 28*s.* of buck-wheat 28*s.* of oats 13*s.* 4*d.* of rye 32*s.* of peaſe or beans 32*s.* it ſhall be lawful for all perſons to tranſport the ſaid corn to any parts beyond ſea as merchandiſe.

Sect. 3. When the prices of the ſaid corns do not exceed the rates abovementioned at the place where they ſhall be imported, there ſhall be paid for cuſtom of every quarter of wheat 5*s.* 4*d.* of rye 4*s.* of barley or malt 2*s.* 8*d.* of buck-wheat 2*s.* of oats 1*s.* 4*d.* and for peaſe or beans 4*s.*

Sect. 4. When the prices do not exceed the ſaid rates, it ſhall be lawful for all perſons (not foreſtalling or ſelling the ſame in the ſame market within three months after the buying) to buy in open market, lay up, and ſell again, ſuch corn aforeſaid, as ſhall have been bought at or under the prices before expreſſed.

Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 7. If any perſon ſhall, in the night-time, maliciouſly and wilfully burn or cauſe to be burnt, any rick or ſtack of corn, he ſhall be guilty of felony: But to avoid judgment of death, he may make his election to be tranſported for ſeven years. And three juſtices, one whereof to be of the quorum, may determine the ſame. See the 9 Geo. 1. cap. 22. under Black act.

Stat. 22 Car. 2. cap. 8. ſect. 2. If any perſon ſhall ſell corn otherwiſe than by Wincheſter meaſure, ſealed and ſtriken by the brim, he ſhall forfeit forty ſhillings on conviction before one juſtice, on the oath of one witneſs, to be levied by the churchwardens and overſeers, or ſome of them, to the uſe of the poor, by diſtreſs and ſale: And in default of diſtreſs to be impriſoned till paid.

Sect. 3. And if any mayor, or other head officer, ſhall knowingly permit the ſame, he ſhall, upon conviction thereof at the county ſeſſions, forfeit five pounds, half to the proſecutor, and half to the poor, by diſtreſs and ſale; and for want of diſtreſs to be impriſoned by warrant of the juſtices till payment be made.

Stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 12. ſect. 2. Every perſon who ſhall buy or ſell corn without meaſuring, being thereunto required, or in other manner than is by 22 Car. 2. cap. 8. directed, and that without ſhaking of the meaſure by the buyer, he ſhall, beſides the penalty of that act, forfeit all the corn ſo bought or ſold, or the value thereof, to the party complaining.

Sect. 3. And on complaint made to a juſtice of the peace, that corn hath been bought, ſold or delivered contrary to this act, the proof ſhall lie upon the defendant, to make it appear by the oath of one witneſs, that he ſold or bought the ſame lawfully; wherein if he ſhall fail, he ſhall forfeit as is ſaid before, to be levied by diſtreſs and ſale; which ſhall by the juſtices be diſtributed, half to the poor and half to the informer.

Stat. 22 Car. 2. cap. 13. ſect. 1. It ſhall be lawful for every perſon, native or foreigner, at any time to tranſport as merchandize all ſorts of corn, although the prices exceed the rates in 15 Car. 2. c. 7. and when the prices of corn, at the places where the ſame ſhall be imported, exceed not the rates following, there ſhall be paid for cuſtom theſe rates, viz. for every quarter of wheat when the ſame ſhall not exceed 53*s.* 4*d.* 16*s.* when the ſame ſhall exceed 53*s.* 4*d.* and not exceed 4*l.* there ſhall be paid 8*s.* for every quarter of rye when the ſame doth not exceed 40*s.* 16*s.* for every quarter of barley, malt or buckwheat, when the ſame doth not exceed 32*s.* 16*s.* for every quarter of oats when the ſame doth not exceed 16*s.* 5*s.* 4*d.* for every quarter of peas and beans when the ſame doth not exceed 40*s.* 16*s.* each quarter to contain eight buſhels, and each buſhel eight gallons.

Sect. 2. When the prices of corn ſhall exceed the rates aforeſaid, there ſhall be paid the duties payable before the making of this act.

Sect. 3. There ſhall be paid for the cuſtom of every hundred weight of French or pearl barley, 5*s.*

Stat. 1 Jac. 2. cap. 19. ſect. 3. The juſtices of peace for the ſeveral counties wherein foreign corn may be imported, are required at their quarter ſeſſions after Michaelmas and Eaſter yearly, by the oath of two ſubſtantial perſons of the counties, being neither merchants nor factors for importing corn, nor intereſted in the corn imported, and each having a freehold eſtate of 20*l.* or a leaſehold of 50*l.* per annum, and by ſuch other ways as to them ſhall ſeem fit, to determine the common market prices of middling Engliſh corn of the reſpective ſorts in the act 20 Car. 2. cap. 13. mentioned; and to certify the ſame, with two ſuch oaths made as aforeſaid in writing annexed, to the chief officer and collector of the cuſtoms reſiding in the ports where corn ſhall be imported, to be hung up in the cuſtom-houſe.

Sect. 4. The cuſtom of foreign corn imported ſhall be paid according to the prices contained in ſuch certificates.

Sect. 5. All that is to be done by the juſtices of peace at their quarter ſeſſions in the counties, ſhall be done in like manner in London in October and April yearly, by the mayor, aldermen and juſtices; and the perſons making ſuch oaths ſhall be no corn-chandler, meal-man, factor, merchant or perſon intereſted in ſuch corn to be imported, but ſhall be ſubſtantial houſe-keepers in Middleſex or Surry, qualified as aforeſaid.

Continued as 22 Car. 2. cap. 13.

Stat. 11 Will. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 12. ſect. 2. When malt or barley ſhall be at 24*s.* per quarter, rye at 32*s.* per quarter, and wheat at 48*s.* per quarter, or under, in any part of this kingdom, every perſon who ſhall put on board in Engliſh ſhipping, the maſter and two thirds of his mariners being their Majeſties ſubjects, any ſorts of the corn aforeſaid, with intent to export the ſame, ſuch perſon ſhall bring a certificate under his hand containing the quantity and quality of corn ſo ſhipped, to the collectors of the cuſtoms; and upon proof of ſuch certificate by one perſon upon oath, and upon bond given of 200*l.* for every hundred tons of corn ſhipped, that the ſaid corn (danger of the ſeas excepted) ſhall be exported beyond ſea, and not again landed in England, Wales, Guernſey, Jerſey, or Berwick; every merchant ſo ſhipping, &c. ſhall receive from the collectors for every quarter of barley or malt 2*s.* 6*d.* for rye 3*s.* 6*d.* for wheat ground or unground 5*s.* without any fee. And upon certificate returned under the common ſeal of the chief magiſtrate of any place beyond ſea, or under the hands and ſeals of two known Engliſh merchants upon the place, that ſuch corn was there landed, or upon proof that ſuch corn was taken by enemies, or periſhed upon the ſeas, the bond ſhall be delivered up without fee.

Stat. 1 Will. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 24. ſect. 18. Where malt or barley of Engliſh growth ſhall be at 24*s.* the quarter or under, rye at 32*s.* wheat at 48*s.* in Berwick; every perſon who ſhall put in Engliſh ſhipping, the maſter and two thirds of his mariners being their Majeſties ſubjects, any of the corn aforeſaid from the port of Berwick; to export the ſaid corn, and ſhall purſue the methods preſcribed by the 1 Will. & Mar. cap. 12. ſhall have the benefit of the ſaid act.

Stat. 11 & 12 Will 3. cap. 20. ſect. 4. The ſubſidy and all duties payable upon exportation of wheat, rye, barley, malt, beans, peaſe and other corn, ground or unground, bread, biſcuit and meal, ſhall ceaſe.

Stat. 12 & 13 Will. 3. cap. 10. ſect. 23. If the collector of the cuſtoms have not ſufficient in his hands to ſatisfy ſuch money as ſhall be due to any exporter of corn by 1 Will. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 12. ſuch collector ſhall give the perſon demanding ſuch money, without fee, a certificate of what is due to ſuch perſon for the corn exported from ſuch port, certifying to the commiſſioners that he hath not money ſufficient; which certificate

cate being affixed to the debenture for the corn, and produced, the commiſſioners are required to cauſe the monies to be paid in three months by the general receiver, out of monies ariſing out of ſuch duties in the port of London as are chargeable with the ſame.

Stat. 5 Ann. cap. 29. ſect. 10. For all oatmeal and grain called beer or bigg, which ſhall be exported from England, Wales, or Berwick, there ſhall be the like premium given upon exportation, as is to be given by the articles of union upon exportation of oatmeal and beer from Scotland; the merchant bringing a certificate under his hand, containing the quantity of ſuch oatmeal and beer, to the collector of the cuſtoms, and making proof of ſuch certificate by one perſon upon oath, and giving bond in 10*l.* for every ton of oatmeal, and for every forty buſhels of beer, that the ſame ſhall be exported beyond ſea, and not relanded, which premium the merchant ſhall receive of ſuch collector; and upon certificate returned under the common ſeal of the chief magiſtrate in any place beyond ſea, or under the hands and ſeals of two known Engliſh merchants upon the place, that ſuch oatmeal or beer was there landed, the bond ſhall be delivered up without fee.

Sect. 15. Every perſon exporting malt made of wheat ſhall receive of the collectors of the cuſtoms, &c. 5*s.* for every quarter ground or unground.

Stat. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 18. ſect. 3. If the juſtices of peace ſhall neglect to determine the prices of corn at their quarter ſeſſions after Michaelmas and Eaſter yearly, and to certify the ſame to the chief officer and collector of the cuſtoms, reſiding in the ports where foreign corn may be imported, to be hung up in the cuſtom-houſe as is directed by 1 Jac. 2. cap. 19. in ſuch caſe the collector of the cuſtoms at the port of importation is impowered to receive the duties of the corn imported, according to the loweſt price of the ſame ſort of corn mentioned in 22 Car. 2. cap. 13.

Sect. 4. The officers of the cuſtoms ſhall admeaſure all corn whereon there is an allowance payable for exportation; and ſuch admeaſurement ſhall be made by a meaſure containing four Wincheſter buſhels; and if ſuch corn ſhall be brought to be ſhipped in ſacks, the officers are to make choice of two of theſe ſacks, out of any number not exceeding twenty, before the ſame ſhall be put on board, and thereby compute the quantity intended to be ſhipped; and according to ſuch computation the allowance ſhall be paid to the exporter, upon his producing a certificate from the officers of the cuſtoms, atteſting the quantity and quality of the corn ſhipped for exportation.

Sect. 5. The like regulations ſhall be extended to the aſcertaining the prices and quantity of beer or bigg, oatmeal and wheat meal intended for exportation. Provided, that nothing in this act ſhall alter the preſent practice of ſhipping corn from the port of London; but the ſame may be meaſured by ſworn meters, by whoſe certificate the ſearchers or other officers of the cuſtoms are to certify the quantity of corn ſhipped for exportation, as hath been practiſed.

Stat. 5 Geo. 2. cap. 12 ſect. 1. It ſhall be lawful for the juſtices of peace for the ſeveral counties within England, Wales and Berwick, wherein foreign corn ſhall be imported, at their quarter ſeſſions, to give in charge to the grand jury, to make preſentment of the market prices of middling Engliſh corn, of the ſorts mentioned in an act 22 Car. 2. cap. 13.

Sect. 2. Such preſentment ſhall be certified by the juſtices to his majeſty's chief officers of the cuſtoms in every port where ſuch corn ſhall be imported, and be hung up in the cuſtom-houſe.

Sect. 3. The duty of foreign corn imported, ſhall be paid according to the prices contained in ſuch certificates.

Sect. 4. Nothing in this act ſhall prejudice the authority given by the act 1 Jac. 2. cap. 19. to the mayor, aldermen and juſtices of peace in the city of London.

Sect. 5. No warrant, cocket, &c. ſhall be granted for carrying to ſea from any port within England, Wales, and Berwick, to any port of the ſame, any foreign corn after importation thereof; and no perſon ſhall tranſport any foreign corn, or foreign corn mixed with Engliſh, under penalty that all ſuch corn that ſhall be tranſported or laden contrary to this act ſhall be forfeited, and every offender ſhall forfeit 20*s.* for every buſhel of ſuch corn, and the ſhip upon which ſuch corn ſhall be laden ſhall be forfeited; one moiety of which forfeitures ſhall be to the King, and the other moiety to them who will ſue for the ſame; and the maſter and mariners of ſuch ſhip wherein ſuch offence ſhall be committed, knowing ſuch offence, and aſſiſting thereunto, ſhall be impriſoned three months.

Stat. 11 Geo. 2. cap. 22. ſect. 1. If any perſons ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly beat, wound, or uſe any other violence to any perſon, with intent to deter or hinder him from buying of corn: or ſhall unlawfully ſtop or ſeize upon any waggon, cart or other carriage, or horſe loaded with wheat, flour, meal, malt or other grain, in the way to or from any city, market-town or ſea-port, and wilfully and maliciouſly break, cut, ſeparate or deſtroy the ſame, or any part thereof, or the harneſs of the horſes; or ſhall unlawfully take off, drive away, kill or wound any of ſuch horſes, or unlawfully beat or wound the drivers in order to ſtop the ſame; or ſhall ſcatter ſuch wheat, flour, meal, malt or other grain, or ſhall take or carry away, ſpoil or damage the ſame, or any part thereof; every ſuch perſon being thereof convicted before any two juſtices of peace ſhall be ſent to the common gaol or houſe of correction, to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three months, nor leſs than one month; and ſhall by the juſtices be ordered to be once publickly whipped by the keeper of ſuch gaol or houſe of correction, on the firſt convenient market-day, at the market-place, between the hours of eleven and two.

Sect. 2. If any perſon ſo convicted ſhall commit any of the offences aforeſaid a ſecond time, or if any perſon ſhall wilfully and maliciouſly pull, throw down, or otherwiſe deſtroy any ſtorehouſe or place where corn ſhall be then kept in order to be exported; or ſhall unlawfully enter any ſuch place and carry away any corn, flour, meal or grain, or ſhall throw abroad, or ſpoil the ſame; or ſhall unlawfully enter on board any ſhip, barge or veſſel, and wilfully and maliciouſly take and carry away, caſt or throw out therefrom, or otherwiſe ſpoil or damage, any meal, flour, wheat or other grain therein intended for exportation; every perſon ſo offending, and being thereof convicted, ſhall be adjudged guilty of felony, and ſhall be tranſported for ſeven years; and if ſuch offender ſhall return into this kingdom before the expiration of the ſeven years, he ſhall ſuffer death without benefit of clergy.

Sect. 3. No attainder for any offence made felony by this act ſhall work corruption of blood, loſs of dower or diſinheritance of heirs.

Sect. 4. No perſon puniſhed for any offence by this act ſhall be puniſhed for the ſame offence by any other law.

Sect. 5. The inhabitants of every hundred in England, wherein any ſuch offence ſhall be committed, ſhall make ſatisfaction to all perſons, their executors and adminiſtrators, for the damages they ſhall have ſuſtained by any injury done to their properties by any offender againſt this act; the ſum to be recovered not exceeding 100*l.* ſuch damages to be levied by the like methods as are preſcribed in caſe of actions for robberies on the highway, by 27 Eliz. cap. 13. and 8 Geo. 2. cap. 16. except ſo much thereof as relates to giving notice, or making freſh ſuit and hue and cry, or any other matter otherwiſe provided for by this act.

Sect. 6. Provided, that no perſons be enabled to recover damages by this act, unleſs they be themſelves or their ſervants, within two days after damage done, ſhall give notice of ſuch offence to one of the conſtables of the hundred, or to the conſtable, borſholder, headborough or tithingman of the town, hamlet or tithing, in or near which ſuch fact ſhall be committed; and ſhall within ten days after ſuch notice, give in their examination upon oath, or the examination upon oath of their ſervants, vants, preſent at the time of the fact being committed, or having the care of ſuch their properties to which ſuch damage ſhall be done, before any juſtice of peace where ſuch fact ſhall be committed, whether they know the perſons that committed ſuch fact or any of them; and if upon ſuch examination it be confeſſed that they do know the perſons, or any of them, they ſhall be bound by recognizance to proſecute ſuch offenders.

Sect. 7. Where any offence ſhall be committed againſt this act, and any one of the offenders ſhall be apprehended and convicted within twelve months after the offence, no hundred ſhall be ſubject or liable to make ſatisfaction.

Sect. 8. No perſon ſhall be enabled hereby to ſue or bring any action againſt any hundred till after the expiration of one year, nor unleſs the parties ſuſtaining ſuch damage ſhall commence their action within two years after the offence.

Stat. 24 Geo. 2. cap. 56. ſect. 1. The proper officers of the cuſtoms ſhall allow the ſame bounty and no more, upon the exportation of 224lb. weight of wheat meal, or other ground corn whereon there is a bounty, as is allowed upon the exportation of four buſhels of wheat or other corn unground, and ſo in proportion for any greater or leſſer quantity: And in caſe ſuch ground corn be brought to be ſhipt off in ſacks, the proper officers may make choice of and weigh two ſacks out of any number not exceeding twenty ſacks, and ſo in proportion for any greater quantity, before or after the ſame be put on board for exportation, and thereby compute the weight of the ground corn ſo ſhipt for exportation; and the bounty-money upon ſuch wheat meal or other ground corn, ſhall be paid to the exporter for ſo much upon his producing a certificate from the proper officers of the cuſtoms, atteſting the quantity, quality and weight thereof, according to the ſaid computation.

Stat. 26 Geo. 2. cap. 15. ſect. 1. If any debenture for the bounty on corn exported, payable by the general receiver of the cuſtoms, according to 12 & 13 Will. 3. cap. 10. remain unſatisfied more than ſix months next following the day when produced to the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms at London, according to the directions of the ſaid act; intereſt after the rate of three per cent. per ann. ſhall be allowed to the proprietor, his executors, adminiſtrators or aſſigns, to be computed from the end of the ſaid ſix months, until the money due on ſuch debenture with ſuch intereſt be paid, or until money ſufficient be in the hands of the general receiver of the cuſtoms for that purpoſe, and notice be given thereof.

Sect. 2. When money ſufficient ſhall be in the hands of the ſaid general receiver of the cuſtoms for payment of ſuch debentures, as after the expiration of the ſaid ſix months remain unſatisfied, the ſaid general receiver ſhall give notice in writing to be affixed on three or more doors of ſome publick places in the cuſtomhouſe London, and to be advertiſed in the London Gazette, that on a certain day to be limited in the ſaid notice, and on the four days next following ſuch day (ſo as ſix days intervene between the day of ſuch notice and the day ſo limitted, and ſo as Sundays and holydays be not included in ſuch four days) he ſhall be ready to pay the principal and intereſt due on ſuch debentures; after the expiration of which five days, if payment be not demanded, all intereſt on ſuch debentures ſhall ceaſe.

Sect. 3. The principal due on ſuch debentures, with the intereſt due before the expiration of the time limited in the ſaid notice, ſhall at any time afterwards upon demand be paid to the proprietor, his executors, adminiſtrators or aſſigns.

Sect. 4. If at any time after the day prefixed by order of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, for the payment of ſuch debentures, and before the end of ſix months next following the day on which the ſame are produced to them, the general receiver of the cuſtoms have money in his hands ſufficient to ſatisfy the ſame; and the like notice be given that he is ready to make payment; and no demand be made within the time limited in ſuch notice, then no intereſt ſhall be allowed on ſuch debentures.

Sect. 5. All debentures for corn exported payable by the general receiver of the cuſtoms, according to the ſaid act, with the intereſt payable by this act, ſhall be paid in courſe, reſpect being had to the times when ſuch debentures have been produced to the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms, without any other preference.

Sect. 6. When any certificate under the hand of the collector of the cuſtoms of any port, affixed to any debenture for corn exported, certifying that he hath not monies in his hands ſufficient to pay what is due for corn ſo exported, ſhall be produced to the commiſſioners, they ſhall immediately cauſe an indorſement to be made on the ſaid debenture, of the day when the ſame was ſo produced; and ſhall, as ſoon as may be, ſign their order to the ſaid general receiver for payment thereof, and of ſuch intereſt as grows due thereon by this act.

Sect. 7. The ſaid general receiver of the cuſtoms, when he makes payment of the principal due on any ſuch debenture, is to pay alſo without fee the intereſt due thereon by this act, out of ſuch duties as are chargeable with the payment of any money for the exportation of corn.

Sect. 8. Every perſon to whom any money ſhall be payable by virtue of any ſuch debenture, his executors, adminiſtrators or aſſigns, by aſſignment indorſed upon ſuch debenture, may transfer his right therein to any other, and ſuch aſſignee may in like manner aſſign again.

Corody, (Corodium) ſignifies in the Common law, a ſum of money, or allowance of meat, drink and cloathing, due to the King from an abbey, or other houſe of religion, whereof he is the founder, towards the reaſonable ſuſtenance of ſuch a one of his ſervants, being put to his penſion, as he thinketh good to beſtow it on. And the difference between a corody and a penſion ſeemeth to be, that a corody is allowed towards the maintenance of any of the King's ſervants that liveth in the abbey; a penſion is given to one of the King's chaplains, for his better maintenance in the King's ſervice, until he may be better provided of a benefice. Of both theſe, read F. N. B. f. 230, 231, 233. who there ſetteth down all the corodies and penſions certain, that any abbey, when they ſtood, was bound to perform unto the King. There is mention alſo of a corody in Staundf. Prærog. 44. And this appears an ancient law; for in Weſt. 2. cap. 25. it was ordained, that an aſſiſe ſhall lie for a corody: It is alſo apparent in the ſtatute 34 & 35 H. 8. cap. 26. that corodies belonged ſometimes to biſhops from monaſteries. And by the New Terms of the law, that corody may be due to a common perſon, by grant from one to another, or of common right, to him that is a founder of a religious houſe, not holden in frank-almoine, for that tenure was diſcharged of all corodies in itſelf: By which book it appeareth alſo, that a corody is either certain or uncertain, and that it may be for life, for years, in tail, or in fee. See Terms de la Ley.

Corody ſeems to be ancient in our laws; for in Weſt. 2. c. 5. it is ordained, that an aſſiſe ſhall lie for a corody, It is alſo apparent by the ſtatute 34 & 35 Hen. 8. c. 26. that corodies belonged ſometimes to biſhops and noblemen from monaſteries. See 2 Inſt. 630.

Coronatore eligendo, Is a writ, which after the death or diſcharge of any coroner, is directed to the ſheriff out of the Chancery, for the choice of a new coroner, and to certify into the Chancery both the election and name of the party elected, and to give him his oath. See Weſt. 2. cap. 10. and F. N. B. fol. 163. and Reg. Orig. fol. 177.

Coroner, (Coronator, a corona) Is an ancient officer of this land, (for mention is made of his office in King Athelſtan's charter to Beverley, an. 925).) and is ſo called, becauſe he deals wholly for the King and Crown. There are four of them commonly in every county, in ſome fewer, and in ſome counties but one: They are choſen by the freeholders of the ſame by the King's writ, and not made by letters patent. Crompt. Juriſd. f. 126. This officer, by the ſtatute of Weſtm. c. 10. ought to be a ſufficient perſon, that is, the moſt wiſe and diſcreet knight that beſt would and might attend upon ſuch an office. There is a writ in the Regiſt. niſi ſit miles, f. 177. b. whereby it appears, it was ſufficient cauſe to remove a coroner choſen, if he were not a knight, and had not an hundred ſhillings rent of freehold. The Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench is the ſovereign coroner of the whole realm in perſon, i. e. whereſoever he is. Lib. Aſſiſarum, f. 49. Coke, lib. 4. caſe of Wardens, &c. of Sadlers, f. 57. b. The office of a coroner eſpecially concerns the pleas of the crown: but what anciently belonged to him, read at large in Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 5, 6, 7 & 8. Britton, cap. 1. Fleta, lib. 1 cap. 18. and Horn's Mirror, lib. 1. cap. Del Office del Coroners. But more aptly for the preſent times, Staundf. Pl. Cor. lib. 1. cap. 51.

There are alſo certain ſpecial coroners within divers liberties, as well as thoſe ordinary officers in every county; as the coroner of the verge, which is a certain compaſs about the King's court, whom Crompt. in his Juriſd. fol. 102. calls the coroner of the King's houſe; of whoſe authority ſee Coke's Rep. lib. 4. f. 46. By certain charters belonging to ſome colleges and corporations, they are licenſed to appoint their coroner within their own precincts. Of this office ſee alſo 4 Inſt. fol. 271. Smith de Rep. Angl. lib. 2. cap. 21. and Lamb. Eiren. cap. 3. pag. 380. And of the coroner's office in Scotland read Skene, verbo Iter.

The coroner, tho' in original later than the ſheriff, was nevertheleſs very ancient; he was of the two the greater ſervant or officer. His work was to inquire upon view of manſlaughter, and by indictment of all felonies as done contra coronam, which formerly were only contra pacem, and triable only by appeal; as alſo he was to inquire of all eſcheats and forfeitures, and them to ſeize; he was alſo to receive appeals of felonies, and to keep the rolls of the Crown pleas within the county. It is evident he was an officer in Alfred's time; for that King put a judge to death for ſentencing one to ſuffer death upon the coroner's record, without allowing the delinquent liberty of traverſe. This officer was made alſo by election of the freeholders in their county-court, as the ſheriff was, and from amongſt the men of chiefeſt rank in the county, and ſworn in their preſence, but the King's writ lead the work. Bacon of Government 66.

His name is derived a corona, and ſo called becauſe he is an officer of the crown, and hath conuſance of ſome pleas which are called placita coronæ. 2 Inſt. 31.

Coroners in every county, and ſheriffs were ordain'd to keep the peace, when the earls diſmiſſed themſelves of the cuſtody of the counties and bailiffs in place of hundreds. 2 Inſt. 31. cites The Mirror, c. 1 ſ. 3.

1 Who may be a coroner, how elected, and in what places he hath juriſdiction.

By ſtat. Weſtm. 1. c. 10. made 3 Ed. 1. it is enacted, "That through all ſhires ſufficient men ſhall be choſen to be coroners, of the moſt loyal and wiſe knights, which know, will, and may beſt attend upon ſuch offices, and which lawfully ſhall attach and preſent pleas of the crown."

In ancient time none under this degree were choſen. 2 Inſt. 32, 176. The ſtatute of Merton, made before this act, ſuppoſes them to have been knights. 23 Aſſ. pl. 7.—And in the writ De coronatore exonerando, his not being a knight is mentioned as a ſufficient cauſe for the diſcharge of a coroner. Regiſter 177. F. N. B. 164. 4 Inſt. 271. But as the chief intent of this ſtatute was to prevent the chooſing of perſons of mean ability, it ſeems the deſign of it is ſufficiently anſwered, by chooſing men of ſubſtance and credit; and as the conſtant uſage for ſeveral ages paſt has been accordingly, it ſeems to be no objection at this day, that the perſon choſen is not a knight. 2 Leon. 160. 2 Hawk. P. C. 42, 43.

By ſtat. 14 Ed. 3. cap. 10. it is enacted, That no coroner be choſen unleſs he have land in fee ſufficient in the ſame county, whereof he may anſwer to all manner of people.

By ſtat. 28 Ed. 3. cap. 6. it is enacted, "That all coroners of the counties ſhall be choſen in the full counties, by the commons of the ſame counties, of the moſt meet and lawful people that ſhall be found in the ſame counties, to execute the ſaid office; ſaved always to the King and other lords, who ought to make ſuch coroners, their ſeignories and franchiſes."

By the commons] But none but freeholders have votes. F. N. B. 164. S. P. C. 19. 2 Hawk. P C. 43. for none but ſuch are ſuitors to the county court. 22 Inſt. 99. 2 Rol. Abr. 121.

Saved to the King, &c. their franchiſes] Such franchiſe may be claimed by the King by preſcription; but it is a privilege of ſo high a nature, that no one can well intitle to it otherwiſe than by grant from the crown. Co. Lit. 144. a. 2 Hawk. P. C. 44.

Although they are choſen by the county, yet it muſt be purſuant to the King's writ iſſuing out of and returnable into Chancery; but as their authority proceeds from the election, it does not determine by the demiſe of the King: Hence alſo, if they prove inſufficient to anſwer the fines and duties incumbent on them, the county, as their ſuperior, ſhall anſwer for them. 22 Hawk. P. C. 43. 2 Inſt. 174.

The writ for the election of a coroner firſt recites the death or diſcharge of one or more former coroners, and then commands the ſheriff to cauſe one other, or more, as the caſe is, to be choſen in a full county-court, by the aſſent of the county, according to the form of the ſtatute in that caſe made and provided; who having taken his oath (which is adminiſtred to him by the ſheriff) in the uſual manner, may do all things which belong to the office of a coroner, &c. and then it concludes with commanding the ſheriff to certify to the court the name of the perſon choſen. 2 Hawk. P. C. 43.

A common merchant being choſen a coroner was removed, for that he was communis mercator. 2 Inſt. 32.

A coroner hath no juriſdiction of offences committed on the open ſeas, between the high and low water mark when the tide is in, but he hath an authority over offences committed in ſuch places when the tide is out. 3 Inſt. 113. 5 Co. 107. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 45.

By ſome it is laid down as a rule, that he may inquire of a felony committed on the arms of the ſea where a man may ſee from the one ſide to the other. Owen 124. Moor 892. H. P. C. 171. S. P. C. 51. And by others his power is confined to ſuch parts of the ſea, where a man ſtanding on the one ſide, may ſee what is done on the other. Fitz. Coron. 399. 4 Inſt. 140. 2 Rol. Abr. 169.

At Common law, the coroner or the county could not intermeddle with offences done within the verge of the King's court; nor the coroner of the hoſtel or King's houſe, with thoſe committed in the county without the verge; which proved inconvenient, by reaſon of the removal of the King's court before an inqueſt could be taken. 2 Inſt. 550. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 45. And therefore by ſtatute of Articuli ſuper chartas, cap. 3. It is ordained that from thenceforth in caſes of the death of men, whereof the coroner's office is to make view and inqueſt, it ſhall be commanded to the coroner of the county, that he, with the coroner of the King's houſe, ſhall do as belongeth to his office, and inroll it, &c.

If an indictment, taken before the coroner of the county, and the coroner of the King's houſe, does not appear, on the face of it, to have been of an offence within the verge, it is ſufficient; for it ſhall not be ſaid to be good, as taken before the coroner of the county; and void as taken before the other: for it was taken intirely between them both, and perhaps the coroner of the houſe was the principal actor, and the jury moſtly ſwayed by his directions. 4 Co. 46. 2 Inſt. 550. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 45.

If the ſame perſon be coroner of the county, and alſo of the King's houſe, an indictment of death within the verge, taken before him as coroner both of the county and of the King's houſe, is good. 4 Co. 46. 3 Inſt. 134. 2 Leon 160.

By ſtat. 33 Hen. 8. cap. 12. it is enacted, "That all inquiſitions upon the view of perſons ſlain within any of the King's palaces or houſes, or any other houſe or houſes, at ſuch time as his Majeſty ſhall appear to be there demurrant or abiding in his royal perſon, ſhall be taken by the coroner for the time being of the King's houſhold, without any adjoining or aſſiſting of another coroner of any ſhire within this realm, by the oath of twelve or more of the yeomen, officers of the King's houſhold, returned by the two clerks controllers, the clerks of the check, and the clerks marſhals, or one of them for the time being of the ſaid houſhold; to whom the ſaid coroner of the ſame houſhold ſhall direct his precept, which coroner ſhall be from time to time appointed by the lord great maſter, or lord ſteward for the time being; and that the ſaid coroner ſhall certify under his ſeal, and the ſeals of ſuch perſons as ſhall be ſworn before him, all ſuch inquiſitionsbefore the ſaid lord maſter, or lord ſteward."

2. Of his duty and authority in taking inquiſitions; and of traverſing and quaſhing ſuch inquiſitions.

No coroners ſhall hold pleas of our crown. Mag. Chart. c. 17.

Before this ſtatute, the coroner had the ſame authority he now hath, in caſe any man come to a violent or untimely death, ſuper viſum corporis, &c. abjurations and out-outlawries, &c. appeals of death by bill, &c. This authority of the coroner, viz. the coroner ſolely to take an indictment ſuper viſum corporis, and to take an appeal, and to enter the appeal, and the court remains to this day; but he can proceed no further either upon the indictment or appeal, but to deliver them over to the juſtices; and this is ſaved to them by the ſtatute of W. 1. cap. 10. And this appears by all our old books, book-caſes, and continual experience. 2 Inſt. 32. Ibid. 176. S. P.

By ſtat. 4 Ed. 1. commonly called De officio coronatoris, it is enacted, "That the coroner, upon information, ſhall go to the places where any be ſlain, or ſuddenly dead, or wounded, and ſhall forthwith command four of the next towns, or five or ſix to appear before him in ſuch a place; and when they are come hither, the coroner upon the oath of them, ſhall inquire in this manner, that is to wit, if they know where the perſon was ſlain, whether it were in any houſe, field, bed, tavern, or company, and who were there; likewiſe it is to be inquired who were culpable, either of the act, and who were preſent, either men or women, and of what age ſoever they be (if they can ſpeak, or have any diſcretion) and how many ſoever be found culpable by inquiſition, in any the manners aforeſaid, they ſhall be taken and delivered to the ſheriff, and ſhall be committed to the gaol; and ſuch as be found and be not culpable, ſhall be attached until the coming of the juſtices, and their names ſhall be written in the coroner's rolls: If it fortune any ſuch man to be ſlain, which is found in the fields, or in the woods; firſt, it is to be inquired, whether he were ſlain in the ſame place or not; and if he were brought and laid there, they ſhall do as much as they can to follow their ſteps that brought the body thither, whether he were brought upon a horſe or in a cart; it ſhall be inquired alſo, if the dead perſon were known, or elſe a ſtranger, and where he lay the night before; and if any be found culpable of the murder, the coroner ſhall immediately go into his houſe, and ſhall inquire what goods he hath, and what corn he hath in his grange; and if he be a freeman, they ſhall inquire how much land he hath, and what it is worth yearly; and further, what corn he hath upon the ground; and when they have thus inquired upon every thing, they ſhall cauſe all the land, corn and goods to be valued in like manner, as if they ſhould be ſold incontinently; and thereupon they ſhall be delivered to the whole townſhip, which ſhall be anſwerable before the juſtices for all; and likewiſe of his freehold, how much it is worth yearly, over and above the ſervice due to the lord of the fee, and the land ſhall remain in the King's hands until the lords of the fee have made fine for it; and immediately upon theſe things being inquired, the bodies of ſuch perſons being dead or ſlain, ſhall be buried; in like manner, it is to be inquired of them that be drowned or ſuddenly dead, and after ſuch bodies are to be ſeen, whether they were ſo drowned or ſlain, or ſtrangled, by the ſign of a cord tied ſtrait about their necks, or about any of their members, or upon any other hurt found upon their bodies; whereupon they ſhall proceed in the form aforeſaid; and if they were not ſlain, then ought the coroner to attach the finders, and all other in company.

"Alſo all wounds ought to be viewed, the length, breadth and deepneſs, and with what weapons, and in what part of the body the wound or hurt is, and how many be culpable, and how many wounds there be, and who gave the wound; all which things muſt be inrolled in the roll of the coroners; alſo horſes, boats, carts, &c. whereby any are ſlain, that properly are called deodands, ſhall be valued and delivered unto the towns, as as before is ſaid."

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute, the following points ſeem to be agreed upon;

That the ſtatute being wholly directory, and in affirmance of the Common law, the coroner is not thereby reſtrained from any branch of his power, nor excuſed from any part of his duty not mentioned in it, which was incident to his office before; and therefore though the ſtatute mentions only inquiries of the death of perſons ſlain, drowned or ſuddenly dead, yet the coroner ought alſo to inquire of the death of thoſe who die in priſon. 2 Hawk. P. C. 47 Fitz. Coron. 421. 3 Inſt. 52, 91. Bro. Coron 168. S. P. C. 51.

An inquiſition of death, by the oaths of lawful men of the county, is ſufficient, without ſaying that they were of the next towns; ſo that it appear at what place, and by what jurors, by name, it was taken, and that ſuch jurors were ſworn. 2 Hawk. P. C. 47.

It is clearly agreed, that the inqueſt ſhall be taken on the view of the dead body, although the ſtatute be ſilent in this matter; and that an inqueſt otherwiſe taken by the coroner, is void. 2 Hawk. P. C. 48.

If a dead body, whereon an inqueſt ought to be taken, be interred, or ſuffered to putrify, before the coroner hath viewed it, the gaoler or townſhip ſhall be amerced. 2 Hawk. P. C. 494.

Alſo it hath been reſolved, that a coroner may lawfully within convenient time, as the ſpace of fourteen days after the death, take up a dead body out of the grave, in order to view it, not only for the taking of an inqueſt, where none hath been taken before, but alſo for the taking of a good one, where any inſufficient one hath been taken before. 2 Hawk. P. C. 48.

It is not neceſſary that the inquiſition be taken in the very ſame place where the body was viewed; and it hath been reſolved, that an inquiſition taken at D. on the view of the body lying dead at L. may be good. 2 Hawk. P. C. 48.

A coroner cannot inquire of any acceſſories after the fact; and therefore it hath been reſolved, that an indictment of J. S. before a coroner, for having received and comforted one who had been guilty of a murder, is void. —But he may make inquiry of the acceſſories before the fact; and alſo may inquire whether any ſo guilty have fled for the ſame; for which they forfeit all their goods and chattels. 2 Hawk. P. C. 48.

A coroner may, and ought to inquire of all the circumſtances of the party's death, and alſo of all things which occaſioned it; and therefore it is ſaid, that if it be found by his inqueſt, that the perſon deceaſed was killed by a fall from a bridge into a river, and that the bridge was out of repair, by the default of the inhabitants of ſuch a town, and that thoſe inhabitants are bound to repair it, the townſhip ſhall be amerced. 2 Hawk. P. C. 48.

The law gives ſuch high credit to an inquiſition of death, found before a coroner, that anciently the judges would not receive a verdict, acquitting a perſon of the death of a man found againſt him by the coroner's inqueſt, unleſs the jury finding ſuch acquittal, had alſo found what other perſon did the fact, or by what other means the party came to his death; becauſe it appeared by the coroner's view, on record, that a perſon was killed: But it is agreed, that the judges cannot compel a jury to make ſuch farther inquiry on an acquittal of a defendant from any other indictment, becauſe it doth not in ſuch manner appear of record by any ſuch inquiſition that a perſon is dead: And it ſeems hard to reconcile the ſaid practice of compelling a jury to find ſuch farther matter with reaſon in any caſe, unleſs it appear in the courſe of the evidence by what other means not mentioned in the indictment, the party loſt his life; for it ſeems hard, that a jury ſhould be in any caſe compelled to find a matter upon their oaths, which they have no evidence to ſupport; and therefore if it no way appear to them, by what other means the death in queſtion was occaſioned, it ſeems difficult to maintain that it ſhall not be ſufficient for them to declare ſo to the court. 2 Hawk. P. C. 49, 50.

Alſo it hath been formerly held, that if a perſon were ſlain, and upon the coroner's inqueſt ſuper viſum corporis, it were found that J. S. fled, though J. S. were afterwards acquitted both of the felony and flight, yet he forfeited his goods; for the coroner's inqueſt is ſo ſolemn, that it is not traverſable; alſo when the goods are once lawfully veſted in the King by that inqueſt, the property of them cannot be diveſted. But this opinion is harſh and unreaſo-reaſonable, that a man ſhall be liable to forfeit all his goods, which may perhaps be all that he is worth, by an inqueſt taken in his abſence, without either hearing him, or giving him an opportunity of defending himſelf. 2 Hawk. P. C. 53, 54.

The coroner's record of an abjuration, or of the confeſſion of breaking priſon, or of the confeſſion of a felony by an approver, eſtops the party, not only from traverſing the confeſſion, but alſo from alledging that it was taken from him by dureſs, &c. And it is ſaid that if the party plead that he is not the ſame perſon, he ſhall be concluded by the coroner's recording that he is the ſame perſon; yet in theſe caſes it ſeems, that the judge may in diſcretion, to inform his conſcience, take an inquiry from the people living next the place, of the whole circumſtances of the matter. See 2 Hawk. P. C. 53.

If it be found by a coroner's inqueſt, that a murder was committed in ſuch a town, and that the murderer eſcaped untaken, the townſhip cannot traverſe ſuch eſcape, becauſe it makes them only liable to an amercement, & de minimis non curat lex. 2 Haw. P. C. 53. S. P. C. 34.

Alſo it is ſtrongly holden in ſome books, that an inqueſt of ſelf-murder, found before a coroner, cannot be traverſed; but the contrary opinion being alſo holden by books of as great authority, and ſeeming alſo to be more agreeable to the general tenor of the law in other caſes, it ſeems to be the better opinion that ſuch inqueſt being moved into the King's Bench by certiorari, may be there traverſed by the executor or adminiſtrator of the perſon deceaſed; or in caſe the coroner's inqueſt find him to have been a lunatic, by the King or the lord of the manor. 2 Hawk. P. C. 54.

If a coroner appear to have been corrupt in taking an inqueſt, it ſeems that a melius inquirend' ſhall go to the ſpecial commiſſioners, who ſhall proceed not on view, but upon teſtimony, and the coroner ſhall have nothing to do with ſuch inqueſt; but where his inqueſt is quaſhed for want of form only, he ſhall take a new one in like manner, as if he had taken none before. 2 Hawk. P. C. 54.

Inquiſition was taken before the coroner in Oxfordſhire, upon the death of the Earl of B. and being remov'd into B. R. it was mov'd to quaſh it, for that it was præſentatum exiſtit per juramentum A. B. C. naming the reſt of the jury, but omitted (proborum & legalium hominum) nor did it ſay Quod ſeipſum percuſſit. Dodderidge and Haughton held it inſufficient for both reaſons, and though the indictment is virtute officii by the coroner, yet he is bound to the rule of the law in the execution of his office, and cannot impanel outlaws and villains, and the words in the writ commanding the ſheriff to inquire per ſacramentum proborum & legalium hominum, ſhew that the law intended of what condition it ſhould be. Palm 282. Paſch. 20 *Jac. Inquiſition before the coroner found, that S. H. paſſing a bridge between W. and B. in com. H. by reaſon of a breach in the bridge fell into the river, where he was drowned, and that the bridge is in the vill. of, &c. and in magno decaſu by default of the inhabitants there; it was held, that the coroner may find ſuch a nuſance as occaſions the death of a man, and that the townſhip ſhall be amerced thereupon; but becauſe it was not found that the town was bound to repair this bridge, the indictment as to that was quaſhed. Allen 51. Hill. 23 *Car. M. B. of Gray's Inn, being drowned in a ducking-pond, the coroner's inqueſt found him felo de ſe; but upon ſeveral affidavits produced that he was diſtemper'd in his head, the court was moved, that the inquiſition might not be filed, eſpecially ſince the coroner would not ſuffer any witneſſes to be examined in the behalf of the adminiſtrator of B. to prove that he was diſtemper'd in mind, and for that reaſon they granted a new trial; but becauſe the inqueſt could not be ſuper viſum corporis, it was ordered that the inqueſt ſhould be made by ſix of the former jury, of which there were 18; that 14 of them had found him felo de ſe but 4 diſſented; ſo 3 of thoſe 4, and 3 more of thoſe who had found him guilty, and 6 new jurors were appointed, and that they ſhould have counſel and witneſſes on both ſides, which ought to be done by all coroners, ſince the law has ſo great a regard to inquiſitions taken before them, that they are not traverſable; and it was inſiſted for the adminiſtrator, that this new inquiſition might be taken before the Chief Juſtice, who admitted, that he could do it in any place, he being Chief Coroner of England, but would not grant that part of the motion, becauſe it was the ignorance of the coroner not to hear any witneſſes againſt the King, and not any miſbehaviour of him in his office, which was the occaſion of this complaint; thereupon the jury proceeded before the coroner, and upon this ſecond inqueſt he was found felo de ſe. 2 Sid. 90, 101, 144. Hill 1658. Berkley's caſe.

It was moved to amend an inquiſition taken by a coroner in York ſuper viſum corporis; the court order'd that the coroner attend ſuch a day, and amend it in court, in all points but the matter of the verdict. Sid. 225. pl. 18. Mich. 16 Car. 2. B. R. The King v. Harriſon.

Where a coroner *omits to inquire, B. A motion was made to quaſh an inquiſition taken before the coroner's ſuper viſum corporis of one that had killed himſelf, which found that he was felo de ſe; but the court were informed, that the party was non compos mentis, and that there had been an undue practice by the coroner, of both which great proof was made, and upon that it was quaſhed. Vent. 352. Mich. 32 Car. 2 B. R. Anon'.

The defendant was felo de ſe, and the coroner's inqueſt found him a lunatic, and now, Mr. Jones moved for a melius inquirendum, but it was denied, becauſe there was no defect in the inquiſition; but the court told him, that if he could produce an affidavit that the jury did not go according to their evidence, or of any indirect proceedings of the coroner, then they would grant it: but it was afterwards quaſhed, becauſe they had omitted the year of the King. 3 Mod. 80. Paſch. 1 Jac. 2. *B. If a coroner's inqueſt is quaſhed, he muſt take a new one ſuper viſum corporis, but if a melius inquirendum is granted upon a male ſe geſſit of the coroner, the new inquiry muſt be before the ſheriffs or commiſſioners, upon affidavits, and not ſuper viſum corporis, becauſe none but a coroner can inquire ſuper viſum corporis, and he is not to be truſted again. 1 Salk. 190. Mich. 1 *W. & M. in B. If the ſheriff does not ſerve the replevin at the pluries, proceſs ſhall iſſue to the coroners, and there the ſheriff has loſt his power to ſue any proceſs in it after, by the beſt opinion. Br. Office and Off. pl. 43. cites 43 Ed. 3. 26.

Where the ſheriff does nothing in replevin at the alias, nor at the pluries, proceſs ſhall iſſue to the coroners to attach the ſheriff, and to make replevin. Br. proceſs, pl. 21. cites 43 Ed. 3. 26.

Note: that proceſs directed to the coroners to ſerve, this ought to be ſerved by all the coroners; but where they are to give judgment, the judgment of two of them ſuffices where they are four; for in the one caſe they are judges, and in the other only miniſters. Br. proceſs, pl. 172. cites 14 H. 4. 34.

Proceſs ſhall not be made to the coroners where there is no ſheriff, or where the ſheriff is dead; for the ſheriff is an officer immediate to the court, for proceſs ſhall not iſſue to the coroners unleſs in ſpecial caſes; as where the plaintiff ſays, that the ſheriff is his couſin, and prays proceſs to the coroners, and the other does not deny it, there proceſs ſhall iſſue to the coroners, and otherwiſe not. *Br. If a ſheriff of a county in a city be in contempt, the attachment is to go to the coroner, and not to the mayor or chief officer of the corporation in ſuch city or town; and if the offender be out of his office, the attachment ſhall be directed to the new ſheriff. 2 Vent. 216. Mich. 2 *W. & M. in C. In the caſe of two coroners, if the one be challenged, the other muſt act, and yet both make one officer. 1 Salk. 152. pl. 2. Paſch. 3 W. & M. in B. R. in caſe of The King and Queen v. Warrington.

By the Common law, the coroner might, without the concurrence of any other, receive an appeal of felony or mayhem, on the plaintiff's finding ſufficient pledges to the ſheriff for the proſecution; but it being provided by Weſtm. 1. cap. 10. that the ſheriff ſhall have counter-rolls with the coroner, it ſeems that no appeal, ſince that ſtatute, is well commenced before the coroner, unleſs the ſheriff be preſent to make a counter-roll of the proceedings; yet the coroner ſeems ſtill to be the only judge. 2 Hawk. P. C. 50, 51.

A coroner cannot receive a bill of appeal of an offence done out of the county, becauſe there can be no trial thereof by the county; but he may receive the appeal of an approver, or take the abjuration of one who confeſſes a felony done in any county; becauſe after ſuch confeſſions there is no need of any trial. 2 Hawk. P. C. 51.

A coroner may certainly award proceſs, till the exigent on a bill of appeal before him, and ſuch proceſs ſhall be awarded by him only, and not by him and the ſheriff jointly, and he may proceed thereon till outlawry; but ſince Magna Charta, by which it is enacted, cap. 17. That no ſheriff, conſtable, coroner, or other bailiff of the King, ſhall hold pleas of the crown, he cannot proceed to the trial of the appellee. 2 Hawk. P. C. 51.

An appeal before the coroner may be removed into the King's Bench or Chancery by certiorari directed to the coroners and ſheriff, but not by one directed to the ſheriff only.

The coroner may receive the appeal of an approver, for an offence in the ſame or in a different county; and if the appellee be in the ſame county, he may award a proceſs againſt him to the ſheriff, till it come to the exigent; but if the appellee be in a foreign county, the coroner cannot award proceſs againſt him but muſt leave it to the juſtices of gaol-delivery, or others before whom the appeal is afterwards recorded. 2 Hawk. P. C. 52.

A coroner may take the confeſſion and abjuration of a felon, and alſo the confeſſion of a felony by an approver. And as to abjuration, it is to be obſerved, that at the Common law, if a perſon accuſed of any felony, (except ſacrilege) whether in the ſame or any other county, for which he was liable to judgment of death, and not charged with treaſon, had fled to any church or church-yard, and within forty days confeſſed himſelf guilty before the coroner, and declared all the particular circumſtances of the offence, and thereupon taken the oath in that caſe provided, (the ſubſtance whereof was, that he abjured the realm, and would depart as ſoon as poſſible, at the port which ſhould be aſſigned him, and never return without leave from the King, &c.) he ſaved his life, if he obſerved the terms of the oath, by going with all convenient ſpeed, the neareſt way to the port aſſigned, &c. but he was attainted of the felony by ſuch abjuration without more, and conſequently forfeited his lands, goods, &c. And now by 21 Jac. 1. cap. 28. it is enacted, That no ſanctuary, or privilege of ſanctuary, ſhall be admitted or allowed in any caſe. 2 Haw. 52.

If a coroner is in a languiſhing condition, or ſo broken with old age that he cannot exerciſe the office, or becomes paralytick, it is good cauſe to remove him. 8 Rep. 41. b. in a nota of the Reporter.

If a coroner be diſcharged of his office by falſe ſuggeſtion, by the King's writ directed to the ſheriff, then the party may come into the Chancery, and require a commiſſion to inquire of the ſaid falſe ſuggeſtion, and to return the inquiry before the King into the Chancery, and if it be found to be falſe, then the King may make a ſuperſedeas to the ſheriff, that he do not remove the coroner if, &c. and if he be removed, that he ſuffer him to exerciſe his office as he did before. F. N. B. 164. (D).

If any coroner be ſo far engaged in any other public buſineſs in the county, that he cannot have leiſure enough to attend the office of a coroner, or if he be choſen verderor of a foreſt, or if he have not ſufficient lands in the ſame county whereon to live according to his ſtate and degree; or if he be diſabled, either by old age or any inveterate diſeaſe, as the palſy, or the like, to execute his office as he ought; and, as ſome ſay, if he follow any common trade; he may be diſcharged by the writ De coronatore exonerando, which being directed to the ſheriff, after a recital of the particular cauſe of the diſcharge of ſuch coroner, commands him to cauſe another to be choſen in his room. *F. By ſtat. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. c. 10. it is enacted, That no coroner demand or take any thing of any man to do his office, upon pain of great forfeiture to the King. See 2 Inſt. 176.

But it is enacted by 3 Hen. 7. cap. 1. That a coroner have for his fee, upon every inquiſition taken upon the view of a body ſlain, 13*s.* 4*d.* of the goods and chattels of the ſlayer and murderer, if he have any goods; and if he have no goods, of ſuch amercements, as ſhall fortune any townſhip to be amerced for the eſcape of the murderer, &c.

But the coroners endeavouring to extend this ſtatute to perſons ſlain by miſadventure, it was enacted by the 1 Hen. 8. cap. 7. That upon a requeſt made to a coroner to come and inquire upon the view of any perſon ſlain, drowned, or otherwiſe dead by misfortune, the ſaid coroner ſhall diligently do his office, without taking any thing therefore, upon pain to every coroner that will not endeavour himſelf to do his office, (as afore is ſaid) or that taketh any thing for doing his office upon every perſon dead by miſadventure. for every time forty ſhillings.

Stat. 25 Geo. 2. cap. 29. ſect. 1. Whereas the office of coroner is a very ancient and neceſſary office: And whereas by an act made in the third year of the reign of King Hen. VII. reciting, that coroners had not, nor ought to have any thing by the law for their office doing; which oft time had been the occaſion that coroners had been remiſs in doing their office; it was ordained, that a coroner ſhould have for his fee, upon every inquiſition taken upon the view of the body ſlain, 13*s.* 4*d.* of the goods and chattels of him that is the ſlayer and murderer, if he have any goods; and if he have no goods, of ſuch amerciaments as ſhould fortune any townſhip to be amerced, for the eſcape of the murderer: And whereas the ſaid fee of 13*s.* 4*d.* due only upon an inquiſition taken upon the view of the body ſlain or murdered, and payable only out of the goods and chattels of the ſlayer or murderer, or out of the amerciaments impoſed upon the townſhip, if the murderer eſcape, is not an adequate reward for the general execution of the ſaid office: Therefore for every inquiſition, not taken upon view of a body dying in gaol, the coroner ſhall have 20*s.* and alſo 9*d.* for every mile he ſhall be compelled to travel from his uſual place of abode to take ſuch inquiſition; to be paid by order of the juſtices in ſeſſions out of the county rates; for which order no fee ſhall be paid.

Sect. 2. And for every inquiſition taken on view of a body dying in priſon, he ſhall be paid ſo much not exceeding twenty ſhillings, as the juſtices in ſeſſions ſhall allow, to be paid in like manner.

Sect. 3. And for every inquiſition on a body ſlain 13*s.* 4*d.* payable by the ſaid act of 3 H. 7. out of the goods and chattels of the ſlayer or murderer.

Sect. 4. Coroners taking more than their fees here limited ſhall be deemed guilty of extortion.

Sect. 5. But no coroner of the King's houſhold, and of the verge of the King's palaces, nor any coroner of the admiralty, or of the county palatine of Durham; nor of the city of London and borough of Southwark, nor any franchiſes belonging to the ſaid city; nor of any city, town or franchiſe, not contributing to the county rates, or within which ſuch rates have not been uſually aſſeſſed, ſhall be intitled to any benefit of this act: but they ſhall have ſuch fees and ſalaries as they were allowed before this act, or as ſhall be allowed by the perſons by whom they have been appointed.

Sect. 6. If any coroner, not appointed by an annual election or nomination, or whoſe office is annexed to any other office, ſhall be convicted of extortion for taking more than his lawful fees, or of wilful neglect of his duty or miſdemeanor in his office; the court may adjudge him to be amoved from his office; and thereupon, if he ſhall have been elected by the freeholders, a writ ſhall iſſue for removing him, and electing another in his ſtead; and if he hath been appointed by the lord of any liberty or franchiſe, or in any other manner than by the freeholders, the perſon intitled to nomination, ſhall on notice of ſuch judgment of amoval, nominate another perſon in his ſtead.

Corporal oath. See Oath.

Corporation, (Corporatio,) A body politick, or a body incorporate; ſo called, becauſe the perſons are made into a body, and of capacity to take and grant &c. And this body politick or incorporate may commence and be eſtabliſhed three manner of ways, viz. by preſcription, by letters patent, or by act of parliament. Every body politic or corporate is either eccleſiaſtical or lay: Eccleſiaſtical is either regular, as abbots, priors, &c. or ſecular, as biſhops, deans, archdeacons, parſons, vicars, &c. lay, as mayor, commonalty, bailiff, and burgeſſes, &c. alſo every body politic or corporate is either elective, preſentative, collative, or donative. And again, it is either ſole or aggregate of many, which laſt is by the Civilians called collegium or univerſitas. Coke on Litt. fol. 250. and 3 Inſt. fol. 202.

Corporation ſpiritual, and of dead perſons in the law, is where the corporations conſiſt of an abbot and convent, which had beginning of the King and the pope, when he had to do here; corporation ſpiritual, and of able perſons in the law, is where it conſiſts of a dean and chapter, a maſter of a college or hoſpital; and this had beginning from the King only.

Corporation temporal by the King, Is where there is a mayor and commonalty. Corporation temporal by authority of the Common law, is the parliament, conſiſting of the King the head; the lords ſpiritual and temporal, and commons the body.

Corpo-

Corporations are of ſeveral natures; all of them inſtituted for the better government of a people combined together, and living under a regular ſyſtem of laws. 10 Co. 29. b. 31 b.

Of corporations ſome are ſole, and ſome are aggregate; a ſole corporation conſiſts of one perſon only as the King; ſo a clergyman, by being made a biſhop, prebend, parſon or vicar, is ſaid to be a ſole corporation. 1 Rol. Abr. 512.

A corporation aggregate is an artificial body of men, compoſed of divers conſtituent members ad inſtar corporis humani, the ligaments of which body politick or artificial body are the franchiſes and liberties thereof, which bind and unite all its members together; and the whole frame and eſſence of the corporation conſiſt therein. 4 Mod. 54. Carth. 217. 1 Show. 280.

Alſo corporations are ſaid to be eccleſiaſtical or lay; of eccleſiaſtical corporations ſome were called Regular, as abbots, priors, &c. others Secular, as biſhops, deans, &c. Co. Lit. 250. a. 3 Inſt. 202.

Of lay corporations ſome are ſaid to be for general government; as thoſe of mayor and commonalty, &c. Some for a particular purpoſe; as for the advancement of learning, charity, or ſome particular trade or branch of buſineſs: Theſe receive their ſanction from the crown, and muſt be by the King's licence; though a private perſon may be founder, and may give them laws to which they muſt ſquare themſelves in their future conduct. 1 Bac. Abr. 500.

1. Who may make a corporation.
2. Of the names of corporations.
3. Statutes concerning corporations.

1. Who may make a corporation.

The King by virtue of his prerogative, is the only perſon that can erect either an eccleſiaſtical or lay corporation. 10 Co. 33 b.

But alſo the King may give power to a common perſon to name the corporation, and the perſons it is to conſiſt of; but when he hath ſo done, this corporation does not take its eſſence from the common perſon, but from the King. 10 Co. 33 b.

Alſo by the 3 Eliz. cap. 5. Every perſon ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee-ſimple, may by deed inrolled in the high court of Chancery erect an hoſpital or houſe of correction, which ſhall be incorporated, and have perpetual ſucceſſion, and ſhall be viſited by ſuch perſons as ſhall be nominated by the founders thereof, &c. See 2 Inſt. 720.

In the creating a corporation, the law does not ſeem to require any ſet form of words to be made uſe of as incorporo, fundo, erigo, &c. but any words equivalent will be ſufficient. 10 Co. 30. Style 198.

The King may grant to the commonalty of D. that they ſhall be incorporated by the name of Mayor, &c. and that they may chooſe a mayor, &c. and this is a good corporation, though the election of a mayor is in futuro; for there is a diverſity between a power, liberty, franchiſe, or other thing newly created, which may take effect in futuro, and an eſtate or intereſt which none can take without a preſent capacity. 10 Co. 27. b. 31. a. b.

A patent procured by ſome few perſons only, ſhall not bind the reſt, nor can the inhabitants of a town be incorporated without the aſſent of the major part of them. 1 Rol. Rep. 226. 2 Brownl. 100.

As it is the King's charter that creates corporations, ſo ſuch charter may mould and frame them as it ſhall think fit. 3 Mod. 13.

One corporation may be made out of another; but it muſt be by the King's charter; therefore where the mayor and commonalty of London preſcribe to make another corporation in the city, though their cuſtoms are confirmed by parliament, yet it was held not to be good, without the King's charter. 10 Co. 31. 49 Ed. 3, 4. 9 Aſſ. 8. Moor 584. 1 Sid. 291. 2 Keb. 52, 63, 88. 1 Salk. 192.

2. Of the names of corporations.

The names of corporations are given of neceſſity; for the name is as it were, the very being of the conſtitution; for though it is the will of the King that erects them, yet the name is the knot of their combination, without which they could not perform their corporate acts; for it is no body to plead and be impleaded, to take and give, until it hath got a name. 1 Leon. 163. Gilb. Hiſt. C. B. 225.

The names of corporations are uſually taken, firſt, From the perſons of which they conſiſt; ſecondly, From the uſe and deſign of their being; thirdly, From the names of the patrons that firſt procured their inſtitution; fourthly, From the place they reſide in; fifthly, From the names of ſaints. See Gilb. H. C. B. 226, 227.

But though a corporation muſt have a name, yet that muſt be underſtood to be either expreſſed in the patent, or implied in the nature of the thing; as if the King ſhould incorporate the inhabitants of Dale with power to chuſe a mayor annually, though no name be given, yet it is a good corporation by the name of Mayor and commonalty. So the city of Norwich is incorporated to be a mayor and ſheriffs by the charter of Henry the Fourth, and are called Mayor, ſheriff and commonalty. 1 Salk. 191.

Alſo the King may incorporate a town by name, and after by another name, and then they ſhall uſe their name according to their ſecond corporation; and yet they ſhall continue their poſſeſſions they had before by the other name. 21 E. 4. 59. Fitz. Grant, 30. S. C.

So a corporation may be incorporated by one name, and power given them to ſue and purchaſe land by another name. 1 Jones 261.

The college of phyſicians were incorporated by the name of The preſident, college or commonalty of the faculty of phyſick, and afterwards in the patent it was granted, that the preſident of the college ſhould ſue and be ſued in behalf of the college. The college brought an action againſt Dr. Salmon upon the ſtatute for practiſing without licence, under the ſeal of the college, and declared by the name of The preſident and college, or by the name of The preſident of the college; and the court allowed to ſue by either, and ſo were the precedents; for though it was a rare inſtance that the corporation ſhould be incorporated by one name, and have leave to ſue by another name; yet when it is ſo, it is very natural and proper. 5 Mod. 327.

Although the names of corporations are not merely arbitrary ſounds, yet if there be enough ſaid to ſhew that there is ſuch an artificial being, and to diſtinguiſh it from all others, the body politick is well named, tho' the words and ſyllables are varied from; and this the rather in grants which are to have a favourable conſtruction. 10 Co. 125. Gouldſ. 122.

So if the name be expreſſed by words ſynonymous, it is ſufficient; as if a college be inſtituted by the name of Guardianus & ſcholares domus ſive collegii ſcholarium de Merton, and they make a leaſe by the name of Cuſtos ſcholares, it is good. 10 Co. 125.

If there be a corporation founded by the name of Mayor and burgenſes burgi dom' regis de Lynn Regis, and an obligation is made to them by the name of Mayor and burgenſes de Lynn Regis, without ſaying burgi dom' regis, it is well enough; for the parties are ſufficiently expreſſed; and all boroughs are founded by the King. 10 Co. 125.

If a houſe be founded by the name of Miniſter Dei pauperis Domus, and a leaſe be made by the name of Miniſter pauperis domus Dei, this is well enough; for the ſame deſign is ſpecified by both names. Hob. 124.

But if a houſe be founded by the name of Guardianus & ſcholares domus ſive collegii ſcholarium de Merton; and a leaſe be made by them by the name of Guardianus & ſcholares domus ſive collegii de Merton, it is a material variance of the name, ſince they have not expreſſed the deſign of the houſe, which is a ſubſtantial part of the name. 10 Co. 125.

But if a college be inſtituted by the name of Aula ſcholarum reginæ, to be governed by a provoſt, and they are confirmed by the King, by the name of Præpoſitus & ſcholares aulæ reginæ, and they make a grant of an advowſon by that name, this is good; for that college would never have a name according to the words of the firſt charter, for then it would be a ſole corporation, which is contrary to the general convenience of ſuch a body; for the name would be Præpoſitus ſcholarum aulæ reginæ, which cannot be intended, and the word ſcholares is not required, as in the former caſe; and the placing it where it is confirms the eſtabliſhment, and this confirmation of the King, and common appellation, are good interpreters of the original intent of the name. 11 Co. 20.

Edward the Fourth incorporated the deans and canons of Windſor, by the name of The King's Free Chapel of St. George the Martyr; and in the time of Philip and Mary, made a leaſe by the name of The Deans and Canons of the King's and Queen's Free Chapel, &c. This was held a material miſtake of the name; for it takes its name from the founder that is here miſtaken, and the name of a different perſon ſubſtituted in his room. 1 Co. 124.

If a corporation be founded by the name of The dean and chapter of the cathedral church in Oxford, and they make a leaſe by the name of The dean and chapter of the cathedral church in the univerſity of Oxford, this is well enough; for the place of the ſituation is well and ſufficiently ſhewn. Poph. 57.

If the prior of St. Michael of Coventry makes a leaſe by the name of The dean of Coventry, this is good; if they had granted an annuity or corody, and the name of the ſaint had been omitted. 10 Co. 124.

If there be an immaterial addition, this doth not hurt; for if the preſident of ſcholars of Corpus Chriſti college in Oxford, make a leaſe by the name of Preſident and ſcholars of Corpus Chriſti college in com' Oxon, this is good; for utile per inutile non vitiatur. Cro. Eliz. 816.

In deviſes, if the name of the corporation be miſtaken, yet if there be words ſufficient to ſhew that the teſtator could only mean and intend ſuch a one, it will be ſufficient; as a deviſe to George biſhop of Norwich, when his name is John, &c. 11 Co. 21. 1 Leon. 307. Dyer 106. Perk. 8.

But if a deviſe be to the abbot of St. Peter where it is really the abbot of St. Paul, the deviſe is void; for here the ſaint's name is the only ſpecification of the party in the deviſe, which is miſtaken. Hob. 33. 19 Hen. 8. 8.

A parſon muſt be impleaded by chriſtian and ſurname, and not John, parſon of D. &c. but in other ſole corporations, the chriſtian name only is ſufficient; as John biſhop of Canterbury, Thomas abbot of D. &c. 2 Inſt. 666. Yelv. 34, 49.

But where the corporation is aggregate of many capable perſons, as Mayor and commonalty, Dean and chapter, &c. none of them in pleading, are named by their proper chriſtian and ſurnames; and the reaſon is, becauſe in the firſt place, the death of the individual is a good plea in abatement, for a new ſucceſſor comes in his place, that was not party to the former writ; but bodies aggregate are immortal and invariable; and therefore the parties to the firſt writ are always the ſame. 2 Inſt. 666. Skin. 2.

3. Statutes concerning corporations.

By ſtat. 1 Ed. 3. ſt. 2. c. 9. Corporations are to enjoy their franchiſes as uſual.

By ſtat. 15 Hen. 6. c. 6. They are to be reſtrained by juſtices of the peace from making unreaſonable by-laws.

Stat. 19 Hen. 7. c. 7. No maſters, wardens and fellowſhips of crafts, nor rulers of guilds or fraternities, ſhall make any acts, nor execute any made, in diſheritance or diminution of the prerogative of the King nor of other, nor againſt the common profit of the people; except the ſame acts be examined and approved by the Chancellor, Treaſurer, or Chief Juſtices of either bench, or three of them, or before both the juſtices of aſſize in their circuit; upon pain of forfeiture of 40*l.* and none of the ſame bodies corporate ſhall make any acts or ordinances to reſtrain any perſon to ſue to the King or any of his courts for due remedy, nor put nor execute any penalty or puniſhment for ſuch ſuit, upon pain of forfeiture of 40*l.*

By ſtat. 28 H. 8. c. 5. Corporations are not to make any acts or ordinances, except the ſame be approved by the Chancellor, &c.

Stat. 33 Hen. 8. c. 27. Every order and ſtatute made or to be made by any founder of any hoſpital or other corporation, whereby the grant or election of the governor of ſuch hoſpital or corporation, with the aſſent of the more part of ſuch of the ſame hoſpital or corporation as ſhall have voice of aſſent to the ſame, ſhould be hindred by any one or more, being the leſſer number of ſuch corporation, ſhall be void; and all oaths for the obſervance of any ſuch order or ſtatute ſhall be void. And no perſons of any ſuch hoſpital or corporation ſhall be compelled to take any oath for the obſerving of any ſuch order or ſtatute; upon pain of every perſon giving ſuch oath to forfeit 5*l.* the one moiety to the King, and the other moiety to any that will ſue.

By ſtat. 34 & 35 Hen. 8. c. 22. Their power of inrolling bargains and ſales by huſband and wife is confirmed.

Stat. 2 & 3 Phil. & Mar. c. 18. ſect. 2. All commiſſions to be granted to any city or town corporate, not being a county in itſelf, for the keeping of their peace, and delivery of the gaols, ſhall be good in law, notwithſtanding the granting of any like commiſſions to any commiſſioners for the ſhire.

By ſtat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 14. ſect. 10. The King may grant commiſſions to ſurvey corporations.

By ſtat. 7 Jac. 1. c. 5. 21 Jac. 1. c. 12. Mayors, &c. of towns corporate being ſued, may plead the general iſſue, and have double coſts.

Stat. 13 Car. 2. ſtat. 2. c. 1. ſect. 12. No perſon ſhall be placed or choſen in any office of mayor, alderman, recorder, bailiff, town-clerk, common-council man or other office of magiſtracy, place, truſt or imployment, concerning the government of any city, corporation, borough, cinque port and their members, or other port town; that ſhall not have, within one year next before ſuch choice, taken the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the rites of the church of England: And every ſuch perſon ſhall likewiſe take the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy at the time when the oath for the due execution of the office ſhall be adminiſtred. And in default thereof every ſuch placing and choice is declared to be void.

By ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 20. ſect. 8. Officers having the return of members of parliament, ſhall not be choſen a ſecond time.

Stat. 5 Geo. 1. c. 6. ſect. 3. No perſon who ſhall be placed or choſen in any of the offices mentioned in ſtat. 13 Car. 2. ſtat. 2. cap. 1. par. 4. ſhall be removed by the corporation, or otherwiſe proſecuted for their omiſſion to take the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper within one year next before ſuch choice; nor ſhall any incapacity or penalty be incurred, unleſs ſuch perſon be ſo removed, or ſuch proſecution be commenced, within ſix months after ſuch perſons being placed or elected into ſuch office, and that in caſe of a proſecution, the ſame be carried on without wilful delay.

By ſtat. 6 Geo. 1. c. 18. ſect. 18. Acting as corporate bodies to the prejudice of trade is prohibited.

Stat. 11 Geo. 1. c. 4. ſect. 1. If in any city, borough or town corporate, in England, Wales, and Berwick, no election ſhall be made of the mayor, bailiff or chief officer, on the day, or within the time, appointed by charter or uſage; or ſuch election being made, ſhall afterwards become void; the corporation ſhall not be diſſolved: but where no election ſhall be made, the members of ſuch city, &c. who have a right to vote, or be preſent at, or to do any other act neceſſary to the compleating of ſuch election, are required to aſſemble in the town-hall or uſual place of meeting, on the day next after the expiration of the time within which ſuch election ought to have been made, unleſs ſuch day be Sunday, and then on Monday following, between ten in the morning and two in the afternoon, and proceed to the election of a mayor, &c. and and do every act neceſſary to the compleating ſuch election; and if upon ſuch day of meeting hereby appointed, the mayor or other officer who ought to have held the court, ſhall be abſent, then ſuch other perſon having a right to vote, being the neareſt then preſent, ſhall hold the court, and have the ſame power as belongs to the mayor, &c.

Sect. 2. If in any city, &c. no election be made of the mayor, &c. on the day, or within the time appointed by charter or uſage, and no election ſhall be made, purſuant to the directions before preſcribed; or ſuch election being made ſhall afterwards become void; it ſhall be lawful for the court of King's Bench, on motion made to award a mandamus, requiring the members of ſuch city, &c. having a right to vote, to aſſemble themſelves on a day and time to be prefixed in ſuch writ, and to proceed to election, or to ſignify to the court good cauſe to the contrary; and thereupon to cauſe ſuch proceedings to be made as in other caſes of mandamus for the election of officers of corporations; and of the day and time appointed by the writ, publick notice in writing ſhall, by ſuch perſon as the ſaid court ſhall appoint, be affixed in the market-place, or ſome other publick place, ſix days before the day appointed; and ſuch officer ſhall preſide in the aſſembly as ought to have preſided at the election of ſuch mayor, &c. in caſe the election had been made on the day herein preſcribed.

Sect. 3. In boroughs and towns corporate, where the mayor or other chief officer is to be nominated or ſworn at a court-leet or ſome other court, and it happens that no due nomination or ſwearing of ſuch mayor, &c. ſhall be made, it ſhall be lawful for the court of King's Bench, upon motion to award a mandamus, requiring the lord, or his ſteward or other officer, to hold ſuch court-leet or other court, at ſuch time as ſhall be judged proper by the court of King's Bench, or to ſignify to the court good cauſe to the contrary, and thereupon to cauſe ſuch proceedings to be made as in other caſes of mandamus for holding of any court; and of the time appointed by ſuch writ for holding ſuch court, publick notice in writing ſhall, by ſuch perſon as the court of King's Bench ſhall appoint, be affixed in the market or ſome other publick place, ſix days before the day appointed; and where a nomination of perſons in order to the election of any mayor, &c. is to be made at ſuch court-leet or other court; after ſuch nomination made, all other acts neceſſary to ſuch election ſhall be done at ſuch aſſembly, as the ſame ought to have been done if ſuch election had been made on the day next after the expiration of the time preſcribed by charter or uſage.

Sect. 4. The mayor or other chief officer, elected purſuant to this act, ſhall take the oaths required at the time of his admiſſion, before the officer who preſides at ſuch election; and ſhall have the ſame powers as any mayor, &c. of the ſame city, &c. elected on the day fixed by charter or uſage.

Sect. 5. No ſuch election ſhall be valid, unleſs as great a number of perſons having right to be preſent and vote therein ſhall be preſent and concur, as would have been neceſſary in caſe the ſame had been made within the time appointed by charter or uſage, ſaving only that the preſence of the mayor or other chief officer ſhall not be neceſſary.

Sect. 6. If any mayor, bailiff, or other chief officer of any city, &c. ſhall voluntarily abſent himſelf from, or knowingly and deſignedly hinder, the election of any other mayor, &c. within the time appointed by charter or uſage, being lawfully convicted, he ſhall ſuffer impriſonment ſix months, and be diſabled to hold any office belonging to the ſame corporation.

Sect. 8. Nothing herein ſhall invalidate any charter accepted by any city, &c. nor make good the election of any officer or member againſt whom judgment of ouſter ſhall have been given upon any information in nature of a quo warranto, or whoſe election ſhall have been avoided on any writ of mandamus, on or before the laſt day of Michaelmas term 1724.

Sect. 9. Where any writ of mandamus ſhall iſſue out of the King's Bench, in any of the ſaid caſes, the perſons to whom ſuch writ ſhall be directed, ſhall make their return to the firſt writ. Corruption of blood, (Corruptio ſanguinis) Is an infection growing to the ſtate of a man attainted of felony or treaſon; for as he loſeth all to the Prince, or other lord of the fee, as his caſe is; ſo his iſſue cannot be heirs to him, or to any other anceſtor, of whom they might have claimed by him. And further, if he were noble, or a gentleman before, he and his children are made ignoble. But if the King will pardon the offender, it will cleanſe the corruption of the blood of thoſe children, which are born after the pardon, and they may inherit the land of their anceſtor purchaſed at the time of the pardon, or afterwards; but ſo cannot they who were born before the pardon. But there are divers limitations even in treaſon, made by ſtatutes which ſave corruption of blood, though a man be attainted. 27 Ed. 3. cap. 77. 13 H. 7. cap. 17. 5 Eliz. cap. 1. 11. 18 Eliz. cap. 1. 6. 14. 31 Eliz. cap. 4. 1 M. cap. 12. 1 Jac. cap. 12. Corſelet, Is a French word ſignifying a little body, in Lat. corpuſculum; we generally uſe it for an armour to cover the whole body, 4 & 5 P. & M. cap 2. wherewith pikemen, commonly ſet in the front and flanks of the battle, are armed, for the better reſiſtance of the enemies aſſaults, and the ſurer guard of the gunners placed behind, who were more ſlightly armed for their ſpeedier advancing and retreating to fire. Cowell, ed. 1727.

Corſned bread, (from the Sax. Cors, execratio, and nedde, compulſus,) Was a kind of ſuperſtitious trial, uſed by our Saxons, by a piece of barley bread, firſt execrated by the prieſt, and then offered to the ſuſpected guilty perſon, to be ſwallowed by way of purgation: For they believed a perſon if guilty, could not poſſibly ſwallow a morſel ſo accurſed; or if he did, it would choak him. The form was thus: We beſeech thee, O Lord, that he who is guilty of this theft, when the exorciſed bread is offered to him in order to diſcover the truth, that his jaws may be ſhut, his throat ſo narrow that he may not ſwallow, and that he may caſt it out of his mouth, and not eat it. Du Freſne. Theſe pieces of bread were conſecrated or devoted by the prieſt, to ſuch religious uſes, of which the old form, or exorciſmus panis hordeacei vel caſei ad probationem veri, is extant in Lindenbrogius, p. 107. In the laws of King Canute, c. 6. Si quis altari miniſtrantium accuſetur, & amicis deſtitutus ſit, cum ſacramentales non habeat, vadat ad judicium quod Anglice dicitur corſned, & fiat ſicut Deus velit, niſi ſuper ſanctum corpus domini permittatur, ut ſe purget. From which, and ſome other authorities, it is conjectured that this corſned was at firſt the very ſacramental bread, conſecrated and received with ſolemn adjuration, and with devout expectance it would prove mortal to thoſe who had dared to ſwallow it with a lie a lie in their mouth: Preſuming on the continued judgment of ſickneſs and death to unworthy receivers, mentioned by the apoſtle, 1 Cor. xi. 29, 30. till poſſibly the biſhops and clergy were afraid to proſtitute the communion bread to ſuch raſh and conceited uſes: but however to indulge the people in their ſuperſtitious fancies, and beloved cuſtoms, they did allow them to practiſe the ſame judicial rite, in eating ſome other morſels of bread, or cheeſe, bleſt or curſt to the like uſes. There is a famous ſtory of the perfidious Godwyn Earl of Kent, in the time of Edw. Confeſſ. who abjuring the death or murder of the King's brother, did appeal at laſt to his corſned or imprecated bread, which as a judgment of his ſolemn perjury, ſtuck in his throat, and choaked him. This purgation ſtory is thus in ſhort told by a contemporary writer, Ingulph.——Cum Godwinus comes in menſa regis de Nece ſui fratris impeteretur, ille poſt multa ſacramenta, tandem per buccellam deglutiendam abjuravit, & buccella guſtata continuo ſuffocatus interiit——This among other rude and barbarous ways of purgation, was often condemned, and by degrees aboliſhed. And yet we have ſtill ſome remembrance of this horrid cuſtom in ſome of our uſual phraſes of adjuration; as I will take the ſacrament upon it,——may this bread be my poyſon, may this bit be my laſt, &c.

Coſſepreſent, (from the Fr. Corps preſente, i. e. the body preſent) Signifies a mortuary, an. 21 H. 8. cap. 6. and the reaſon why it was thus termed ſeems to be, that where a mortuary after any man's death became due, the body of the beſt or ſecond beſt beaſt was, according to the cuſtom offered or preſented to the prieſt, and carried along with the corps.

Coſts. There were no coſts at Common law; but if the plaintiff did not prevail he was amerced pro falſo clamore; if he did prevail, then the defendant was in miſericordia, for his unjuſt detention of the plaintiffs right, and therefore was not puniſhed with the expenſa litis under that title. But it being thought exceeding hard, that the plaintiff, for the coſts which he was out of pocket in obtaining his right, could not have any amends; therefore by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, made 6 Ed. 1. cap. 1. by which in an aſſiſe, &c. damages, upon the inſufficiency of the diſſeiſor, are given againſt him that is found tenant, and damages are given in a writ of mort d'anceſtor, aiel, &c. reciting that whereas before that time, damages were not taxed but to the value of the iſſues of the land, it is provided the demandant may recover againſt the tenant the coſts of his writ, together with his damage; and that this act ſhall hold place in all caſes where the party is to recover damages. 1 New Abr. 511.

1. In what cases the plaintiff shall have no more costs than damages.

By stat. 43 Eliz. cap. 6. it is enacted, "That if upon actions personally to be brought in any of her Majesty's courts at Westminster, not being for any title nor interest of lands, nor concerning the freehold, nor inheritance of any lands, nor for any battery, it shall appear to the judges of the same court, and so signified or set down by the justices before whom the same shall be tried, that the debt or damages to be recovered there in the same court, shall not amount to the sum of forty shillings or above; that in every such case the judge and justices, before whom any such action shall be pursued, shall not award for costs to the party plaintiff any greater or more costs than the sum of the debt or damages so recovered shall amount unto, but less at their discretions."

The intent of this statute was to reduce all actions where the debt or damages were under 40*s.* into the court-baron, or other county courts, whereby it was thought the profits of landlords would be increased, and the costs of defendants diminished; but the statute failed of effecting that purpose; for it does not put it merely upon the damages given by the jury under 40*s.* (for it would be hard when the jury gave too little damages, to have punished the plaintiff with the loss of his costs) but leaves it to the judge to certify the damages proved were not above 40*s.* in approbation of the verdict; but the judges though it extremely hard to certify, in order to make plaintiffs lose their costs where they had prevailed, unless the action were exceedingly impertinent and vexatious; and therefore seldom made use of this power. Gilb. Hist. C. B. 261.

By the 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 9. For preventing trivial suits contrary to the intention of 43 Eliz. commenced in the courts at Westminster, [extended to the principalities of Wales, and counties palatine, by stat. 11 & 12 W. 3. c. 9.] it is enacted, for the making the said law effectual, "That in all actions of trespass, assault and battery, and other personal actions, wherein the judge at the trial shall not find, and certify under his hand, upon the back of the record, that an assault and battery was sufficiently proved, or that the freehold or title of the land mentioned in the plaintiff's declaration, was chiefly in question, if the jury find damages under 40*s.* the plaintiff shall not recover more costs than the damage, and if more costs given, the judgment shall be void, &c. and the defendant may have his action for such vexatious suit."

This statute seems to have pursued the same purpose with that of the 43 Eliz. but neither of them repealed the statute of Gloucester, (for a statute cannot be repealed by implication); nor did the statute of Car. 2. take away costs de incremento, except where the judge's certificate was necessary, and that was only where the trespass was done to the freehold, or to things fixed to the freehold, and the damages were under 40*s.* and in battery, where the damages were under such sum; for the wording of the statute is, that there should be no costs in battery, trespass, or other personal actions, unless the judge certify the battery to be proved, or the title of the freehold to have come in question; hence these words in the act, other personal actions, were construed to extend no farther than to cases where the judge was permitted to certify, which was only in battery and actions of trespass, relating to the freehold, and things fixed to the freehold. 1 New Abr. 512.

Therefore in trover, or action of trespass de bonis asportatis of goods and chattels not fixed to the freehold, the plaintiff shall have his full costs, though the damages be found to be under 40*s.* and though the judge does not certify pursuant to the statute. 1 Salk. 208.

So if an action of trespass to the freehold, and an action of trespass De bonis asportatis, are joined, and the plaintiff recovers in general upon both counts, he hath no need of a certificate to obtain his costs; and therefore costs De incremento shall go upon the statute of Gloucester. 2 Vent. 48.

As in trespass for breaking his close, and impounding his cattle, the plaintiff shall have his full costs; for the impounding his cattle is an injury to his personal property, in which no right of freehold can come in question. 3 Mod. 39.

So in trespass for chasing his sheep, and that he the defendant ad loca ignota eos abduxit & elongavit, after verdict for the plaintiff, and 2*d.* damages, he had his full costs principally upon the word abduxit, which is the same in signification with asportavit. Carth. 225. 1 Salk. 208.

So in trespass quare vi & armis the defendant flung down certain stalls of the plaintiff's, in a market-place, on Not guilty, and verdict for the plaintiff, but damages under 40*s.* the court held that the plaintiff, without the judge's certificate, should have full costs; for this is a trespass done to a chattel in which no title of freehold can come in question; and though they had been fixed to the freehold, yet if the defendant had carried them away, it would be out of the statute. Raym. 487. 2 Jones 232.

But where the trespass is merely to the freehold; as where in trespass the plaintiff declared, that the defendant Herbam depascendo, & solum & fundum carucis subvertendo, & in solo fodiendo, & cum terra inde project' aquæ cursum suum obstupand', per quod clausum suum inundat' fuit, &c. the plaintiff shall have no more costs than damages. 1 Salk. 193. 5 Mod. 74, 316.

So in trespass Quare clausum fregit, & quendam taurum personæ ignotæ fugavit, per quod the plaintiff's gooseberry bushes, necnon quinque perticas (Angl. poles) in eodem clauf. erect', officiat' & existent' fregit, laceravit & spoliavit, after verdict, and one penny damages, the court held that the taking and pulling up the poles was not such an asportation as amounted to conversion; and that though the trespass began by chasing the bull, yet the damage is laid to be done to the freehold; and so the title thereof might well come in question. Trin. 11 Geo. 1. in C. B. 1 New Abr. 513.

So in trespass for breaking and entring the plaintiff's house, and keeping him out of possession and use of the said house, with a continuando for a month, per quod he was put to great expence to gain the possession of his house, and in the mean time lost the profit and use thereof; after verdict for the plaintiff, and 2*s.* 6*d.* damages, the court held that this was a plain trespass quare clausum fregit within the statute, and that the per quod was only matter of aggravation. Mich. 12 Geo. 1. in C. B, 1 New Abr. 514.

Also if there be a trespass upon the freehold, and likewise a count laid de bonis asportat', in order to put in for costs merely, if there be no evidence of the carrying away of the goods, by which the defendant is acquitted as to that, though he is found guilty as to the trespass to the freehold, yet if the damages be under 40*s.* the plaintiff shall recover no more costs than damages. 1 Vent. 180, 195.

It is farther to be observed in the construction of the statute 22 & 23 Car. 2. that there is no need of a judge's certicertificate, where by the pleading it appears, that the title or intereſt of the land is in queſtion; as in an action for eating his graſs, per quod his common was impaired; ſo if the defendant juſtifies by any thing that brings the title of the land in queſtion, the judge need not certify to intitle the plaintiff to his coſts. 1 New Abr. 514.

Alſo by the 8 & 9 Will. 3. cap. 10. For preventing wilful and malicious treſpaſſes, it is enacted, "That in all actions of treſpaſs, to be commenced and proſecuted from and after the 25th of March 1697, in any of his Majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter, wherein at the trial of the cauſe at Weſtminſter it ſhall appear and be certified by the judge, under his hand, on the back of the record, that the treſpaſs upon which any defendant ſhall be found guilty, was wilful and malicious, the plaintiff ſhall recover not only his damages, but his full coſts of ſuit, any former law to the contrary notwithſtanding.

If an action be commenced in an inferior court, and removed by habeas corpus or certiorari, into the courts at Weſtminſter, the plaintiff ſhall have full coſts, although the damages are under 40*s.* 4 Mod. 378.

By the ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. cap. 16. it is enacted, "That in caſes for ſlanderous words to be ſued or proſecuted in the courts of Weſtminſter, or other courts that have power to hold plea thereof, after the end of that ſeſſion of parliament, if the damages are found to be under 40*s.* the plaintiff ſhall recover no more coſts than damages."

By this act the power of the judges is taken away, as to giving coſts de incremento, where the damage is under 40*s.* but it is ſaid to have been the reſolution of the judges, that though the court cannot increaſe the coſts, yet the jury are not bound by the ſtatute, and therefore they may give 10*l.* coſts where they give but 10*d.* damages. 1 Salk. 207.

In the conſtruction of this ſtatute it has been held, that it extends not to actions for ſlander of title, for that is not properly ſlander, but a cauſe of damage; and the ſlander intended by the ſtatute is to the perſon. Cro. Car. 141. Ley 82. Palm. 530.

So if for calling Thief, and cauſing him to be arreſted, &c. and the defendant is found guilty of both, it is not within the act. Cro. Car. 163, 307.

So when the plaintiff brought an action on the caſe for ſlanderous words ſpoken of his wife, viz. That ſhe was a whore, per quod ſhe loſt ſuch and ſuch cuſtomers, after verdict for the plaintiff, and damages under 40*s.* the court held that the plaintiff ſhould have full coſts; for it is not the words, but the ſpecial damage which is the cauſe of action in this caſe; and it was incumbent on the plaintiff to prove the ſpecial damage, otherwiſe the action would not have laid for the words. 2 Salk. 206.

By ſtat. 22 & 23 Car. 2. cap. 9. it is enacted, "That all actions of aſſault and battery, wherein the judge at the trial ſhall not find and certify, under his hand, upon the back of the record, that an aſſault and battery was ſufficiently proved, if the jury find damages under 40*s.* the plaintiff ſhall not recover more coſts than damage."

On this part of the ſtatute it has been held, that if an aſſault be only proved, the plaintiff ſhall have no more coſts than damage. 1 Vent. 256. 2 Lev. 102.

That if a man brings treſpaſs for beating his ſervant, per quod ſervitium amiſit, it is not an action of aſſault and battery within the ſtatute, but is an action founded upon the ſpecial damage, in which there ſhall be full coſts. 1 Salk. 206.

In treſpaſs of aſſault and battery, wounding and impriſonment; as alſo for entring and breaking his houſe, and opening the doors of the ſaid houſe, and breaking three locks and three bars belonging to the ſaid doors; the defendant pleaded Not guilty to all except the impriſonment, and for that he juſtifies; and on the trial the juſtification was found for the defendant, and the Not guilty for the plaintiff, and the damages 2*s.* 6*d.* and held by the court that the damages being under 40*s.* he could not have full coſts for the battery, becauſe the judge had not certified the battery to be well proved; neither could he have full coſts for breaking the houſe, becauſe this is a treſpaſs relating to the freehold. 1 New Abr. 515.

2. Where coſts ſhall be doubled or trebled.

It ſeems agreed, that where damages were before recoverable, and a ſtatute increaſes them to double or treble the value, the plaintiff ſhall recover his double or treble damages; and coſts alſo, as parcel of the damages, ſhall be trebled. 10 Co. 116. a. 2 Inſt. 289. Hard. 152. Carth. 297.

But where a new ſtatute gives either ſingle, double or treble damages, where there were no damages recoverable before, there no coſts ſhall be allowed, becauſe the party can have nothing more than ſuch new ſtatute has already given, and that is damages only; for the ſtatute of Glouceſter cannot operate to add coſts to what is given by a ſubſequent ſtatute; becauſe the new ſtatute muſt be conſtrued from itſelf, which gives damages only. 2 Inſt. 285. 1 Salk. 205. Carth. 297.

In an action for forcible entry, upon 8 Hen. 6. cap. 9. which gives treble damages, the plaintiff ſhall recover not only treble damages but treble coſts alſo. 2 Inſt. 289. 10 Co. 116. 1 Vent. 22.

But in an action of debt upon the ſtatute of 1 & 2 Phil. & M. cap. 12. of diſtreſſes, upon the branch of the ſtatute by which the 5*l.* and treble damages are given to the party grieved, for driving a diſtreſs out of the hundred, no coſts are to be given, becauſe the ſtatute by intendment, gives treble damages in lieu of the whole. 2 Inſt. 289. Kelw. 269. 1 Rol. Abr. 516.

So in an action of waſte againſt tenant for life or years, by the ſtatute of Glouceſter, cap. 6. the place waſted, and treble damages ſhall be recovered, but no coſts, becauſe no action lay againſt them at the Common law; but the action and damages are merely given. 1 Rol. Abr. 517. Dyer 159. 10 Co. 116.

But in waſte againſt tenant in dower, &c. treble damages and coſts alſo ſhall be recovered, becauſe an action of waſte lay againſt them at the Common law; and for the waſte, damages ſhould have been recovered. 2 Inſt. 289.

In an action upon the ſtatute of 2 Hen. 4. cap. 1. for ſuing before the Admiral for a thing done upon the land, in which caſe the ſtatute gives to the plaintiff double damages, without ſpeaking of any coſts, yet he ſhall recover as well double coſts as double damages. 1 Rol. Abr. 517. Dyer 159. 10 Co. 116.

So on the ſtatute 2 W. & M. cap. 5. by which treble damages and coſts are given againſt the reſcouſor of a diſtreſs for rent, in an action upon the caſe for a reſcous upon the ſtatute, the plaintiff ſhall recover treble coſts, as well as treble damages; for the damages are not given by the ſtatute, but increaſed, and an action upon the caſe lay for a reſcous at Common law. 1 Salk. 205. Carth. 321.

Cottage, (Sax. Cote) Is a little houſe for habitation, without land belonging to it. Wood, b. 3. c. 3.

Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 7. ſect. 1. For the avoiding of the great inconveniencies which are found by experience to grow by erecting and building of great numbers and multitude of cottages, which are daily more and more increaſed in many parts of this realm; Be it enacted, That no perſon ſhall within this realm of England make, build or erect, or cauſe to be made, builded or erected, any manner of cottage for habitation or dwelling, unleſs the ſame perſon do aſſign and lay to the ſaid cottage or building four acres of ground at the leaſt, to be accounted according to the ſtatute or ordinance De terris menſurandis, [that is, after 16½ feet to the pole. 2 Inſt. 737.] being his or her own freehold and inheritance, lying near to the ſaid cottages, to be continually occupied and manured red therewith ſo long as the ſaid cottage ſhall be inhabited; upon pain that every ſuch offender ſhall forfeit to our ſovereign lady the Queen's Majeſty, her heirs and ſucceſſors 10*l.* of lawful money of England for every ſuch offence.

Sect. 2. And every perſon that ſhall willingly uphold, maintain, and continue any ſuch cottage hereafter to be erected, converted, or ordained for habitation or dwelling, whereunto four acres of ground as aforeſaid, ſhall not be aſſigned and laid to be uſed and occupied with the ſame, ſhall forfeit to our ſovereign lady, the Queen's Majeſty, her heirs and ſucceſſors 40*s.* for every month any ſuch cottage ſhall be by him or them upholden, maintained and continued.

Sect. 3. Provided alſo, that there ſhall not be any inmate, or more families or houſholds than one, dwelling or inhabiting in any one cottage made or to be made or erected; upon pain that every owner and occupier of any ſuch cottage, placing or willingly ſuffering any ſuch inmate or other family than one, ſhall forfeit and loſe to the lord of the leet, within which ſuch cottage ſhall be, the ſum of ten ſhillings of lawful money of England, for every month that any ſuch inmate or other family than one, ſhall dwell or inhabit in any cottage as aforeſaid. And that all and every lord and lords of leet and leets, and their ſtewards within the precinct of his and their leet and leets, ſhall have full power and authority within their ſeveral leets, to enquire and to take preſentment by the oath of jurors, of all and every offence and offences in his behalf, and upon ſuch preſentment had or made to levy by diſtreſs to the uſe of the lord of the leet, all ſuch ſums of money as ſo ſhall be forfeited; and moreover that it ſhall be lawful for the lord of every ſuch leet, where ſuch preſentment ſhall be made, to recover to his own uſe any ſuch forfeiture, by action of debt in any of the Queen's Majeſty's courts of record, whereunto no eſſoin, protection or wager of law ſhall be allowed.

Sect. 4. And all juſtices of aſſiſes and juſtices of peace in their open ſeſſions, and every lord within the precinct of his leet and none others, ſhall have full power and authority within their ſeveral limits and juriſdictions, to inquire of, hear and determine all offences contrary to this preſent act, as well by indictment as otherwiſe, by preſentment or information, and to award execution for the levying the ſeveral forfeitures aforeſaid by fieri facias, elegit, capias, or otherwiſe, as the caſe ſhall require.

Sect. 5. This ſtatute ſhall not extend to any cottage, in any city or town corporate, or ancient borough, or market-town, nor to any cottages for the habitation of workmen in mineral works, coal-mines, quarries, or delfs, or in the making brick, tile, lime, or other coals; ſo as the ſame cottages be not above one mile diſtant from the works, and be uſed only for the habitation of workmen.

Sect. 6. This act ſhall not extend to any cottage within a mile of the ſea, or upon the ſide of any navigable river where the admiral ought to have juriſdiction, ſo long as no perſon ſhall therein inhabit, but a ſailor, or man of manual occupation, for making, furniſhing or victualling of any veſſel uſed to ſerve on the ſea; nor to any cottage in any foreſt, chaſe, warren or park, for ſo long as no perſon ſhall therein inhabit, but an under-keeper or warrener; nor to any cottage heretofore made, ſo long as no other perſon ſhall therein inhabit, but a common herdman or ſhepherd, for keeping the cattle of the town, or a poor, lame, ſick, or aged, or impotent perſon; nor to any cottage, which upon complaint to the juſtices of aſſize, or to the quarter ſeſſions, ſhall by their order be decreed to continue.

Stat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2. par. 5. enacts, That it ſhall and may be lawful for the churchwardens and overſeers, or the greater part of them, by the leave of the lord or lords of the manor, whereof any waſte or common within their pariſh, is or ſhall be parcel, and upon agreement before with him or them made in writing under the hands and ſeals of the ſaid lord or lords, or otherwiſe according to any order to be ſet down by the juſtices of peace in the ſaid county at their general quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, by like leave and agreement of the ſaid lord or lords in writing, under his or their hands and ſeals; to erect, build, and ſet up in fit and convenient places of habitation in ſuch waſte or common, at the general charges of the pariſh, or otherwiſe of the hundred or county as aforeſaid, to be taxed, rated, and gathered in manner before expreſſed, convenient houſes of dwelling for the ſaid impotent poor. And alſo to place inmates, or more families than one in one cottage or houſe, on an act made in the 31ſt year of her Majeſty's reign, intitled, An act againſt the erecting and maintaining of cottages, or any thing therein contained to the contrary notwithſtanding; which cottages and places for inmates ſhall not at any time hereafter be uſed or employ'd to or for any other habitation, but only for impotent or poor of the ſame pariſh, that ſhall be there placed from time to time by the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor of the ſame pariſh, or the moſt part of them; upon the pains and forfeitures contained in the ſaid former act, made in the ſaid 31ſt year of her Majeſty's reign.

The inconveniencies that grow by unlawful cottages, and inmates in cottages againſt this ſtatute, as appears by the preamble, are great, being neſts to hatch idleneſs, the mother of pickings, thievings, ſtealing of wood, &c. tending alſo to the prejudice of lawful commoners; for that new-erected cottages within the memory of man, though they have four acres of ground or more laid to them according to the act, ought not to common in the waſtes of the lord; but the greateſt inconvenience of all this is, the ill breeding and educating of youth; which inconveniencies may be eaſily helped and remedied by the proviſions of this excellent law, if lords of leets and their ſtewards would look to the execution of this act, which we hold the readieſt means; for albeit the cottage erected or converted, cannot by any proviſion in this ſtatute be demoliſhed or pulled down, yet the execution of the penalty of this act will make it uninhabitable and work the deſired effect, and they may alſo be amerced for wrongful commoning, in the court baron. 2 Inſt. 740.

J. S. was indicted upon the ſtatute 31 Eliz. becauſe he had erected a cottage five years laſt paſt, and had not allotted four acres of land according to the ſaid ſtatute de terris menſurandis 33 Ed. 1. and had continued it ever ſince. The firſt exception was, that this indictment was for erecting a cottage five years paſt, whereas every offence ought to be puniſhed within two years by indictment or information, by the expreſs words of the ſtatute of 31 Eliz. cap. 5. otherwiſe it is not puniſhable, and therefore not good. 2dly, Becauſe he does not ſay that he voluntarily continued it; which are the expreſs words of the ſtatute. 3dly, For that it is to be by the ſtatute De terris menſurandis, whereas there is not any ſuch ſtatute, but it is an ordinance only; and for theſe cauſes the indictment was held ill; and the defendant was diſcharged. Cro. J. 603, 604. pl. 30. Mich. 18. Jac. B. R. Stowe's caſe.

One was indicted for erecting of a cottage. It was moved that the indictment was inſufficient, for that the words of 31 Eliz. cap. 7. are, ſhall willingly uphold, maintain and continue, and the indictment is only, that he continued, and ſo wants the words willingly uphold, according to the ſtatute. It did not appear in the indictment that it was newly erected, for it is only that he continued, and not that he erected. The indictment was quaſhed, becauſe being a penal law, it was not purſued. Godb. 383. pl. 470. Paſch. 3 Car. B. R. Day's caſe.

Covenants, contracts and agreements, are often uſed as ſynonymous words, ſignifying an engagement entred into, by which one perſon lays himſelf under an obligation to do ſomething beneficial to, or to abſtain from an act, which if done, might be prejudicial to another. 1 New Abr. 526.

As the good of ſociety requires a punctual performance of, and that no perſon ſhould be allowed to reſcind and break through his contracts; ſo the law has provided a remedy by action of covenant, in which the injured party is to recover damages for the violation of the contract, in proportion to the loſs he has ſuſtained. But here it may be neceſſary to obſerve, that where the covenant or agreement is for doing ſomething in ſpecie, as conveying lands, executing deeds, &c. the moſt uſual, and indeed the moſt proper remedy is by bill in Chancery; which, in caſes reaſonable, will decree an execution in ſpecie; whereas at Common law, the party can only be repaired in damages. But if the matter of the bill is merely in damages, the remedy is only at law, becauſe the damages cannot be aſcertained by the conſcience of the Chancellor, and therefore muſt be ſettled by a jury at law. But if there be matter of fraud mixed with the damages, as if A. ſues B. on a covenant at law for damages; and B. files a bill for an injunction, upon this equitable ſuggeſtion, that the covenant was obtained by fraud; if A. files his croſs-bill for relief upon that covenant, the court will retain it, becauſe the validity of the covenant is diſputed in that court, and on a head properly conuzable there; and therefore, if the validity of the deed be eſtabliſhed, the court will direct an iſſue for the quantum of the damages. 1 New. Abr. 526.

1. Of expreſs and implied covenants, and how created.

2. What ſhall be deemed a breach, or conſtrued a good performance of a covenant.

3. Where breach of covenant ſhall be deemed to be well aſſigned.

1. Of expreſs and implied covenants, and how created.

The law does not ſeem to have appropriated any ſet form of words, which are abſolutely neceſſary to be made uſe of in creating a covenant; and therefore it ſeems that any words will be effectual for that purpoſe, which ſhew the parties concurrence to the performance of a future act; as if leſſee for years covenants to repair, &c. Provided always, and it is agreed, that the leſſor ſhall find great timber, &c. this makes a covenant on the part of the leſſor to find great timber, by the word agreed, and it ſhall not be a qualification of the covenant of the leſſee. 1 New Abr. 527.

So if A. leaſes to be for years, upon condition that he ſhall acquit the leſſor of ordinary and extraordinary charges, and ſhall keep and leave the houſes at the end of the term, in as good plight as he found them; if he does not leave them well repaired at the end of the term, an action of covenant lies. 1 Rol. Abr. 518.

So theſe words in a leaſe of a mill, and the leſſee ſhall repair the mills as often as need ſhall require, and ſhall leave them ſufficiently repaired at the end of the term, make a covenant, becauſe it is the clear agreement of the parties; for otherwiſe the words, ſhall leave, &c. would have no effect. 1 Rol. Abr. 518. 3 Bulſt. 163. Cro. Jac. 399, 521.

If A. leaſes to B. for life, with a proviſo that if the leſſee dies within the term of forty years, that then the executors of the leſſee ſhall have it for ſo many of the years as amount to the number of forty years, to be accounted from the date of the indenture of leaſe; this proviſo ſhall not be a leaſe, but only a covenant. 1 Rol. Abr. 518. 1 Co. 155. Moor 478.

If there are articles of agreement between A. and B. by which it is agreed upon a marriage intended between A. and C. that all the ſtock of C. ſhall remain in the hands of B. till A. make a certain jointure to C. ipſo B. Annuatim ſolvendo to A. intereſſe proinde ſecundum ratam 8*l. per centum*, &c. If B. does not pay the ſaid intereſt, an action of covenant lies againſt him upon theſe words, becauſe every agreement by deed is a covenant, otherwiſe A. could not have any remedy for the money. 1 Rol. Abr. 518, 519.

If A. makes a deed to B. in theſe words, I have in my cuſtody one writing obligatory, in which writing obligatory, one William now ſtandeth bound to the ſaid B. for the payment of 400l. upon ſuch a day, being the proper money of B. and I will be ready at all times when I ſhall be required, to re-deliver the ſame writing obligatory to the ſaid B. If B. after demands the ſaid obligation of A. and he refuſes to deliver it, B. may have an action of covenant upon this deed by force of theſe words, And I will be ready at all times, when I ſhall be required, to re-deliver the ſame, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 519.

If A. enters into an obligation to B. and B. afterwards covenants not to ſue A. without any limitation of time, this amounts to a releaſe, and may be pleaded as ſuch. Carth. 64. Comb. 123, 124.

But if the covenant be temporary, and limited to a certain time, as if it be, that B. will not ſue for ninety-nine years, &c. this ſtill remains a covenant, and for the violation thereof, an action of covenant is the proper remedy, but it cannot be pleaded in bar; for if there be two obligors, and the obligee covenants that he will not ſue one of them, this is no releaſe, but only a covenant. Carth. 64.

A letter of licence containing theſe words following, viz. that if the creditor ſue within ſuch a time, his debt ſhall be forfeited, works a forfeiture by the commencement of the ſuit, and therefore may be pleaded in bar to the action. Carth. 64.

If A. enters into a ſtatute to B. and afterwards B. by his deed covenants, that upon payment of ſuch a ſum at a day to come, the ſtatute ſhall be void, and that he will deliver it in, and cauſe it to be vacated; if B. before the day ſues execution upon the ſtatute, A. may bring an action of covenant; for though it be true, that a covenant that is to take effect preſently is to ſtand or fall by the operation of law, and no action of covenant will lie; as if a man covenants that a bond ſhall be void upon doing ſuch an act, or to ſtand ſeiſed, no action of covenant will lie upon theſe words; but here the laſt words bind the party to the performance of a future act, viz. to deliver in the ſaid ſtatute, and cauſe it to be vacated, which without all queſtion ſound in covenant. Raym. 25. 1 Keb. 103, 118. S. C.

If there are articles of agreement made by indenture between A. and B. in which A. agrees that B. ſhall have a houſe in a ſtreet in London, for certain years; provided, and upon condition, that B. ſhall receive and pay the rents of the other houſes of A. in the ſame ſtreet, mentioned in a ſchedule annexed to the indenture; and it is further agreed, that B. for his labour in collecting of the ſaid rents, ſhall have the overplus of the rents, over and above ſuch a certain ſum; this is not any covenant on the part of B. to bind him to receive and pay the rents mentioned in the ſchedule; but the proviſo and condition will make the eſtate of B. void in the houſe. 1 Rol. Abr. 518. Cro. Car. 128, 129. S. C. adjudged. See Cro. Eliz. 242, 385. 2 Co. 71.

If A. by deed enfeoffs B. provided, that if A. pays money to B. by a day, the feoffment ſhall be void, and covenants to ſave harmleſs from incumbrances and arrears of rent, and to make further aſſurance; and after A. enters into an obligation conditioned for the performance of all covenants, payments, articles and agreements compriſed in the deed, if A. pays not the money, yet the bond is not forfeited; for there being no covenant to pay the money, it is a proviſo in advantage of the feoffor, that if he paid the money, that he ſhould have the land again; ſo that it is in his election to pay the money, or loſe the land, which is a ſufficient loſs to him, and the word payment, in the bond hath reference to the covenant to ſave harmleſs from arrears of rent. Cro. Jac. 281. Yelv. 206. S. C.

An action of covenant may be brought as well on a deed poll as on a deed indented. 1 Rol. Abr. 517.

But though covenant lies as well on a deed poll as upon a deed indented, yet the parties muſt be named therein; and therefore, where in covenant the plaintiff declared that J. S. being arreſted at his ſuit, and in the cuſtody of the bailiff, he, the defendant, promiſed and engaged to bring in the body of J. S. into the cuſtody of the bailiff ſuch a day; and on demurrer it was held, that the action would not lie, the plaintiff not being named in the agreement, and no averment dehors could avail him. 1 Salk. 197.

There are ſome words, which of themſelves import no expreſs covenant, yet being made uſe of in certain contracts, they amount to ſuch, and are therefore called covenants in law, and will as effectually bind the parties, as if expreſſed in the moſt explicit terms. As if a man makes a leaſe for years of land by the words conceſſi or demiſi, theſe import a covenant, and if the leſſee, or his aſſignee are evicted, they may bring an action thereupon. 1 New Abr. 530. 5 Co. 17. a.

So if a man leaſes for years, reſerving rent, an action of covenant lies for non-payment of the rent, for the reddendo of the rent is an agreement for payment of the rent, which will make a covenant. 1 Rol. Abr. 519. Style 387. Carth. 135.

Alſo if a man leaſes for years by the words demiſe, grant, &c. and in the deed there are ſeveral covenants on the part of the leſſor, and he enters into a bond conditioned for the performance of all the covenants, &c. in the ſaid deed; this extends as well to the covenants in law, as expreſs covenants. 4 Co. 80. b.

But if a man leaſes certain goods for years by the words demiſe, &c. and the leſſor covenants that the leſſee ſhall enjoy during the term, without eviction by the leſſor, or any claiming claiming under him; this expreſs covenant qualifies the generality of the covenant in law, and reſtrains it by the mutual conſent of both parties, and it ſhall not extend farther than the expreſs covenant. 4 Co. 80. Cro. Eliz. 674. Yelv. 175.

If a man leaſes to me by indenture the land of J. S. of which J. S. is ſeiſed at the time, upon which I enter, and he re-enters, I ſhall have a writ of covenant upon this indenture, though I was not in the land by the leaſe, but by eſtoppel, for the leſſor is eſtopped to ſay that I was not in of his leaſe. 4 Co. 80.

So if a man leaſes to me land of J. S. of which J. S. is ſeiſed at the time, I ſhall have a writ of covenant before entry upon J. S. and re-entry by him; for I need not alledge an eviction, for this is a covenant in law, which is broke when he is not ſeiſed of the land at the time of the demiſe, for the word demiſe imports a power of letting; and it is not reaſonable to enforce the leſſee to enter into the land, and ſo to commit a treſpaſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 520. Cro. Jac. 73.

But if a man leaſes certain goods for years by indenture, which are evicted within the term, yet he ſhall not have a writ of covenant; for the law does not create any covenant upon ſuch perſonal thing. Owen 104. 1 Rol. Abr. 519.

Alſo if two or more join in making a leaſe by the words conceſſi, &c. this creates a covenant in law, for the breach of which, all of them ſhall be jointly ſued; but if the breach be the perſonal tort of one of them, as if one of them enters and ouſts the leſſee, the action may be brought againſt him alone; for it is unreaſonable, that the others ſhould ſuffer for the perſonal wrong of their companion. Carth. 97, 98. 1 Salk. 137. 1 Show. 79. S. C.

A. by indenture granted and demiſed to B. certain lands, except a little piece, upon which a pump was ſtanding, together with the uſe and occupation of the pump, in common with other the tenants of A. for thirty-one years; and after the pump became uſeleſs for want of repairs, and B. brought covenant againſt A. and aſſigned the breach in A.'s permitting the pump to run to decay; and it was held by Kelynge, chief juſtice, Rainſford and Morton, juſtices, that the action lay; for that when the uſe of a thing is demiſed, and it runs to decay, ſo that the leſſee cannot have the uſe and benefit thereof, he may have covenant upon the word demiſi; and here the leſſee himſelf could not repair, having no intereſt in the pump, or lands where it ſtood; but Twiſden totis viribus cont'. 1. Becauſe a covenant created by law, as this is, never lies but on an actual ouſter. 2. This covenant created by law, is not properly to recover damages, but the term itſelf, and the damages that are recovered are for the whole term, whereas the pump may be repaired the next day. 3. Leſſee may repair the pump himſelf, and may come on the ground without being a treſpaſſer; as where I grant that you ſhall fiſh in my pond, you have a liberty to come upon my ground; ſo if you have a grant to lay pipes in my ground, you may dig up the ground for that purpoſe; and for theſe reaſons of Twiſden's the judgment was una voce reverſed in Cam' Scac'. See 1 New Abr. 531.

If A. leaſes a houſe to B. excepting two rooms, and free paſſage to them, and the leſſee aſſigns to J. S. who diſturbs the leſſor in the paſſage; this, though a covenant in law, ſhall bind the leſſee: for where the leſſee agrees to let the leſſor have a thing out of the demiſed premiſſes, as a way, common, &c. covenant lies for a diſturbance; but if the diſturbance had been in the rooms excepted, covenant would not have lain. Carth. 232. 1 Salk. 196. 1 Show. 388. See Moor 553. Cro. Eliz. 657.

By ſtat. 6 Ann. c. 35. ſect. 30. The words grant, bargain and ſell, amount to expreſs covenants.

2. What ſhall be deemed a breach, or conſtrued a good performance of a covenant.

If A. leaſes to B. for twenty-one years, and covenants at any time during the life of B. upon furrender of the old leaſe, to make a new leaſe; and after A. leaſes to a ſtranger, he hath diſabled himſelf, and broke his covenant. 5 Co. 20, 21. 2 And. 18. Moor 452. Cro. Eliz. 450. Poph. 109. S. C.

If A. being a common brewer, covenants that B. ſhall have ſeven parts of his grains made in his brewhouſe for ſeven years; and after A. puts in great quantities of hops into his malt, of which the grains were made, by means whereof the grains are ſpoiled, this is a breach, becauſe in all contracts the intention of the parties is to be conſidered; and here it was the intention of the parties that B. ſhould have the grains for the uſe of his cattle; and they will not eat them when hops are put into them. Raym. 464. 2 Jones 191. Skin. 39.

If two men upon ſale of their wives lands, covenant that they and their wives have good right to convey lands, and to make further aſſurance; if one of the women is under age, this is a breach, for ſhe hath not power to convey the eſtate according to the covenant. 2 Jones 195.

If the leſſor covenants with the leſſee for years, that he quietly and peaceably ſhall enjoy the land, without the impediment or diſturbance of the leſſor, if the leſſor exhibits a bill in Chancery againſt the leſſee, to reſtrain his committing waſte; this is no breach, though the bill be diſmiſſed with coſts, becauſe the ſuit does not relate to his title or poſſeſſion. 2 Vent. 213.

If A. enters into a ſtatute to B. and afterwards B. by his deed covenants, that upon payment of ſuch a ſum at a day to come, that the ſtatute ſhould be void, and that he would deliver it in, and cauſe it to be vacated; if before the day B. ſues execution, A. may bring covenant; and it is no objection, that nevertheleſs B. at the day, may deliver it in and cauſe it to be vacated: for it is an apparent preſent breaeh; for after the ſtatute was ſet a foot, and had its courſe, it did tranſire in rem judicatam, and could not be vacated. 1 Sid. 48. Raym. 25. 1 Keb. 103, 118. S. C.

If a parſon leaſes his rectory for years, and covenants that the leſſee ſhall have and enjoy it during the term, without expulſion, or any thing to be done by the leſſor, and after, for not reading the articles, he is ipſo facto deprived by the ſtatute 13 Eliz. and the patron preſents another, who ouſts the leſſee, this is no breach; for he was not ouſted by reaſon of any act done by the leſſor, but for a non-feaſance; and ſo it is out of the compaſs of the covenant. 4 Leon. 39.

Tenant in tail of a rent, purchaſes the land out of which it iſſues, and makes a feoffment thereof, and covenants that it is free from all former incumbrances, this is a charge, though not in eſſe but in ſuſpenſe; for if tenant in tail dies, his iſſue may diſtrain, and then the covenant is broke. Owen 7. But ſee Co. Lit. 389. a.

If A. be tenant in tail, the reverſion in the King, and A. leaſes for years, and covenants that the leſſee ſhall enjoy it againſt all perſons, and without the interruption of any, except the King, his heirs and ſucceſſors, exiſtentibus Regibus vel Reginis Angliæ, and the King grants his reverſion to B. and A. dies without iſſue, and B. enters, the covenant is broke; for that extends only to the King and his ſucceſſors, in which words his patentee is not included. Cro. Eliz. 517.

If A. by the means and procurement of B. by fine conveys lands to B. and his wife, and the heirs of B. and after B. leaſes the ſame for years, and covenants that the leſſee ſhall quietly enjoy, during the term, without the diſturbance of him, his heirs or aſſigns, or of any other perſon, by or through his means, title or procurement, and B. dies, and his wife enters, this is a breach; for ſhe claims by the means of the baron; and therefore it is within the covenant. *Cro. 3. Where

3. Where breach of covenant ſhall be deemed to be well aſſigned.

If in an action of covenant, the plaintiff declares upon a leaſe for twenty-one years to the defendant, and that he covenanted to pay 20*l. per annum*, by equal portions, as Michaelmas and Lady-day, and aſſigns for breach, that he did not pay the rent, debit' ad præd' ſeparalia feſta durante termino, this breach is ſufficiently aſſigned; and it ſhall be intended that the rent was not paid at either of thoſe days. 1 Lev. 78.

If in debt upon an obligation, the condition whereof is of three parts, 1. He ſhall ſerve the plaintiff well, 2. That he ſhall duly account, 3. That within three months after notice he ſhall make ſatisfaction for all loſſes ſuſtained by his apprenticeſhip; the defendant pleads performance ſpecially, and the plaintiff aſſigns for breach, that upon account he was found in arrear 60*l.* which he received and converted to his own uſe, and ſo had not ſerved the plaintiff well; this is a good replication without alledging notice; for though it might be alledged as a breach of the third part of the condition, yet the converſion of the money to his own uſe, may be alledged as an ill ſervice. Cro. Eliz. 830.

In an action of covenant ſeveral breaches may be aſſigned; otherwiſe in debt upon an obligation, conditioned to perform covenants. Cro. Car. 176.

But now, by the 8 & 9 Will. 3. cap. 11. it is enacted, "That in all actions upon any bond or bonds, or on any penal ſum, for non-performance of any covenants or agreements in any indenture, deed or writing contained, the plaintiff may aſſign as many breaches as he ſhall think fit; and the jury, upon trial of ſuch action or actions, ſhall and may aſſeſs, not only ſuch damages and coſts of ſuit as have heretofore been uſually done in ſuch caſes, but alſo damages for ſuch of the ſaid breaches ſo to be aſſigned, as the plaintiff upon the trial of the iſſues ſhall prove to have been broken, and that the like judgment ſhall be entred on ſuch verdict as heretofore hath been uſually done in ſuch like actions; and if judgment ſhall be given for the plaintiff, on a demurrer, or by confeſſion, or nihil dicit, the plaintiff upon the roll may ſuggeſt as many breaches of the covenants and agreements as he ſhall think fit, upon which ſhall iſſue a writ to the ſheriff of that county where the action ſhall be brought, to ſummon a jury to appear before the juſtices or juſtice of aſſize, or Niſi prius of that county, to inquire of the truth of every one of thoſe breaches, and to aſſeſs the damages which the plaintiff ſhall have ſuſtained thereby: in which writ it ſhall be commanded to the ſaid juſtices, &c. that he or they ſhall make a return thereof to the court from which the ſame ſhall iſſue, at the time in ſuch writ mentioned; and in caſe the defendant or defendants, after ſuch judgment entred, and before any execution executed, ſhall pay unto the court where the action ſhall be brought, to the uſe of the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or his or their executors or adminiſtrators, ſuch damages ſo to be aſſeſſed, by reaſon of all or any of the breaches of ſuch covenants, together with the coſts of ſuit, a ſtay of execution on the ſaid judgment, ſhall be entred upon record; or if by reaſon of any execution executed, the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or his or their executors or adminiſtrators, ſhall be fully paid or ſatisfied all ſuch damages ſo to be aſſeſſed, together with his or their coſts of ſuit, and all reaſonable charges and expences for executing the ſaid execution, the body, lands, or goods of the defendant, ſhall be thereupon forthwith diſcharged from the ſaid execution, which ſhall likewiſe be entred upon record; but notwithſtanding in each caſe ſuch judgment ſhall remain, continue, and be as a farther ſecurity to anſwer the plaintiff or plaintiffs, and his or their executors or adminiſtrators, ſuch damages as ſhall or may be ſuſtained for further breach of any covenant or covenants in the ſame indenture, deed or writing contained; upon which the plaintiff or plaintiffs may have a ſcire facias upon the ſaid judgment, againſt the defendant, or againſt his heir tertenants or his executors or adminiſtrators, ſuggeſting other breaches of the ſaid covenants or agreements, and to ſummon him or them reſpectively to ſhew cauſe why execution ſhould not be had or awarded upon the ſaid judgment, upon which there ſhall be like proceeding as was in the action of debt upon the ſaid bond or obligation, for aſſeſſing of damages upon trial of iſſues joined upon ſuch breaches, or enquiry thereof, upon a writ to be awarded in manner as aforeſaid, of ſuch future damages, coſts and charges as aforeſaid, all further proceedings on the ſaid judgment are again to be ſtayed, and ſo toties quoties; and the defendant, his body, lands or goods, ſhall be diſcharged out of execution, as aforeſaid."

If A. leaſes to B. for years, and covenants that he hath full power and lawful authority to leaſe, &c. and in an action upon this covenant, B. ſays he had not full power and lawful authority to leaſe, &c. the breach is well aſſigned, for he hath well purſued the words of the covenant negative, and what eſtate he had lies more in the knowledge of the leſſor than leſſee; and therefore he ought to ſhew what eſtate he had at the time of making the leaſe; that it may appear that he had full power, &c. 9 Co. 60, 61. Cro. Jac. 304.

If A. leaſes to B. for years, and B. covenants to repair during the term, and at the end of the term to leave the premiſſes well repaired; in an action upon this covenant, it may be aſſigned for a breach, that he did not leave them well repaired at the end of the term; and if the defendant pleads, that at the end of the term he delivered them up well repaired, then if the plaintiff will aſſign a breach, he ought to ſhew particularly in what part it was not repaired, ſo that the defendant may give a particular anſwer thereto; but it was ſaid, that in a declaration in covenant, it ſufficeth to aſſign the breach as general as the covenant is. Cro. Jac. 171, 661.

In an action of covenant the plaintiff declared, that Queen Elizabeth leaſed a meſſuage, &c. to the defendant for twenty-one years, and that the defendant, his executors and aſſigns, were thereby bound to repair and leave the premiſes at the end of the term in good repair; and that the Queen granted the reverſion to B. and that B. granted the ſame to the plaintiff; and for not repairing &c. this is a good declaration, though the plaintiff is not named aſſignee. Cro. Jac. 240.

If in an action of covenant the plaintiff declares, Whereas by indenture, bearing date, &c. teſtatum exiſtit, that the plaintiff had demiſed to the defendant a meſſuage and garden for two years, and the defendant by the ſaid indenture, covenanted not to erect any building in the garden, &c. and avers in facto, that he did erect, &c. this is a good declaration; though he does not expreſly ſay Quod dimiſit & convenit; and it is the uſual courſe in B. R. to declare in this manner. Cro. Car. 188. Cro. Eliz. 195. Cro. Jac. 383.

If baron and feme being ſeiſed of an houſe, to them and the heirs of the baron, leaſe to A. and he covenants with them and the heirs and aſſigns of the baron, to repair, &c. and the baron and feme convey the inheritance to B. in an action upon this covenant, B. may ſhew the whole matter, and conclude quod actio ei accrevit, as aſſignee of the baron, without ſhewing the death of the feme; for the eſtate for life being transferred with the fee, it is drowned therein. Cro. Car. 285. For more of Covenant in general, ſee 1 New Abr. and 6 Vin. tit. Covenant. See alſo Wood's Convey. part. 1.

Covenant, (Fœdus) The ſolemn league and covenant, firſt formed in Scotland, was a ſeditious conſpiracy, too well known to need any explication. It was voted illegal and irreligious by parliament in May 1661, and proviſion is made againſt it by the ſtatutue of 24 Car. 2 c. 4. whereby it is declared to have been impoſed on the ſubjects of this realm, againſt the known laws and liberties of the ſame. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Coverture, Is a French word, ſignifying any thing that covers, as apparel, a coverlet, &c. and deduced from couvrir, that is, tegere. In law, it is particularly applied to the ſtate and condition of a married woman, who (by the laws of this realm) is ſub poteſtate viri, and therefore diſabled to make bargain with any, to the prejudice of herſelf or her huſband, without his aſſent and privity, or at leaſt without his allowance and confirmation. Bro. boc. tit. per tot. and Bracton, lib. 2. cap. 15. ſaith, That Omnia quæ ſunt uxoris, ſunt ipſius viri, nec habet uxor poteſtatem ſui, ſed vir. And again, lib. 4. c. 24. Vir eſt caput mulieris. And alſo, lib. 5. tract. 2. cap. 3. That in any law-matters, Sine viro reſpondere non poteſt. And in the ſame book, tract. 5. cap. 23. Vir & uxor ſunt quaſi unica perſona, quia caro una & ſanguis unus; Res licet ſit propria uxoris, vir tamen ejus cuſtos, cum ſit caput mulieris. And lib. 1 ca. 10. num. 2. Uxores ſunt ſub virga viri. And if the huſband alien the wife's lands, during the marriage, ſhe cannot gainſay it during his life. See Cui ante divortium, and Cui in vita.

Covin, (Covina,) Is a deceitful aſſent or agreement between two or more, to the prejudice of another. As if a tenant for term of life, or tenant in tail will ſecretly conſpire with another, that the other ſhall recover againſt the tenant for life, the lands which he holds, &c. in prejudice of him in the reverſion. It is derived from the Fr. verb. convenir, depaciſci, to promiſe or covenant. Dr. Skinner takes it to be a corruption of the Lat. conventum, and therefore writes it coven. Cowell edit. 1727.

Debt is brought by a woman adminiſtratrix; ſhe has judgment; before execution this adminiſtration is revoked by covin, and committed to the ſaid woman and her ſon; the ſon releaſes the debt; the woman ſues execution; the debtor brings an audita querela; it does not lie becauſe of the covin. Jenk. 285. pl. 17.

The plaintiff a woman, who had 150*l. given her by her brother, the defendant, upon her marriage, gives a bond privately to her brother to repay* the money; the huſband being dead without iſſue, the defendant ſued the plaintiff bond at law upon the bond, whereupon ſhe preferred her bill here to be relieved againſt it, being a fraud, by reaſon it was done without the privity of her huſband. It was urged for the defendant, that it was good reaſon for the huſband or any of his iſſue to be relieved, in caſe they had been concerned, but that was no reaſon that the woman herſelf, who gave the bond, ſhould be relieved; but ordered that the bond ſhould be delivered up; for being once a fraud, no accident of death or courſe of time ſhould alter the caſe; and the plaintiff was relieved notwithſtanding it was her own agreement, being done in fraud of the huſband. 1 Freem. Counſel, for priſoners. No counſel is allowed a priſoner upon a general iſſue, on indictment of felony, &c. unleſs ſome doubtful point of law ariſe: The court is the priſoner's only counſel; and the behaviour of the priſoner in his own defence, is one means of diſcovering the truth. In appeals, and upon ſpecial pleas, &c. the priſoner ſhall have counſel aſſigned him by the court: Though counſel is not to prompt the priſoner in matters of fact. 2 Hawk. 400, 401. Counſellor, (Conſiliarius) Is a perſon retained by a client to plead his cauſe in a court of judicature. A counſellor at law hath a privilege to inforce any thing which he is informed of by his client, if pertinent to the matter, and is not to examine whether it be true or falſe; for it is at the peril of him who informs him. Cro. Jac. 90. But after the court have delivered their opinions of the matter in law depending before them, the counſel at the bar are not to urge any thing further in that cauſe. 1 Lil. Abr. 355. It has ben held, that the King's counſel ought not to be admitted to argue any cauſe againſt the King; though this was oppoſed by ſerjeant Maynard, Hil. 21 Car. 2. 1 Mod. 38. A counſellor muſt not ſet his hand to a frivolous plea, to delay a trial; which argues ignorance or foul practice. Ibid. And as counſellors have ſpecial privilege to practice the law, they are puniſhable by attachment, &c. for miſbehaviour. 1 Hawk. P. C. 157. No recuſant convict, or nonjuror, ſhall practice the law as a counſellor, or otherwiſe, under penalties, by ſtat. 3 Jac. 1. c. 5. 13 & 14 Will. 3. c. 6. By ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 14. ſect. 15. a counſellor is not puniſhable for ſhewing a falſe deed in evidence.

The fees to counſellors are not in nature of wages, or pay, or that which we call ſalary or hire, which are duties certain, and grow due by contract for labour or ſervice, but what is given him is honorarium, not merces, being a gift which gives honour as well to the taker as the giver; nor is it certain or contracted; for no price or rate can be ſet upon counſel which is invaluable and ineſtimable, ſo as it is more or leſs according to the circumſtances, namely, the ability of the client, the worthineſs of the counſellor, the weightineſs of the cauſe, and the cuſtom of the country. It is a gift of ſuch a nature, that the able client may not neglect to give it, without ingratitude, for it is but a gratuity, or taking of thankfulneſs; yet the worthy counſellor may not demand it without doing wrong to his reputation, according to that moral rule Multa honeſta accipi poſſunt, quæ tamen peti non poſſunt. Pref. to Dav. Rep. 22, 23.

Daniel Hill having put in for his client a long inſufficient demurrer to a bill exhibited againſt his client, in which ſuppoſed demurrer were many matters of fact, and other things frivolous and vain; the Lord Chancellor Egerton awarded 5*l.* coſts againſt the party, and ordered that neither bill, anſwer, demurrer, nor any other plea ſhould from thenceforth be received under the hand of the ſaid Hill. Cary's Rep. 38. cites 27 April 1 Jac. Hill's caſe.

A counſellor in law retained, has a privilege to inforce any thing which he is informed of by his client, and to give it in evidence, it being pertinent to the matter in queſtion, and not to examine whether it be true or falſe; but it is at the peril of him that informs him; for a counſellor is at his peril to give in evidence that which his client informs him, being pertinent to the matter in queſtion, otherwiſe action upon the caſe lies againſt him by

by his client. Per Popham Ch. J. and judgment accordingly. Cro. J. 90. pl. 18. Mich. 3 Jac. B. R. Brook v. Montague.

But matter not pertinent to the iſſue, or the matter in queſtion, he need not to deliver; for he is to diſcern what he is to deliver, and what not; and although it be falſe, he is excuſable, being pertinent to the matter. Cro. J. 90. pl. 18. Mich. 3 Jac. B. R. in caſe of Brook v. Montague.

But if he gives in evidence any thing not material to the iſſue which is ſcandalous; he ought to aver it to be true, otherwiſe he is puniſhable; for it ſhall be intended as ſpoken maliciouſly and without cauſe; which is a good ground for an action. Cro. J. 91. pl. 18. Mich. 3 Jac. B. B. in caſe of Brook v. Montague.

So if a counſellor objects matter againſt a witneſs which is ſlanderous, if there be cauſe to diſcredit his teſtimony, and to be pertinent to the matter in queſtion, it is juſtifiable what he delivers by information, although it be falſe. Cro. J. 91. pl. 18. Mich. 3 Jac. in caſe of Brook v. Montague.

Counſellor may take fees of his client, but he may not lay out money for him; and if he does, Hobart Ch. J. doubted what remedy he might have. Winch. 53. Mich. 20. Jac. C. B. Gage v. Johnſon.

Counſellor brought a bill for fees, due to him from the defendant being a ſolicitor, and was to account with him at the end of every term; the defendant demurs. Demurrer was allowed, and the bill diſmiſſed. Chan. Rep. 38. 15 Car. 1. Moor v. Row.

Coſts were taxed for ſcandal in a bill in Chancery at 100*l.* but though the ſcandal was very great, yet the Lord Chancellor and the judges reduced it to 50*l.* and the counſel whoſe hand was ſet to it, to pay the defendant 5*l.* more. *Cham. Countee, (Fr. Comté a comitando. becauſe they accompany the King) Was next to the duke, the moſt eminent dignity of a ſubject before, as well as ſince, the conqueſt: And thoſe who in ancient time were created countees, were men of great eſtate and dignity: For which cauſe the law gives them privileges; as their perſons may not be arreſted for debt, treſpaſs, &c. (becauſe the law intends that they aſſiſt the King with their counſel for the publick good, and preſerve the realm by their proweſs and valour:) They may not be put upon juries. If iſſue be taken, whether the plaintiff or defendant be a countee, or not, this ſhall not be tried by the country, but by the King's writ. Alſo the defendant ſhall not have a day of grace againſt a lord of the parliament, becauſe it is intended he attends the public. It was the opinion of Sir Edward Coke, that upon this ſtatute the offender could not be fined; and that only corporal pains ought to be inflicted: But it hath been otherwiſe adjudged in Terry's caſe, who by a falſe note in the name of another obtained into his hands a wedge of ſilver, of the value of two hundred pounds; and on conviction thereof, was ſentenced to ſtand in the pillory, pay a fine of five hundred pounds to the King, and be impriſoned during the King's pleaſure; and to be bound with ſureties for his good behaviour. *Cro. Countermand, Is where a thing formerly executed, is afterwards by ſome acts or ceremony made void by the party that had firſt done it. As if a man has made his laſt will whereby he deviſes his land to J. S. and then he enfeoffs another of the ſame land; there this feoffment is a countermand to the will, and the will as to the diſpoſition of the land, is void. If a woman, ſeiſed of land in fee, makes a will in writing, and deviſes, that if A. of B. ſurviſes her, then ſhe deviſes and bequeaths to him and his heirs her land, and afterwards ſhe intermarries with the ſaid A. of B. thereby taking him to huſband and coverture, at the time of her death, the will is countermanded. A. kept both deeds in his own cuſtody during his life; and in ſupport of the firſt deed it was inſiſted, that it was an abſolute diſpoſition of the profits of the office without any power of revocation, and ought to ſtand; and that though both deeds were all along in his cuſtody, yet ſo (generally) voluntary ſettlements are, and yet the firſt ſhould prevail. Counterplea, Is compounded of two French words, contre, i. e. contra, adverſus, and plaider, cauſam agere; it ſignifieth properly in our Common law, a replication to ayde prier; for when the tenant by courteſy, or in dower, prayeth in aid of the King, or him in the reverſion for his better defence; or elſe if a ſtranger to the action begun, deſire to be received, to ſay what he can for the ſafeguard of his eſtate; that which the demandant alledgeth againſt this requeſt, why it ſhould not be admitted is called a counterplea; and in this ſignification it is uſed 25 Edward 3. ſtat. 3. c. 7. County, (Comitatus,)——Quod modo vocatur comitatus, olim apud Britones temporibus Romanorum vocabatur conſulatus; & qui modo vocantur vicecomites tunc temporis viceconſules vocabantur. Leg. Edw. Confeſſ. ca. 2. And even in the Confeſſor's time a county was called conſulatus, viz. Fecit ſummoniri per univerſos Angliæ conſulatus nobiles ſapientes & ſua lege eruditos. Leg. Edw. Confeſſor, cap. 1. It ſignifies the ſame with ſhire, the one coming from the French, the other from the Saxon; both containing a circuit or portion of the realm, into which the whole land is divided, for the better government of it, and more eaſy adminiſtration of juſtice: ſo that there is no part of this nation that lies not within ſome county; and every county is governed by a yearly officer, whom we call a ſheriff. Forteſcue, cap. 24. Of theſe counties there are four of ſpecial note, which therefore are termed Counties palatine, as Lancaſter, Cheſter, Durham, and Ely. Stat. 5 Eliz. cap. 23. We read alſo anciently of the counties palatine of Pembroke and Hexam, ſtat. 33 Hen. 8. cap. 10. (which laſt did belong to the archbiſhop of York.)——This act, or any thing therein contained, ſhall not extend to the county palatine of Hexam, within the county of Northumberland, ne to the county palatine of Ely, within the county of Cambridge, &c. But by the ſtatute 14 Eliz. cap. 15. this county palatine of Hexam was ſtripped of it's privileges, and reduced to a part of the county of Northumberland. The chief governors of theſe counties palatine, by ſpecial charter from the King, did heretofore ſend out all writs in their own names, and did all things touching juſtice as abſolutely as the Prince himſelf in other counties, only acknowledging him their ſuperior and ſovereign. But by the ſtatute 27 Hen. 8. cap. 24. this power is much abridged; to which the reader is referred, as alſo to Cromp. Juriſd. f. 137. and 4 Inſt. f. 204 and 221.

County-court, (Curia comitatus,) By Lambard is otherwiſe called conventus, in his Explication of Saxon Words, and divided into two ſorts; one retaining the general name, as the county-court held every month by the ſheriff, or his deputy the under-ſheriff, whereof you may read in Cromp. Juriſd. f. 231. The other called The turn, held twice a year; of which ſee more in its proper place, and *Cromp. It had alſo, and hath the determination of certain treſpaſſes and debts under forty ſhillings. Britton, cap. 27, 28. What manner of proceedings was of old uſed in this court, ſee Fleta ubi ſupra.

Before the courts at Weſtminſter were erected the county-courts were the chief courts of this kingdom. Amongſt the laws of King Edgar this is one, viz. Let the hundred-court be kept as anciently, &c. and let there be two county-courts in a year, in which county-court there ſhall be a biſhop, and an alderman or earl, where one ſhall judge according to the Common law, and the other according to the eccleſiaſtical law.

This is the foundation of the united power of the biſhop and earl to ſit and try cauſes in one court; the conjunction of which powers mutually to aſſiſt each other, is as ancient as the Engliſh government itſelf; but theſe powers were ſeparated by William the Conqueror, and ſoon after all the eccleſiaſtical buſineſs was brought into the court, ſo called, and the law buſineſs into the King's Bench. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Magna Charta, 9 Hen. 3. cap. 35. No county ſhall be held but from month to month; and where a greater term hath been uſed, it ſhall be greater. Nor ſhall any ſheriff or his bailiff make his turn by the hundred, but twice in a year in the due and cuſtomed place, to wit, once after Eaſter and once after Michaelmas. And the view of frankpledge ſhall then be made, ſo that every one have his franchiſes. And the view of frankpledge ſhall be made, ſo that the King's peace be kept; and the tithing kept intire.

Stat. Marlbr. 52 Hen. 3. cap. 10. Archbiſhops, biſhops, earls, barons or women, ſhall not need to come to the ſheriff's turn, unleſs their preſence be ſpecially required for ſome cauſe. And if any have tenements in divers hundreds, they ſhall not need to come to the turn, but in the bailiwicks where they be converſant.

Stat. Weſtm. 1. 3 Ed. 1. cap. 33. No ſheriff ſhall ſuffer any baretor or maintainer of pleas in the counties, nor ſtewards, who are not attornies of their lords to make ſuit; and if any do it, the King will grievouſly puniſh the ſheriff and him.

Stat. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. cap. 13. The ſheriff in their turns and elſewhere, when they have to enquire of malefactors, by the precept of the King, or of their office, ſhall make their inqueſts by lawful men, at leaſt twelve, who ſhall ſet their ſeals to their inquiſitions; and the ſheriffs ſhall take and impriſon thoſe whom by ſuch inquiſition they ſhall find guilty, as they have uſed to do. And if they ſhall impriſon others, ſuch perſons impriſoned ſhall have their action by writ of impriſonment againſt the ſheriff, as againſt any other perſon. And ſo it ſhall be obſerved of every bailiff of liberty.

Stat. 1 Ed. 3. cap. 17. Sheriffs and bailiffs of franchiſes, and all others who take indictments in their turns or elſewhere, ſhall take ſuch indictments by roll indented, whereof one part ſhall abide with the indictors, ſo that one of the inqueſt may ſhew one part of the indenture to the juſtice, when he ſhall come to make deliverance.

Stat. 31 Ed. 3. ſtat. 1. cap. 15. Every ſheriff ſhall make his turn once in the month after Eaſter, and the other time in the month after St. Michael; and if they hold them otherwiſe, they ſhall loſe their turn for the time.

Stat. 19 Hen. 7. cap. 24. The ſhire-court of Suſſex ſhall be holden one time at Chicheſter, and the next time at Lewes, and ſo alternis vicibus; and every ſhire-court holden to the contrary ſhall be void.

Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. cap. 25. ſect. 2. The county-courts ſhall be kept every month, and no otherwiſe.

Sect. 3. The ſheriff of Northumberland ſhall keep the county-court in the town of Alnwick, and in no other place.

County rate. Stat. 12 Geo. 2. cap. 29. ſect. 1. Whereas by 22 Hen. 8. cap. 5. and by 1 Ann. ſt. 1. cap. 18. it is enacted, That the juſtices of the peace at their general or quarter ſeſſions have full power and authority, upon due preſentment that any bridge is out of repair, to make aſſeſſments upon every town, pariſh, or place, in proportion as they uſually have been aſſeſſed towards the repair of bridges: And whereas by 11 & 12 Will. 3. cap. 19. it is enacted, That it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices of peace, upon preſentment of the grand jury, at the aſſize, great ſeſſions, and general gaol-delivery, held for the ſame county, of the inſufficiency of their gaol or priſon, to conclude and agree upon ſuch a ſum of money as ſhall be thought neceſſary for the building, finiſhing and repairing a public gaol; and by warrant under their hands and ſeals, to charge the ſum of money to be levied upon the ſeveral hundreds, &c. in the manner preſcribed by the ſaid act; which act was revived and continued by 10 Ann. for ſeven years. and made perpetual by 6 Geo. 1. And whereas by 7 Jac. 1 cap. 4. it is enacted, That there ſhall be erected houſes of correction, by the juſtices of the peace or the greater part of them, at their reſpective quarter ſeſſions; and that maſters or governors of the ſaid houſes of correction ſhall have ſuch ſums of money yearly, as ſhall be thought meet by the ſaid juſtices, &c. And whereas by 43 El. cap. 2. it is enacted. That the juſtices of the peace, in their general ſeſſions after Eaſter, ſhall rate every pariſh to ſuch a weekly ſum of money as they ſhall think convenient, ſo as no pariſh be rated above 6*d.* nor under one halfpenny, and ſo as the total ſum of each taxation of the pariſhes in every county amount not above the rate of two-pence for every pariſh within the ſaid county; and it is thereby likewiſe enacted, that the juſtices of the peace at their general quarter ſeſſions to be holden at the time of ſuch taxation, ſhall ſet down what competent ſums of money ſhall be ſent quarterly out of every county or place corporate, for the relief of the poor priſoners of the King's Bench and Marſhalſea, and alſo of ſuch hoſpitals and alms-houſes as ſhall be in the ſaid county, and what ſums of money ſhall be ſent to every one of the ſaid hoſpitals and alms-houſes; ſo as there be ſent out of every county yearly twenty ſhillings, at the leaſt, to each of the ſaid priſons of the King's Bench and Marſhalſea, which ſums are rateably to be aſſeſſed upon every pariſh, and to be levied and collected as in and by the ſaid act is directed. And whereas by 14 El. cap. 5. it is enacted, That the juſtices of the peace of every county in their general quarter ſeſſions, ſhall rate every part at ſuch reaſonable ſums of money, for the relief of priſoners, as they ſhall think convenient, ſo as no pariſh be rated above ſix-pence or eight-pence weekly; and the churchwardens ſhall levy the ſame, and pay it to the high conſtables or other head officers, who ſhall pay it as ſhall be appointed by the ſaid juſtices in ſeſſions, to be diſtributed weekly for the relief of priſoners, &c. And whereas by 19 Car. 2. cap. 4. it is enacted, That the juſtices of the peace at their general ſeſſions may provide a ſtock of materials for ſetting poor priſoners to work, in ſuch manner as other county charges are levied, and provide and pay fit perſons to overſee ſuch work; provided that no pariſh be rated above 6*d.* by the week towards the premiſſes. And whereas by 12 Ann. ſt. 2. cap. 23. it is enacted, That the juſtices of the peace at their quarter ſeſſions may from time to time cauſe ſuch ſums of money to be raiſed within their juriſdiction, for the paſſing and conveying or maintaining of rogues and vagabonds, as ſhall be neceſſary for thoſe purpoſes, &c. And whereas it is apparent, that the manner and methods preſcribed by the ſeveral acts for collecting ſome of the ſaid rates are impracticable, the ſums charged on each pariſh being ſo ſmall, that they do not, by an equal pound rate, amount to more than a fractional part of a farthing in the pound on the ſeveral perſons thereby rateable; and if poſſible to have been rated, the expence of collecting and aſſeſſing the ſame would have amounted to more than the ſum rated: And whereas many and great doubts, difficulties and inconveniencies have ariſen in making and collecting other of the ſaid rates; therefore that the good ends and purpoſes of the ſaid ſeveral ſtatutes may be anſwered, and the ſeveral ſums of money thereby intended to be raiſed, may effectually be collected, with as much eaſe and certainty, and as little expence as can be to the parties obliged by the ſaid laws to pay the ſame; Be it therefore enacted, &c. That the juſtices of the peace in England, at their general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, ſhall have full power and authority to make one general rate or aſſeſſment for ſuch ſum or ſums of money as they in their diſcretion ſhall think ſufficient to anſwer all and every the ends and purpoſes of the before recited acts, in ſtead and in lieu of the ſeveral ſeparate and diſtinct rates directed thereby to be made, levied and collected; which rate ſhall be aſſeſſed upon every town, pariſh, or place within the reſpective limits of their commiſſions, and ſhall be collected by the high conſtables of the reſpective hundreds and diviſions in which any town, pariſh, or place doth lie, in ſuch manner and at ſuch times as herein after directed.

Sect. 2. And that the reſpective ſums to be aſſeſſed and collected may be well and truly paid to the high conſtables, the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor for the time being of each pariſh and place within the reſpective counties, cities, and liberties in which they reſpectively lie, ſhall, out of the money collected, or to be collected for the relief of the poor of ſuch pariſh or place, pay to the high conſtables of the reſpective hundreds or diviſions of the ſaid counties, cities, and liberties, the reſpective ſums of money ſo rated and aſſeſſed upon the pariſh or place, within the ſpace of thirty days after demand thereof made in writing, to be given to the ſaid churchwardens or overſeers of the poor, or any of them, or left at their, or either of their dwelling houſe or houſes, or affixed on any of the church doors of ſuch pariſh or place to which ſuch officer ſhall belong, by the ſaid high conſtable or high conſtables of the reſpective hundreds or diviſions; which demand the reſpective high conſtable or high conſtables is and are hereby required to make, at ſuch times as the ſaid juſtices of the peace, or the greater part of them, ſhall by their order in ſeſſions direct; and the receipt or receipts of ſuch high conſtable or high conſtables ſhall be a full and ſufficient diſcharge to ſuch churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, or other perſons paying the ſame, and ſhall be allowed in their accounts as ſuch, by the juſtices of the peace before whom ſuch accounts ſhall be paſſed: And in caſe ſuch churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, or any of them, ſhall neglect or refuſe to pay any the ſum or ſums of money hereby aſſeſſed, after demand made as aforeſaid, ſuch high conſtable or high conſtables ſhall, and they are hereby impowered to levy the ſame by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods and chattels of ſuch churchwardens and overſeers, or either of them ſo refuſing or neglecting to pay the ſame as aforeſaid, by warrant under the hands and ſeals of two or more juſtices of the peace of the county, riding, diviſion, city, town corporate, liberty, or place, reſiding in or near ſuch pariſh, or place; rendering the overplus, if any there ſhall be, after deducting the money aſſeſſed, and the charges of the diſtreſs and ſale, to the owner or owners thereof.

Sect. 3. Provided, that in caſe no rate is or ſhall be made for the relief of the poor in any pariſh, townſhip, or place; the juſtices of the peace in their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, ſhall and may by their order direct the ſum of money aſſeſſed on ſuch pariſh, townſhip or place, for the purpoſes of this act; to be rated and levied on ſuch pariſh, townſhip, or place, by any petty conſtables, or other peace officer, of or belonging to the ſame, in ſuch manner as money for the relief of the poor is by law to be rated or levied; which ſum ſo rated and levied ſhall be paid by ſuch petty conſtable, or other peace officer, to the reſpective high conſtable for the hundred, diviſion, or liberty, wherein ſuch pariſh, townſhip, or place ſhall lie; and ſhall be demanded of, paid by, or levied on ſuch petty conſtable, or other peace officer, in the ſame manner as any rates are herein before directed to be demanded of, paid by, and levied on the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, or any of them; and if ſuch petty conſtable or other peace officer ſhall pay ſuch ſum, before the ſame ſhall be ſo by him rated and levied as aforeſaid, he may afterwards rate and levy the ſame, or ſhall and may be allowed and re-imburſed the ſaid ſum of money out of any conſtables, or other rate made, or to be made on any ſuch pariſh, townſhip, or place, which the ſaid juſtices of the peace, or the greater part of them, in their ſeſſions ſhall order and direct.

Sect. 4. And whereas it will be very inconvenient to many towns, pariſhes, and places, in the ſeveral counties of York, Derby, Durham, Lancaſter, Cheſter, Weſtmorland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, that the rates by this act directed to be paid by and levied on the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor for the purpoſes aforeſaid, ſhould be paid out of any rate to be made for the relief of the poor in ſuch towns, pariſhes and places; therefore, &c. it ſhall be lawful to and for the juſtices of peace for the reſpective ridings, diviſions, or counties of York, Derby, Durham, Lancaſter, Cheſter, Weſtmorland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, if they ſhall think convenient, to order the ſum of money directed to be aſſeſſed on any ſuch town, pariſh, or place, for all or any of the purpoſes of this act, to be paid by and levied on the petty conſtables of, or for, any ſuch town, pariſh, or place within the ſaid counties reſpectively, in ſuch manner as the ſame is herein directed to be paid and levied, in caſe where no rate is made for the relief of the poor.

Sect. 5. Provided, that this act, or any thing herein contained, ſhall not extend or be conſtrued to extend to make any perſons, liberties, diviſions, or places, liable to pay to any rate to be made in purſuance of this act, to which ſuch perſon, liberty, diviſion, or place did not, or was not liable to contribute before the paſſing hereof; but that it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the juſtices of the peace at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, to order and aſcertain what proportion of any rate to be made by virtue of this act, ſhall be aſſeſſed on and paid by the ſeveral perſons, liberties, diviſions, and places, who have uſually contributed, or are liable to pay only to one or more of, and not to all, the rates hereby intended to be raiſed, and thrown into one general rate or aſſeſſment.

Sect. 6. And the reſpective high conſtables ſhall at or before the next general or quarter ſeſſions reſpectively, after they or any of them ſhall have received ſuch ſum or ſums of money, pay the ſame into the hands of ſuch perſon or perſons (being reſident in any ſuch county, riding, diviſion, city, liberty, or place, where ſuch rates ſhall be reſpectively made) whom the ſaid juſtices ſhall at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, appoint to be treaſurer or treaſurers; ſuch treaſurer or treaſurers firſt giving ſufficient ſecurity in ſuch ſums as ſhall be approved of by the ſaid juſtices at their general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, to be accountable for the ſeveral reſpective ſums of money which ſhall be paid to them in purſuance of this act, and to pay ſuch ſum or ſums of money as ſhall be ordered to be paid by the juſtices in their general or quarter ſeſſions, and for the due and faithful execution of the truſt repoſed in him or them; and all and every ſuch ſum or ſums of money as ſhall be paid into his or their hands by virtue of and in purſuance of this act, ſhall be deemed and taken to be the publick ſtock; and the ſaid treaſurer or treaſurers ſhall and are hereby required to pay ſo much of the money in their hands, to ſuch perſon and perſons as the ſaid juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, ſhall by their orders from time to time direct and appoint, for the uſes and purpoſes of the ſaid recited acts, and for any other uſes and purpoſes to which the publick ſtock of any county, city, riding, diviſion, or liberty, is or ſhall be applicable by law.

Sect. 7. And the ſaid reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers ſhall and are hereby required to keep books of entries of the ſeveral ſums reſpectively received and paid by him or them in purſuance of this act; and is and are alſo hereby required to deliver in true and exact accounts upon oath, if required, of all and every the ſum and ſums of money reſpectively received and paid by him or them, diſtinguiſhing the particular uſes to which ſuch ſum or ſums of money have been applied, to the juſtices at every general or quarter ſeſſions reſpectively to be holden within the limits of their commiſſions; and ſhall lay before the juſtices at ſuch ſeſſions the proper vouchers for the ſame.

Sect. 8. And the reſpective high conſtables ſhall demand and levy ſuch rates and aſſeſſments in manner before directed, and ſhall account for the ſame before the ſaid juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, if thereto required, in the like manner as the ſaid treaſurer or treaſurers is and are hereby directed to account; and in caſe ſuch high conſtables, or any of them, ſhall neglect or refuſe ſo to demand, levy, or account, then it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, to commit ſuch high conſtable or high conſtables to the common gaol of the county, riding, diviſion, city, town corporate, liberty or place, there to remain without bail or mainprize, until he or they ſhall have cauſed ſuch rates or aſſeſſments to be demanded and levied; and ſhall have rendered a true account or accounts in the manner hereby directed; and in caſe it ſhall appear by ſuch account or accounts, that any ſum or ſums of money is or are remaining in his or their hands, which he or they ſhall have received of the reſpective churchwardens and overſeers, or other perſons, which ought to have been paid to the reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers at the time or times limited by this act, or of the reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers, in order to be applied to the purpoſes aforeſaid; and if he or they ſhall neglect or refuſe to pay the ſame over into the hands of the reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers, or otherwiſe, if thereupon required by order of the ſaid juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them; then it ſhall and may be lawful for the ſaid juſtices at ſuch their general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, to commit ſuch high conſtable or high conſtables to the common gaol of the county, riding, diviſion, city, town corporate, liberty, or place, there to remain without bail or mainpriſe, until he or they ſhall have made full payment of the ſum or ſums of money that ſhall appear to be due on ſuch account or accounts; and all the accounts and vouchers of the ſaid treaſurers and high conſtables ſhall, after having been paſſed by the ſaid juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, be depoſited with the clerk of the peace for the time being, of each county reſpectively, or the town clerk, high bailiff, or chief officer of any city, town corporate, or liberty, who is or are hereby required to keep them among the records of ſuch county, city, town corporate, or liberty, to be inſpected from time to time by any of the ſaid juſtices, within the limits of their commiſſions, as occaſion ſhall require, without fee or reward.

Sect. 9. And the receipts of ſuch reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers ſhall be ſufficient diſcharges to all high conſtables; and the diſcharges of the ſaid juſtices of the peace, or the greater part of them, by their orders made at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions to ſuch treaſurer or treaſurers, ſhall be deemed and allowed as good and ſufficient releaſes, acquittances, or diſcharges, in any court of law or equity, to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever.

Sect. 10. And no new rate ſhall be made, until it ſhall appear to the ſaid juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, by the accounts of their reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers, or otherwiſe, that three-fourths of the money collected by virtue of the preceding rate have been expended for the uſes and purpoſes aforeſaid.

Sect. 11. And it ſhall be lawful to and for the ſaid juſtices of the peace at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, then and there aſſembled, to continue from time to time ſuch treaſurer or treaſurers in his or their office or offices, ſo long as they ſhall ſee convenient, and to remove him or them at their pleaſure, and to appoint any other perſon or perſons in his or their place; and to allow to him or them, and every of them inſiſting on the ſame, ſuch reaſonable ſum or ſums of money for his or their care or pains in the execution of ſuch truſt, not exceeding twenty pounds by the year, as they in their diſcretion ſhall think fit; which they are hereby impowered to direct the payment of out of the monies ariſing by the reſpective rates thereby appointed to be made.

Sect. 12. And in caſe the churchwardens and overſeers of any pariſh or place ſhall at any time have reaſon to believe the ſaid pariſh or place is over-rated, ſuch churchwardens and overſeers may appeal to the reſpective juſtices of the peace at their next general or quarter ſeſſions, againſt ſuch part of the rate only as may affect the pariſhes or places in which they ſerve ſuch offices; which juſtices,

juſtices, or the greater part of them, then and there aſſembled, are hereby authoriſed and impowered to hear, and finally determine the ſame: Provided nevertheleſs, that upon ſuch appeal ſuch rate ſhall not be quaſhed or deſtroyed in regard to any other pariſhes or places aſſeſſed thereby.

Sect. 13. And no part of the money to be raiſed and collected in purſuance of this act, ſhall be applied to the repair of any bridges, goals, priſons, or houſes of correction, until preſentments be made by the reſpective grand juries at the aſſize, great ſeſſions, general gaol-delivery, or general or quarter ſeſſions of the peace held for any county, riding, diviſion, city, town corporate, or liberty, of the inſufficiency, inconveniency, or want of reparation of their bridges, goals, priſons, or houſes of correction.

Sect. 14. And when any publick bridges, ramparts, banks, or cops, or other works, are to be repaired at the expence of any county, city, riding, hundred, diviſion, liberty, or town corporate; it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices of the peace at their general or quarter ſeſſions reſpectively, or the greater part of them then and there aſſembled, if they think proper and convenient, after preſentment to be made as aforeſaid, of the want of reparation of ſuch bridges, ramparts, banks, or cops, to contract and agree with any perſon or perſons for rebuilding, repairing, and amending of ſuch bridges ramparts, banks, or cops, as ſhall be within their reſpective counties, cities, ridings, hundreds, diviſions, liberties, or towns corporate, and all other works which are to be repaired and done by aſſeſſment on the reſpective counties, cities, ridings, hundreds, diviſions, liberties, or towns corporate, for any term or terms of years, not exceeding ſeven years at a certain annual ſum, payment, or allowance for the ſame; ſuch contractor or contractors giving ſufficient ſecurity for the due performance thereof, to the reſpective clerk, high bailiff; or chief officer of any city, town corporate, or liberty; and that ſuch juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, ſhall give publick notice of their intention of contracting with any perſon or perſons for rebuilding, repairing, and amending the bridges, ramparts, banks or cops, and other works aforeſaid; and that ſuch contract ſhall be made at the moſt reaſonable price or prices which ſhall be propoſed by ſuch contractors reſpectively; and that all contracts when agreed to, and all orders relating thereto, ſhall be entred in a book, to be kept by the reſpective clerk of the peace for the time being, or the town clerk, high bailiff, or chief officer of any city, town corporate or liberty, for that purpoſe; who is and are hereby required to keep them amongſt the records of ſuch county, city, town corporate or liberty, to be from time to time inſpected at all ſeaſonable times by any of the ſaid juſtices, within the limits of their commiſſions; and by any perſon or perſons employed or to be employed by any pariſh, townſhip or place contributing to the purpoſes of this act, without fee or reward.

Sect. 15. And there ſhall be but one rate made and aſſeſſed by the juſtices of the peace of the county of Middleſex, in the ſaid county, city and liberty of Weſtminſter for the ſeveral purpoſes aforeſaid, and for the repair of the gaol, commonly called New-priſon, in the ſaid county of Middleſex.

Sect. 16. Provided that the juſtices of the peace for the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, at their general or quarter ſeſſions, to be holden for the ſame city or liberty or the greater part of them, ſhall have full power to appoint the ſame governor or maſter of the houſe of correction within the ſaid city or liberty; who ſhall have ſuch ſum of money yearly as hath been accuſtomed for and towards the ſupport and maintenance of the priſoners in his cuſtody, who ſhall be ſick, or unable to work, (not exceeding the preſent allowance of fifty pounds by the year) and direct the repairs and management thereof as they heretofore have done; and the treaſurer or treaſurers of the money ariſing by the rates in the ſaid county of Middleſex, and city and liberty of Weſtminſter, hereby appointed to be collected, ſhall and is and are hereby required to obey all orders, which ſhall from time to time be made by the ſaid juſtices of the ſaid city and liberty, or the greater part of them, at their general or quarter ſeſſions, for the payment of any ſum or ſums of money for the allowance allotted to ſuch governor, or maſter of the houſe of correction, and the repairs thereof; which orders ſhall be good and ſufficient diſcharges to ſuch treaſurer or treaſurers.

Sect. 17. And the juſtices of the peace at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, ſhall be and are hereby impowered to oblige, by their order or orders, the reſpective high conſtables and petty conſtables, or any other perſon or perſons who are or have been impowered to levy, collect, or receive any ſum or ſums of money by virtue of and for the purpoſes aforeſaid, and who have any ſum or ſums of money in their hands, to account with them at their general or quarter ſeſſions, in ſuch manner as high conſtables are directed to account by virtue of this act; and in caſe ſuch high conſtable or petty conſtables, or other perſon or perſons, ſhall refuſe to account, or to pay over the money that ſhall remain in their or any of their hands when thereunto required by order of the ſaid juſtices, or the greater part of them, in their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions aſſembled; in either of the ſaid caſes the ſaid juſtices ſhall have the like remedy againſt them or any of them, as they have againſt the high conſtable by virtue of this act, for not accounting for or paying over the money remaining in their hands. And it ſhall be lawful for the ſaid juſtices at their reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions, or the greater part of them, to direct and order the payment of the reſpective ſums of money which ſhall appear to be remaining due, and not applied or diſpoſed of, into the hands of the reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers to be appointed by this act; which ſhall be deemed to be part of the ſtock of the ſaid counties, cities, ridings, diviſions, liberties, and places reſpectively; and to inquire what ſums of money are due and owing for the purpoſes aforeſaid; and then to order the payment of ſuch ſums as ſhall appear to them upon ſuch enquiry to be juſtly due and owing.

Sect. 18. And no action or ſuit ſhall be commenced or proſecuted againſt any perſon or perſons who has or have been or ſhall be employed in the collecting or receiving any money in purſuance of the ſaid recited act or this preſent act, on any rate or rates which has or have been or ſhall be quaſhed or diſcharged by any certiorari, brought or to be brought in any of his Majeſty's courts of record at Weſtminſter, or otherwiſe, for any money collected or received, or to be collected or received on any ſuch rate or rates, before ſuch writ of certiorari was or ſhall be brought and allowed; and that juſtice may be done to ſuch perſons who ſhall or may pay towards any rate which ſhall be quaſhed or diſcharged, the ſeveral ſums of money which ſhall appear to have been paid by them on ſuch rate, either in whole or in part, more than they ought to have paid, ſhall be repaid, or allowed to them in the next rate or rates which ſhall be made in purſuance of this act, as if the ſame had been paid on ſuch new rate or rates.

Sect. 19. Provided, that all and every ſuch perſon and perſons ſo employed, ſhall account for any pay over the money by them reſpectively received, in the ſame manner, and under the like penalties for any neglect or refuſal therein, as are to be inflicted by virtue of this act on any perſon or perſons neglecting or refuſing to account for, or pay over any money remaining in his or their hands, which he or they have received in purſuance thereof.

Sect. 20. And the juſtices of the peace for the ſaid county of Middleſex, at their general ſeſſions of the peace to be holden for the ſaid county, ſhall have the ſame powers and authorities to put this act in execution, as are hereby given them at their general quarter ſeſſions.

Sect. 21. And no writ of certiorari to remove any rates made in purſuance of this act, or to remove any orders or other proceedings taken or made by the ſaid reſpective general or quarter ſeſſions touching ſuch rates, ſhall be taken out or granted, but upon a motion to be made ſome time in the firſt week of the next term after the time for appealing from ſuch rates or orders is expired; and upon making it appear to the court by affidavit or otherwiſe, that the merits of the queſtion upon ſuch appeal or orders will by ſuch removal come properly in the judgment of the ſaid court; and that no ſuch writ of certiorari ſhall be allowed until ſufficient ſecurity be given to the reſpective treaſurer or treaſurers appointed by virtue of this act, in the ſum of one hundred pounds, to proſecute ſuch writ of certiorari with effect, and to pay the coſts to be aſcertained by the court to which ſuch rates, orders, or proceedings ſhall be removed, in caſe ſuch rates or orders ſhall be confirmed; nor ſhall any ſuch rates, orders, or proceedings be quaſhed or vacated for want of form only, and all charges attending ſuch removal ſhall be defrayed out of that or any ſubſequent rate.

Sect. 22. And ſo much of the before-recited act paſſed 14 Eliz. as relates to the method of taxing pariſhes for the relief of priſoners; and ſo much of the ſaid act of 43 Eliz. as relates to the method of raiſing money for the King's Bench and Marſhalſea priſons, hoſpital, and almſhouſes; and ſo much of the ſaid act of the 19th Car. 2. as relates to the method of rating pariſhes for providing materials for the ſetting poor priſoners on work, ſhall be repealed, and be abſolutely null and void.

Sect. 23. Provided, that ſuch ſums as have been annually paid to the King's Bench and Marſhalſea priſons, ſhall be paid out of the monies ariſing by virtue of this act, at ſuch times, and in ſuch manner, as is preſcribed in and by 11 Geo. 2. cap. 20. and ſuch money as ſhall be judged neceſſary by the juſtices of the peace in ſeſſions, to be applied in purſuance of the ſaid recited act of 14 Eliz. for the relief of priſoners; and of the ſaid act of 19 Car. 2. for providing materials for the ſetting poor priſoners on work, ſhall be paid out of the monies ariſing by this act.

Sect. 24. And if any action or ſuit ſhall be commenced againſt any perſon or perſons, for any thing that ſhall be done in purſuance or by the authority of this preſent act, in every ſuch caſe the action or ſuit ſhall be commenced within three months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and ſhall be laid and brought in the reſpective county in which the cauſe of action or ſuit ſhall ariſe, and not elſewhere; and the defendant or defendants in ſuch action or ſuit to be brought, ſhall and may plead the general iſſue, and give this act and the ſpecial matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and that the ſame was done in purſuance and by the authority of this act; and if it ſhall appear ſo to be done, or that ſuch action or actions ſhall be brought after the time before limited for bringing the ſame as aforeſaid; or ſhall be brought in any other county or place; that then the jury ſhall find for the defendant or defendants; and upon ſuch verdict, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs ſhall be nonſuited, or diſcontinue his, her, or their actions or ſuit, after the defendant or defendants hath or have appeared, or if upon demurrer judgment ſhall be given againſt the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants ſhall and may recover treble coſts, and have the like remedy for the ſame, as any defendant or defendants hath or have in other caſes by law.

Stat. 14 Geo. 2. cap. 33. ſect. 1. The juſtices of peace at their general or quarter ſeſſions ſhall have power to purchaſe, or agree or contract with any perſon for any piece or parcel of land, adjoining or near to any county bridge, for the more commodious enlarging or convenient rebuilding the ſame; which piece ſhall not exceed one acre, and ſhall be paid for by the county treaſurer, out of the monies raiſed by virtue of 12 Geo. 2. cap 29.

Stat. 17 Geo. 2. cap. 5. ſect. 33. The juſtices in their general or quarter ſeſſions may cauſe ſuch ſums of money as ſhall be neceſſary for apprehending, paſſing, conveying, and maintaining rogues and vagabonds, and incorrigible rogues, and likewiſe the expences of erecting, purchaſing, hiring, enlarging, altering, and repairing houſes of correction, and of ſending perſons to and from the ſame, and employing them there, to be raiſed in the ſame manner as rates are raiſed by 12 Geo. 2. cap. 29.

Stat. 25 Geo. 2. cap. 29. The coroner's fee of ninepence a mile for travelling to take an inquiſition, and twenty ſhillings for taking it, ſhall be paid out of the county ſtock.

Stat. 25 Geo. 2. cap. 36. ſect. 11. Charges of proſecuting felons ſhall be paid out of the county ſtock, by order of the court.

Stat. 26 Geo. 2. cap. 19. ſect. 8. The charges of proſecuting and convicting perſons plundering ſhipwrecked goods, ſhall be paid by the treaſurer of the county.

Stat. 27 Geo. 2. cap. 3. Charges of proſecuting and convicting felons ſhall, by order of the court, be paid out of the county ſtock.

Charges of the ſoldiers carriages, over and above the officers pay for the ſame, by the ſeveral yearly acts againſt mutiny and deſertion, and by the militia act of 30 Geo. 2. cap. 25. ſhall be paid out of the county ſtock.

Courracier, A French word ſignifying a horſe-courſer. 2 Inſt. fol. 719.

Courſitor. See Curſitor.

Court, (Curia,) Derived from the French cour, ſignifies the King's palace or manſion; but derived from the Latin word curia, which among the Romans had divers ſignifications, and with us alſo hath diverſity of ſenſes; as the houſe where the King remaineth with his ordinary retinue, and alſo the place where juſtice is judically adminiſtred, of which we find thirty-two ſorts in Crompton's Book of Juriſdictions well deſcribed, and of them moſt are courts of record, ſome are not; and therefore are accounted baſe courts, in compariſon of the reſt. Beſides theſe, there are alſo courts chriſtian, Smith de Rep. Angl. lib. 3. cap. 6. which are ſo called, becauſe they handle matters eſpecially appertaining to Chriſtianity, and ſuch as, without good knowledge in divinity, cannot be well judged of, being held heretofore by archbiſhops and biſhops, as from the pope, becauſe he challenged the ſuperiority in all cauſes ſpiritual; but ſince his rejection, they hold them by the King's authority, virtute magiſtratus ſui, as the admiral of England holds his; whereupon it proceedeth, that they ſend out their precepts in their own names, and not in the King's, as the juſtices of the King's courts do; and therefore, as the appeal from theſe courts did lie to Rome, now by the ſtatute 25 Hen. 8. c. 19. it lieth to the King in his Chancery. Cowell.

In the Saxon times, the Wittingham Mote was the chief court of the kingdom, where all matters both civil and criminal, and alſo relating to the revenue, were debated and determined; but for civil and criminal matters, it was only a court in the firſt inſtance, for facts ariſing within the county where it ſate; but by way of appeal from the injuſtice of other courts, it heard and determined cauſes from all other counties. Lamb. Archaion. 57, 259, 245. Mirror, c. 5. ſect. 1.

To this court were ſummoned the earls of each county, and the lords of each leet, and likewiſe repreſentatives of towns, who appeared on the King's ſummons, which iſſued once a year at leaſt; and here new laws were enacted, or old ones repealed, after the manner of our parliaments. Lamb. Archaion. 239.

But William the Conqueror cauſed the ſtates to recognize him, and fearing that theſe parliaments, conſiſting of Engliſhmen, might prove dangerous, he eſtabliſhed a conſtant court in his own hall, made up of the officers of his palace, and they tranſacted the buſineſs both criminal and civil, and likewiſe the matters of the revenue; and as they ſate in the hall they were a court criminal, and when up the ſtairs a court of revenue; the civil pleas they heard in either court. Madox, c. 7.

The court conſiſted, 1. Of the juſticiar who preſided, and was called Capitalis juſticiarius totius Angliæ, and chiefly determined all pleas civil and criminal, and was alſo the chief officer of ſtate. 2. The chancellor, who formed all patents, and put the ſeal to them, and had the cuſtody thereof, both for writs and patents. 3. The treaſurer, before whom all accounts were chiefly audited; and he it was that preſided in matters relating to the revenue. 4. The conſtable and marſhal, to whom all matters of honour, and war, and peace were referred, to determine according to the law of nations and of arms.

5. The ſeneſchal, or ſteward and marſhal, who determined the quarrels and diſputes between the King's menial ſervants; the marſhal was alſo to keep the priſoners, and take care that no indecency was committed in the King's houſe. 6. The chamberlain, who was to count the King's money, as it came in, and iſſued out of the Treaſury. Madox, c. 9.

This was the ſovereign court of the Kingdom, where juſtice was adminiſtred, and where all matters of the higheſt moment were tranſacted by the King himſelf and theſe officers; yet, in ſome caſes, of great importance, as upon the levying a new war, or raiſing an eſcuage, moſt of the great perſons that held in capite were called, and then it was termed the commune concilium regni, or the parliament; to which afterwards the repreſentatives of boroughs that held in capite were called. Madox, c. 8.

Towards the Norman period, the power of the juſticiar became formidable, and in the barons war was turned againſt the King; the King alſo found, that the barons who held large diſtricts, were likely to grow more and more troubleſome to the crown; for though in the conqueror's time, and for ſome reigns after the conqueſt, they were kept in very good ſubjection; yet time wearing away the diſtinction, and the Normans growing up Engliſh, they became fond of thoſe liberties and privileges that the Engliſh had enjoyed in the Saxon times; hence it was neceſſary to introduce a new policy, and hence the original of our courts, as we have them at this day in Weſtminſter Hall. Madox, c. 8.

To give countenance to this new erection and diviſion of courts, (which was compleated by Ed. 1.) as alſo that it might ſtill be ſeen, that all juſtice flowed from the King, the King himſelf ſat in perſon in the court of King's Bench; and hence the power of this court, which it ſtill retains, of exerciſing a ſuperintendancy over other juriſdictions; but though the King was ſometimes preſent, yet the Chief Juſtice gave the rule, that the King might not decide in his own cauſe. Madox, c. 19. fo. 21. and 135. 1 Rol. Abr. 94. and ſee 2 Inſt. 24, 25. Speed. 521. 1 Rol. Abr. 535.

But however this regulation might have been begun, or however it might have been formerly, as to the Kings ſitting and determining in cauſes, it ſeems now agreed, that our Kings having delegated their whole judicial power to the judges of their ſeveral courts, they, by the long, conſtant, and uninterrupted uſage of many ages have now gained a known and ſtated juriſdiction, regulated by certain and eſtabliſhed rules, which our Kings themſelves cannot make any alteration in without an act of parliament. 2 Inſt. 73. 2 Hawk. P C. 2.

But as the King is the fountain of juſtice, and the ſupreme magiſtrate of the kingdom, intruſted with the whole executive power of the law, no court whatſoever can claim any juriſdiction, unleſs it ſome way or other derives it from the crown. S. P. C. 54, 55. 2 Hawk. P. C. 2.

But it is clearly agreed, that the King cannot give any addition of juriſdiction to an ancient court, but that all ſuch courts muſt be holden in ſuch manner, and proceed by ſuch rules, and in ſuch caſes only as their known uſage has limited and preſcribed; and hence it followeth, that the court of King's Bench cannot be authoriſed to determine a mere real action between ſubject and ſubject; ſo neither can the court of Common Pleas, to enquire of treaſon or felony. 6 H. 7. 4. b. 5. a. 4 Inſt. 125, 127. 6 Co. 11. b. 12. a.

And it is ſaid, that the King is ſo far reſtrained by the ancient forms, in all caſes of this nature, that his grant of a judicial office for life, which has been accuſtomed to be granted only at his will, is void. 4 Inſt. 87. 1 Sid. 338.

Alſo commiſſions to ſeize the goods, and impriſon the bodies of all perſons who ſhall be notoriouſly ſuſpected of felonies or treſpaſſes, without any indictment, or other legal proceſs againſt them, are illegal and void. 4 Aſſ. 5. Bro. Commiſſ. 3, 15, 16. 12 Co. 30, 31. 4 Inſt. 478.

And it is ſaid, that the King cannot grant any new commiſſion whatſoever that is not warranted by ancient precedents, however neceſſary it may ſeem, and conducive to the public good; and therefore commiſſions to aſſay weights and meaſures being of a new invention, were condemned by parliament; and it is ſaid, that the King could not authorize perſons to take care of rivers, and the fiſhery therein, according to the method preſcribed by the ſtatute of Weſtm. 2. cap. 47. before the making of that ſtatute. 4 Inſt. 163. 18 E. 3. 1, 4. 2 Inſt. 478.

The moſt general diviſion of our courts is, into ſuch as are of record, or not; thoſe of record are again divided into ſuch as are ſupreme, ſuperior or inferior. Hale's An. 35.

The ſupreme court of this kingdom is the high court of parliament, conſiſting of the King, lords, and commons, who are inveſted with a kind of omnipotence in making new laws, repealing and reviving old ones; and it is on the right balance of theſe three depends the well-being, and indeed, the very being of our conſtitution. Hale's An. 35.

Superior courts of record are again, thoſe that are more principal or leſs principal; the more principal ones are the lords houſe in parliament, the Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer; and by Hale, ſuch are the juſtices itenerant ad communia placita & ad placita foreſtæ. Hale's An. 36.

The leſs principal ones are ſuch as are held by commiſſion of gaol-delivery, oyer and terminer, aſſiſe, niſi prius, &c. by cuſtom or charter; as the courts of the palatine of Lancaſter, Cheſter, Durham, or by virtue of acts of parliament, and the King's commiſſion, as the court of ſewers, juſtices of the peace, &c. Hale's An. 36.

The inferior courts of record, as ordinarily ſo called, are corporation courts, courts leet, and ſheriffs torn, &c. Hale's An. 36.

Courts not of record are the courts baron, county courts, hundred courts, &c.

Alſo the admiralty, and eccleſiaſtical courts, which are not courts of record, but derive their authority from the crown, and are ſubject to the controul of the King's temporal courts, when they exceed their juriſdiction.

All theſe are bounded and circumſcribed by certain laws and ſtated rules, to which, in all their proceedings and judicial determinations, they muſt ſquare themſelves. Hale's An. 35.

And here it may be proper to obſerve, that where a ſtatute prohibits a thing, and appoints that the offence ſhall be heard and determined in any of the King's courts of record, it can be proceeded againſt only in one of the courts of Weſtminſter Hall; becauſe thoſe being the higheſt courts of record, ſhall be intended only to be ſpoken of ſecundum excellentiam. Dyer 236. 6 Co. 19. b. Cro. Jac. 538. Cro. El. 737. Cro. Car. 146. Cromp. Jur. 132. 1 Salk. 178.

Every court of record is the King's court, though the profits may be another's; if the judges of ſuch courts err, a writ of error lies; the truth of its records ſhall be tried by the records themſelves, and there ſhall be no averment againſt the truth of the matter recorded. Co. Lit. 17. 8 Co. 38. b. 2 Lev. 93. 3 Lev. 205.

All ſuch courts are created by act of parliament, letters patent or preſcription, and every court, by having power given it to fine and impriſon, is thereby made a court of record; the proceedings of which can only be removed by writ of error or certiorari. Co. Lit. 260. a. 1 Salk. 200.

A court, that is not of record, cannot impoſe any fine on an offender, nor award a capias againſt him, nor hold plea of debt or treſpaſs, if the debt or damages amount to 40*s.* nor of treſpaſs done vi & armis, tho' the damages are laid to be under 40*s.* Co. Lit. 117. b. 260. a. 2 Inſt. 311, 312.

Alſo by the ſtatute of Glouceſter (made 6 Ed. 1. c. 8.) the ſuperior courts ſhall not hold plea of any treſpaſs under the value of 40*s.* The wood treſpaſs is put in this this ſtatute but for an example, for debt, detinue, covenant, and the like. 2 Inſt. 311.

But the ſuperior courts may hold plea of treſpaſs, &c. though under 40*s.* relating to the freehold, as detinue for charters, &c. or treſpaſs vi & armis. 2 Inſt. 311.

As where in treſpaſs by way of original, the plaintiff declared, that the defendant vi & armis clauſum ſuum apud H. fregit, and concluded ad damnum ipſius 20*s.* and upon demurrer it was held well enough; for this being done vi & armis, if it could not be puniſhed in the ſuperior court, it could not be puniſhed at all, for an inferior court cannot aſſeſs a fine. Carth. 108. 3 Mod. 275. See Judges.

Court of Admiralty, See Admiralty.

Court-Baron, (Curia Baronis,) Is a court which every lord of a manor, (who in ancient times were called barons) hath within his own precincts. Cowell.

This court is incident to every manor, and had anciently conuzance of all pleas of land within the manor, ſo that no perſon within the manor could apply to any other juriſdiction without a remiſit curiam from the lord. 4 Inſt. 264. 4 Co. 33. Co. Lit. 58. It was at firſt inſtituted for the eaſe of the tenants, for ending controverſies where the debt or damage was under 40*s.* at home, &c. 4 Inſt. 268. Owen 35. 1 Brownl. 175. 1 Bulſt. 55. But at this day it is no court of record, nor can it hold plea of debt or treſpaſs, where the debt or damage amounts to 40*s.* Co. Lit. 118. 2 Inſt. 311. —Nor of treſpaſs vi & armis, becauſe it cannot impoſe a fine. Co. Lit. 118. 2 Inſt. 311, 312.

The ſuitors are judges, and the ſteward but as a regiſter. Co. Lit. 58.

The ſtile of this court is Curia baronis E. C. militis manerii ſui prædicti (having the manor's name written in the margin) tent' tali die coram A. B. Seneſchallo ibidem, &c. 4 Inſt. 268.

This court cannot be holden out of the manor; but if a man be lord of two or three manors, and there be a cuſtom to hold a court at one, for them all, ſuch courts are by cuſtom good. Co. Lit. 58.

This court is of two natures; the firſt is by Common law, and called the freeman's court, or court-baron; and of this the ſuitors are judges, and the ſteward is regiſter; and this may be kept from three weeks to three weeks: The ſecond is a cuſtomary court, and concerns copyholders, of which the lord or his ſteward is judge; as the firſt cannot be without freeholders, ſo this cannot be without copyholders; a court baron may be of this double nature, and then the roll contains matter concerning both. Co. Lit. 58.

All pleas in a court-baron, of common right, and by courſe of law are determinable by wager of law, but by preſcription they may be determined by jury. 4 Inſt. 143.

If a man recovers in a court baron, they have not power to make execution to the plaintiff, of the goods of the defendant; but they may diſtrain him, and retain the diſtreſs till ſatisfaction. 1 Rol. Abr. 543.

If in a court-baron the defendant appears not upon the diſtreſs, yet the goods diſtrained are not forfeited, nor can be ſold by the bailiff; for the diſtreſs is but in nature of a pledge; and though by the courſe of the Common law, where a man is attached by his goods, and appears not, they are forfeited; yet in a court-baron no attachment lies, but a diſtreſs infinite only. Yelv. 194. Cro. Jac. 255.

Court of Chancery. See Chancery.

Court of Chivalry, (Curia Militaris,) Otherwiſe called the Marſhal-court; the judges of it are the Lord Conſtable of England, and the Earl Marſhal of England: This court is the fountain of the martial law, and the Earl Marſhal is both one of the judges, and to ſee execution done. Cowell, edit. 1727. See Conſtable, and 4 Inſt. f. 123.

In the King's own court, eſtabliſhed by William the Conqueror, there were high officers, called the conſtable and marſhal, to whom chiefly belong the conuzance of matters of honour, war, and peace; and therefore all foreign facts committed by the King's ſubjects were referred to them to determine, according to the law of nations and arms. Madox, 27. Fleta, lib. 2. c. 31. Spelm. Gloſſ.

It ſeems agreed, that during the lunacy of the Earl Marſhal, this court may be holden before commiſſioners deputed to exerciſe this office. 1 Lev. 230. 2 Haw. P. C. 14.

It has been a matter greatly debated, whether this court can be holden before the Lord Marſhal only, without a Conſtable; and thoſe, who are for the negative, ground their opinions chiefly on the ſtatutes, ancient law books and records, which ſeem to mention the Conſtable as the only, or at leaſt, as the principal judge of this court. 1 New Abr. 602.

But notwithſtanding this, the conſtant practice, eſpecially ſince the extinguiſhment of the hereditary office of Conſtable in Henry the Eighth's time, of holding this court by the Earl Marſhal only, and the general notions of our judges and lawyers, of the legality of ſuch court, ſeem in a great meaſure to eſtabliſh a contrary opinion, and that at this day it may be holden before the Earl Marſhal only. 1 New Abr. 602.

But it is agreed, that appeals of capital matters cannot be brought before the Marſhal alone, becauſe the 1 H. 4. which ſhews how ſuch appeals ſhall be brought is expreſs, that they ſhall be tried and determined before the Conſtable and Marſhal of England. 2 Haw. P. C. 13.

If this court, holden before the Earl Marſhal only, exceed its juriſdiction, it has been reſolved, that it may be prohibited by the Common law courts. 2 Hawk. P. C. 602.

The juriſdiction of this court is declared by the 13 Rich. 2. cap. 2. by which it is recited, "That the commons made grievous complaints, that the court of the Conſtable and Marſhal daily incroached contracts and treſpaſſes, and many other actions at the Common law; and thereupon it is declared, That to the Conſtable it appertaineth to have conuzance of contracts touching deeds of arms, and of war out of the realm, and alſo of things which touch war within the realm, which cannot be determined nor diſcuſſed by the Common law; with other uſages to the ſame matters appertaining, which other Conſtaſtbles before have reaſonably uſed; joining to the ſame, that every plaintiff ſhall declare plainly his matter in his petition, before that any man be ſent to anſwer thereto; and if any will complain that any plea is commenced before the Conſtable and Marſhal, that might be tried by the common law, he ſhall have a privy ſeal to the ſaid Conſtable and Marſhal, to ſurceaſe till it be diſcuſſed by the King's counſel, if the matter of right pertain to that court, &c.

And it is further enacted by 1 Hen. 4. cap. 14. "That all appeals of things done within the realm ſhall be tried and determined by the good laws of the realm, and that appeals of things done out of the realm ſhall be tried and determined before the Conſtable and Earl Marſhal, and that no appeal be made or purſued in parliament.

As the juriſdiction of this court is reſtrained to things touching war within the realm, it can have no juriſdiction as to a civil matter, and therefore cannot proceed againſt a perſon for bare ſcandalous words, reflecting on the honour or gentility of families. 2 Hawk. P. C. 11.

Alſo though the marſhaling of publick funerals belong to the heralds, who are the attendants of this court, and no other perſons, without their licence, can lawfully intermeddle in it. Yet it ſeems to be ſettled, that this court cannot puniſh thoſe who ſhall be guilty of ſuch an incroachment, becauſe it is a proper ground for an action on matters which may be determined by the Common law. 1 Lev. 230. 1 Sid. 353. 1 Show. Rep. 353. Show. P. C. 58.

But by the conſtant practice, and the general opinion of lawyers, it ſeems at this day to have a juriſdiction as to diſputes concerning precedency and points of honour, and ſatisfaction therein, and may proceed againſt perſons for falſly aſſuming the name and arms of honourable perſons, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 11.

This

This court is to be governed by its own uſages, as far as they go, and in other caſes by the civil law; but ſince it is no court of Common law, no condemnation in it cauſes any forfeiture of lands, or corruption of blood; neither can an error in it be remedied by writ of error, but only by appeal to the King; yet the judges of the Common law take notice of its juriſdiction, and give credit to a certificate of its judges. 3 Inſt. 125. 2 Hawk. P. C. 13.

It is made a doubt, whether the King hath any remedy in this court againſt an offender, by way of indictment or information by the attorney general. Hutton 3.

Court Chriſtian, (Curia Chriſtianitatis,) So called, becauſe, as in ſecular courts the King's laws do ſway and decide cauſes; ſo in eccleſiaſtical courts, the laws of Chriſt ſhould rule and direct; for which cauſe, the judges in thoſe courts are Divines, as archbiſhops, biſhops, archdeacons, &c. Lyndewood's words are theſe: In curia Chriſtianitatis, i. e. Eccleſiæ, in qua ſervantur leges Chriſti, cum tamen in foro regio ſerventur leges mundi. 2 Inſt. f. 488. See Court. But there was a complaint made againſt the biſhops long before the reformation, that they had extended their juriſdiction ſo far, that they had left very little buſineſs for the ſecular judges; for they aſſum'd the judicature over the clergy, and every one who had tonſure; and for that purpoſe they would cauſe a great number of boys to be ſhaved: And though they had no legal juriſdiction in criminal caſes, of the clergy, but only in the execution of the ſentence, which was degradation; yet they judged likewiſe in thoſe caſes, and in all ſpiritual cauſes whatſoever; in caſes of tithes and other profits ariſing to the church; in caſes relating to the faith and ſacraments; in caſes of hereſies; of any violence done to the church or to the clergy; of fornication and adultery; of the privileges of thoſe who had taken upon themſelves the ſign of the croſs; of all matrimonial cauſes; of baſtardy and legitimation; of laſt wills and teſtaments, and of lands and tenements which were given in alms; of uſury, &c. Du Freſne.

Court of Delegates, Is the higheſt court for civil affairs that concern the church; the juriſdiction whereof was eſtabliſhed by 25 Hen. 8. cap. 19. From the higheſt court of the archbiſhop of Canterbury, there lies an appeal to this court, and from this to no other. See Delegates.

Courts Eccleſiaſtical, (Curiæ Eccleſiaſticæ,) Are thoſe courts which are held by the King's authority as ſupreme governor of the church, for matters which chiefly concern religion. 4 Inſt. 121. And the laws and conſtitutions whereby the Church of England is governed are, 1. Divers immemorial cuſtoms. 2. Our own provincial conſtitutions, and the canons made in convocations, eſpecially thoſe in the year 1603. 3. Statutes or acts of parliament concerning the affairs of religion, or cauſe of eccleſiaſtical cognizance; particularly the rubricks in our Common-Prayer-Book, founded upon the act of Uniformity. 4. The articles of religion, drawn up in the year 1562, and eſtabliſhed 13 Eliz. cap. 12. 5. And 'tis ſaid, by the general Canon law, where all others fail. See the 25 Hen. 8. cap. 28. As to ſuits in ſpiritual or eccleſiaſtical courts, they are for the reformation of manners; or for puniſhing of hereſy, defamation, laying violent hands on a clerk, and the like; and ſome of their ſuits are to recover ſomething demanded, as tithes, a legacy, contract of marriage, &c. and in the cauſes of this nature, the courts may give coſts, but not damages:

Things that properly belong to their juriſdictions are matrimonial and teſtamentary, and defamatory words, for which no action lies at law; as for calling one adulterer, fornicator, uſurer, or the like. 11 Rep. 54. Dyer 240. The proceedings in the eccleſiaſtical courts, are according to the Civil and Canon law, by citation, libel, anſwer, upon oath, proof by witneſſes, and preſumptions, &c. and after ſentence, for contempt, by excommunication: and if the ſentence is diſliked, by appeal. The juriſdiction of theſe courts, is voluntary, or contentious: And the puniſhments inflicted by them, are cenſures and puniſhments pro ſalute animæ, by way of penance, &c. They are not courts of record. See Conſultation and Prohibition.

Court of Exchequer. See Exchequer.

Court of Huſtings, (Curia Huſtingi,) Is the high court of record holden at Guildhall, for the city of London, before the Lord Mayor and aldermen, the ſheriffs, and recorder. 4 Inſt. 247. This court determines all pleas, real and mixt: And here all lands, tenements and hereditaments, rents and ſervices, within the city of London and ſuburbs of the ſame, are pleaded in two huſtings; one called huſtings of plea of lands, and the other huſtings of common pleas. In the huſtings of plea of lands, are brought writs of right patent directed to the ſheriffs of London; on which writs the tenant ſhall have three ſummons at the three huſtings next following; and after the three ſummons there ſhall be three eſſoins at three other huſtings next enſuing; and at the next huſtings after the third eſſoin, if the tenant makes default, proceſs ſhall be had againſt him by grand cape, or petit cape, &c. And if the tenant appears, the defendant is to declare in the nature of what writ he will; without making proteſtation to ſue in nature of any writ: Then the tenant ſhall have the view, &c. and if the parties plead to judgment, the judgment ſhall be given by the recorder: but no damages, by the cuſtom of the city, are recoverable in any ſuch writ of right patent. In the huſtings of common pleas are pleadable, writs ex gravi querela, writs of gavelet, of dower, waſte, &c. alſo writs of exigent are taken out in the huſtings; and at the fifth huſtings the outlawries are awarded, and judgment pronounced by the recorder. If an erroneous judgment is given in the huſtings, the party grieved may ſue a commiſſion out of Chancery, directed to certain perſons to examine the record, and thereupon do right. See Laws and Cuſtoms, &c. of London.

Court-Leet. See Leet.

Court of the legate, Was a court obtained by Cardinal Wolſey, of Pope Leo the tenth, in the ninth year of Henry the Eighth, wherein he had power to prove wills, and diſpenſe with offences againſt the ſpiritual laws, &c. and was but of ſhort continuance.

Court of Marſhalſea, (Curia palatii,) A court of record to hear and determine cauſes between the ſervants of the King's houſhold and others within the verge; and hath juriſdiction of all matters within the verge of the court, and pleas of treſpaſs, where either party is of the King's family; and of all other actions perſonal, wherein both parties are the King's ſervants; and this is the original juriſdiction of the court of marſhalſea. But the curia palatii, erected by King Charles I. by letters patent, in the ſixth year of his reign, and made a court of record, hath power to try all perſonal actions, as debt, treſpaſs, ſlander, trover, actions on the caſe, &c. between party and party, the liberty whereof extends twelve miles about Whitehall; which juriſdiction hath ſince been confirmed by King Charles the Second: and the judges of this court, are the Steward of the King's houſhold, and Knight Marſhal for the time being, and the Steward of the court, or his deputy, being always a lawyer. Cromp. Juriſd. 102. Kitchin 199, &c. 2 Inſt. 548. This court is kept once a week, in Southwark: and the proceedings here are either by capias or attachment; which is to be ſerved on the defendant by one of the King's marſhal's men, who takes bond with ſureties for his appearance at the next court; upon which appearance, he muſt give bail, to anſwer the condemnation of the court; and the next court after the bail is taken, the plaintiff is to declare, and ſet forth the cauſe of his action, and afterwards proceed to iſſue and trial by a jury, according to the cuſtom of the Common law courts. If a cauſe is conſiderable, it is uſually removed into B. R. or C. B. by an habeas corpus cum cauſa: Otherwiſe cauſes are here brought to a trial in four or five court days. Practiſ. Solic. 409, 410. By ſtatute, the Steward and Marſhal of the King's houſe are not to hold plea of freehold, &c. 28 Ed. 1. cap. 3. Error in the marſhalſea court may be removed into the King's Bench, 10 Ed. 3. and and the fees of the marſhalſea are limited by the ſtat. 2 Hen. 4. cap. 23. this marſhalſea is that of the houſhold; not the King's marſhalſea, which belongs to the King's Bench. See Marſhallea.

Court martial, (Curia martialis) Is a court for puniſhing the offences of officers and ſoldiers in time of war: And it appears by our books, that if any perſon in commiſſion, in time of peace, put to death any man by martial law, it is againſt Magna Charta, and murder. 3 Inſt. 52. But temporary acts of parliament have enabled our Kings to hold courts martial in time of peace, &c.——Directions for trials by courts martial, 22 Geo. 2. c. 3. 30 Geo. 2. c. 6, 11. Officers of the militia and the army not to ſit indiſcriminately in courts martial, 30 Geo. 2. c. 25. ſect. 47.

Court of peculiars, (Curia peculiarium) Is a ſpiritual court, held in ſuch pariſhes as are exempt from the juriſdiction of the biſhops, and are peculiarly belonging to the archbiſhop of Canterbury, in whoſe province there are 57 ſuch peculiars.

Court of piepowders, (Curia pedis pulveriſati,) Is a court held in fairs, to do juſtice to buyers and ſellers, and for redreſs of diſorders committed in them: ſo called, becauſe they are moſt uſual in ſummer, when the ſuitors to the court have duſty feet; and from the expedition in hearing cauſes proper thereunto, before the duſt goes off the feet of the plaintiffs and defendants. 4 Inſt. 272. It is a court of record incident to every fair; and to be held only during the time that the fair is kept. Doct. & Stud. cap. 5. As to the juriſdiction, the cauſe of action for contract, ſlander, &c. muſt ariſe in the fair or market; and not before at any former fair, nor after the fair: It is to be for ſome matter concerning the ſame fair or market; and be done, complained of, heard and determined the ſame day. Alſo the plaintiff muſt make oath that the contract, &c. was within the juriſdiction and time of the fair. Stat. 17 Ed. 4. c. 2. 2 Inſt. 220. The court of piepowders may hold plea of a ſum above 40*s.* and 'tis ſaid judgment may be given at another fair, at a court held there: And a writ of error lies upon a judgment given. Dyer 133. F. N. B. 18. This court may not meddle with any thing done in a market, without ſpecial cuſtom for it; but for what is done in a fair only: and not there for ſlanderous words, unleſs they concern matter of contract in the fair; as where it is for ſlandering the wares of another, and not of his perſon in the ſame fair. Moor, ca. 854. The Steward before whom the court is held, is the judge, and the trial is by merchants and traders in the fair; and the judgment againſt the defendant ſhall be quod amercietur. If the Steward proceeds contrary to the ſtatute 17 Ed. 4. he ſhall forfeit 5*l.*

Court of Requeſt, (Curia requiſitionum) Was a court of equity, of the ſame nature with the court of Chancery, but inferior to it; principally inſtituted for the relief of ſuch petitioners as in conſcionable caſes addreſſed themſelves by ſupplication to his Majeſty. Of this court, the Lord Privy Seal was chief judge, aſſiſted by the Maſters of Requeſts; and it had beginning about the 9 H. 7. according to Sir Julius Cæſar's Tract on this ſubject: Though Mr. Gwyn, in his Preface to his Readings ſaith, it began from a commiſſion firſt granted by King Henry 8. This court having aſſumed great power to itſelf, ſo that it became burdenſome, Mich. anno 40 & 41 Eliz. in the court of Common Pleas, it was adjudged upon ſolemn argument, that the Court of Requeſts was no court of judicature, &c. and by the ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 1. c. 10. it was taken away. 4 Inſt. 97.

Court of the Lord Steward of the King's houſe. The Lord Steward, or in his abſence, the Treaſurer and Controller of the King's houſe, and Steward of the marſhalſea, may inquire of, hear and determine in this court, all treaſons, murders, manſlaughters, bloodſheds, and other malicious ſtrikings, whereby blood ſhall be ſhed in any of the palaces and houſes of the King, or in any other houſe wherein his Royal perſon ſhall abide. And this juriſdiction was given by ſtat. 33 Hen. 8. c. 12. 3 Inſt. 140. But this court was at firſt intended to inquire of and puniſh felonies, &c. by the King's ſervants, againſt any lord or other perſon of the King's council. 3 H. 7. c. 14.

Court of Star-chamber, (Curia cameræ ſtellatæ,) A court erected by 3 Hen. 7. c. 8. which ordained, that the Lord Chancellor, Treaſurer, and Lord Privy Seal, calling a biſhop, and Lord of the King's council, and the two chief juſtices to their aſſiſtance, on bill or information might make proceſs againſt maintainers, rioters, perſons unlawfully aſſembling, and for other miſdemeanors, which through the power and countenance of ſuch as did commit them lifted up their heads above their faults, and puniſh them as if the offenders had been convicted at law by a jury, &c. but this act was repealed, and the court diſſolved by ſtatute 17 Car. 1. c. 10.

Court of Survey. See Survey.

Courts of univerſities. The courts of the univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge are of a particular nature: They were granted by charters, and confirmed by authority of parliament. See ſtat. 13 Eliz. 4 Inſt. 227. Theſe courts are called The Chancellor's courts, and are kept by the Vice-Chancellors of the univerſities: Their juriſdiction extends to all cauſes eccleſiaſtical and civil, (except for maihem, felony, and relating to freehold) where a ſcholar, ſervant, or miniſter of the univerſities is one of the parties to the ſuit. The cauſes are managed by advocates and proctors: and they proceed in a ſummary way, according to the practice of the Civil law; and the judges in their ſentences follow the juſtice and equity of the Civil law, or the laws, ſtatutes and cuſtoms of the univerſities, or the laws of the land, at their diſcretion. 3 Cro. 73. If any erroneous judgment be given in theſe courts, appeal lies to the congregation; thence to the convocation; and thence to the King in Chancery, by his delegates. Wood's Inſt. 526. See Conuſance, Univerſities.

Courts of Wales, (Curiæ principalitatis Walliæ,) The courts of the principality of Wales, and their juriſdiction, are ſettled by acts of parliament: And beſides county-courts, hundred-courts, courts-leet, &c. by 34 & 35 Hen. 8. c. 26. it is enacted, That there ſhall be a court of grand ſeſſions, kept twice in every year in every of the twelve counties of Wales; and the juſtices of thoſe courts may hold pleas of the crown in as large a manner as the King's Bench, &c And alſo pleas of aſſizes, and all other pleas and actions real and perſonal, in as large a manner as the Common Pleas, &c. And errors in judgment before any of the juſtices in the great ſeſſions, ſhall be redreſſed by writ of error out of the Chancery of England; returnable in *B. Cravare, i. e. To impeach, viz. Si homicida divadietur ibi vel cravetur, fit witam, &c. Leg. H. 1. cap. 30.

Cravent or Craven. In a trial by battle upon a writ of right, the ancient law was, That the victory ſhould be proclaimed, and the vanquiſhed acknowledge his fault in the audience of the people, or pronounce the horrid word cravent, in the name of recreantiſe, &c. and preſently judgment was to be given, and after this, the recreant ſhould loſe liberam legem, that is, he ſhould become infamous, &c. 2 part. Inſt. 247, 248. If the appellant join battle, and cry craven, he ſhall loſe liberam legem; but if the appellee cry craven, he ſhall be hanged. 3 Inſt. f. 221. We ſtill retain this word craven, for a coward.

Crayer ſeems to be a kind of a ſmall ſea veſſel or ſhip, mentioned in the ſtatute 14 Car. 2. cap. 27. Et tranſitus craerarum & batellorum cum victualibus & aliis neceſſariis, &c. Pat. 6. R. 2. part. 2. m. 13.

Creamer, A foreign merchant, a pedlar, one who hath a ſtall in a fair or market.

Creanſor, Creditor, (from the French Croyance) Perſuaſio, ſignifieth him that truſteth another with any debt, be it money or wares. This word is uſed in the Old Nat. Brev. in the writ of Audita Querela, f. 66. and 38 Ed. 3. cap. 5.

Creaſt, or Creſt, (Criſta,) Any imagery, or carved work, to adorn the head, or top of any wainſcot, &c. like our modern corniſh: The word is now adopted by the heralds, and applied to the device ſet over a coat of arms.——Et Willielmo Hykkedon conducto in groſſo ad menſam domini ad dolandum & perficiendum le creſt, ſuper cancellum prioratus ibidem. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. 575.

Creaſt-tile. See Rock-tile.

Creation-money, Is mentioned in Stat. 12 Car. 2. cap. 1.

Creche, A drinking cup: 'Tis mentioned in the Monaſticon, 1 tom. pag. 104. Vas vero quod creche nuncupatur ſeptem pollices continet, viz. ad profunditatem a ſummitate unius uſque ad profundum lateris alterius.

Creditors, Shall recover their debts of executors, or adminiſtrators, who in their own wrong waſte, or convert to their uſe the eſtate of the deceaſed, &c. Stat. 30. Car. 2. c. 7. Wills and deviſes of lands, &c. as to creditors on bonds, or other ſpecialties, are declared void; and the creditors may have actions of debt againſt the heir at law and deviſees; 3 & 4 Will. & Ma. c. 14. and in favour of creditors, when ever it appears to be the teſtator's intent, in a will, that his land ſhould be liable for paying his debts; in ſuch caſe equity will make them ſubject, though there are not expreſs words, but there muſt be more than a bare declaration, or it ſhall be intended out of the perſonal eſtate. 2 Vern. Rep. 708. Where one deviſes that all his debts, &c. ſhall be firſt paid; if his perſonal eſtate is not ſufficient to pay the creditors, it ſhall amount to a charge on his real eſtate for that purpoſe. Preced. Chanc. 430. See Frauds, and 7 Vin. Abr. 42—54.

Creek, (Creca, Sax. Crecca,) Is a part of a haven, where any thing is landed from the ſea. So that when you are out of the main ſea within the haven, look how many landing places you have, ſo many creeks may be ſaid to belong to that haven. See Cromp. Juriſd. fol. 110. a. This word is mentioned in the ſtat. 4 H. 4. cap. 20. (where it is ſaid,——In great ports of the ſea, and not in crykes or ſmall arrivals) 5 Eliz. cap. 5. and 14 Car. 2. cap. 28. and in Plow. caſe of Renyger and Fogaſſa.

Crementum comitatus. The improvement of the King's rents above the ancient vicontiel rents, for which improvements the ſheriff anſwered under the title of crementum comitatus, or firma de cremento comitatus. Hale of Sheriff's Accounts, p. 36.

Cripplegate. See Church.

Cro, Croy, Signifies marſh-land: Et quia paluſtris hujus Croyland ut ipſum nomen indicat, nam crudam terram & cœnoſam ſignificat. Ingulphus, pag. 853.

Crocards, A ſort of money, very baſe. See Pollards.

Croca cowellet, i. e. Olla ſimul bullit, from the Saxon crocca, i. e. olla, and fellen, bullire. Si plures aliqui faciunt homicidium quorum crocca cowellet, ſi velint ſimul componant. Leg. Hen. 1. cap. 78.

Crociarius, The crociary, or croſs-bearer, who, like our verger went before the prelate, and bore his croſs.——Robertus de Wycombe, clericus epiſcopi Dunelm. quem vulgo crociarium ejus vocant.——Liber de miraculis Tho. Cantilup. epiſc. Heref. MS. ſub anno 1290.

Crocium. This perhaps is the only word that exerciſed, and eſcaped the ſagacity of the very acute Sir Henry Spelman; who in his Gloſſary, expreſſes the meaning of it to this effect: I hear there is in Ireland a charter of King Henry II. wherein he grants very ample privileges to a certain biſhop,——exceptis foreſtallis, theſauro invento, crociis, &c. What is meant here by crociis, I have endeavoured to find, but can make no anſwer, if it be any thing elſe than the cro in the Scotiſh law, that is, the weregild, or compoſition for manſlaughter. For though that prince had taken away the cuſtom of weregild from his ſubjects, yet he left them entire among the Iriſh.——This miſtaken ſenſe of a word is yet rare in Spelman; but it is not ſo much a wonder, that Du Freſne ſhould not find the meaning of it, which yet ſeems very obvious. For crocia was no more than the croſier, or paſtoral ſtaff, which biſhops and abbots had the privilege to carry, as the common enſign of their religious office; as being inveſted in their prelacies, by the delivery of ſuch a croſier. Hence the word crocium and crocia, did ſometimes denote the collation or diſpoſal of archbiſhopricks and abbies, by the donation of ſuch paſtoral ſtaff. So as when the King granted large juriſdiction, &c. exceptis crociis, it is meant, except the collation or inveſtiture of epiſcopal ſees and abbies. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Crocus, curled hair: Pryn. Ch. Lib. Angl. tom. 2. pag. 479. Sciatis quod poteſtatem vobis dedimus, capillos clericorum noſtrorum, longos crines habentium, & ad crocos capillorum ſuorum deponendos, &c.

Croft, (Sax.) Croftus & Crofta, A little cloſe incloſed near a dwelling-houſe, for any particular uſe. Poſſunt etiam etiam dicti monachi de eiſdem mariſcis verſus occidentem jacentibus, pro ſe & hominibus ſuis, includere croftos, ſive pratam juxta pontem ſeparaliter quantum illis placuerit. Ingulf. In ſome ancient deeds cruſta occurs, as the Latin word for a croft; but cum toftis & croftis is moſt frequent. Croft is tranſlated by Abbo Floriacenſis, by prædium, a farm. It ſeems to come from the old Engliſh word creafe, which ſignified handicraft, becauſe ſuch grounds are for the moſt part manured, and extraordinarily dreſſed by the labour and ſkill of the owner. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Croiſes, (Cruce ſignati) Is uſed by Briton, cap. 122. for pilgrims, becauſe they wear the ſign of the croſs upon their garments. Of theſe and their privileges, read Bracton, lib. 5. part. 2. ca. 2. and part. 5. c. 29. and the Grand Cuſtumary of Normandy, c. 45. Under this word are alſo ſignified the knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, created for the defence of pilgrims; and all thoſe worthy men of the nobility and gentry of England, who, in the reigns of King Henry the Second, Richard the Firſt, Henry the Third, and Edward the Firſt, were cruce ſignati, as dedicating and liſting themſelves to the wars, for the recovery of Jeruſalem and the Holy Land. Greg. Syntag. lib. 15. cap. 13 & 14.

Crok, Crocus, Capellorum croci, Turning up the hair into curls or croks; whence crook, crooked, &c.——Rex Willielmo de Peretot, ſalutem, Sciatis quod conceſſimus, & plenam poteſtatem vobis dedimus ſcindendi capillos clericorum qui ſunt de hoſpitio noſtro, & familia noſtra longos crines habentium, & comas intorquentium, & ad crocos capillorum ſuorum deponendos; & ideo vobis mandamus quatenus ad hoc modo debito diligenter intendatis, hujuſmodi poteſtatem noſtram vobis conceſſam taliter exequentes circa prædictos capillos ſcindendos, & crocos deponendos, ne ad capillos veſtros ſcindendos forcipes apponere debemus: Teſte me ipſo apud Clare. 11 die Sept. Pat. 21 H. 3.

Croppa, Sax. Croppas, A crop of corn, or the product in harveſt.——Johannes, prior & conventus concedunt Radulpho de Hok, terram de Yorkherſt——croppam autem de ipſa terra provenientem ſæpe dictus Radulphus, tempore meſſionis in eadem terra debet reponere & cuſtodire. Regiſtr. Cant. Eccleſiæ MS. So alſo croppus occurs in the ſame ſenſe. See Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. p. 298. Sax. crop, the top or head of any thing: Whence to crop or cut off the upper part; crop-eared, a crop of beef. In Suſſex, they call darnel crop; and in Worceſterſhire, buck-wheat goes by the like name of crop. The old Lat. cropa, was the buttock of a horſe, whence crupper. Cowell. edit. 1727.

Croſſes. It was uſual in former times for men to erect croſſes on their houſes, by which they would claim the privileges of the templars or hoſpitallers, to defend themſelves againſt their rightful lords; this was condemned by the ſtatute W. 2. cap. 13. It was uſual alſo in thoſe days to ſet up croſſes in places where the corps of any of the nobility reſted, as it was carried to be buried, that a tranſeuntibus pro ejus anima deprecetur. Walſingham, Anno 1291. By ſtat. 13 Eliz. c. 2. Croſſes, beads, &c. uſed by the Roman catholicks are prohibited to be brought into this kingdom on pain of præmunire, &c.

Crown and Crown Lands. Tenants of crown lands how relieved in caſes of forfeiture for non-payment of rent, 21 Jac. 1. c. 25. South Sea Company purchaſing crown lands, what to forfeit, 6 Geo. 1. c. 4. ſect. 66. For other matters, ſee King and Patents.

Croy. See Cro.

Crown-Office. This is an office under the King's Bench, of which the King's coroner or attorney there is commonly maſter. The attorney general and clerk of the crown exhibit informations in this office, for crimes and miſdemeanors; the one ex officio, and the other uſually by order of court; and here information may be laid for offences and miſdemeanors at Common law, as for batteries, conſpiracies, libelling, nuſances, contempt, ſeditious words, &c. wherein the offender is liable to pay a fine to the King. Finch 340. Show. 109. By ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. the clerk of the crown in B. R. is not to receive or file any information for treſpaſs, battery, &c. without expreſs order of court; nor to iſſue any proceſs without taking a recognizance in 20*l.* penalty to proſecute with effect; and if the party appear, and the plaintiff do not procure a trial in a year, or if the verdict paſs for the defendant, &c. the court ſhall award the defendant coſts: But this act doth not extend to informations in the name of the King's coroner or attorney, &c. when a battery is committed privately, ſo that the perſon receiving it can make no proof thereof by witneſſes at law; it is uſual to bring an information in this office, where the party may be a witneſs for the King, it being his ſuit. Informations in the nature of Quo warranto's brought by the attorney general, againſt corporations, &c. See Quo warranto and Informations.

Cropſes. See Croiſes.

Cruſtum was a garment of purple mixed with many colours: Duas patenas argenteas auro ornatas, cum duobus urceolis & cruſto aureo. Mon. 1 tom. p. 210.

Dat.* Beverlaci, 10 Kal. Sept. 1280. Ex Regiſtr. Will. Wickwane, Archiep. Ebor.

Cucking ſtool, or Coke ſtool, (Tumbrellum) Is an engine invented for the puniſhment of ſcolds and unquiet women by ducking them in the water, called in ancient time a tumbrel, and ſometimes a trebuchet. Lamb. Eiren. lib. 1. ca. 12. Bracton writes this word tymborella. Kitchin (cap. Charge in Court Leet, f. 13. a.) ſays, Every one having view of frank-pledge, ought to have a pillory, and a tumbrel. This was in uſe even in our Saxons time, by whom it was called ſcealfingſtole, and deſcribed to be cathedra, in qua rixoſæ mulieres ſedentes aquis demergebantur: It was a puniſhment anciently inflicted upon brewers and bakers tranſgreſſing the laws, who were thereupon, in ſuch a ſtool or chair, to be ducked and immerged in ſtercore, ſome muddy or ſtinking pond. This was alſo anciently written, goging ſtole. See Pandoxatrix. And in Domeſday, it is called cathedra ſtercoris. Some think it a corruption from ducking ſtool; others from choaking ſtool; quia hoc modo demerſæ aquis fere ſuffocantur. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Cude, A cude cloth is a chryſom or face-cloth for a child baptized. See Chriſmale.

Cudzeach, A pledge or ſurety.

Cui ante divortium, Is a writ, that a woman divorced from her huſband, hath to recover lands or tenements from him, to whom her huſband did alienate during the marriage, becauſe ſhe could not gainſay it. Reg. Orig. fol. 223. F. N. B. f. 240.

Cui in vita, Is a writ of entry that a widow hath againſt him, to whom her huſband aliened her lands or tenements in his life-time, which muſt contain in it, that during his life-time ſhe could not gainſay it. Reg. Orig. fol. 232. F. N. B. fol. 193. See ſtat. 13 Ed. 1. c. 3. and 7 Vin. Abr. 142—147.

Cuinage. See Cuynage.

Culagium, Is when a ſhip is laid up in the dock to be repaired. MS. Ar. Trevor. Arm. de Plac. Ed. 3.

Culm. See Coals.

Culpatura, A ſmiting or cutting, from the Fr. couper, to cut: Qui autem forisfaciat in foreſta Regis de viridi, ſive per culpaturam, ſive per esbrancaturam, ſive per foditionem turbarum, ſive per excoriationem moræ, ſive per culpationem ſub nemore, ſive per eſſartum, &c. Hoveden. p. 784.

Culprit, Is compounded of two words, i. e. cul and prit, viz. cul, which is the abbreviation of culpabilis, and is a reply of a proper officer in the behalf of the King, affirm-affirming the party to be guilty after he hath pleaded Not guilty, without which the iſſue is not joined; The other word prit is derived from the French word preſt, i. e. ready; and 'tis as much as to ſay, that he is ready to prove the party guilty: And this we find to be often the form of pleading in civil cauſes; as in treſpaſs, the defendant pleaded Not guilty, the plaintiff replied by his counſel cretenus preſt au que cy, viz. he was ready to prove him guilty.

Culreach, The ſame with Cudzeach.

Cultura, A parcel of arable land: Dr. Thoroton, in his Nottinghamſhire, engliſhes it, a wong; it often occurs in old writings, as totam illam culturam quæ vocatur Watercroft.

Culvertage, (Culvertagium,) May be interpreted cowardice, as Omnes cum equis & armis, juſſit ſub nomine culvertagii convenire. Mat. Pariſ. fol. 233. Culvertagium dictum puto a columbina timiditate, nam culver idem eſt quod columba. Spelm. in voce Niderling. Others fancy it a culum vertendo, i. e. running away. Theſe are the opinions of ſome men, but without any foundation; it rather ſignifies ſome baſe ſlavery, or the confiſcation of eſtate, viz. Rex Johannes brevi ſuo ad vicecomites juſſit, ut nullus remaneat qui arma portare poſſit ſub nomine culvertagii & perpetuæ ſervitutis: And in another place, Nihil magis quam opprobrium culvertagii metuentes. Mat. Pariſ. anno 1212. It ſeems therefore to be the ſame with couvrir le feu, for when a lord ſeizes his vaſſal's eſtate as forfeited, he is ſaid couvrir le feu, to cover or put out his fire. Du Freſne. Therefore the true ſenſe of the word is not cowardice, but confiſcation, or forfeiture of lands and goods: It was a Norman feudal term for lands of the vaſſal eſcheated to the lord: And ſub nomine culvertagii was under pain of confiſcation. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Culward and Culverd, Salva ſummonitione de culward. Charta Willielmi de Tabley, temp. Ed. 1. ſeems to be the ſame with culvertage, or cowardice.

Cuna. Domeſday, tit. Ceſtria. Quando Rex ita veniebat, reddebat ei unaquæque carrucata cc. heſtas, & unam cunam plenam cerviſiæ. So Cuſtumar. de Hecham, p. 21. Omnis Lanceta & Toftman invęniet cunam, ſi habeat, ad cerviſiam domini faciendam——Thus Spelman reads the word; but it truly is cuva, Gall. cuve, Angl. keeve, keever, a tub or fat for brewing. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Cuna cerviſiae, A tub of ale. Domeſday. See Ruſta. And to this day, in Cheſhire, a brewing veſſel is called a cump. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Cunage, (Cunagium)——De cunagio ſtanneriæ & de emptione totius ſtanni in com. Devon. & Cornub. Rot. Pat. 21 Ed. 3. See Coinage.

Cuneum monetae. Otho tenet manerium de Lilleſton in com. Midd. per ſerjantiam cuſtodiendi cuneum monetæ domini Regis, i. e. Sigillum ferreum quo nummus cuditur; the King's ſtamp for coinage. Hence comes our word coin, quaſi cune. Sciatis quod conceſſimus venerabili patri noſto Ciceſtr. epiſcopo, quod habeat cuneum ſuum in civitate Ciceſtriæ, &c. T. 29 Apr. Clauſ. 6. Joh. m. 3.

Cuneus, A mint, or place to coin money, Mandatum eſt, &c. Sciatis quod conceſſimus venerabili patri noſtro Ciceſtr. epiſcopo quod habeat cuneum ſuum in civitate Ciceſtriæ, &c. T. 29 Apr. Clauſ. 6. Joh. m. 3.

Cuntey Cuntey, Is a kind of trial, as appeareth by Bracton, in theſe words, Negotium in hoc caſu terminabitur per cuntey cuntey ſicut inter cohæredes. Bract. lib. 4. tract. 3. cap. 18. And again in the ſame place, In brevi de recto negotium terminabitur per cuntey cuntey. And thirdly, lib. 4. tract. 4. cap. 2. Terminabitur negotium per breve de recto, ubi nec duellum nec magna aſſiſa, ſed per cuntey cuntey omnino; which ſeems to be as much as by the ordinary jury. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Curagulus, One who taketh care of a thing: Ego Edmundus Rex Anglorum & curagulus multarum gentium. Monaſticon, 2 tom. in a Charter of King Edmond.

Cura monaſterii, An officer ſo called, who had the charge of the monaſtery: Cura cum ipſis remanente qui cum ipſis manducet. Du Freſne.

Curate, (Curatus,) Is he who repreſents the incumbent of a church, parſon or vicar, and officiates divine ſervice in his ſtead: And in caſe of pluralities of livings, or where a clergyman is old and infirm, it is requiſite there ſhould be a curate to perform the cure of the church. He is to be licenſed and admitted by the biſhop of the dioceſe, or by an ordinary, having epiſcopal juriſdiction: and when a curate hath the approbation of the biſhop, he uſually appoints the ſalary too; and in ſuch caſe, if he be not paid, the curate hath a proper remedy in the eccleſiaſtical court, by a ſequeſtration of the profits of the benefice; but if he hath no licence from the biſhop, he is put to his remedy at Common law, where he muſt prove the agreement, &c. Right Clerg. 127. By ſtatute, where curates are licenſed by the biſhop, they are to be appointed by him a ſtipend not exceeding 50*l. per ann.* nor leſs than 20*l.* a year, according to the value of the livings, to be paid by the rector or vicar: and the ſame may be done on any complaint made. Sat. 12 Ann. ſt. 2. c. 12. One perſon cannot be curate in two churches, unleſs ſuch may ſatisfy the law, by reading both morning and evening prayers at each place: Nor can he ſerve one cure on one Sunday and another cure on the next; for he muſt not neglect to read morning and evening prayer in his church every Lord's day; if he doth he is liable to puniſhment. Comp. Incumb. 572. But it is otherwiſe where a church or chapel is a member of the pariſh church; and where one church is not liable to maintain a curate. Can. 48. A curate having no fixed eſtate in his curacy, not being inſtituted and inducted, may be removed at pleaſure by the biſhop or incumbent. Noy. But there are perpetual curates, as well as temporary, who are appointed where tithes are appropriated, and no vicarage enowed: Theſe are not removeable; and the impropriators are obliged to find them, and ſome of them have certain portions of the tithes ſettled on them. Stat. 29. Car. 2. c. 8. See Vicar.

Curfew, (from the French words, couvrir, that is tegere, and feu, ignis, fire,) Signifies the ringing of a bell, by which William the Conqueror commanded every perſon to rake up, or cover over his fire, and put out his light. And in many places of England at this day, where a bell cuſtomarily is rung towards bed-time, it is ſaid to ring curfew. Stow's Annals, in vita Gul. Conqueſtor'.

Curia. It was uſual for the Kings of England to aſſemble the biſhops, peers, and great men of the Kingdom to ſome particular place, at the chief feſtivals in the year, and this aſſembly is called by our hiſtorians, curia; becauſe there they conſulted about the weighty affairs of the nation, and therefore it was ſometimes called Solennis curia, Generalis curia, Auguſtalis curia, and Curia publica, &c. This word was ſometimes taken for the perſons, or feudatory and other cuſtomary tenants, who did their ſuit and ſervice at the court of the lord: So in a charter of Bernard de St. Walery, anno 30 H. 3. we find, Hiis teſtibus, &c. & omni curia mea. Kennet's Paroch. Antiq. f. 139.

Curia adviſare vult, Is a deliberation which the court ſometimes takes, before they give judgment in a cauſe. New Book Entr. And when judgment is ſtayed, upon motion to arreſt it; then it is entred by the judges Curia adviſare vult. Shep. Epit. 682.

Curia baronum. See Court baron.

Curia canonicorum, The court-lodge, or manor-houſe in a lordſhip belonging to the Religious. Juxta rivulum extra curiam canonicorum. Paroch. Antiq. p. 177.

Curia claudenda, Is a writ that lieth againſt him who ſhould fence and cloſe up his ground, if he refuſe or defer to do it. Reg. Orig. fol. 155. F. N. B. fol. 127. This writ doth not lie but againſt him who hath a cloſe adjoining to the plaintiff's land, who is obliged to incloſe it; and it lieth not but for him who hath a freehold, &c. It may be ſued before the ſheriff in the county court, or in the Common Pleas: And the judgment is to recover the incloſure and damages. New Nat. Brev. 297.

Curia

Curia domini, The lords houſe, hall, or court, where all the tenants, if need require, were bound to attend every three weeks, but generally at the feaſt of the Annunciation and St. Michael; from whence the courts kept at thoſe times, were called Curiæ generales, the general, or more ſolemn courts. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Curiae adventus, The day of coming to pay ſuit and ſervice at the court of the lord: Reddit per annum ad terminum ipſius unam marcam & unum adventum curiæ, i. e. for the rent of a mark, and the ſervice of coming to the lord's court yearly. Paroch. Antiq. pag. 400.

Curia militum, A court ſo called, anciently held at Cariſbroke caſtle in the iſle of Wight.——Et idem dominus Willielmus de inſula debet facere ſectam ad curiam domini caſtri de Cariſbroc, de tribus ſeptimanis in tres ſeptimanas in curia, quæ vocatur curia militum Inq. de anno 47 Hen. 3. n. 32.

Curia penticiarium, Id eſt, Curia in civitate Ceſtriæ coram vicecomite ibidem in aula penticia ejuſdem civitatis. Pl. in Itin. apud Ceſtriam, 14 H. 7. It is probable this court was originally kept under a pentice or ſhed covered with boards, and thence took its denomination. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Curteſy of England, (Jus curialitatis Angliæ,) Is where a man takes a wife ſeiſed of land in fee-ſimple, fee-tail general, or as heir in tail ſpecial, and hath iſſue by her, male or female born alive; if the wife die, the huſband ſhall hold the land during his life, by the law of England, and he is called Tenant by the curteſy of England; becauſe this privilege is not allowed in any other realm, except Scotland, where it is called Curialitas Scotiæ. Cowell.

We do not find any ſuch privilege before the conqueſt, here in England; but it was a cuſtom before that time uſed in Normandy, and probably derived from them; it was called in their language. Veuvete, de quo ſic jura & conſuetud. Norman. cap. 121. viz. Conſuetudo eſt in Normannia ex antiquitate approbata quod ſi quis uxorem habuerit, ex que hæredem aliquem procreaverit, quem natum vivum fuiſſe conſtiterit, ſive deceſſerit, totum foedum quod martius poſſidebat ex parte uxoris ſuæ tempore quo deceſſerit, ipſi martio quamdiu ab aliis ceſſerit nuptiis remanebit. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Tenant by the curteſy, is he, who after his wife's death (having had iſſue by her inheritable) is introduced into her inheritance, and has an eſtate for life therein; and he is ſo called from the favour or curteſy of that law which made this proviſion for him, to which he had no natural right, nor to which any other nations, except thoſe of Great Britain and Ireland, admitted him. Dr. and Stud. lib 1. c. 7. Co. lit. 30. a. It began in England and Ireland in the time of Hen. 1. Seld. Jan. 65. and in Scotland in the time of Malcom. Mecan 56. in both by a poſitive law or inſtitution.

The words of this law, as they are found Pat. 11 H. 3. m. 30. exemplified are, Si aliquis deſponſaverit aliquam hæreditatem habentem, & ex ea prolem habuerit cujus clamor auditus fuerit infra quatuor parietes, & vir ſupervixerit uxorem, habebit totâ vitâ ſuâ cuſtodiam hæreditatis, licet hæredem habuerit ex primo viro qui plenæ ætatis eſt: Præceptum eſt quod eadem lex obſervetur in Hibernia.

The words of this law are general, and ſeem to extend to all ſorts of perſons without diſtinction; therefore ideots and lunaticks, may be tenants by the curteſy; but the King ſhall have this eſtate during the ideocy or lunacy, and provide for them and their families, as he ſhould do out of their own eſtates. 4 Co. 123. Beverley's caſe.

Perſons convict only of felony or treaſon, may be tenants by the curteſy; for they forfeit only their goods and chattles abſolutely, for of their lands the King gains but a pernancy of the profits. 5 Co. 110. Co. Lit. 92. b. 391. a. Stanf. 192.

Perſons outlawed in any civil action may be tenant by the curteſy. Bro. tit. Outlawry 26, 36, 59. Co. Lit. 128. For ſuch proceſs of outlawry might be eaſily ſuperſeded, and hereby the King's pernancy of the profits diſcharged.

But perſons attainted of felony or treaſon, ſhall not be tenants by the curteſy; for they being thereby extra legem poſiti, and their perſons forfeited to the King, they are from thenceforth become incapable of our laws in general, and by conſequence, of this in particular, which intended to give the inheritance only to thoſe who were capable of holding of it tota vita ſua. Br. tit. Curt. 15 Staun. 126. Godb. 323. All perſons attainted in a præmunire are excluded the benefit of this law, and alſo aliens, be they friends or enemies; and in theſe caſes their title ſhall never ariſe, even for the benefit of the King, but the wife's eſtate ſhall be diſcharged of it for ever. Co. Lit. 391. a. 3 Inſt. 43. But if an alien be made denizen, or the perſon attainted pardoned, and have iſſue after, they may be tenants by the curteſy, in reſpect to that iſſue had after, but not in reſpect of any iſſue had before. 7 Co. 25.

Littleton acquaints us, That it muſt be an eſtate either in fee-ſimple or fee-tail general, or where the wife has it as heir of the ſpecial tail; and lord Coke ſays, For the huſband to be tenant by the curteſy, is one of the incidents to an eſtate-tail, which to reſtrain by condition, were repugnant, &c. and therefore if a woman, tenant in tail general, marries and hath iſſue, which iſſue dieth, and then the wife dies, ſo that the eſtate is thereby determined, yet the huſband ſhall be tenant by the curteſy; the ſame law if the limitation had been to the woman and the heirs of her body, upon condition, that if ſhe die without iſſue, then to remain in another; for this is not a condition but a limitation, and no more than what the law ſaith. Lit. Sect. 35. Dyer 148. 8 Co. 36.

So if one ſeiſed of a rent in fee, makes a gift in tail general, or if a rent de novo be granted in tail general to a woman, who marries, and hath iſſue, the iſſue dieth and then the wife dieth without other iſſue, yet the huſband ſhall be tenant by the curteſy, of the rent, though the eſtate-tail therein be determined and ſpent; for this being an incident to ſuch an eſtate at the time of its creation, whenever the huſband has iſſue, his title is initiate, and ſhall not be loſt after by failure of iſſue, which being the act of God, ought not to turn to his prejudice; and this is within the words of our law hæreditatem habentem, without fixing its continuance. Co. Lit. 30. a.

As to the deſcendible quality of ſuch eſtate, the rule to be obſerved is, that the iſſue of ſuch huſband may by poſſibility inherit. This rule ſeems to have been formed after the ſtatute De donis, and by virtue thereof, for our ſtatute requires no ſuch property in the inheritance, neither did the Common law; but for this ſee 2 Inſt. 336. 8 Co. 35, 36. Co. Lit. 29. b. Perk. 469.

Therefore if lands are given to a woman, and the heirs male of her body, and ſhe has iſſue a daughter, and dies, the huſband ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy; the ſame law if it had been given to her, and the heirs females of her body, and ſhe had iſſue a ſon. 8 Co. 35. Co. Lit. 29. b.

But if a woman ſeiſed in fee marries, and hath iſſue, and then the huſband dies, and ſhe takes another huſband, and hath iſſue by him, and dies; though the firſt be living, yet the ſecond huſband ſhall have it by the curteſy, becauſe his iſſue, by poſſibility may inherit; as if the firſt iſſue die without iſſue, whereby it comes to the uncle, &c. Bro. tit. Curteſy 8. Perk. 466. 8 Co. 34. Lit. ſect. 52.

That the wife muſt be ſeiſed of the eſtate, is required by the very words of the law, which ſays, aliquam hæreditatem habentem; ſo that there muſt be a poſſeſſion of ſuch inheritance by the very words of the law; and therefore if a man die ſeiſed of lands in fee ſimple, or fee tail general, and thoſe lands deſcend to his daughter, and ſhe marries, and hath iſſue, and dies, before any entry made by her or her huſband, or any other for them, the huſband ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy; but here we muſt underſtand ſeiſin in a twofold ſenſe, viz. ſeiſin in fact, and ſeiſin in law; and where a ſeiſin in fact may be had, as in the above caſe, there a ſeiſin in law will not do; nay, though the huſband doth all he can to get poſſeſſion in his wife's life-time, and as ſoon as he heareth of her father's death, goeth towards the land to take poſſeſſion, and before he can come there the wife dies, yet he ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy, and therefore one book ſays [Perk. 470.] he ſhall have ſpoken to ſome neighbour, being near the lands, to have entred for his wife, as in her right, immediately after the father's death; and the reaſon of this is from the words of the law, which require that the wife ſhould have actual poſſeſſion of the inheritance; and of things lying in livery the wife hath not actual poſſeſſion till the entry of the huſband. Dr. and Stud. lib. 2. c. 15. Perk. 464. Co. Lit. 29. a. 90. 8 Co. 34, 36. F. N. B. 143. Kelw. 2. a. Br. tit. Curt. 7.

But now of ſuch inheritances whereof there cannot poſſibly be a ſeiſin in fact, a ſeiſin in law is ſufficient; and therefore if a man ſeiſed of an advowſon, or rent in fee, hath iſſue a daughter, who is married, and hath iſſue, and he dieth ſeiſed, and the wife die likewiſe before the rent becomes due, or the church becomes void, this ſeiſin in law in the wife ſhall be ſufficient to intitle her huſband to be tenant by the curteſy, becauſe, ſay the books, he could not poſſibly attain any other ſeiſin, as indeed he could not, and then it would be unreaſonable he ſhould ſuffer for what no induſtry of him could prevent; but the true reaſon is, that the wife hath theſe inheritances which lie in grant, and not in livery, when the right firſt deſcends upon her; for ſhe hath a thing in grant when ſhe hath a right to it, and nobody elſe interpoſes to prevent it. Co. Lit. 29. Perk. 468, 469. 7 Ed. 3. 66. Kelw. 104. 1 Co. 97. 6 Co. 68. F. N. B. 149. 2 Sid. 110.

The eſtate and ſeiſin of the wife ought to begin ſome time during the coverture; ſo the words of the law import, Si aliquis deſponſaverit aliquam hæreditatem habentem, &c. and therefore if a woman be diſſeiſed, and marries, and dies, leaving iſſue before any re-entry made, the huſband ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy; for here ſhe had no inheritance, but only a right to an inheritance, which is out of the words of this law; but if the huſband or wife had entred during the coverture, there, after the wife's death, he ſhould have it by the curteſy, becauſe he had hæreditatem during the coverture. Co. Lit. 29. a 30. a. Perk. 458.

As to the iſſue, if a woman be delivered of a monſter, which hath not the ſhape of mankind, this is no iſſue in law; but however deformed it may be, or if it be born deaf and dumb, or an ideot; yet this is ſuch iſſue as will intitle the huſband to be tenant by the curteſy. 8 Co. 35. Co. Lit. 29. b. S. P.

The iſſue muſt be born during the life of the wife; therefore if the wife die in childbed, and the iſſue is ript out of her womb, the huſband ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy, becauſe he had no iſſue during the marriage, and therefore he cannot be ſaid ex ea prolem habere, and in pleading he muſt alledge that he had iſſue during the marriage. 8 Co. 35. Co. Lit. 29. b.

The ſtatute ſays, Cujus clamor auditus fuerit; But this is put but for an inſtance; for if it be born alive, though dumb, and could not cry, it is within the meaning of this ſtatute; and there are other ſigns of life beſides crying, as motion, &c. but ſome books ſeem to incline that it ought to be baptized, and if it be not, thro' the huſband's neglect, he ſhall not be tenant by the curteſy; but the ſtatute requires no ſuch thing, and therefore it ſeems no eſſential part of his title. 8 Co. 34. Co. Lit. 29. b. Dyer 25. pl. 159. Bendl. 21. Perk. 471. See 7 Vin. Abr. 148—163. 1 Bac. Abr. 660.—668.

Curtiles terræ, Court-lands. Among our Saxon anceſtors, thoſe thanes, who poſſeſſed bockland, or hereditary lands, divided them into inland and outland. The inland was that which lay moſt convenient for the lord's manſion-houſe; and therefore the lords kept that part in their own hands, for ſupport of their family, and for hoſpitality. The Normans afterwards called theſe lands terras dominicales, the demains, or lords lands. The Germans terras indominicatas, lands in the lord's own uſe. Cuſtodes libertatis Angliae authoritate parliamenti, Was the ſtyle wherein writs and other judicial proceedings did run during the late times of trouble, &c. from the murder of King Charles the Firſt, till the uſurpation by Cromwell, mentioned and declared traiterous by the ſtat. 12 Car. 2. cap. 3.

Cuſtodiam dare, Was a gift or grant for life: Tradidit autem Rex Willielmo filio Aldalmi civitatem Wexfordiæ in cuſtodia, &c. Du Freſne.

Cuſtom, Conſuetudo, Has the ſame ſignification with our Common lawyers and Civilians, being by both accounted a part of the law: Conſuetudo quandocumque pro lege ſervatur, ſaith Bracton, partibus ubi fuerit more utentium approbata; longævi, enim temporis uſus & conſuetudinis non eſt vilis authoritas, lib. 1. cap. 3. It may not unaptly be thus defined, cuſtom is a law or right not written, which being eſtabliſhed by long uſe, and the conſent of our anceſtors, hath been, and is daily practiſed; our anceſtors, that is, majores; and thoſe of our kindred that are ultra tritavum: So that allowing the father to be ſo much older than the ſon, as pubertas, or the years of generation do require; the grandfather ſo much elder than him, and ſo uſque ad tritavum; we cannot ſay, that this or that is a cuſtom, unleſs we can juſtify it hath continued ſo at leaſt one hundred years. For tritavus muſt be ſo much elder than the party that pleaded it; yet becauſe that is hard to prove, it is enough for the proof of a cuſtom, if two or more witneſſes can depoſe, that they heard their fathers ſay, that it was a cuſtom all their time, and that their fathers heard their fathers alſo ſay, that it was likewiſe a cuſtom in their time. If it is to be proved by record, the continuance of an hundred years will ſerve. Davis's Rep. fol. 32. Cuſtom is either general or particular. General, I call that which is allowed through all England, whereof we read divers in Doct. and Stud. lib. 1. cap. 7. very worthy to be known. Particular is that which belongeth to this or that county, as Gavelkind to Kent; or to this or that lordſhip, city or town. Cuſtom differeth from preſcription, for that cuſtom is common to more, and preſcription is particular to this or that man. Again, preſcription aſketh not that length of time to ſet it up as cuſtom doth, but is pleadable in a far ſhorter time, viz. five years, one year or leſs: an example of five years preſcription you have in the levying of a fine; for if a fine duly levied of land and tenements be not impugned within five years, it excludeth all claim for ever. And if a man omit his continual claim for a year and a day, then the tenant in poſſeſſion preſcribeth an immunity againſt the entry of the demandant, and his heir. F. N. B. fol. 79. Termes de la Ley, verbo continual claim. Out of the ſtatutes you have great diverſity, which ſee collected in Cowel's Inſtitutes, tit. De Uſucap. & long. temp. Præſcript. So that Briſſenius in his 14 lib. de verb. ſignif. ſaith truly; That preſcription is an exception founded upon ſo long time paſt, as the law limiteth for the purſuit of any action. An example may be taken from the ſtatute 1 H. 8. cap. 4. which enacteth, That in all actions popular, information ſhall be made within three years after the offence committed, or elſe be of no force. Of like nature is the ſtatute 7 H. 8. cap. 13 which in ſome caſes makes one year's preſcription ſufficient againſt informations. Cowell.

The frequent repetition of an act, which at firſt was aſſented to by the people of a certain place for their mutual conveniency and advantage, is called a cuſtom, and every ſuch cuſtom being certain and reaſonable in itſelf, and commencing time immemorial, and always continuing without interruption, has obtained the force of a law, and in ſuch places ſhall prevail, though contrary to the general laws of the kingdom. Co. Lit. 110. b. Dav. 32.

The difference between cuſtom and preſcription is, that cuſtom is local as prevailing in a certain province, county, hundred, &c. But preſcription is for the moſt part perſonal, being made in the name of a certain perſon, and his anceſtors, or thoſe whoſe eſtate he has, or of a body politic, and their predeceſſors. Co. Lit. 113. b. 6 Co. 69. 8 Co. 62. and ſee 2 Bulſt. 206. 1 Rol. Rep. 46.

Time and uſage are eſſential parts of a cuſtom, and therefore no cuſtom is allowable but ſuch as has been uſed by title of preſcription, viz. time out of mind. Co. Lit. 110. b. The continuance of an uſage from the reign of Rich. I. which being the time of a limitation of a writ of right, is ſaid to be a good title of preſcription. Co. Lit. 113.

Hence it is that though a lord of a private manor may have waifs and ſtrays by preſcription, yet he cannot have the Bona felonum & fugitivorum without grant from the King, becauſe no man can preſcribe for them, for every preſcription muſt be immemorial, and the goods of felons and fugitives cannot be forfeited without record, which preſuppoſes the memory of that continuance. 46 Ed. 3. 16. *Bro. Every cuſtom ought to appear to have had a reaſonable commencement, and that at firſt it was voluntarily agreed to for the better promotion of trade and commerce, the ſuppreſſion of fraud, the greater ſecurity of men in their eſtates and poſſeſſions, &c. and in ſuch caſes though the cuſtom be contrary to the Common law, or againſt the intereſt of a particular perſon, yet it ſhall be good. Dav. 32. b.

As a cuſtom that a man, in ploughing his own ground, may turn the plough on the ground of his neighbour, for this is for the general good, being in favour of huſbandry and tillage, although a particular perſon receive prejudice thereby. Br. Cuſtom 51. 1 Rol. Abr. 560. Dav. 32. b. S. C.

So is a cuſtom to pull down the houſes of another to prevent the ſpreading of fire. Dav. 32. b.

It is a good cuſtom in a manor, that the homage have uſed yearly to chooſe two ſurveyors, to take care that corrupt victuals are not ſold within the manor, and to deſtroy ſuch as they find expoſed to ſale there; for the preſervation of men's health is deſigned thereby, and it is at the peril of the ſurveyors if they deſtroy any meat that is not ſo. 1 Mod. 202. 2 Mod. 56. *S. A cuſtom in Ipſwich to chooſe yearly two burgeſſes, who uſed yearly to make a feaſt, and to fine thoſe who refuſed to make a feaſt, and to impriſon them till paid, was allowed a good cuſtom, upon an habeas corpus, and the priſoner remanded. Cro. Jac. 555.

It is a good cuſtom that every man of the town, that hath an houſe next adjoining, and abutting to the high ſtreet, may ſell all merchandizes in his ſhop within the ſaid houſe in the time of the market, which is held in the high ſtreet. 1 Rol. Abr. 560. But ſee 8 Co. 127.

A cuſtom in Exeter, that every woman taken in adultery ſhould be whipped, is good. 8 Co. 126.

But every cuſtom which appears to have been unreaſonable in itſelf, as being againſt the good of the common-wealth, or injurious to a multitude, tho' beneficial to a particular perſon, or to owe its commencement to the arbitrary will and oppreſſion of a powerful lord, and not to the voluntary agreement of the parties, is void; nor can any continuance of ſuch a cuſtom give it a ſanction, or make that good which was void in its creation. Dav. 32. b. 6 Mod. 124. 1 Salk. 203.

A cuſtom within a pariſh, that all lambs fallen and bred upon one tenement in the ſame pariſh, though belonging to ſeveral owners, ſhall be reckoned together as if if but one man's, and the tenth ſo counted together paid for tithes, is void and unreaſonable; for by this means it might happen, that a man might have but one lamb, and that ſhould be taken for tithe, and he that had more ſhould pay nothing. Hob. 329.

A cuſtom to elect a ſupernumerary before any vacancy, to be admitted upon the death of the next prebendary, is ridiculous and void. Skin. 45. 2 Jon. 199. S. C.

A cuſtom, that no commoner ſhall put his cattle into the land before the lord, is void; for a cuſtom that leaves it to the arbitrary will of the lord, whether the tenant ſhould ever enjoy any benefit by the common, or not, can never be preſumed to have had a reaſonable commencement. 1 *Rol. So a cuſtom, that the lord of the manor ſhall detain a diſtreſs taken upon the demeſnes 'till a fine is paid for the damage, is void. Lit. Sect. 46. Dav. 33. a.

A cuſtom that every tenant of a manor, that marries his daughter without the licence of the lord, ſhall pay a fine, is againſt reaſon and void, for every freeman may marry his daughter to whom he pleaſes. Lit. Sect. 209.

The King by his prerogative can only make a corporation, conſervator of the peace, &c. therefore in theſe, or in other things which highly touch the King's prerogative, no title can be gained by cuſtom or preſcription; as a conuzance of pleas, to have a ſanctuary, to make a corporation, coroner, conſervators of the peace, *&c. But treaſure-trove, waifs, eſtraies, wreck, to hold pleas, court leets, hundreds, infangthef, a park, warren, royal fiſheries, fairs, markets, frankfoldage, keeping of a gaol, toll, &c. may be claimed by preſcription, without any matter of record; and a county palatine may be claimed by preſcription, and by reaſon thereof bona felonum, &c. alſo a corporation may be by preſcription. Co. Lit. 114. b.

Alſo cuſtoms that bind private perſons do not extend to the King; therefore if lands in gavelkind deſcend to the King and his brother, the King ſhall take one moiety, and his brother the other; but if the King dies, his moiety ſhall deſcend to his eldeſt ſon, and not according to the rules of deſcent in gavelkind, for the King was ſeiſed of his moiety jure coronæ, therefore it ſhall attend the crown, and conſequently go to the eldeſt ſon. Plow. 205. a. Co. Lit. 15. b. Raym. 77. 1 Sid. 138.

So the cuſtom of London, as to retaining goods mortgaged till ſatisfaction be made of the money lent on them, extends not to the King's jewels. 35 Hen. 6. 26. Dav. 33. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 566. 2 And. 152.

So if a man hath toll or wreck, or ſtrays by preſcription, this extends not to the King's goods. Dav. 33. b.

A cuſtom may extend to and give an infant a power of doing that, which by the rules of the Common law he could not do; as an infant at the age of 15, may make a feoffment of lands of the nature of gavelkind; but this, like all other cuſtoms, is to be conſtrued ſtrictly, and in ſuch manner as that no prejudice may accrue to the infant thereby; and therefore ſuch feoffment muſt be for valuable conſideration, muſt be made in perſon, and not by attorney, cannot be with warranty, muſt be of lands which deſcend to him in gavelkind, and not of lands by purchaſe; and muſt be of lands in poſſeſſion, not in remainder or reverſion. 1 New Abr. 670, 671.

It is a good cuſtom in a copyhold manor, that a feme covert with or without the conſent of her huſband, may deviſe her copyhold land to her huſband, or whom ſhe pleaſes. Moor 123. pl. 268. Godb. 14, 143. 3 Leon. 81, 83. 2 Brownl. 218.

Every cuſtom ought to be certain, or ſuch as may be reduced to a certainty, for an uncertain thing cannot be ſuppoſed to have had a reaſonable commencement; alſo the uncertainty of a cuſtom deſtroys the ſuppoſition of its countenance and duration time out of mind. 1 Rol. Abr. 565. Dav. 33. Skin. 249.

Hence it is, that a cuſtom that when an infant is of ſuch an age that he can count twelve pence, or meaſure an ell of cloth, that he may make a feoffment, is void for the uncertainty. Dav. 33. a. 3 Leon. 82. Hob. 225. S. C. cited, and ſaid, that ſuch cuſtom is not good, but that it ought to be at a certain age, that it may appear to be an age of diſcretion.

So a cuſtom, that the tenant of the manor who firſt comes to ſuch a place, &c. ſhall have all the windfalls there, is void for uncertainty. 1 Rol. Abr. 565. Dav. 33. a.

So of the cuſtom of Tanniſtry in Ireland, which was, that the lands of that nature of which a man died ſeiſed, ſhould deſcend ſeniori & digniſſimo viro ſanguinis & cognominis of him that died ſo ſeiſed; and it was held void, both for the uncertainty of the perſon and the eſtate. Dav. 28, 42.

2. Manner of alledging and pleading a cuſtom, and how a cuſtom is deſtroyed.

A cuſtom of deviſing lands borough engliſh or gavelkind, may be alledged in a city, borough, or manor, but not in an upland town, that is neither city nor borough; but a cuſtom to have a way to the church, and to make by-laws for the reparation of the church, and well ordering of the commons, and ſuch like things, may be alledged in an upland town, that is neither city nor borough. Co. Lit. 110. b. But as to the manner of laying a cuſtom, and the difference between alledging a thing by way of cuſtom, or by way of preſcription, ſee 6 Co. 60. Hob. 113. Cro. Eliz. 441. Poph. 201. Style 477. 1 Lev. 176. 1 Vent. 386. 3 Lev. 160. Carth. 192.

A cuſtom for a way was laid Quod talis habetur conſuetudo quod quilibet inhabitans haberet, &c. and the court held it naught, for it ſhould by laid by way of fact triable, viz. Tempore cujus contrarium, &c. uſi fuerunt habere. 1 Sid. 237. 1 Keb. 836.

The law takes notice of the cuſtoms of gavelkind and borough engliſh, and therefore it is ſufficient to alledge generally, that the lands are of the nature of gavelkind, &c. But other private cuſtoms muſt be ſet forth in pleading, that the judges may be apprized of them, and where they obtain, and ſo give their deciſions with proper regard to them. Co. Lit. 175. b.

One preſcription or cuſtom may be pleaded againſt another, where they are not inconſiſtent, but a preſcription pleaded againſt another, is not good without a traverſe. Godb. 183. 2 Mod. 104.

If one preſcribes to have a way over the land of B. to his freehold, B. cannot preſcribe to ſtop it. 9 Co. 59.

A title gained by preſcription or cuſtom, cannot be loſt by interruption of poſſeſſion ten or twenty years, unleſs there be an interruption of the right, as by unity of poſſeſſion of rent or common, and the land charged therewith of an eſtate equally high and perdurable in both. Co. Lit. 114. b.

If gavelkind lands are held in ſocage, and the tenure is after changed into knight's ſervice, yet the cuſtom is not altered, for that goes with the land, and not with the tenure. 1 Sid. 138. Style 476.

Lands in Kent were diſgavelled by 31 Hen. 8. and a a private act made 2 & 3 Ed. 6. to all intents, conſtructions and purpoſes whatſoever, and that they ſhould deſcend as lands at Common law, any cuſtom to the contrary notwithſtanding; and the queſtion was, whether theſe lands loſt by theſe ſtatutes all their other qualities or cuſtoms belonging to gavelkind, as well as their partibility; and it was reſolved, that they loſe only their partibility. Raym. 59, 76, 77. 1 Sid. 77, 135. 1 Lev. 79. 2 Keb. 288. Hard. 325.

If lands of the nature of gavelkind, or borough Engliſh, eſcheat to the crown, and be enjoyed in ſeveral deſcents, and are afterwards granted out by the crown in knight's ſervice, yet they deſcend in gavelkind, or borough Engliſh; for the law of thoſe places cannot be controlled by the King's charter, or altered without an act of parliament. 1 New Abr. 679.

Cuſtom of London. The ancient city of London being the metropolis and chief town for trade and commerce within the Kingdom, it was neceſſary that it ſhould have certain cuſtoms and privileges for its better government; ment; which though derogatory from the general law of the realm, yet being for the benefit of the citizens, and for the advantage of thoſe who trade to, and therefrom, have not only been allowed good by the judgments in the ſuperior courts, but have alſo been confirmed by ſeveral acts of parliament, viz. Magna Charta, c. 2. 7 Ric. 2. &c. 8 Co. 127.

If a freeman foreſtalls fiſh coming to market within the city, and upon complaint to the court of aldermen, he appears there and confeſſes the fact, and they ſay that he ſhall deſiſt, and he will not promiſe to obey, &c. they may commit him, until he ſignifies to the court that he will conform; and this is a good cuſtom. 1 Vent. 115.

Cuſtom to commit for refuſing to ſerve on the livery, is good. 2 Lev. 200. Raym. 447. 1 Mod. 10. 5 Mod. 156, 319.

Cuſtom to fine and impriſon for opprobrious words ſpoke of an alderman, is good. 1 Vent. 327. 1 Lev. 200. But ſee Cro. Eliz. 689. and 2 Salk. 425, 426. Fareſt. 28.

But a cuſtom to diſfranchiſe for contemptuous words ſpoken of an alderman, is void. 2 Lev. 200. 2 Salk. 426.

To impriſon until he takes the oath of an alderman of London, is a good cuſtom. March 179.

Cuſtom to impriſon for diſturbing the election of a warden of a company, and for not promiſing not to diſturb again, doubted whether good or not. Style 78.

By the cuſtom of London, a freeman or citizen might, even before the ſtatute of Wills, deviſe his lands and tenements, of which he was ſeiſed in fee-ſimple, to whom he pleaſed, and may at this time deviſe the ſame in mortmain, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of mortmain, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 556. Several caſes to this purpoſe. Moor 136. 8 Co. 127. S. P.

By the cuſtom of London, no attaint lies for a falſe verdict given in London. 7 Hen. 6. 32. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 557. S. C.

A Citizen of London, upon an appeal brought by him, ſhall not be obliged to wage battle. Staund. P. C. 180. 1 Rol. Abr. 557. S. C.

It is a good cuſtom in London, that the mayor of London may take recognizances of any perſons, being of full age, or women unmarried, for he is a judge of record, although the debt was contracted out of London. Fitz. Coron. 411. 1 Rol. Abr. 557. And ſee Moor 871. But ſee Cro. Eliz. 186. 1 Leon. 130. S. P. Dubitatur.

It is a good cuſtom in London, that they, time out of mind, have had the meaſuring of coal, infra portum London, which extends from Stanes-bridge to London-bridge, and from thence to Graveſend, and from thence to Yenland and Yendale. 1 Rol. Abr. 557.

By the cuſtom of London whores are to be carted, and therefore if a perſon calls a woman Whore in London, an action on the caſe lies in reſpect of the puniſhment they are ſubject to by the cuſtom; but the party cannot be proceeded againſt in the ſpiritual court for defamation; for that would be puniſhing him twice for the ſame offence. 1 Rol. Abr. 550.

There is a cuſtom in London, that when a chaplain keeps any woman in his chamber ſuſpiciouſly, a man may come to his chamber with the beadle of the ward, and enter the chamber and ſearch. 2 Hen. 4. 12. b. 1 Rol. Abr. 557. S. C.

By the cuſtom of London, if a man commit a horſe to an hoſtler, and he eat out the price of his head, the hoſtler may take him as his own, upon the reaſonable appraiſement of four of his neighbours; which is a cuſtom ariſing from the abundance of traffick with ſtrangers, who could not be known to charge them with actions. Moor. 876. 3 Bulſ. 271. Yelv. 67. 1. Rol. Rep. 449.

But if a man leaves ſeveral horſes with an innkeeper in London, and takes them all away except one, the innkeeper cannot retain the horſe ſo left till he is ſatisfied for the keeping of the other horſes, unleſs there was an agreement to that purpoſe. 1 Bulſt. 207.

If A. commit the horſe of B. to an hoſtler in London, and he eat out his head, yet cannot the hoſtler ſell him; for all cuſtoms being derogatory to the Common law, are to be taken ſtrictly; and there is no cuſtom of London that hath gone ſo far as this caſe, to authorize one man to ſell and convey the property of another. 2 Rol. Abr. 85.

It was anciently inſiſted upon, that by cuſtom all indictments and proceedings for any cauſe, except felony, ſhould be tried and determined in London, and not elſewhere; but it ſeems to be now admitted, that a certiorari lies to remove any indictment from London; but it is ſaid, that by the city charters, the tenor of the indictment only ſhall be removed, and not the indictment itſelf. Cro. Car. 128. Raym. 74. 3 Mod. 230. Hard. 409. 6 Mod. 246. and ſee 5 & 6 Will. & M. cap. 11. 1 Keb. 252. 1. Sid. 155.

It is no good cuſtom in London, that if any perſon dies within any pariſh in London, and is carried out of the pariſh to be buried in any other pariſh, if he is buried in the chancel or otherways, he ſhall pay ſo much to the parſon of the pariſh where he died, as he ſhould have paid if he had been buried there in the chancel or otherways, as where he was buried; for this cuſtom is againſt reaſon, that he that is not any pariſhioner, but paſſing through the pariſh lies at an inn for a night, ſhould be forced to be buried there, or to pay as if he had been buried there. Hobart's Reports 283. between Topſall and Ferrers.

Beſides theſe and ſeveral other cuſtoms, there is a general cuſtom which is uſually ſet forth by the city, when any of their proceedings is called in queſtion, viz. that if any of their cuſtoms heretofore uſed prove hard or defective; or if any thing newly ariſing within the city where remedy was not before provided, ſhould need amendment; in either of theſe caſes, the mayor and aldermen for the time being, with the aſſent of the commonalty, may ordain fit remedy thereto, ſo as ſuch ordinance be profitable to the King, for the profit of the citizens, and agreeable to reaſon. Cuſtom of merchants. Merchants giving characters of ſtrangers to thoſe who ſell them goods, are liable to the debts of ſuch ſtrangers for the goods ſold, by the cuſtom of merchants. Lex Mercat. c. 10. f. 69. If two perſons be found in arrear, upon an account grounded on the cuſtom of merchants, any of them may be charged to pay the whole ſum that both were found in arrear. 1 Lill. Abr. 376. And if two joint merchants occupy their ſtock and merchandize in common, one of them naming himſelf a merchant, ſhall have an account againſt the other, and charge him as receiver. Co. Litt. 172. By the cuſtom of merchants, where a merchant orders his factor to buy goods of a particular perſon, there the merchant is debtor and not the factor: But 'tis otherwiſe where the merchant orders his factor to buy goods generally, without ſaying of whom; here the factor is debtor, though the goods come to the uſe of the merchant. 1 Lill. 376. Cuſtoms (Cuſtuma,) Are uſed for the tribute or toll that merchants pay to the King, for carrying out and bringing in merchandize. Stat. 14 Ed. 3. cap. 21. They are duties payable to the crown for goods exported and imported, and are due to the King of common right; firſt, becauſe the ſubject hath leave to depart the kingdom, and to export the commodities thereof; ſecondly, for the intereſt which the King hath in the ſea, and as he is guardian of, and maintains all the ports, wherein the commodities are exported or imported; and laſtly, for that the King protects merchants from enemies and pirates. Dyer 43. The word cuſtoms comprehends magna & antiqua cuſtuma, which is payable out of our own native commodities, as for wool, woodfels and leather; and parva cuſtuma, which are cuſtoms payable by merchants, ſtrangers, and denizens; and theſe began in the reign of Ed. 1. when the parliament granted him 3*d.* in the pound for all merchandizes exported and imported. Ibid. 165. But that which is granted by parliament, is properly called a ſubſidy; and ſometimes granted to the King for life; and there are ſeveral ſorts of theſe ſubſidies, as tonnage, a duty granted out of every ton of wine imported, which was first granted by parliament to King Edw. 3. and poundage, a subsidy granted for all goods exported and imported, except wines, &c. and is usually the twentieth part of the value of the goods, or 12*d.* in the pound; and this was first given to Hen. 6. for life. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 583, 584. In the reign of Edw. 3. it was enacted, that no new cuſtoms could be levied, nor ancient increaſed, but by authority of parliament. 2 Inſt. 60.

Cuſtomhouſe, Is a houſe in ſeveral cities and port-towns, as London, &c. where the King's cuſtoms are received, and all buſineſs relating thereunto tranſacted. See 12 Car. 2. cap. 4.

Cuſtoms and ſervices, (Conſuetudinibus & ſerviciis,) Is a writ of right cloſe, which lieth againſt the tenant, that deforceth his lord of the rent or ſervice due to him. Of this ſee more at large in the Old Nat. Brev. fol. 77. F. N. B. fol. 151. and Reg. Orig. fo. 156.

Cuſtos brevium, Is the principal clerk belonging to the court of Common Pleas, whoſe office is to receive and keep all the writs, and put them on files, every return by itſelf; and at the end of every term to receive of the prothonotaries all the records of Niſi prius, called The poſtea; for they are firſt brought in by the clerk of the aſſiſe of every circuit to the prothonotary that entreth the iſſue in that matter for the entring of the judgment; and then do the prothonotaries get of the court a peremptory day, for every party to ſpeak what he hath to alledge in arreſt of judgment, which day being paſt, he entreth the verdict and judgment thereupon into the roll of the court; and that done, he doth at the end of the term deliver over to the cuſtos brevium all the records of Niſi prius, which came to his hand that term; which received, he bindeth into a bundle, and puts them in proper places. The cuſtos brevium alſo maketh entry of the writs of covenant, and the concord upon every fine, and maketh forth exemplifications and copies of all writs and records in his office, and of all fines levied. The fines after they are ingroſſed, are to be divided between the cuſtos brevium and the chirographer; whereof the chirographer keepeth always the writ of covenant and the note; the cuſtos brevium keepeth the concord and foot of the fine; upon which foot the chirographer doth cauſe the proclamation to be indorſed, when they are all proclaimed. This office is in the King's gift. There is alſo a cuſtos brevium & rotulorum in the King's Bench, who fileth ſuch writs as are there uſed to be filed, and all warrants of attorney, and tranſcribeth or maketh out the records of Niſi prius, &c.

Eiren. lib.* 4. cap. 3. pag. 373. He is always a juſtice of peace, and quorum, in the county where he hath his office; and by his office is rather termed an officer or miniſter than a judge, becauſe the commiſſion of the peace layeth by expreſs words this ſpecial charge upon him. Quod ad dies & loca prædicta, brevia, proceſſus & indictamenta prædicta coram te & aliis ſociis tuis venire fac'. Lamb. ibid.

By ſtat. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. c. 11. ſect. 3. The Lord Chancellor ſhall, without any bill ſigned with the King's hand, appoint ſuch perſons to be cuſtos rotulorum within every ſhire as ſhall be thought meet. And the perſons ſo appointed may exerciſe the office by deputy, in as ample manner as if the act 37. Hen. 8. cap. 1. had never been made.

Sect. 5. Provided that the archbiſhop of York, the biſhop of Durham, the biſhop of Ely, the chancellor of the duchy of Lancaſter, and all perſons to whom the King or his progenitors by letters patent or act of parliament have granted any liberty to ordain any of the ſaid offices of cuſtos rotulorum, ſhall enjoy the ſame liberty. See Clerk of the peace, and 2 Inſt. 674.

Cuſtos of the ſpiritualities, Cuſtos ſpiritualitatis vel ſpiritualium, Is he that exerciſeth ſpiritual or eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, of any dioceſe, during the vacancy of the ſee. The appointment of whom, by the Canon law appertains to the dean and chapter; but at preſent with us in Englaud, to the archbiſhop of the province by preſcription: Howbeit, divers deans and chapters (if what Gwin ſays in the Preface to his Readings be true) do challenge this by ancient charters from the Kings of this land. Cowell.

Cuſtos temporalium, (Cuſtos temporalium) The perſon to whoſe cuſtody a vacant ſee, or abbey, was committed by the King, as ſupreme lord: Who, as a ſteward of the goods and profits, was to give account to the eſcheator, and he into the Exchequer. His truſt continued till the vacancy was ſupplied by a ſucceſſor, who obtained the King's writ De reſtitutione temporalium, which was commonly after conſecration, yet ſometimes before.

Damage, (Damnum,) Generally ſignifieth any hurt, or hindrance that a man taketh in his eſtate; but in the Common law it is a part of what the jurors are to inquire of, and bring in, when an action paſſeth for the plaintiff: for after verdict given in the principal cauſe, the jury are aſked touching coſts (which are the charges of ſuit, called of the Civilians, Expenſæ litis) and damages, which comprehend a recompence for what the plaintiff or demandant hath ſuffered, by means of the wrong done to him by the defendant or tenant. Cowell. Co. on Litt. fol. 257. This word damage is taken in the law in two ſeveral ſignifications; the one properly and generally, the other ſtrictly and relatively; properly as it is in the caſes where damages are founded upon the ſtatute of 2 H. 4. cap. 1. and 8 H. 6. cap. 9. where coſts are included within this word damages: For damage in its proper and general ſignification, is derived a demendo, when a thing by diminution is made worſe; and in this ſenſe, coſts of ſuits are damages to the plaintiff, for by it his ſubſtance is diminiſhed. But when the plaintiff declares the wrong done to him, to the damage of ſuch a ſum, this is to be taken relatively, for the wrong which is paſſed before the writ brought, and are aſſeſſed by reaſon of the treſpaſs aforeſaid, and cannot extend to coſts of ſuit, which are future, and of another nature. See Co. lib. 10. fol. 116, 117.

Damages are a compenſation given by the jury for an injury or a wrong done the party before the action brought. Co. Lit. 257. 10 Co. 116.

1. In what actions damages ſhall be recovered.

2. How much damages ſhall be recovered; and in what caſes double, treble, or quadruple damages ſhall be given.

3. Where the court may increaſe or mitigate the damages.

1. In what actions damages ſhall be recovered.

At Common law no damages were recovered in any real action; for the detention of the poſſeſſion, &c. being the cauſe of damages, till the right to the land was determined, the party could not be ſaid to ſuffer any wrong; alſo the burthen of the feudal duties lay upon the tenant in poſſeſſion, and conſequently he was to receive the meſne profits until ſome other made out a better right, who after recovery might have maintained an action of treſpaſs. 10 Co. 116. a. 2 Inſt. 284. Co. Lit. 257. 2 Rol. Abr. 550. 11 Co. 51.

But in an aſſiſe, which is a mixt and compendious action, the diſſeiſee not only recovered his poſſeſſion, but alſo the meſne profits in damages. 8 Co. 50. a. 10 Co. 116. a.

In an action againſt a reſcuer upon an alias capias in B. R. the plaintiff declar'd of a debt due to him, &c. and had damages given him for his debt, becauſe by this reſcue he loſt it, though the writ is only in nature of a plea of treſpaſs, and though it was not ſhewn, that the reſcuer knew that the plaintiff would declare for this debt. But if in this caſe the ſheriff, &c. had ſuffered a negligent eſcape, he ſhould only be charg'd with the damages in the ſame plea, as the writ ſuppoſeth, and not for the debt. Lane 70, 71. Trin. 7 *Jac. in Scacc. In an action of debt for 200*l. upon the ſtatute* 2 Ed. 6. for tithes of lands in the pariſh of Ringſton, alias Royſton, the defendant pleaded the ſtatute 31 Hen. 8. and that the lands were discharged in the hands of the prior of Mount Bretton, at the time of the dissolution, and issue joined upon the discharge; and upon trial at bar, the defendant not making good his plea, the court ruled the value to be taken as confessed, because the issue is joined upon a collateral point. And the defendant took not the value by protestation, and so the verdict was given for 200*l. but neither damages nor costs.* All. 88. Attachment upon a prohibition, and the plaintiff declar'd, that the defendant sued in the ecclesiastical court after a prohibition granted, for the profits of the office of register, to the archdeacon of Huntington; judgment by default, and a writ of inquiry, and damages and costs tax'd; it was objected, that damages, &c. could not be given in a prohibition; but judgment for the plaintiff, for the damages and costs. 3 Lev. 360. Pasch. 5 *W. & M. in C. Action brought in the court of C. B. upon several promises; judgment by default; writ of inquiry executed, and 424*l.* damages given, error brought in the court of B. R. plaintiff in error did not proceed. The court was moved upon 3 Hen. 7. cap. 10. that the defendant in error should, besides the costs, have interest allowed him, for the sum adjudged due to him, pending the time of writ of error, from the judgment. It was resolved by the whole court that the defendant upon a writ of error brought into B. R. should not have interest allowed him by way of damages, for the sum adjudged due to him, from the time of the first judgment, pending the writ of error. For at the time of making the statute 3 H. 7. cap. 10. which give damages upon the writ of error, all interest was reputed unlawful; and therefore that statute could not give it; in fact, when interest run highest, as at 10 per cent. interest has not been allowed. In writs of error brought into the Exchequer Chamber, interest is never allowed; and a uniformity in practice is to be wished and endeavoured. 10 Mod. 274, 278. Hill. 1 Geo. 1. *B. R. 2. How much damages shall be recovered, and in what cases double, treble or quadruple damages shall be given.

In all actions which sound in damages, the jury seem to have a discretionary power of giving what damages they think proper; for though in contracts the very sum specified and agreed on is usually given, yet if there are any circumstances of hardship, fraud or deceit, though not sufficient to invalidate the contract, the jury may consider of them, and proportion and mitigate the damages accordingly; as in case upon a policy of assurance, which was a cheat, for an old vessel was painted, and goods of no value put in the vessel and above 1500*l.* insured upon it, and then the ship was voluntarily sunk. So on an action brought on a promise of 1000*l.* if the plaintiff should find the defendant's owl; the court declared, though the promise were proved, that the jury may mitigate the damages; also on demurrer, by which the promise is confessed, the jury may consider of the circumstances and mitigate damages accordingly. 2 New Abr. 4.

The plaintiff declared upon an assumpsit to pay for an horse a barley corn a nail, doubling every nail, and avers, that there were thirty-two nails in every shoe, which doubling every nail, came to 500 quarters of barley; which being tried before Hyde, he directed the jury to give the value of the horse in damage, and accordingly they gave 8*l.* and held good. 1 Lev. 111. 1 Keb. 569. S. C. 6 Mod. 305. S. P.

In personal actions, the plaintiff shall recover damages only for the tort done before the action brought, and therein the plaintiff declares to his damage; but in a real action he recovers his damage, pending the writ, and therefore never accounts to his damage. 10 Co. 117. a. And though damages be given by statute, yet the old form remains. 2 Inst. 286.

Also in personal actions, the plaintiff shall recover no more than he hath counted for, although the jury give him more, for he best knows the measure of his wrong, and what he is intitled to. 10 Co. 116. Owen. 45. Yel. 45. Cro. Eliz. 544. 1 Bulst. 49.

In trespass for rescuing a distress, to his damage so much; if the defendant justifies the rescous upon special matter, upon which it was demurred for the plaintiff, he shall have damages as he hath counted for, for the defendant hath acknowledged the trespass, and hath not denied the damages. 1 Rol. Abr. 578.

Where the jury finds greater damages than the party declares for, the court may, to prevent error, give judgment for so much as the party declares for, nullo habito respectu to the rest, else the party may release the overplus, and take judgment for the rest. Yelv. 45.

Also, though the jury cannot regularly give the plaintiff more damages than he hath counted for, yet may they award him costs distinct and separate from the damages; and though such costs exceed the damages laid in the declaration, yet shall the plaintiff recover both; for the damages are given for the wrong, for which the action is brought, and the costs for the charge of the suit; the one before the suit, and the other in and for the suit. See 10 Co. 115. b. Cro. Eliz. 568. 2 Rol. Rep. 447. Cro. J. 69. Yelv. 70. 1 Rol. Abr. 578.

Ward brought an action against Hatton Rich de Uxore abducta, and keeping her from him usque such a day, which was some time after the exhibiting of the bill, and concluded Contra formam statuti. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, and the declaration was held good, notwithstanding the impertinent conclusion of Contra formam statuti, there being no statute in the case. Secondly, the court resolved, that judgment should be stay'd; for the jury shall be intended to give damages for the whole time mentioned in the declaration. As in trespass, with a continuando to a day after the writ brought, the plaintiff shall have judgment after verdict, which gives damages by intendment for the whole time declared for. And Twisden said, These two cases were resolved; A tradesman brought an action in an inferior court for slandering of him in his trade, by which he lost his custom within the jurisdiction of that court & alibi, and it was held maintainable, notwithstanding the alibi; the other was an action brought upon the sale of several things for divers sums of money, Quæ quidem pecuniarum summæ attingunt ad 10*l.* whereas they came but to 9*l.* the jury gave damages less than 9*l.* and it was held good. But if the verdict had been for for 10*l.* it had been naught. Vent. 103. Mich. 22. Car. 2. B. R. Ward v. Rich.

In caſe plaintiff declared, that the ſecond of July 6. W. 3. he was poſſeſſed of a meadow next adjoining to a river, and to another cloſe contiguous to the ſaid river, which time out of mind ran through his meadow to an ancient mill of the defendant's, without any over-flowing; that the defendant the 3d of Auguſt 6 W. 3. enlarged the foundation of his mill further into the river, whereby he obſtructed the river, and exalted the water, that it drowned the plaintiff's meadow, per quod he loſt the uſe and profit thereof from the aforeſaid 2d day of July to the time of exhibiting the bill. Not guilty pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that intire damages are given to the plaintiff, and from the 2d of July to the 3d of Auguſt, he had no damages at all by his own ſhewing; and it ſhall not be intended, that the damages given by the jury are only for the time after the 3d of Auguſt, for the damages ſhall be underſtood to be given not according to law, but according to the allegation of the plaintiff, who layeth his damages; as reſolved in Harbin and Green's caſe. Hob. 191. Moor 887. And firſt, all the court except Rookby, ſeemed to think it well enough; for it may be the plaintiff laid up his meadow for graſs from the 2d of July; but after judgment was arreſted; for though he might loſe the profits from that time, he notwithſtanding could not loſe the uſe; if he had ſaid (uſum) they might have given judgment for him. It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was a declaration of Mich. 9. Will. 3. and therefore the damages being intire, and given for the impriſonment of four months from the firſt of October, it appears that the damages were given for impriſonment after the action was commenced. And judgment was arreſted. Lord Raym. The time mentioned March 1715, not being then incurred, it was impoſſible; for at the time of the action it was not poſſible that the diverſion of the water-courſe had continued till a time then not come; and therefore when he alledges, that he loſt the benefit of the water-courſe till Apr' prox' ſequen', this is alſo impoſſible, and therefore the jury could not have any conſideration of it. Comyn's Rep 221, 232. pl. 129. In an action of treſpaſs brought by the plaintiff in the court of *C. 3. Where the court may increaſe or mitigate the damages.

In all actions at niſi prius, where damages are the principal, as the court can have no certain conuzance of the cauſe, either by record or other matter apparent, they can neither mitigate nor increaſe the damages. 1 Rol. Ab. 572.

In treſpaſs for cutting his trees, upon Not guilty pleaded, the court cannot increaſe the damages given by the jury, becauſe it lies not in their conuſance. 3 Hen. 4. c. 4. Bro. Coſts 7.—Nor can they diminiſh them, becauſe the treſpaſs is local, and it cannot appear to them what the damage was. 1 Brownl. 204.—So in caſe for words, though the court thought the damages exceſſive, yet they would not mitigate them. Palm. 314. And though at firſt they inclined to do it, yet upon great conſideration they reſolved to leave ſuch matters of fact to the trial of a jury, who beſt know the quality and eſtate of the perſon and the damages he hath ſuſtained.

But in battery pro amputatione manus dextræ, the court may increaſe the damages, for it is apparent to the court by the record and view of the perſon. 1 Rol. Abr. 572.

So in treſpaſs, if judgment be given upon nihil dicit, and a writ of inquiry of damages ſerved, the court may increaſe or diminiſh the damages found by the inqueſt; for that they might have awarded damages acording to their diſcretion, without ſuch writ, adjudged in an action of aſſault, battery and wounding; the manner of doing thereof being ſpecially laid in the declaration, tho' the inqueſt gave 200*l.* damages, yet upon examination of ſurgeons, and upon view of the wound in court, and for the heinouſneſs of the fact, being done in the high ſtreet in the day-time with a ſtilletto with an intent to kill him; and the ſurgeon by agreement being to have 150*l.* for the cure; the plaintiff being in great danger of death, and having loſt a pottle of blood, as the ſurgeons ſaid, the court increaſed the damages to 400*l.* in toto; and judgment given accordingly. 19 Hen. 6. 10. 1 Rol. Abr. 573.

In treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery againſt A. and B. A. appeared, &c. and a verdict was given againſt him, and damages taxed to 30*l.* and the court upon view of the mayhem increaſed the damages to 40*l.* and after a verdict was given againſt B. and damages taxed; and then it was moved that the court, upon another view of the wound, would increaſe damages againſt B. for that A. had murdered the officer that came to ſerve the execution upon him for the 40*l.* ſo that poſſibly the plaintiff might recover nothing againſt A. But it was denied by the court, for that they could have the view but once in the ſame action; tho' if he had brought ſeveral actions, it would have been otherwiſe; but the court directed the plaintiff to ſtay till A. was hanged, and then they might have the view and increaſe the damages. Lit. Rep. 51, 52.

In treſpaſs Quare inſultum fecit et maletractavit the wife of the plaintiff, et equam, upon which the wife rode, percuſſit; ſo that the wife was thrown, and another trod upon her, per quod ſhe loſt the uſe of three fingers, &c. there was a verdict for the plaintiff and 8*l.* damages; and the court refuſed to increaſe the damages upon view of the mayhem and hearing ſurgeons, becauſe there was no mayhem or wounding directly done by the party, but rather by accident, viz. by the coming, &c. of another horſe, which whether he came, &c. or the wife might have avoided him, is matter of evidence. 1 Sid. 433.

In treſpaſs for taking his goods to the damage of 20*l.* if the defendant pleads an arbitrament made in another county, and this is tried againſt the defendant, and damages aſſeſſed for the treſpaſs; yet inaſmuch as this foreign jury could not have a full conuzance of the treſpaſs, and the defendant hath not denied the damage to be according to the count, the court with the aſſent of the plaintiff may increaſe the damages, and to ſo much as the plaintiff hath counted. 1 Rol. Abr. 578.

On ſtat. of Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 12. which gives damages to an appellee on a falſe and malicious appeal; if the jury gives too great damages, the court may abridge them; or or if they give too ſmall damages, the court may increaſe them; for after the acquittal of the appellee, their inquiry as to damages is to be conſidered only as an inqueſt of office; alſo the words of the ſtatute are, Damages ſhall be given to the diſcretion of the juſtices, &c. 2 Hawk. P. C. 201.

Adjudged in action of aſſault, &c. that where the plaintiff declares of a wounding by the word maihemiavit, it is clear the damages may be increaſed, though damages are given by the jury. 3 Salk. 115. pl. 6. Cook v. Beale.

So it is where the plaintiff ſets forth a wound ſo particular in his declaration, that by the deſcription it appears to be a maihem; and ſo it is where the wound is viſible and apparent; and this may be done, whether damages be given by the jury upon an iſſue joined, or upon a writ of inquiry. 3 Salk. 115. pl. 7. Cook v. Beale.

But this increaſe of damages muſt be given by the courts at Weſtminſter upon view of the wounding, or upon affidavits made thereof; and it cannot be done by the juſtices of niſi prius, who, if the wound is very great, muſt indorſe the evidence on the poſtea, and upon ſuch evidence the damages will be increaſed, though the wound was not ſet forth in the maihemiavit in the declaration. 3 Salk. 115. S. C.

And ſo it is without ſuch indorſement, where the caſe was tried before a judge of that court, where the motion is made for increaſe of damages. 3 Salk. 115. pl. 8. Cook v. Beale.

Treſpaſs, aſſault and battery. The plaintiff declares, that the defendant cum manu ſua ipſum Thomam Cook ſuper ſiniſtrum oculum percuſſit et violavit, ita quod the ſaid Thomas Cook, viz. the plaintiff, penitus inhabilis devenit ad ſcribendum vel legendum, being an officer of the exciſe, &c. Not guilty pleaded, verdict for the plaintiff. And Birch ſerjeant, moved that the court would increaſe the damages, upon affidavit, that the plaintiff had loſt his eye. But the court ordered the plaintiff to appear in court in perſon, for otherwiſe they could not increaſe the damages; upon which the plaintiff was brought into court. And afterwards the court, after ſeveral motions reſolved, that the court may increaſe the damages, if the wound be apparent, though it be not a maim. And ſo it was done in the caſe of the lord Foliot. Therefore in this caſe, becauſe the wound is viſible, though it be no mayhem, (for it is not a mayhem, becauſe the eye is not wholly out, but the plaintiff only declares, Quod inhabilis ad legendum vel ſcribendum devenit by the wound,) yet damages may be increaſed. And Powell J. ſaid, that Holt. Ch. J. was of that opinion. Ld. Raym. Rep. 176. Hill. 8 & 9 W. 3. Cook v. Beale.

So (per Powell J.) though the loſs of a noſe is not a mayhem to bring an action felonice for the loſs of it, yet the court may in ſuch caſe increaſe the damages. Ibid.

And he ſaid, that the court might increaſe the damages upon a writ of inquiry, becauſe that was an inqueſt of office. And Sty. 345. 1 Le. 139. Bend. 158. *Litt. Jury gave the defendant 80 l. damages; and upon a motion in arreſt of judgment, becauſe the damages were exceſſive, it was oppoſed by the plaintiff's counſel, and inſiſted, that he might have the benefit of the verdict, which was granted, and accordingly the plaintiff had judgment. 8 Mod. 296. Trin. 10 Geo. 1725. Herbert v. Morgan.

On a contract for ſtock between the plaintiff and J. S. they each depoſit 200 l. in the hands of the defendant, and J. S. not performing his agreement, the plaintiff ſues for the depoſit, and had judgment on demurrer, and took out a writ of inquiry, and proved his caſe; but the jury, on a notion that the defendant could not pay out the money without conſent of both parties, gave 1 d. damages; which was now ſet aſide, the court ſaying, that the rule of not ſetting aſide verdicts for the ſmallneſs of the damages did not extend to this caſe, where the jury miſtook in point of law; and the Chief Juſtice ſaid, he knew no reaſon why the court ſhould not interpoſe in the other caſe. Stran. 425.

Damage cleer, (Damna clericorum) Was a fee aſſeſſed of the tenth part in the Common Pleas, and the twentieth part in the King's Bench and Exchequer, of all damages, (exceeding five marks) recovered either by verdict, confeſſion, or judgment of the court, in all actions upon the caſe, covenant, treſpaſs, battery, falſe impriſonment, dower, and all others, wherein the damages are uncertain, which the plaintiff muſt pay to the prothonotary, or chief officer of that court, wherein they are recovered, before he ſhall have execution for them. This was no other originally than a gratuity given to the prothonotaries and their clerks for drawing ſpecial writs and pleadings, which afterwards grew to a certainty; and was, as ſome have fancied, of old, a tenth part of the damages recovered: For it appears by ancient records, that it hath been uncertain, ſometimes a ſixth, and at other times a third part. This is taken away by 17 Car. 2. cap. 6. ſect. 2. by which it is enacted, That no damage cleer ſhall be taken in any action ſued in any of his Majeſty's courts; and the ſaid fee of damage cleer ſhall be aboliſhed: And if any officer ſhall take any money in the name of damage cleer or in lieu thereof; or ſhall delay to ſign any judgment until damage cleer be paid; he ſhall forfeit treble the ſum ſo taken or demanded to the party grieved.

Damage feaſant, or faiſant, That is, doing hurt or damage; and is when a ſtranger's beaſts are in another man's ground, without licence of the tenant of the ground, and there do feed, tread and otherwiſe ſpoil the corn, graſs, woods, and ſuch like: In which caſe the tenant, whom they damage, may therefore take, diſtrain, and impound them, as well in the night as in the day. But in other caſes, as for rent and ſervices, and ſuch like, none can diſtrain in the night. Stat. De Diſtrictione Scaccar. an. 51 Hen. 3. 1 Inſt. 142.

If a man takes my cattle, and puts them into the land of another, the tenant of the land may take theſe cattle damage-feaſant, though I who was the owner, was not privy to the cattle's being there damage-feaſant; and he may keep them againſt me till ſatisfaction of the damages. 2 Danv. Abr. 364. But if one comes to diſtrain damage-feaſant and to ſeize the cattle, and the owner drives them out before they are taken, he cannot deſtrain them damage-feaſant, but is put to his action of treſpaſs; for the cattle ought to be actually upon the land damage-feaſant, at the time of the diſtreſs. 1 Inſt. 161. 9. Rep. 22. He that hath but the poſſeſſion of, and no title to land, may juſtify taking a diſtreſs damage-feaſant. Plowd. 431. If a man puts cattle to paſture at ſo much a week with another, who after gives notice that he will not have them there any longer, in this caſe, the owner of the ground may diſtrain them damage-feaſant, though the cattle be in lawfully at firſt: So where a leſſee holds after his eſtate is ended. 43 Edw. 3. Kelw. 69. Beaſts belonging to the plough, or beaſts of huſbandry, ſheep, horſes joined to a cart, and 'tis ſaid a horſe with a rider on it, may be deſtrained damage-feaſant, though not for rent. 1 Sid. 422, 440. But the owner may tender amends, before the cattle are impounded; and then the detainer is unlawful: Alſo if when impounded the pound door is open, the owner may take them out. 5 Rep. 76. A greyhound may be taken damage-feaſant, running after conies in a warren. So a man may take a ferret that another hath brought into his warren, and taken conies with. If a perſon bring nets and gins through my warren, I cannot take them out of his hands. 2 Danv. 633. But if men are rowing up my water, and endeavouring with nets to catch fiſh in my ſeveral piſcary, I may take their oars and nets, and detain them as damage-feaſant, to ſtop their further fiſhing; though I cannot cut their nets. *Cro. Date of a deed, Is the deſcription of the time, viz. the day, month, year of our Lord, year of the reign, &c. in which the deed was made. 1 Inſt. 6. The ancient deeds had no dates, but only the month and the year, to ſignify that they were not made in haſte, or in the ſpace of a day, but upon longer and more mature deliberation; and the King's grants began with theſe words, Præſentibus & futuris, &c. But the grants of the common perſons began with Omnibus præſentes literas inſpecturis, &c. Cowell, edit. 1727.

If in the date of a deed, the year of our Lord is right, though the year of the King's reign be miſtaken it ſhall not hurt it. Cro. Jac. 261. A deed was dated the 30th of March 1701 without Anno Domini and Anno Regni; and it was adjudged, that both the year of the Lord and of the King were implicitly in the deed. 2 Salk. 652. A deed is good, though it hath no date of the day or place, or if the date be miſtaken, or though it hath an impoſſible date, as the 30th of February, &c. But he that doth plead ſuch a deed, without any date, or with an impoſſible date, muſt ſet forth the time when it was delivered. 2 Rep. 5. 1 Inſt. 46. If no date of a deed be ſet forth, it ſhall be intended that it had none; and in ſuch caſe it is good from the delivery; for every deed or writing hath a date in law, and that is the day on which it is delivered: And a deed is no deed till the delivery, and that is the date of it. Mod. Ca. 244. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 525. An impoſſible date of a bond, &c. is no date at all; but the plaintiff muſt declare on the bond as made at a certain time: And if the expreſs date be inſenſible, the real date is the delivery. 2 Salk. 463. where there is none, or an impoſſible date, the plaintiff may count of any date. 1 Lill. Abr. 393. If there be a miſtaken date, or a date be impoſſible, &c. the plaintiff may ſurmiſe a legal date in the declaration, whereupon the defendant is to anſwer to the deed, and not to the date. Yelv. 194. If a deed bears date at a place out of the realm, it may be averred that the place mentioned in the deed, is in ſome county in England; and here the place is not traverſable; without this the deed cannot be tried. 1 Inſt. 261. A deed may be dated at one time, and ſealed and delivered at another: But every deed ſhall be intended to be delivered on the ſame day it bears date, unleſs the contrary is proved. 2 Inſt. 674. Though there can be no delivery of a deed before the day of the date; yet after there may. Yelv 138. So that a deed may be dated back on a time paſt, but not at a day to come. See Deed.

Day, (Dies) Is a certain ſpace of time, containing twenty-four hours; and if a fact be done in the night, you muſt lay in law proceedings in nocte ejuſdem diei. Dierum alii ſunt naturales, alii artificiales: Dies naturalis conſtat de 24 horis, & continent diem ſolarem & noctem, & eſt ſpatium in quo ſol progreditur ab oriente in occidentem, & ab occidente iterum in orientem: Dies artificialis ſive ſolaris incipit in ortu ſolis, & definit in occaſu. 1 Inſt. 135. By this deſcription, the natural day conſiſts of twenty-four hours, and contains the ſolar day and the night: and the artificial day begins from the riſing of the ſun, and ends when it ſets.

Day, Dies, Is ſometimes uſed in the law for the day of appearance in court, either originally, or upon aſſignation; and ſometimes for the returns of writs. For example, Days in bank are days ſet down by ſtatute, or order of the court, when writs ſhall be returned, or when the party ſhall appear upon the writ ſerved. Cowell.

Day-writ. The King may grant writ of Warrantia diei to any perſon, which ſhall ſave his default for one day, be it in plea of land, or other action, and be the cauſe true, or not; and this by his prerogative, quod Nota. Br. Prerogative, pl. 142. cites F. N. B. 7.

'Tis againſt law to grant liberty to priſoners in execution, by other writs than day-wtits; but they ſhall have as many day-writs as ſhall be needful for attendance on commiſſioners, to whom the cauſe being matter of account was referred, and that without paying any fees, either for making or ſealing them. *Chan. No priſoner committed by B. R. ought to have the benefit of the day-rule of going abroad in term-time, for their impriſonment is their puniſhment for their contempt, or miſbehaviour. 2 Show. 88. pl. 80. Hill. 31 & 32 Car. 2. B. R. The King v. Deane.

One in execution had a habeas corpus from the lord keeper (which they call a day-writ) returnable three or four days after its teſte. By virtue of this writ, he went to the Wine-Licence Office, but never to any inn of court or Chancery, or to the lord keeper's, and this in the vacation. Per Pemberton Ch. J. This is a habeas out of Chancery, which they may ſend at any time, and by virtue of the King's writ, the party was brought out of the priſon-houſe, and that is juſtifiable. Then all the day, ſo long as there was a keeper with him, he was in cuſtody ſtill, and returning to priſon at night, it is well enough, and no eſcape; though Chancery may examine the contempt, that is nothing to *B. Days-man, In ſome Northern parts of England, any arbitrator, umpire or elected judge, is commonly termed a dies-man, or days-man. Dr. Hammond, in his Annotations on Heb. 10, 25. obſerves, that the word aay, in all idioms, doth ſignify judgment. And on this occaſion, it may not be improper to obſerve, that the addition of dey or day, to the doom-book, or liber judicialis, the general ſurvey, in the time of William the Conqueror, was not meant with any alluſion to the final day of judgment, as many perſons have conceited: for day does not augment the ſenſe of the word, but only doubles, and confirms the ſame meaning: I ſay, the ſyllable dey or day, in that compoſition, does not really ſignify the meaſure of time, but the adminiſtration of juſtice. So as Domeſday-book is but more emphatically, the judicial deciſive record, the book of dooming judgment, and decreeing juſtice, Cowell. edit. 1727.

Dayeria, (Dairy) from day, deie, Sax. dag; and ſignified at firſt the daily yield of milch cows, or the daily profit made of them. As a day-were of land was one day's ploughing, which the French called journal, Lat. jornale; and our midland farmers ſtill call a journey. So in Lorrain and Champaigne, they now uſe the word dayer for the meeting of the day-labouring women to give an account of their daily work, and receive the wages of it. Hence any young artificer, who aſſiſts a maſter workman, is ſtill called a journeyman: as a threſher, hedger, &c. who works by the day, is termed a days-man. And it ſeems probable, that the woman hired by the day, to help in the kitchin, &c. uſually called a chair-woman is no more than a jour-woman, or journe-woman. A dairy in the North, is called The milkneſs; as the dairy-maid, is in all parts a milk-maid: She is called androchia by Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 87. Androchia pudica eſſe debet, & laborioſa daeriæ——Compotus Henrici Deye, & Johannæ uxoris ſuæ, de omnibus exitibus, & proventibus de dayri domini prioris de Burnceſtre. *Paroch. Deadly feud, (Feuda & faida) Is a profeſſion of an irreconcileable enmity till we are revenged even by the death of our enemy. It is deduced from the German word feed, which as Hottoman, in verbis Feudalibus, ſaith, Modo bellum, modo capitales inimicitias ſignificat. It is uſed in ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 13. And ſuch enmity and revenge was allowed by our ancient laws in the time of the Saxons, viz. where any man was killed, if a pecuniary ſatisfaction was not made to the kindred, it was lawful for them to take up arms and revenge themſelves on the murderer, and this is called deadly feud; and probably this was the original of an appeal. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Dean, (Decanus, from the Greek δεκα, decem) Is an eccleſiaſtical magiſtrate or dignitary, ſo called, becauſe he preſides over ten cannons or prebendaries at the leaſt. And we call him a dean that is under the biſhop, and chief of the chapter, ordinarily in a cathedral church; and the reſt of the ſociety or corporation we call capitulum, the chapter. But for the different ſenſes of this word, ſee Lyndewode, tit. De Conſtitut. cap. 1. verbo Decani Rurales; where rural deans are ſaid to be certain perſons that have juriſdiction eccleſiaſtical over other miniſters and pariſhes near adjoining, aſſigned them by the biſhop and archdeacon, being placed and diſplaced by them: Such are the dean of Croyden in Surrey, dean of Battel in Suſſex, &c.

As there are two foundations of cathedral churches in England, the old and the new, (the new are thoſe which Henry the Eighth, upon ſuppreſſion of abbies, transformed from abbot, or prior and convent, to dean and chapter,) ſo there are two means of creating deans: For thoſe of the old foundation, as the dean of St. Paul's, York, &c. are exalted to their dignity much like biſhops; the King firſt ſending out his Conge d' eſlire to the chapter, the chapter then chooſing, the King yielding his Royal aſſent, and the biſhop confirming him, and giving his mandate to inſtall him. Thoſe of the new foundation, whoſe denaries were tranſlated from priories and convents, to dean and chapter, as the dean of Canterbury, Durham, Ely, Norwich, Wincheſter, &c. are donative inſtalled by a ſhorter courſe, by virtue of the King's letter patent, without either election or confirmation; and are viſitable only by the Lord Chancellor, or by ſpecial commiſſion from the King: Bet the letters patent are preſented to the biſhop for inſtitution, and a mandate is iſſued for inſtalment. 1 Inſt. 14. Dav. 46, 47. There are ſome cathedral churches which never had a dean; as that of St. David and Landaff, where the biſhop is head of the chapter, and in his abſence the archdeacon. This word is alſo applied to divers who are the chief of certain peculiar churches or chapels, as the dean of the King's chapel, the dean of the arches, the dean of St. George's chapel at Windſor, &c. Nec collegio alicui præfecti, nec juriſdictione ulla donati, nomine tamen velut honoris gratia inſignes, ſays Spelman. Cowell, edit. 1727.

There are four ſorts of deans and deanries; of which and of whom the law of this realm taketh knowledge. The firſt is a dean who hath a chapter conſiſting of prebendaries or canons, ſubordinate to the biſhop, as a council aſſiſtant to him in matters ſpiritual relating to religion, and in matters temporal relating to the temporalties of his biſhoprick: For ſeeing that it was impoſſible but that ſects, ſchiſms and hereſies ſhould ariſe in the church, it was in Chriſtian policy thought fit and neceſſary, that the burden of the whole church, and the government thereof, ſhould not lie upon the perſon of the biſhop only; and therefore it was thought neceſſary that every biſhop within his dioceſe ſhould be aſſiſted with a council, to conſult with him in matters of difficulty concerning religion, and deciding of the controverſies thereof; and alſo for the better ordering and diſpoſing of the things of the church, and to give their aſſent to ſuch eſtates as the biſhop ſhould make of the temporalties of his biſhoprick; for it was not convenient that the whole power and charge thereof ſhould remain in any one ſole perſon only. The ſecond is a dean who hath no chapter, and yet he is preſentative, and hath cure of ſouls; he hath a peculiar, and a court wherein he holdeth eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction; but he is not ſubject to the viſitation of the biſhop or ordinary; ſuch is the dean of Battle in Suſſex, which deanry was founded by King William the Conqueror, in memory of his conqueſt; and the dean there hath cure of ſouls, and hath ſpiritual juriſdiction within the liberty of Battle. The third dean is eccleſiaſtical alſo, but the deanry is not preſentative, but donative, nor hath any cure of ſouls, but he is only by covenant or condition; and he alſo hath a court and a peculiar, in which he holdeth plea and juriſdiction of all ſuch matters and things as are eccleſiaſtical, and which do ariſe within his peculiar, which oftentimes extends over many pariſhes; ſuch a dean conſtituted by commiſſion from the metropolitan of the province, is the dean of the Arches, and the dean of Bocking in Eſſex; and of ſuch deanries there are many more. The fourth ſort of dean is he who is uſually called the rural dean; having no abſolute judicial power in himſelf, but he is to order the eccleſiaſtical affairs with his deanry and percinct, by the direction of the biſhop or of the archdeacon; and is a ſubſtitute of the biſhop in many caſes. Hughes, c. 2.

The dean which hath a chapter, ſuch as the dean of Canterbury, St. Paul's, and the like, is ſet forth to be an eccleſiaſtical governor, ſecular over the prebendaries and canons in the cathedral church. Hughes, c. 2.

The inſtitution of deanries, as alſo of the other eccleſiaſtical offices of dignity and power, ſeems to bear a reſemblance and relation to the methods and forms of civil government, which obtained in thoſe early ages of the church throughout the weſtern empire. Accordingly, as in this kingdom, for the better preſervation of the peace, and more eaſy adminiſtration of juſtice, every hundred conſiſted of ten diſtricts called tithings, every tithing of ten friburghs or free pledges, and every free or frank pledge of ten families; and in every ſuch tithing there was a juſtice, or civil dean appointed, for the ſubordinate adminiſtration of juſtice: So in conformity to ſuch ſecular method, the ſpiritual governors, the biſhops, divided each dioceſe into deanries (decennaries, or tithings,) each of which was the diſtrict of ten pariſhes or churches; and over every ſuch diſtrict they appointed a dean, which in cities or large towns was called the dean of the city or town, and in the country had the appellation of rural deans. Ken. Paroch. Ant. 633, 634.

The like office of deans began very early in the greater monaſteries, eſpecially in thoſe of the Benedictine order; where the whole convent was divided into decennaries, in which the dean or tenth perſon did preſide over the other nine; took an account of all their manual operations; ſuffered none to leave their ſtation, or omit their particular duty duty without expreſs leave; viſited their cells or dormitories every night; attended them at table to keep order and decorum at their meals; guided their conſcience; directed their ſtudies; and obſerved their converſation: and for this purpoſe held frequent chapters, wherein they took publick cognizance of all irregular practices; and impoſed ſome leſſer penances; but ſubmitted all their proceedings to the abbot or prelate, to whom they were accountable for their power, and for the abuſe of it. And in the larger houſes, where numbers amounted to ſeveral decuries, the ſenior dean had a ſpecial pre-eminence, and had ſometimes the care of all the others devolved upon him alone. Ken. Par. Antiq. 634, 635.

And the office of dean in ſeveral colleges in the univerſities, ſeemeth to have ariſen from the ſame foundation.

And the inſtitution of cathedral deans ſeemeth evidently to be owing to this practice. When in epiſcopal ſees, the biſhops diſperſed the body of their clergy by affixing them to parochial cures; they reſerved a college of prieſts or ſecular canons for their counſel and aſſiſtance, and for the conſtant celebration of divine offices in the mother or cathedral church, when the tenth perſon had an inſpecting and preſiding power, till the ſenior or principal dean ſwallowed up the office of all the inferior, and in ſubordination to the biſhop, was head or governor of the whole ſociety. His office was, to have authority over all the canons, preſbyters, and vicars, and to give poſſeſſion to them when inſtituted by the biſhop; to inſpect their diſcharge of the cure of ſouls; to convene chapters, and preſide in them, there to hear and determine proper cauſes; and to viſit all churches once in three years within the limits of their juriſdiction. The men of this dignity were called archipreſbyters, becauſe they had a ſuperintendance over all their college of canonical prieſts; and were likewiſe called decani chriſtianitatis, becauſe their chapters were courts of chriſtianity, or eccleſiaſtical judicatures, wherein they cenſured their offending brethren, and maintained the diſcipline of the church within their own precincts. Kent. par. Ant. 634, 635.

Deans of the old foundation come in by election of the chapter upon the King's Conge d' eſlire, with the royal aſſent, and confirmation of the biſhop, much in the ſame way as the biſhops themſelves do: but deans of the new foundation come in by the King's letters patent upon which, they are inſtituted by their reſpective biſhops; and then inſtalled upon a mandate, purſuant to ſuch inſtitution, and directed to the chapters. Gibſ. 173.

This diſtinction between the old and new foundations came in after the diſſolution of monaſteries, when King Henry the Eighth having ejected the monks out of the cathedrals, placed ſecular canons inſtead of them: thoſe whom he thus regulated, are called The deans and chapters of the new foundation; ſuch as are Canterbury, Wincheſter, Worceſter, Ely, Carliſle, Durham, Rocheſter, and Norwich. And beſides theſe, he erected five cathedrals de novo, and endowed them out of the eſtates of diſſolved monaſteries, viz. Cheſter, Peterborough, Oxford, Glouceſter, and Briſtol: which were by him made epiſcopal ſees, as alſo Weſtminſter, but the biſhoprick of this laſt place was altered again, and the monaſtery turned into a collegiate church by Queen Elizabeth. Johnſ. 54.

Death of perſons. There is a natural death of a man, and a civil death: natural, where nature itſelf expires and extinguiſhes; and civil, is where a man is not actually dead, but is adjudged ſo by law; as where he enters into religion, &c. If any perſon for whoſe life any eſtate hath been granted, remain beyond ſea, or is otherwiſe abſent ſeven years, and no proof made of his being living, ſuch perſon ſhall be accounted naturally dead; though if the party be after proved living at the time of eviction of any perſon, then the tenant, &c. may re-enter and recover the profits. Stat. 19 Car. 2. c. 6. And perſons in reverſion or remainder, after the death of another, upon affidavit that they have cauſe to believe ſuch other dead, may move the Lord Chancellor to order the perſon to be produced; and if he be not produced, he ſhall be taken as dead: and thoſe claiming may enter, &c. 6 Ann. c. 18. A man ſeiſed in fee of lands, made a leaſe in reverſion to S. D. for ninety-nine years, to commence after the deaths of J. D. and E. D. who had then a leaſe in poſſeſſion for the like term; if they or either of them ſo long lived: the plaintiff poſitively proved the death of J. D. But as to the death of E. D. the proof was that he had been reputed dead, and no body had heard of him for fifteen years paſt, and the defendant not being able to prove that he was alive at any time within ſeven years, this caſe was adjudged within the act 19 Car. 2. Carthew 246. In law proceedings, the death of either party between the verdict and judgment ſhall not be error; ſo as judgment be entred in two terms. 17 Car. 2. c. 8. See Life eſtates, Suits.

Deawarrennata, Diſwarrened. When a warren was broke up and laid in common, King Henry 3. in a charter to the citizens of Lond:n, dated 18 Aug. anno reg. 2. grants to them,——Quod tota warrena de Stanes, cum pertin. ſuis ſit deawarrennata & deafforeſtata in perpetuum. ——Placit. temp. Ed. 1. & Ed. 2. MS. fol. 144.

De bene eſſe. To take or do a thing de bene eſſe, is to allow or accept it as well done for the preſent, till it comes to be more fully examined, and then to ſtand or fall, according to the merit of the thing, in its own nature, ſo that valeat quantum valere poteſt. So in Chancery, upon motion for one of the leſs principal defendants to be examined, the court ſometimes will order it de bene eſſe, that is, he may be examined, but ſo, that upon hearing, and fully examining the caſe, his depoſition may be allowed, or ſuppreſſed, as the court ſhall think fit. See Langham's caſe, Cro. 3. par. fol. 68. So alſo at Common law, the judges frequently take bail de bene eſſe, that is, to be allowed or diſallowed upon the exception, or approbation of the plaintiff's attorney; however in the interim, they are good, or have a continual allowance. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Debenture, Was by an act made in 1649, ordained to be in the nature of a bond or bail, to charge the commonwealth to pay the ſoldier-creditor, or his aſſigns, the ſum due upon auditing the account of his arrears. The form of which debenture, as then uſed, may be ſeen in Scobell's Acts and Ordinances, anno 1649, cap. 63. The word is alſo mentioned in the act of Oblivion, 12 Car. 2. cap. 8. ſect. 7. and is uſed in the Exchequer. See Auditor of the Receipts. In the King's houſe, debentures are given uſually to the King's ſervants, for the payment of their wages, board-wages, and the like. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Debet & detinet, Are Latin words uſed in the bringing of writs and actions. And an action ſhall be always in the Debet & detinet, when he who makes a bargain or contract, or lends money to another, or he to whom a bond is made, bringeth the action againſt him who is bounden, or party to the contract or bargain, or unto the lending of the money, &c. if he brings debt for the horſe, the writ muſt be in the detinet only. New Nat. Br. 165. In debt againſt huſband and wife, for a debt due from the wife before coverture, the writ ſhall be in the debet & detinet. So in debt againſt or for ſucceſſors, in reſpect of obligations made to the predeceſſor, &c. Ibid. Debt againſt an heir, is to be in the debet & detinet, or it will be naught; if an heir be to bring debt, it ſhall be in the detinet: and if a man be bound to another, and makes his executor and dies, if the money due in the time of the teſtator be refuſed to be paid by the executor, the action muſt be brought againſt him only in the detinet; and ſo in all actions brought by executors as executors, though the duty accrued in their own time. But debet & detinet lies by an executor on his own contract: and if leſſee for years makes his executor and dies, for rent due after the teſtator's death, there the action ſhall be in the debet & detinet. It is the like law in caſes of adminiſtrators, as it is not certain what ſhall be recovered, only according to the aſſets. 5 Rep. 31. An executor upon a davaſtavit ſhall be charged in the debet & detinet, the action being upon a judgment. 1 Lill. Abr. 399. In action grounded on privity of contract; or action of eſcape, it muſt be brought in the detinet. Cro. Jac. 545, 685. See Debt and Executor.

Debet & ſolet, Are words frequently uſed by the writers of the Common law. For example, it is ſaid in the Old. Nat. Brev. fol. 98. this writ Deſecta molendini, being in the debet & ſolet, is a writ of right, &c. And again, fol. 69. a writ of Quod permittat may be pleaded in the county before the ſheriff, and it may be in the debet & ſolet, or in the debet without the ſolet, according as the defendant claimeth; wherefore note, that theſe kinds of writs have theſe words in them, as formal words, not to be omitted: and according to the diverſity of the caſe, both debet and ſolet, or debet alone: That is if a man ſue to recover any right by writ, whereof his anceſtor was diſſeiſed by the tenant, or his anceſtor, then he uſeth only the word debet in his writ; becauſe ſolet is not fit, by reaſon his anceſtor was diſſeiſed, and the cuſtom diſcontinued: But if he ſue for any thing that is now firſt of all denied, then he uſeth both theſe words, debet & ſolet; becauſe his anceſtors before him, and he himſelf uſually enjoyed the thing ſued for, as ſuit to a mill, or common of paſture, until the preſent refuſal of the tenant. The like may be ſaid of debet & detinet, as appeareth by the Reg. Orig. fol. 140. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Debt. Where a man oweth another a certain ſum of money by obligation, or by bargain for a thing ſold, or by contract, or upon a loan made by the creditor to the debtor, and the debtor will not pay the debt at the day appointed that he ought to pay it, then the creditor ſhall have an action of debt againſt him for the ſame. F. N. B. 119.

An action of debt is ſaid to be founded upon contract, either expreſs or implied, in which the certainty of the ſum or duty appears, and therefore the plaintiff is to recover the ſame in numero, and not to be impaired in damages by the jury, as in thoſe actions which ſound only in damages; as aſſumſit, trover, &c. 4 Co. 90. Slade's caſe. Vaugh. 101.

2. Of extinguiſhing the debt, and pleading in bar thereof.

1. In what caſes action of debt will lie.

If in an action, in which the plaintiff can only recover damages, as in waſte, there be judgment for him, he can afterwards bring an action of debt for thoſe damages. See 1 Rol. Abr. 600, 601.

Alſo if after judgment for the plaintiff in B. R, the defendant brings a writ of error in cam. ſcacc. An action of debt may be brought in B. R. upon the judgment, pending the writ of error; and the defendant cannot plead nul tiel record, for by the writ of error the tranſcript of the record only is removed. 1 Sid. 236. 1 Lev. 153. Raym. 100. S. C.

Debt lies in the Marſhalſea, or any other court, upon judgment in C. B. or B. R. and upon nul tiel record, the iſſue ſhall be tried by certiorari, and mittimus out of Chancery. 1 Salk. 209.

Every contract muſt be legally entred into, and the conſideration thereof muſt be lawful, as marriage, work, ſoliciting a cauſe, &c. otherwiſe an action of debt will not lie. See 1 Rol. Abr. 593.

If a ſheriff levies a certain ſum of money on a Levari facias, at the ſuit of J. S. and returns the writ ſerved, J. S. may have an action of debt againſt the ſheriff, without any actual contract, for the levying the money to the uſe of J. S. is a contract in law, and he ſhould pay it over. Hob. 206. Moor 886. 1 Brownl. 5.

If a ſtatute prohibits the doing a thing under a certain penalty, and preſcribes no particular method for the recovery thereof, the party intitled to the penalty may recover the ſame by action of debt. 1 Rol. Abr. 598.

An action of debt lies by a ſheriff upon the ſtatute of 28 Eliz. cap. 4. for his fees given by the ſtatute, for an execution ſerved by him; though the ſtatute does not ſay, that he ſhall have his fees, or any action for them, but only ſays, that he ſhall not take for any execution ſerved, any conſideration or recompence beſides that thereafter in the ſaid act mentioned, &c. 1 Rol. Abr. 598. Latch 17, 51. Noy 75.

The action of debt is a proper remedy which the law gives for the recovery of rents reſerved upon leaſes for years. Co. Lit. 162. But this extended not to freehold rents; for the reaſon whereof, and how it is now remedied by 8 Ann. ſee title Rents.

The grantee for years of an annuity may have an action of debt for the arrears. Co. Eliz. 268, 895.

If there had been tenant for life of a rent, and he died, the rent being in arrear, his executor, by the Common law, might have an action of debt for the arrears, becauſe there was no other remedy. 4 Co. 49.

If a leſſee for years aſſigns over his whole term by indenture, reſerving rent, the leſſee, by the name of rent, may recover in an action of debt upon the contract; although it was objected, that the leſſee having no reverſion, it was to be conſidered as a ſum in groſs, and therefore not recoverable until the term was expired. Carth. 161.

If a man lends goods as a ſecurity for money, and the borrower tenders the money, and recovers the goods in an action of trover, yet the pawnbroker may have an action of debt for his money; becauſe though the ſecurity ceaſes, yet the duty remains, in as much as the money lent is not paid back to the party from whence it came. The ſame law as to land. Cro. Jac. 243. Yelv. 179. 1 Bulſt. 29, 31.

Plaintiff agreed to ſell the defendant ſo many ſtacks of wood, and the defendant covenanted to pay the plaintiff 35*l.* for every hundred of the ſaid ſtacks, and bound himſelf in the penalty of 100*l.* to do it. It was held per cur. that the plaintiff might have debt or covenant at his election; for the rate being certain, viz. 35*l.* for every hundred ſtacks of wood, when the defendant has the wood, the agreement becomes cartain, for which bebt lies. 2 Ld. Raym. Rep. 814.

Debt for rent on indenture laid to be made at London, for the demiſe of lands in Surry. The action was laid in London; and on demurrer, it was held, that the plaintiff had his election to bring it in either againſt the leſſee; otherwiſe had it been againſt an aſſignee, who is chargeable only on the privity of eſtate. Judgment for the plaintiff. Strange 776.

Debt lies not on a promiſſory note. Stra. 680.

Debt will not lie for a wager. Ld. Raym. 69.

2. Of extinguiſhing the debt, and pleading in bar thereof.

If a man accepts an obligation for a debt due by ſimple contract, this extinguiſhes the contract. 1 Rol. Abr. 604. This muſt be intended an obligation from the debtor; for if a ſtranger gives bond for ſuch debt, 'tis otherwiſe. 2 Leon. 110. adjudged.——But if upon making the contract a ſtranger gives bond for it, or being preſent promiſes to give bond for it, and after does ſo, the debt by contract is extinguiſhed, the obligation being made upon or purſuant to the contract. 2 Leon. 110. per cur.——So if a man accepts a bond for a legacy, he cannot after ſue for his legacy in the ſpiritual court, for by the deed the legacy is extinct, and it is become a mere debt at Common law. Yelv. 38.

In debt upon an obligation the defendant cannot plead nil debet, but muſt deny the deed by pleading non eſt factum, for the ſeal of the party continuing it muſt be diſſolved eo ligamine quo ligatur. See Hard. 332.

But if the debt be due by ſimple contract, then he may plead nil debet, for it does not appear that there is any debt continuing. Hob. 218. 2 Inſt. 651.

In debt for rent, if it be by deed, the proper plea is non eſt factum; but if it be without deed the defendant may plead non dimiſit, nothing in arrear, or that he never entred; tred; alſo by the better opinion of the books, if the rent be due by indenture, the defendant may plead nil debet; for an indenture does not acknowledge a debt like an obligation, ſince the debt accrued by ſubſequent enjoyment. Hard. 332.

In debt for the arrears of an annuity granted for life, nil debet is no good plea, for the action is merely founded upon the deed, for without it no action can be maintained; and though by the death of the grantee the nature of the action is changed, the annuity being determined; yet this proves not but that the action is founded upon the deed. Kelw. 147.

But in debt for the arrears of a rent-charge, by will deviſed to the plaintiff's wife for life, againſt the adminiſtrator of the occupier of the land, nil detinet is a good plea, for a will is no deed, nor wants any delivery; adjudged, and ſaid the action was not ſo much grounded upon the will itſelf as upon the ſtatute, by which men are enabled by will to diſpoſe of their lands and rents iſſuing out thereof. Hard. 332.

If in debt for rent, the plaintiff declares upon a leaſe for years rendering 31s. yearly at Lady-day and Michaelmas by equal portions, and demand 15s. 6d. for rent behind for one year ending at Lady-day laſt, the declaration is naught; for the demand of the 15*s.* 6*d.* being for the arrears of the rent of the whole year, it ought to have been ſhewed how he was ſatisfied the reſidue; and for this cauſe, after a demurrer to the defendant's plea, the writ was abated. Cro. C. 137. Trin. 4 Car. Bailey v. Hughes.

Debt upon bond for performance of covenants in a leaſe; the defendant pleads performance, the plaintiff replied, and aſſigned a breach for non-payment of rent on ſuch a day, ſecundum formam & effectum conditionis obligationis præd', the defendant rejoins and alledges an entry by the plaintiff on the lands leaſed before the rent due, and that he kept poſſeſſion till the rent-day was paſſed; and found for the plaintiff; it was moved in an arreſt of judgment on the plaintiff's replication, it being that the defendant did not pay the rent ſecundum formam & effectum conditionis of the bond, whereas there is no mention of any payment of rent in the condition of the bond, but in the leaſe only; ſed non allocatur; becauſe the defendant by his rejoinder confeſſed that ſuch rent was arrear, and waived taking iſſue upon it, but took iſſue on another matter, and ſo this is well enough after verdict. And per Hale Ch. B. it is all one in ſubſtance to plead, as the plaintiff did, and to have pleaded ſecundum formam & effectum indenturæ; for the condition of the bond comprehends all that is comprized in the leaſe; but though it might have been a queſtion upon demurrer, yet there can be no doubt of it after a verdict. Hard. 319. pl. 13. Mich. 14 Car. 2. in the Exchequer. Anon'.

Debt for rent upon a leaſe for a year, and ſo from year to year, quamdiu ambabus partibus placuerit; there was a verdict for the plaintiff for two years rent. Sanders moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff alledges indeed, that the defendant entred and was poſſeſſed the firſt year, but mentions no entry as to the ſecond. Per Twiſden, the jury have found the rent to be due for both years, and we now intend, that he was in poſſeſſion all the time for which the rent is found to be due. Mod. 3. pl. 10. Mich. 21 Car. 2. B. R. Goſtwicke v. Maſon.

In debt for rent upon a demiſe of a fiſhery to the defendant for three lives, the plaintiff in his declaration ſet out the demiſe, virtute cujus the leſſee entred, & fuit & adhuc eſt inde poſſeſſionatus. The defendant pleaded Nil debet, and there was a verdict for the plaintiff. And ſerjeant Pratt moved in arreſt of judgment, that it appeared upon the declaration, that the eſtate for the three lives was continuing, and therefore debt did not lie, it being a rent iſſuing out of a freehold. Serjeant Hooper, in anſwer ſaid, that this was well enough after a verdict, for that Nil debet put all the matter in iſſue, and if the eſtate had not been determined, the plaintiff could not have had a verdict, and that that matter indeed was the greateſt matter litigated at the trial, and therefore the continuing not appearing directly, the court would take the eſtate to be determined. Pratt ſaid, that the averment in the declaration of the ſuit & adhuc, &c. was an expreſs averment that the eſtate did continue; but if it were only indifferent, it would not be good; for the plaintiff ought to ſhew expreſsly in his declaration that the eſtate for three lives was determined, or elſe he was not intitled to bring his action of debt, within the ſtatute of Hen. 8. which was agreed by the court, and the judgment arreſted. 2 Lord Raym. 1056, 1057. Mich. 3 *Ann. Deceit, (Deceptio dolus,) Is a ſubtle trick or device, whereunto may be drawn all manner of craft, ſubtlety, guile, fraud, ſlight, cunning, covin, colluſion, and practice uſed to deceive another man by any means; which hath no other more proper or particular name than deceit, or offence. Weſt's Symbol. tit. Indictments, ſect. 68. See Deceptione, Dilceit, Covin.

Deceptione, Is a writ that lieth properly againſt him, that deceitfully doth any thing in the name of another, for one that receiveth damage or hurt thereby. F. N. B. fol. 95. This writ is either original or judicial; as appeareth by the Old Nat. Brev. fol. 50. where you may read the uſe of both: For ſome ſatisfaction, take the words of that book;——This writ of deceit, when it is original, lieth in caſe where deceit is uſed by one man to another, by which deceit he may be diſherited, or otherwiſe evil treated, as appeareth by the Regiſter, &c. And when it is judicial, then it lieth out of the rolls of record; as in caſe where a ſcire facias is ſent to the ſheriff, that he warn a man to be before the juſtices at a certain day, and the ſheriff returns the writ ſerved, whereas the ſaid man was not warned, by which the party that ſued out the ſcire facias recovereth; then the party which ought to have been warned, ſhall have the ſaid writ againſt the ſheriff. In the Terms of the law, it is ſaid, that the original writ of deceit lieth, where any deceit is done by a man to another, ſo that he hath not ſufficiently performed his bargain or promiſe: In the writ judicial, he concurreth with the former book. See Reg. Orig. fol. 112. and the Regiſt. Judicial, in that table, verbo Deceptione. Cowell.

Decies tantum, Is a writ that lies againſt a juror, who hath taken money for giving his verdict, called ſo of the effect, becauſe it is to recover ten times ſo much as he took. It lies alſo againſt embracers, that procure ſuch an inqueſt. Stat 38 Ed. 3. c. 12, 13. Reg. of Writs, fol. 188. F. N. B. fol. 171.

But decies tantum doth not lie againſt the embracer, if he embrace and take no money; for he ought to take money and alſo embrace. Yet it lies againſt the jurors, although they do not give a verdict, if they take money; and ſo, 'tis ſaid, if they give a true verdict, decies tantum lies, if they take money. Dyer 95.

Decies tantum lies againſt ſheriffs taking reward for arraying a pannel, 18 Hen. 6. c. 14.

For more of decies tantum, ſee 7 Vin. Ab. 378—382.

Decimation, Decimatio, The puniſhing every tenth ſoldier by lot, was termed decimatio legionis: It may be ſtretched ſtretched to ſignify tithing, or paying the tenth part. There was another ſort of decimation in the late times of uſurpation, which, too many of his Majeſty's loyal ſubjects have ſo much ſad cauſe to remember, that I need not renew the memory of it. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Decimis ſolvendis pro poſſeſſionibus alienigenarum, Is a writ, or letters patent, yet extant in the Regiſter, which lay againſt thoſe that had farmed the priors aliens lands of the King, for the rector of the pariſh, to recover his tithe of them. Reg. Orig. fol. 179.

Deciners, Decenniers, or Doceners, (Decennarii,) Derived from the French dixiéme, tenth, ſignifieth in the ancient monuments of our law, ſuch as were wont to have the overſight and check of ten friburgs, for the maintenance of the King's peace; and the limits or compaſs of their juriſdiction was called Decenna. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 15. of whom you may alſo read Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 27. and Reg. Orig. fol. 98. b. Theſe ſeemed to have large authority in the Saxons time, taking cognizance of cauſes within their circuit, and redreſſing wrongs by way of judgment, as you may read in the laws of King Edward, publiſhed by Lamb. numb. 32. In later times mention is made of theſe, as in Britton cap. 12. who ſaith in the King's perſon, (as he writeth his whole book in that manner) "We will that all thoſe that be fourteen years old ſhall make oath, that they will be ſufficient and loyal unto us, and that they will neither be felons, or aſſenting to felons; and we will that all be en dozeine & plevis per dozeners, that is, profeſs themſelves of this or that dozeine, and make or offer ſurety of their behaviour, by theſe or thoſe dozeniers, except religious perſons, clerks, knights, and their eldeſt ſons, and women." Yet the ſame author, in his 29th chapter, towards the end, doth ſay, that all of 12 years old and upwards are puniſhable for not coming to the turn of the ſheriff, except earls, prelates, barons, religious perſons, and women. Staundf. Plac. Cor. f. 47. out of Fitzherbert hath theſe words, "The ſame law is, where the dozeniers make preſentment, that a felon is taken for felony, and delivered to the ſheriff, &c." And Kitchin out of the Regiſter, and Britton ſaith thus, Religious perſons, clerks, knights, or women, ſhall not be deciniers, fol. 33. From all which premiſſes may be gathered, that of late times, this word ſignifieth nothing but ſuch a one as by oath of loyalty to his Prince, is ſettled in the combination or ſociety of a dozeine. And a dozeine ſeemeth to extend ſo far as every leet extendeth; becauſe in leets only this oath is miniſtred by the ſteward, and taken by ſuch as are twelve years old and upwards, dwelling within the compaſs of the leet, where they are ſworn. F. N. B. fol. 161. a. The particulars of this oath you may read in Bracton, lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 1. num. 1. where he ſetteth down fifteen years for the age of thoſe that are ſworn to the King's peace; but lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 11. num. 5. he nameth twelve years. See Inlaughe. From hence we may note the diverſities between the ancient and preſent times, in this point of law and government, as well for the age of thoſe that are to be ſworn, as alſo that decennier is not now uſed for the chief man of a dozeine, but him that is ſworn to the King's peace. And laſtly, that now there are no other dozeins but leets; and that no man ordinarily giveth other ſecurity for the keeping of the King's peace, but his own oath. And that therefore none anſwereth for another's tranſgreſſions, but every man for himſelf. See Frankpledge, and 2 part. Inſt. fol. 37. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Declaration, (Declaratio,) Is a ſhewing in writing the grief and complaint of the demandant or plaintiff, againſt the defendant or tenant, wherein he is ſuppoſed to have done ſome wrong. And this ought to be plain and certain, both becauſe it impeaches the defendant, and alſo compels him to anſwer thereto. Such a declaration in an action real, is termed a count. Note; that the count or declaration, ought to contain demonſtration, declaration, and concluſion. In demonſtration are contained three things: Quis queritur, contra quem, & pro qua cauſa. In the declaration there ought to be compriſed, Quomodo inter partes actio accrevit, quando & qua die, anno & loco, & cui dabitur. And in the concluſion, he ought to aver, and proffer to prove his ſuit, and ſhew the damages he has ſuſtained by the wrong done him. See Count.

A declaration ought to contain two things, viz. certainty and verity; for that is the foundation of the ſuit whereunto the adverſe party muſt anſwer, and whereupon the court is to give judgment. Co. Litt. 303. a.

Declaration muſt be certain, containing, 1. Such ſufficient certainty whereby the court may give a peremptory and final judgment upon the matter in controverſy. 2. The defendant may make a direct anſwer to the matter contained therein. 3. That the jury, after iſſue joined, may give a compleat verdict thereupon. 4. No blank or ſpace to be left therein. Brown's Annal. 3.

Though the rule of law is, that declarations ſhall not be taken by intendment, but ought to have certainty; yet this has an expoſition and a meaning, viz. that where the uncertainty is ſo great, that it is indifferent to take it either way; but where one way is more ſtrong, and the indictment this way much exceeds the intendment the other way, ſuch intendment ſhall be allowed, and declarations ſhall be adjudged good by ſuch intendment. As in debt againſt an heir, the count ſhall be good, notwithſtanding the plaintiff does not ſhew that the executors have no aſſets; for it ſhall be intended; becauſe it ſhall be preſumed, that otherwiſe the plaintiff would not have brought his action. Pl. C. 193. a. b. 1 Eliz. Wroteſley v. Adams.

In the Book of Entries is ſet forth, that treſpaſs was brought for heaps of ſtones, without mentioning any certainty; cited arg. but Dodderidge ſaid, that the counſel who cited it, never ſaw an action for a heap of ſtones; but perhaps it might be for a cart-load, or the like, of ſtones. Palm. 447. Hill. 2 Car. B. R. in the caſe of Clapham v. Middleton.

An action of treſpaſs was brought, quare teſtas diverſas (Anglice earthen pots) ipſius querentis cepit; and moved that it is naught for the uncertainty, and ſo was the opinion of the court, as 5 Rep. 34. Treſpaſs was quare piſces ſuos cepit, without ſhewing the number, or of what nature they were, and therefore naught. Noy 91. Mich. 2 Car. B. R. Clapham v. Middleton.

Rep.* 443. pl. 601. Mich. 1676 Cauſon's caſe.

In caſe againſt a phyſician, it is ſufficient to ſay, that he adminiſtred phyſic unſkilfully, &c. without ſhewing the particular defect in his ſkill. Per Holt Ch. J. in delivering the opinion of the court. Lord Raym. Rep. 471. Paſch. 11 Will. 3. in the caſe of Groenvelt v. Burwell.

In caſe for negligently managing his ſhip that it run over the plaintiff's barge; the plaintiff declared, that he was poſſeſs'd of a barge, laden with divers goods and merchandizes generally, &c. the declaration is too general, and the particular goods ought to have been mentioned, as in caſe for burning a houſe of goods, or otherwiſe no damages ſhall be recover'd; per Holt Ch. J. at the ſittings at Guildhall, Hill. 2 Ann. Martin v. Henrickſon. See 7 Vin. Abr. 383—393.

Declaration ſufficient, if good in ſubſtance, 36 Ed. 3. c. 15. How to be delivered to priſoners, 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 21. See Priſon.

Formerly the declaration itſelf uſed to be delivered to the defendant's attorney to keep 'till he had made a copy of it, and then return it; but inconveniencies ariſing, a rule was made Trin. 12 Will. 3. whereby the plaintiff's attorney is only bound to deliver a copy of the declaration to the defendant's attorney, who is to pay for the ſame after the rate of 4 d. per ſheet, computing ſeventy-two words to a ſheet, beſides the King's duty. 1 Att. Pract. in K. B. 146.

And by the ſame rule, if the defendant's attorney refuſes to pay for the copy of a declaration, the plaintiff's attorney may leave the copy with the clerk of the declarations, who is to receive the ſame without fee or reward; and the plaintiff's attorney having given a rule to plead, and demanded a plea, may ſign judgment for want of a plea, and the plea is not to be received before the copy of the declaration is paid for. 1 Att. Pract. in K. B. 147.

Where ſpecial or common bail ſhall be filed for any defendant, and notice thereof given, the attorney for the plaintiff ſhall deliver the declaration to the attorney for ſuch defendant, who ſhall pay for the ſame. But if the attorney for the defendant, or his clerks in his abſence, ſhall refuſe to pay for the ſame, or if the place of habitation of ſuch attorney for the defendant ſhall be unknown to the attorney for the plaintiff, then the attorney for the plaintiff may leave the declaration in the office with the clerk of the declarations, but immediately muſt give notice thereof in writing to the defendant or his attorney; and ſuch declaration ſhall be deemed well deliver'd only from the time of ſuch notice. Id. ib.

Upon the delivery of every copy of a declaration, or taking the ſame out of the office, the defendant's attorney ſhall pay to the plaintiff's attorney 4*d.* for the defendant's warrant of attorney, which warrant of attorney the plaintiff's attorney ſhall file with the proper officer; and upon the defendant's attorney refuſing to pay the ſaid 4*d.* for the warrant, judgment may be ſigned. Mich. 5 Ann. 1 Att. Pr. in K. B. 148, 148.

Formerly the defendant in all caſes had an imparlance to the term next after the return of the proceſs, except the proceedings were by original, or for or againſt attornies, or other privileged perſons, or againſt priſoners in cuſtody of the marſhal; in which caſes the defendant was bound to plead, without any imparlance, the ſame term the declaration was delivered (if delivered four days before the end of the term), and except the proceeding were by habeas corpus, or the proceſs was returnable the firſt return of Eaſter or Michaelmas term, and the action laid in London or Middleſex; in which laſt caſe, if the declaration was delivered before the Eſſoin-day of Menſ. Paſ. or Craſtinum Animarum, the defendant was to plead two days before the Eſſoin day of the ſubſequent term. Mich. 5 Ann. 1 Att. Pract. in K. B. 148.

But now, by a rule made in Trinity term 5 & 6 Geo. 2. upon all proceſs to be ſued out of this court, returnable the firſt or ſecond return of any term, if the plaintiff declares in London or Middleſex, and the defendant lives within twenty miles of London, the declaration ſhall be delivered with notice to plead within four days after the delivery, and the defendant ſhall plead within the ſaid four days without imparlance; and in caſe the plaintiff declares in any other county, or the defendant lives above twenty miles from London the declaration ſhall be delivered with notice to plead within eight days after the delivery, and the defendant ſhall plead within the ſaid eight days without any imparlance; and in default of pleading in either of theſe caſes, judgment may be entred. 1 Attor. Pract. in K. B. 148, 149.

In both theſe caſes the declaration muſt be delivered at leaſt four days before the end of the term, excluſive of the day of the delivery, otherwiſe the defendant will be intitled to an imparlance. 1 Attor. Pract. in K. B. 149.

Where a copy of the proceſs is ſerved, and an appearance is entred, or common bail filed for the defendant by the plaintiff's attorney, a copy of the declaration muſt be left in the office of the clerk of the declarations, and notice thereof is to be given to the defendant, by delivering to, or leaving for him at his laſt or moſt uſual place of abode, a note in writing, ſignifying the nature of the action, at whoſe ſuit proſecuted, and the time allowed by the rules of court for pleading thereto, and that unleſs ſuch defendant plead thereto within ſuch time, judgment will be entred gainſt him by default; and from the time only of giving ſuch notice, ſuch declaration ſhall be well delivered; and if the defendant does not plead within ſuch limited time, judgment may be ſigned without further notice, or other calling for a plea, and the plaintiff may thereupon give notice of executing his writ of inquiry, either by delivering a notice in writing to ſuch defendant or defendants, or by leaving the ſame at the laſt or moſt uſual place of abode of ſuch defendant or defendants. Trin. 1 Geo. 2. 1 Attorn. Pract. in K. B. 149, 150.

When a defendant has filed ſpecial or common bail any perſon may deliver or file againſt him a declaration by the by at any time (ſitting the court) during the term wherein the proceſs againſt the defendant was returnable; and I have heard it ſaid, that the plaintiff, at whoſe ſuit the proceſs is, might declare againſt him in as many actions as he thinks fit, before the end of the next term after the return of the proceſs. 1 Attorn. Pract. in K. B. 152, 153.

But for ſettling the practice of the court touching declaring by the by in caſes where the plaintiff in any action or ſuit ſhall file common bail for the defendant, purſuant to the late act of parliament for preventing frivolous and vexatious arreſts, it is ordered, that in all ſuch caſes the plaintiff in ſuch action or ſuit, wherein common bail hath been or ſhall be ſo filed as aforeſaid, may deliver a declaration by the by againſt ſuch defendant in like manner as he might have done by the ancient practice of the court; but that no other perſon (except ſuch plaintiff) is or ſhall be capable of delivering a declaration by the by againſt any defendant by reaſon of common bail being ſo filed by any plaintiff as aforeſaid; and for the better diſtinguiſhing by whom common bail ſhall have been filed in any action or ſuit, it is further ordered, that in all caſes where common bail ſhall be filed by the plaintiff for the defendant by virtue of the ſaid act, theſe words ſhall be wrote on the bail-piece, viz. filed according to the ſtatute, or words to the like effect. Mich. 10 Geo. 2. 1 Attor. Pract. in K. B. 153, 154.

Upon all proceſs to be iſſued out of this court, returnable the firſt or ſecond return of any term, where no affidavit ſhall be made and filed of the cauſe of action, purſuant to the late act of parliament for preventing frivolous and vexatious arreſts, the plaintiff may deliver the declaration de bene eſſe, at the return of ſuch proceſs, with notice to plead within eight days after the delivery thereof; and if the defendant doth not file common bail, and plead within the ſaid eight days, the plaintiff having filed common bail for the defendant, according to the ſaid act, may ſign judgment for want of a plea, a rule to plead having been duly entred; and upon all proceſs to be iſſued, and made returnable as aforeſaid, where an affidavit ſhall be made and filed of the cauſe of action, purſuant to the ſaid act, the declaration may be delivered at the return of ſuch proceſs, with notice to plead in four days after ſuch delivery, if the action is laid in London or Middleſex, and the defendant lives within twenty miles of London, and in eight days if the action is laid in any other county, or the defendant lives above twenty miles from London; and if the defendant puts in bail, and does not plead within ſuch time as is reſpectively before mentioned, judgment may be ſigned, a rule to plead having been duly entred. Mich. 10 Geo. 2. 1 Attor. Pract. in K. B. 154.

Where an executor's time for pleading was out, the court would not inlarge his time for pleading, unleſs he would enter into a rule not to plead any judgment obtained againſt him after his time was out. Mod. Ca. 308. & vide Bulſt. 122, 123.

In an action requiring bail, the delivering a declaration before bail is put in, is a waiver of the bail; and if before the bail be juſtified, it is an acceptance of them; but if delivered de bene eſſe, then it is only conditionally until good bail be put in, or the bail already put in do juſtify. 1 Attor. Pract. in K. B. 155.

If proceſs iſſue out of this court returnable at a day certain. and the defendant doth by his attorney appear and file bail of the term wherein the proceſs is returnable, and the plaintiff doth not declare before the end of the term next following, a nonproſs may be ſigned without entring any rule to declare, or calling for a declaration, and the defendant ſhall have coſts taxed as uſual. Stat 13 Car. 2. ſtat. 2. c. 2. ſ. 3.

And if the declaration ſhould be tendered at any time after the end of the ſecond term, and before the nonproſs is ſigned, the defendant is not bound to accept the declaration, but may ſign his nonproſs at any time after the end of the ſecond term. 1 Attor. Pract. in K. B. 155.

Decretals, Decretales, Are a volume of the Canon laws, containing the decrees of sundry popes; or else a digest of the canons of all the councils, that pertained to one matter under one hand. See Canon Law.

Decretals are Instituta proprie, Papa præcepta vero Regnum. They were compiled into one body by Regino, Burchardus, Anselmus bishop of Luca, and Ivo bishop of Chartres; and afterwards by Gratian, who lived in the pontificate of Eugenius the Third: And because his compilation was generally received and approved by the church, it was called The first collection of the decretals; of which you may read at large in Baluzius, in his preface to the dialogues of Anthony Augustine, &c. In this were contained the decrees of Alexander the Third, to the time of Celestine the Third.

The second collection of the dercetals was performed by Gilbertus and Alanus, and came out under the name of Volateran; who twelve years after the first collection published this second, containing not only the decretals of former Popes, but those of Celestine the Third.

The third collection was begun by James Major archdeacon of Compostella, and collected out of the registers of Innocent the Third: It was called Romana Compilatio: But because there were many things in it not generally received, therefore that pope was prevailed on, that by his authority some person might be appointed to make another another collection; and accordingly Petrus Beneventanus, a notary, was appointed for that work, which was the first collection that was published by authority.

The council of Lateran, held under the same Pope Innocent, was the occasion of publishing the fourth collection: In which council there were several canons made, and reduced under seventy-one chapters. That Pope having, in the space of five years after the publishing the third collection, made many more decrees himself, there were two editions printed; one of the canons of that council, and another of his own constitutions; and this was called The fourth collection.

The fifth collection consists of the constitutions of Honorius the Third, collected by Tancred, archdeacon of Bologna, and published by Innocentius Cyronus, under the name of that pope. Du Fresne.

Dedication-day, (Festum dedicationis,) The feast of dedication of churches, or rather the feast-day of the saint and patron of a church, which was celebrated, not only by the inhabitants of the place, but by those of all the neighbouring villages, who usually came thither; and such assemblies were allowed by the King. Ad dedicationes, ad synodos, &c. venientibus sit summa pax. It was usual for the people to feast and drink on those days; and in many parts of England they still meet every year in villages for this purpose, which days are called feasts. Dedimus potestatem, Is a writ, whereby a commission is given to a private man, for the speeding of some act appertaining to a judge. The Civilians call it Delegationem: And it is granted most commonly upon suggestion, that the party which is to do something before a judge, or in court, is so feeble, that he cannot travel. It is used in divers cases, as to make a personal answer to a bill in Chancery, to make an attorney for the following of a suit in the county, hundred, wapentake, &c. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 20. To levy a fine, West. Symb. par 2. tit. Fines, sect. 112. and divers other effects, as you shall see by F. N. B. in divers places. In what diversity of cases this writ or commission is used, see in the table of the Reg. Orig. verbo Dedimus potestatem.

Dee. See Rivers.

Deed, (Factum,) Is an instrument written in parchment or paper, consisting of three things, viz. writing, sealing, and delivery, and comprehending a contract or bargain between party and party; of which there are two sorts, deeds intended and deeds poll; which names arise from the form or faction of them, the one being cut in and out in the top or side, which we called indented, the other being plain. A deed intended is a deed consisting of two parts, or more, (for there are tripartite, quadripartite, and septempartite deeds; as that of Hen. 7. concerning his royal chapel at Westminster,) in which it is expressed, that the parties thereto have to every part thereof interchangeably set their several seals. The cause of their indenting is, that it may appear they belong to one business or contract. A deed poll, or polled (anciently called Charta de una parte, or Charta simplex,) is a plain deed without indenting; and is used, when the vendor, for example, only seals, and there is no need of the vendee's sealing a counterpart, by reason the nature of the contract is such, as it requires no covenant from the vendee; unless in such case the vendor will, out of caution or curiosity, have a counterpart, to see, upon any occasion, what covenants himself hath given. See Coke on Litt. fol. 35. b.

There are three things of the essence and substance of a deed, viz. (1) writing in paper, (2) in parchment, sealing, and (3) delivery. 2 Co. 5.

And to a deed there are ten things necessarily incident: (1) Writing. (2) In parchment (vellum) or paper. (3) A person able to contract. (4) By a sufficient name. (5) A person able to be contracted with. (6) By a sufficient name. (7) A thing to be contracted for. (8) Apt words required by law. (9) Sealing. And (10) Delivery. Co. Litt. 35. b.

1. As to the writing of a deed: All the matter and form thereof must be written before the sealing and delivery of it; for if a man seals and delivers an empty piece of parchment or paper, although he therewithal gives commandment that an obligation or other matter shall be written in it, which is done accordingly, yet this will not make it a good deed. Co. Litt. 171. Perk. S. 118, 119.

The writing must be finished before it be sealed and delivered, or at least before it be delivered; for nothing may be added to it afterwards, nor may any alteration be made in it; and therefore, if a deed of obligation be sealed and delivered, with a blank for the sum, which the obligee does after sealing and delivery fill up, this will make the deed void. Moor 28.

And if a deed be made as an obligation single, and after upon the back of it, before the sealing and delivery, is written the intent of the bond is to pay 10*l.* for such costs; this if it was perfect might be a good condition, if there were words of conclusion; but if it be written after the delivery of the deed, it cannot be good. Hetley 136, 137.

A deed may be written in any hand, as in text, court or Roman hand; or in any language, as in Latin or French, and is as good as a deed written in English and in a secretary hand. 2 Co. 3.

And it is not necessary that the Latin or English whereby it is made be true and congruous, for false and incongruous Latin or English seldom hurts a deed, for the rules of the law are, Falsa orthographia non vitiat chartam; falsa grammatica non vitiat concessionem. Co. Litt. 6, 5, 121, 10, 133. And yet false Latin, if it be very bad, may make a deed void. Yelv. 193.

And although the writing be bad, and besides the lines be written crooked, yet this will not hurt the deed.

And if there be any alteration, rasure, or interlining made in any part of the deed before the delivery of it, this will not hurt the deed.

But in such cases it is policy to make a memorandum of it upon the back of the deed, and to give the witnesses notice of it, (this is now usually done in the attestation of the deed thus: Sealed and delivered, the word—being first interlined, &c.) For otherwise, if it be in any place material, as in the name of the grantor, grantee, in the limiting of the estate, or the like, and it cannot be proved to be done before the sealing and delivery of it, especially if it be a deed poll, it is greatly suspicious. Co. Litt. 37, 225. Perk. S. 155, 125, 126, 127, 128.

A deed must be written in paper, parchment or vellum, as being the least subject to alteration; for if writing be on a piece of wood, linen, the bark of a tree, a stone or the like, and be sealed and delivered, it is no good deed. Co. Litt. 229. a. F. N. B. 222.

It my be written either in a piece of loose paper or parchment, or in a paper or parchment sewed in a book. Bro. Oblig. 67. Co. Litt. 137, 139. But the paper or parchment must in most cases be stamped.

And although a deed be never so well written as to the hand and language, and on parchment and paper, and duly read, sealed and delivered, yet it must be formally and orderly written as to the matter and manner of it, according to law, that is there must be sufficient words to o ſet forth the agreement, and to bind the parties to perform it; for a deed may be void, and loſe its force in all or part, for repugnancy, incertainty, miſtake, deficiency and error.

3. Another thing incidently neceſſary to the making a good deed is, that the party contracting is capable of giving, granting, &c.

For ſome perſons are diſabled by Common law, and ſome by ſtatute; ſome are abſolute, and ſome are ſecundum quid only; as in caſe of infants, feme coverts, ideots, perſons non compos mentis, aliens, tenants in tail, eccleſiaſtical perſons, and others, ſome of which may not make any deeds or eſtates by them at all; others but ſo and ſo limited and qualified. Stat. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 28.

Diſabilities to make deeds, &c. are chiefly amongſt perſons of non-ſane memory, infants, aliens, women who have huſbands, men who have wives, women that have had huſbands, and lands ſettled by their huſbands upon them, perſons born deaf and dumb, perſons attaint of treaſon or felony, or in a præmunire, clerk convict, leper, baſtard, tenant in tail, eccleſiaſtical perſons, as biſhops, parſons, and the like, joint-tenants, tenants in common, coparceners, diſſeiſors, diſſeiſees, &c.

And this in ſome of them is in part and temporal only, but in others of them it is abſolute, univerſal and perpetual.

But for all other perſons male and female, and for all other bodies natural and politick, either as ſole corporations or aggregate, and for all perſons eccleſiaſtical and temporal, they are capable to be grantors and grantees, or to give and take by deed.

So that if any ſuch perſon be ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee ſimple in his own right, he may by deed in writing in pais, or without writing, by parol, make what gift, grant or exchange upon it, as he pleaſes.

But he who has but an eſtate-tail in land can only make a leaſe of it for his own life by deed, or ſuch a leaſe as is within the ſtat. 32 Hen. 8.

Eccleſiaſtical perſons cannot make a leaſe of their eccleſiaſtical lands for longer than their own lives, or ſuch a leaſe as is warrantable by the ſtatute of 13 Eliz. cap. 10. and 1 Jac. 1. cap. 3. and others.

And he who has only an eſtate for his own or another's life, or a leaſe for years of land, may give, grant or charge it at his pleaſure for ſo long as his eſtate laſts; and it will be good to all purpoſes, and againſt all perſons for that time.

And a man who has an eſtate in land to him and his wife, and his heirs, may make what eſtate he will of it, and this will be good againſt all but his wife, and that for her life only. 7 Co. 12. Co. Litt. 42. Perk. ſ. 182.

As to the diſability of perſons ſecundum quid, or to ſuch a purpoſe only, obſerve, that there are three ſorts of perſons that formerly could not make eſtates for lives, &c. but now may by ſtat. 32 Hen. 8.

Firſt, Any perſons, huſbands and wives ſeiſed of any eſtate of inheritance in fee-ſimple, or fee-tail, in the right of their wives, or jointly with their wives before or after the coverture.

Secondly, Any perſon ſeiſed of an eſtate-tail in his own right.

Thirdly, Any perſon ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee-ſimple in the right of his church.

4. The fourth thing (as Lord Coke obſerves) neceſſarily incident to a deed, is a ſufficient name of the perſon contracting.

As to the naming and deſcription of the parties and perſons in deeds, theſe things are neceſſary to be known.

Firſt, The names of the parties to deeds ſerve only to diſtinguiſh perſons, and to make the perſon intended certain; and therefore it is ſafe to deſcribe the perſon intended by his true and proper names of baptiſm and ſurname; and if it be a corporation, by the true name whereby it was made; yet miſtakes in this, unleſs they be very groſs, will not hurt, Nihil facit error nominis cum de corpore conſtat. Bulſt. 21, 22. 2 Bulſt. 302, 303. Co. Litt. 3. Perk. ſ. 36.

But if the name of baptiſm or ſurname be miſtaken, as John for Thomas, or Adderley for Adderby, this is dangerous. Moor 407, 897.

Secondly, There are many deſcriptions of grantors and grantees; as (1) Proper names of baptiſm and ſurnames, and the names of corporations, or bodies politick or corporate. (2) Names of dignities, office, and the like. And theſe (of both ſorts) will admit a deſcription made good by reputation. And ſo land will paſs to one, by the name of a ſon, who is a baſtard; ſo to one by the name of a wife, who is not a wife, if they be reputed or known by that name. Hob. 32.

If W. by the name of I. (without any ſurname) or by the name of S. without any chriſtian name, gives or takes by deed, the deed is void. 2 Bulſt. 70. Perk. ſ. 39.

Thirdly, There muſt be ſuch a perſon in eſſe at the time of the deed made as is named, and he muſt be able to give, and capable to receive that which is given or granted by the deed. Plowd. 345. Co. Lit. 2, 3. Perk. 43, 52.

And therefore if an annuity be granted to the right heirs of J. S. he being then living, this is void; for there is none ſuch, nor can be whilſt he lives. Perk. ſ. 52.

So primogenit. proli of A. and B. and they have no iſſue yet born. Cro. Car. 22.

Fourthly, If a man gets another name by common eſteem than his right name, and he is known by his other name, his deed made by this other name may be good. 6 Co. 36. Co Litt. 3. Perk. ſ. 41.

Fifthly, The miſtake is leſs dangerous where any other part of the deed, or ſome other addition, ſhall make the perſon intended certain. 6 Co. 36. Co Litt. 3, Perk. ſ. 40.

Sixthly, The law favours not advantages of miſnaming, otherwiſe than as the ſtrict rules of law require. 6 Co. 64.

5. The perſon to whom a contract or grant, &c. is made, muſt be capable to receive and take the thing granted, &c.

All perſons male or female, eccleſiaſtical or temporal, and all bodies natural or politick, are capable to take by grant, or to be contracted with, unleſs diſabled by their being non compos mentis, &c. as before, as to the diſabilities to grant, &c.

The King, for the greatneſs of his perſon, is diſabled to take by deed in pais; and therefore if a feoffment be made to him there, and livery of ſeiſin be made upon it, this will be void; but he is to take by matter of record, which is of a higher nature than a deed. Fitz. Fait and Feoffment 21.

Leaſes made to him by colleges, deans and chapters, or any other having a ſpiritual or eccleſiaſtical living, againſt the ſtatue 13 Eliz. c. 10. are reſtrained by the ſame act, as well as leaſes made to common perſons. 5 Co. 14.

A leaſe is made to huſband and wife for their lives, the remainder to the heirs of the ſurvivor; this is a good remainder notwithſtanding the incertainty. Godb. caſe 167.

If a leaſe be made to the huſband, habendum to the wife, the habendum to her is void, for ſhe is a ſtranger to the premiſſes of the deed. 3 Leon. 32, 33, 34.

If one demiſes his term to J. S and makes his wife executrix, and dies, ſhe enters, and then takes another huſband, and they take a leaſe from the leſſor, and then the deviſee enters, and grants all his eſtate to the huſband and wife; this ſhall be good, and ſhall enure as an aſſent in the executor, and ſo a good grant. Owen 56. 3 Leon. 24.

Land was demiſed to huſband and wife for their lives, the remainder to the ſurvivor of them for years, the huſband granted over the term of years, and died: The wife, and not the grantee, ſhall have the term of years, for there is nothing in the one or the other to grant till there be a ſurvivor: And ſo it is if the wife dies after the grant, and the huſband ſurvives, yet he ſhall have the term againſt his own grant. Poph. 5.

If land is given to a man and ſuch a woman as ſhall be his wife, the man takes the whole.

But if a man makes a feoffment in fee to the uſe of himſelf and wife that ſhall be, and afterwards he takes a wife, his wife ſhall take jointly with him, although all at firſt veſts in the huſband. 1 Co. 101.

If a feoffment in fee was made before the ſtatute of 27 Hen. 8. of uſes, to the uſe of a man and woman and their heirs, and they intermarry, and then the ſtatute was made; they held by moieties, for if he aliens, it is good for a moiety. Plow. 58. But if a reverſion be granted to huſband and wife, and before attornment they intermarry, and then attornment is good, they ſhall not have any moieties; as where a feoffment in fee is made to a man, with a letter of attorney to make livery, they intermarry, and then livery is made ſecundum formam chartæ, they ſhall have no moieties. Plow. 483.

If a reverſion be granted to a man and a woman, and afterwards they intermarry, and the tenant attorns; they ſhall not take by moieties; but by intireties. 2 Co. 68.

If after the ſtat. 27 Hen. 8. a man makes a feoffment to the uſe of his wife, and if ſhe dies, living the huſband, to the uſe of the huſband and ſuch wife as he ſhould after marry, for life for her jointure; the ſecond wife ſhall take jointly with her huſband, or by way of remainder after his death. But if it be a remainder of land in poſſeſſion fallen, then ſhe takes nothing. And a remainder to a woman for life after the death of her huſband, is not a jointure within the ſtatute of 11 Hen. 7. and 27 H. 8. c. 10. Dyer 340.

Huſband and wife are jointenants for 108 years, the huſband by deed makes a leaſe for 20 years, to commence after his deceaſe, and dies, this leaſe is good. Moor 395.

If an eſtate in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, or for term of life, be made to a feme covert, or to her huſband and her, the huſband alone may diſagree to it, and avoid it for both of them. Litt. ſ. 671. 1 Hen. 7. 10. 8 Co. 72. Dy. 51. 5 H. 7. 32.

If a ſtatute or obligation be made to them two, or to her alone, during the coverture, the huſband alone by defeazance or releaſe may avoid it; and if an obligation be made to her during the coverture, the huſband by his diſagreement may avoid it. Co. Litt. 351. 48 Ed. 3. 12. 7 H. 6. 1.

6. The ſixth thing neceſſary is a ſufficient name of a grantee.——Grantees, &c. muſt not only be perſons in being, and capable to take by grant, &c. by the name in the deed mentioned, but they muſt alſo be ſufficiently named and deſcribed one way or other; and he himſelf, and not a ſtranger, muſt take by the deed; and all bodies natural or politick, that are not diſabled by law, may be grantees, and take by deed; and all perſons that may be grantors may be grantees. And ſome others that cannot grant or give, yet may take or receive. And a grant made to two, three, or twenty ſuch perſons, is good. Co. Litt. 2, 3. Perk. ſ. 43.

If a grant be never ſo well made in all the parts of it, beſides the omiſſion of the name of the grantee, if it does not expreſs who ſhall take by it, it is void.

There are divers ſorts of names and nominations of perſons, or bodies politick or corporate, that may take, whereof there are divers ſorts; as firſt, the proper names or ſurnames, wherein notwithſtanding there may be ambiguity of a gift or grant to my ſon John, having two of that name, perhaps may be made good by an avertment which John is meant.

There are alſo other names or deſcriptions, as by ſome dignity, office, or the like; as the Earl of Hertford, Lord Treaſurer, and the like: And this will admit of a deſcription made good by reputation, though not by truth; as land will paſs even by conveyance to one by the name of ſon who is a baſtard, by the name of wife who is not ſuch, if he or ſhe be ſo reputed or known by that name. 27 Edw. 3. 85. Bulſt. 3.

But the ſafe way in the caſes of common perſons is, to name the parties grantor or grantee, &c. by their names of baptiſm and ſurname. Co. Litt. 3.

For where the grant intends to deſcribe the perſon of the grantee by his proper name, and omits or miſtakes his Chriſtian name or ſurname; commonly the deed is void, unleſs there be ſome ſpecial matter to help it.

And yet if the grant does not intend to deſcribe the grantee by his own name, but by ſome other matter, there it may be good, by a deſcription of the perſon, without either name of baptiſm or ſurname. Co. Litt. 3.

A biſhop by the name of biſhop of London, may take without any other name. Co. Litt. 3. Bulſt. 21.

A grant to J. S. or J. N. is void for incertainty; and a delivery of the deed to one of them will not make it good. 11 Hen. 7. 13.

If I be known by the name of Edward Williamſon, and my name is Edward Anderſon, and lands are given to me by the name of Edward Williamſon, this is a good name of purchaſe. Godb. caſe 47.

By which I may take by deviſe, and ſo it ſeems alſo by grant: And yet a bond made by the name of Edmond where his name is Edward, is not good. Godb. caſe 485. Owen 84. Dyer 279. 21 Hen. 7. 8. 33 Hen. 6. 19. Non facit error nominis ſi conſtat de perſona.

If a deed be made by or to Johane B. by the name of Jane B. or to Jane by the name of Johane, it is good, for they are one name. Leon. caſe 204.

If a man marries and has children called by his name, and after he is divorced from his wife, yet the children by that name may have or take. So one that has a child before marriage uſually called by his name. 6 Co. 63.

If one gives me a houſe by word, and makes a writing of the gift either by a contrary name of baptiſm of him or me; this gift by word is good, but by deed is void. Perk. ſ. 42.

7. The ſeventh thing incident to a deed, is a thing to be contracted for.— All corporeal and immoveable things, ſuch as are ſaid to lie in livery, as honours, iſles, villages, manors, meſſuages, cottages, lands, meadows, paſtures, woods, advowſons, moors, marſhes, furzes, heaths, mines, quarries, and the like; and ſome incorporeal things that are incident and appendant to them, are grantable from any man to another man in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or years at firſt, and tranſmiſſible and aſſignable afterwards by the grantee thereof in infinitum at pleaſure. Co. Litt. 20.

All perſons and bodies, except corporate bodies, may give or grant any thing that lies in livery, as manors, &c. in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or years, to a ſubject, as well without as by a deed; but nothing may be given or granted to the King by a ſubject by word or deed; but it muſt be by ſome matter of record. Perk. ſ. 62. 64. 4 H. 7. 17. 16 H. 7. 3. Plow. 150.

It is a rule, that all manner of eſtates in fee-ſimple, fee-tail, for life or years, and for years preſent and to come in land, or the profits thereof, are grantable by or without deed. Bro. Done 19.

An eſtate for life or years of land may be made by word of mouth, without a deed: But where it is an eſtate for life, there it muſt be (if it be in poſſeſſion) with livery; if of a reverſion, there muſt be an attornment to perfect it. Cro. Car. 482. Moor, caſe 31.

And yet if I leaſe land for life or years to one, the remainder in fee to a ſtranger without a deed, this may be good for the remainder alſo, if livery be made to the tenant for life or years. Perk. ſ. 61. Cro. Jac. 122.

A grant of land, & unum ovile, Anglice a ſheep-walk, cum pertinentiis in D. is good, without a deed for the ſheep-walk. Cro. Jac. 419.

The father tenant for life, the remainder to his ſon for life, the ſon purchaſes the reverſion in fee, the father cannot in this caſe ſurrender to him without a deed. Cro. Car. 269.

A. deviſes, that his executors ſhall ſell his land; the executors may ſell without deed, for the vendee will be in by the will. 1 Leon. caſe 38.

Bodies corporate or politick may not give or grant any of the lands, goods or chattels belonging to their corporations, or otherwiſe than by deed. Perk. ſ. 64.

And yet the grantees of ſuch lands, goods and chattels, after their grant of them may grant them by deed, or without deed, as other men may do. Ibid.

The grant of a monopoly is not good. 11 Co. 87.

A grant

A grant may be of a moiety, third, fourth or fifth, or other certain part of a manor, or of land, by the name of a third, fourth, fifth, or other certain part, and good. Co. Litt. 190.

So of a third or fourth part of tithes, and the like. Dyer 84.

And all incorporeal things, such as are said to lie in grant, as rents and services; and of these not only such as are reserved upon any estate made of land, but such as are granted out of land, seigniories, commons, vicarages, advowsons in gross, estovers, dignities, ways, waters, fishings, franchises, ferries, leets, waifs, estrays, and some offices. All these and the like things are grantable by one to another in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or for years at first, and de novo, but they are grantable and assignable over in infinitum. But these things may not be granted otherwise than by deed. Co. Litt. 144. Fitz. Grant, 145. Perk. s. 87, 91, 103. Bro. Grant, 3. 3 H. 6. 20. 9 H. 6. 12.

And if a man has a rent reserved on a particular estate, he may grant over parcel of it.

And of whatsoever a fine may be levied, a grant by deed of the same thing may be made.

A grant of an acre of land covered with water, is good. Co. Litt. 4.

Any man that has any estate in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or years, in any land, &c. or profit apprender out of it, may grant it over from man to man in infinitum. Bro. Done, 9.

And he that has any such estate may charge it with rent, or otherwise at his pleasure. Bro. Done, 19.

Rents and services reserved upon any estate, and rents granted out of land (it is said) are grantable over in infinitum; but one may not grant rent out of a rent, nor may one grant over a rent which he has, till he has seisin of it. Perk. s. 88, 89. Bro. Grant, 171.

8. The eighth thing lord Coke observes to be necessarily incident to a deed is, apt words required by law.——Apt words are requisite in a deed, made either to pass or to create an estate.

Littleton (Tenures, s. 1.) says, If a man would purchase lands or tenements in fee-simple it behoves him to have these words in his purchase, To have and to hold to him and to his heirs; for these words, his heirs (only) make the estate of inheritance in all feoffments and grants.

Upon which lord Coke (Co. Litt. 4. a.) observes, that Littleton puts lands only for an example; for his rule extends to seigniories, rents, advowsons, commons, estovers, and other hereditaments of what kind or nature soever.

And that (Co. Litt. 8. b.) here Littleton treats of purchases by natural persons, and not of bodies politick or corporate; for if lands be given to a sole body politick or corporate, (as to a bishop, parson, vicar, master of an hospital, &c.) there to give him an estate of inheritance in his politick or corporate capacity, he must use these words, To have and to hold to him and his successors; for in these cases, without the word successors, no inheritance passes; for as the heir inherits to the ancestor, so the successor succeeds to the predecessor, and the executor to the testator. But it appears here by Littleton, that if a man at this day gives lands to J. S. and his successors, this creates no fee-simple in him; for Littleton, speaking of natural persons, says, that these words, his heirs, make an estate of inheritance in all feoffments and grants, whereby he excludes these words, his successors. And yet an ancient grant must be expounded as the law was taken at the time of the grant: A chantry priest incorporate took a lease to him and his successors for a hundred years, and afterwards took a release from the lessor to him and his successors; and it was adjudged, that by the release he had but an estate for life, for he had the lease in his natural capacity, for it could not go in succession, and his successors gave him no estate of inheritance for want of these words, his heirs.

And that (Co. Litt. 9. a.) if the King by his letters patent gives lands decano & capitulo habendum sibi & hæredibus & successoribus suis; in this case although they are persons in their natural capacity to them and their heirs, yet because the grant is made to them in their politick capacity, it shall enure to them and their successors.

And so if the King grants lands to J. S. habendum sibi & successoribus sive hæredibus suis, this grant shall enure to him and his heirs.

B. having divers sons and daughters, A. gives lands to B. & liberis suis, & a leur heires, the father and all his children take a fee-simple jointly by force of these words, their heirs; but if he had no child at the time of the feoffment, the child born afterwards shall not take.

These words, his heirs, do not only extend to immediate heirs, but to his heirs remote, and most remote, born and to be born, Sub quibus vocabulis hæredibus suis, omnes hæredes propinqui comprehenduntur, & remoti, nati, & nascituri. And Hæredum appellatione veniunt hæredes hæredum in infinitum. And the reason wherefore the law is so precise to prescribe certain words to create an estate of inheritance, is for avoiding uncertainty, the mother of contention and confusion.

The necessity of the word heirs or successors, as the case requires, is therefore absolutely necessary in conveyances of estates of inheritance; for as Littleton (in the same section) observes, that if a man purchases lands by these words, To have and to hold to him for ever; or by these words, To have and to hold to him and his assigns for ever: In these two cases he has but an estate for term of life.

One seised of lands in fee-simple, and having a son going to be married, he being upon the land, used these words: In consideration of this marriage I do here, reserving an estate for my own and my wife's life, give unto thee and thy heirs for ever, these lands, &c. This seems to be a good conveyance of the land. Poph. 47. A fortiori therefore if it be by deed. But there must be livery or attornment upon it in both cases.

9. The ninth thing necessary to a good deed is sealing. Sealing of deeds in old time was not used in England; for the Saxons used only to subscribe their names, and add the sign of the cross, and to set down a great number of witnesses. And afterwards the Normans brought in with them the custom of sealing deeds; but this was only introduced by degrees; first the Kings and a few of the nobility used it, and to seal with their seals of arms; afterwards all the nobility used it, and then the gentlemen; and about the time of Edward 3. all men began to use sealing of deeds, which has been continued ever since; so that now it is of necessity, insomuch that if a deed be never so well written before and delivered afterwards, yet if it be not sealed between the writing and delivery, it is not a good deed; but if a stranger seals it by allowance or commandment precedent, or agreement subsequent of him that is to seal it before the delivery of it, it is as well as if the party to the deed did seal it himself: And therefore if another man seals a deed of mine, and I take it up after it is sealed, and deliver it as my deed; this is said to be a good agreement to, and allowance of the sealing, and so a good deed. And if the party seals the deed with any seal besides his own, or with a stick, key, or any such thing which makes a print, it is good. And altho' it be a corporation that makes the deed, yet they may seal with any other seal besides their common seal, and the deed will be never the worse. And if there be twenty to seal one deed, and they seal all upon one piece of wax, and with one seal, yet if they make distinct and several prints, this is a very sufficient sealing, and the deed is good enough. Terms de la ley, tit. Fait. Co. Litt. 225. 2 Co. 4, 5. Perk. s. 129, 130, 131, 132, 134.

If a feoffment be made to two with covenants, and one of them seals it, and the other does not, but he who does not seal it survives and occupies the land, he is bound by the seal of his companion. Hughes's Abr. 590. Dyer 13.

A. and B. his son join in a deed to grant an annuity, and A. sets his hand to a seal, and a label is put for the son, but he never sealed it, the deed is void as to his son, and shall not bind him. Dyer 227.

If two make a deed. and one of them ſeals it at one time, and the other at another time; this is as good as if they ſealed it together. Lane 32.

If there be two parts of an indenture of leaſe, and the leſſee ſeals his part, but the leſſor does not ſeal, it is all void as to the paſſing of eſtates, covenants and bonds to perform it. Yelv. 18, 19.

But if a feoffor, donor or leſſor ſeals that part of the indenture which belongs to the feoffee, &c. the indenture is good, although the feoffee never ſeals the counterpart belonging to the feoffor, &c. Co. Litt. 229. Cro. Eliz. 212.

Although a condition may be pleaded by indenture, ſealed with the ſeal of the other party, yet a conveyance cannot be pleaded by deed not ſealed by the party, agent, feoffor, grantor, leſſor, &c. 3 Leon. caſe 138.

If a deed conclude with theſe words, In witneſs whereof I have hereunto ſet my hand; and the party writes his name, and puts his ſeal; this is a good deed, although no mention be made of putting his ſeal to it. Hetley 75.

10. The tenth and laſt thing which lord Coke obſerves to be neceſſarily incident to a good deed, is the delivery thereof.——The delivery of a deed is either actual, i. e. by doing ſomething and ſaying nothing, or elſe verbal, i. e. by ſaying ſomething and doing nothing, or it may be by both, or there is a delivery in deed and a delivery in law. 3 Co. 7. 2 Co. 4, 5.

And either of theſe may make a good delivery, and a perfect deed; but by one or both of theſe it muſt be made; for otherwiſe, although it be never ſo well ſealed and written, yet the deed is of no force, nor may any uſe be made of it as a deed. Cro. Jac. 136, 137. Perk. ſ. 137.

And though the party to whom it is made takes it to himſelf, or happens to get it into his hands, yet it will do him no good, nor him that made it any hurt, until it be delivered. Cro. Jac. 263.

And a deed may be delivered by the party himſelf that makes it, or by any other by his appointment or authority precedent, or aſſent or agreement ſubſequent, for omnis ratihabitio mandato æquiparatur; and when it is delivered by another that has a good authority, and purſues it, it is as good a deed as if it were delivered by the party himſelf; but if he has no authority, or does not purſue his authority, then it is otherwiſe. Perk. ſ. 137. 9 H. 6. 37. 11 Co. 28. 3 Co. 35. Cro. Eliz. 167.

And therefore if a deed, or the contents thereof, be read or declared to a man that is to ſeal it, and he (being illiterate) delivers it to a ſtranger, and bids him examine it, and if it be ſo as it was read to him, then to deliver it as his deed, otherwiſe to re-deliver it to him again that made it; in this caſe if the deed be in truth otherwiſe than it was read, and yet notwithſtanding he to whom it was delivered, delivers it to him to whom it is made, this delivery will not avail, neither is the deed by this delivery become a good deed. Perk. ſ. 137. 9 H. 6. 37. 11 Co. 28. 3 Co. 35. 47 Ed. 3. 3.

A deed may be delivered to the party himſelf to whom it is made, or to any other by ſufficient authority from him; or it may be delivered to any ſtranger, for and on the behalf, and to the uſe of him to whom it is made, without authority from him. But if it be delivered to a ſtranger without any ſuch declaration, intention or intimation, unleſs it be in caſe where it is delivered as an eſcrow, it ſeems this is not a ſufficient delivery. And yet if an obligation be made to the uſe of the third perſon expreſſed by the deed, and the obligor delivers it to him to whoſe uſe it is made, this is ſaid to be a good delivery. Dyer 162, 167. Perk. ſ. 137. Co. Litt. 36.

If a deed be delivered to the uſe of two, if one of them who is particularly named will agree to it, and if he will not agree, that the other ſhall be made acquainted with it, and one of them dies without being privy to the deed, this will not be a good deed. Moor 448.

And if a deed be delivered to a ſtranger, to the uſe of him to whom it is made, this delivery is good, and although he to whoſe uſe it is delivered dies before notice or agreement, yet the deed is good; but it is otherwiſe where it is to take effect upon a condition precedent. Moor 448.

If one grants a rent to a college in fee by deed, and delivers the deed to a ſtranger to the uſe of the college, and the college ſeals the counterpart of the indenture; in this caſe it was held, that the ſtranger might receive the deed to their uſe, without any letter of attorney; and that their ſealing of the counterpart was an agreement and confirmation of it. Cro. Car. 862.

If a deed poll be made by A. to B. with mutual covenants; B. delivers it firſt to C. and C. afterward to him; this is a good delivery to bind both parties. Cro. Eliz. 483.

If a deed be indented, and he who makes it ſeals and delivers his part, but the other does not ſeal and deliver his part, yet he ſhall be bound by it. Cro. Eliz. 212.

A ſtranger may receive a deed to the uſe of a corporation without a letter of attorney; and their ſealing of the counterpart of it will amount to a ſufficient agreement to it. Cro. Eliz. 862.

If a deed be delivered before or after the day of the date of it, yet it is good enough, but if it be delivered before it be ſealed, it is good for nothing; and where it is delivered before the date, yet in the pleading of it, it muſt not be ſo ſet forth. 2 Co. 4. Plow. 492. 5 Co. 117.

But if no time be ſhewn of the delivery, it ſhall be taken to be delivered at the time of the date of it. 3 Leon. caſe 227, 357.

If a deed be dated the 15th of November 23 Eliz. and is not ſealed or delivered till the 18th of November 26 Eliz. yet it is good; and he who made it may not plead non eſt factum to it, but if there be no occaſion, perhaps by a ſpecial plea he may help himſelf. Cro. Jac. 136.

If a deed be made by two, and one delivers it one day, and the other another day, this is good: And prima facie, every deed ſhall be intended to be delivered the day of the date of it. Latch 61.

If three ſeal a deed at one time, and a fourth at another time, and then it is delivered by them all, it is not the deed of any of them till the delivery. Cro. Car. 263.

If an obligation be dated the firſt of May, and the firſt of June following the obligee makes a releaſe dated the firſt of March, and delivers it the firſt of June; by this the obligation is not releaſed. Cro. Eliz. 14.

If an obligation be made with a condition to do ſomething by a day, and the obligation is not delivered at the time, ſo that it is now impoſſible to be done; in this caſe the condition will be gone, and the obligation ſingle. Yelv. 35, 138.

A deed takes effect by the delivery, and be the delivery before or after the date, it is not material; and if delivered before the date, and one of the parties die before the date, yet the deed is good. 2 Co. 4.

The delivery of a deed is always intended to be in the place where it was made. Plow. 491.

If a man pleads a releaſe, or other deed made at ſuch a place, viz. at D. in the county of M. he ſhall not ſay it was delivered at any other place than where it bears date. Perk. ſ. 150.

And therefore if an action of debt be brought by adminiſtrators, and they declare, that the adminiſtration was committed to them in London, and the letters of adminiſtration bear date in another place, and in another county, the declaration ſhall abate; for he who pleads a deed is not to vary from the place where it bears date; but he againſt whom a deed is pleaded may ſay it was made by dureſs of impriſonment at another place, and in another county than it bears date. Perk. ſ. 251.

If I have ſealed my deed, and after I deliver to him to whom it is made, or to ſome other by his appointment, and ſay nothing, this is a good delivery.

So if I take the deed in my hand, and uſe theſe, or the like words, here take him, or this will ſerve; or I deliver this as my deed, or I deliver him you; theſe are deliveries.

So

So if I make a deed of land to another, and being upon the land, I deliver the deed to him in the name of ſeiſin of the land; this is a good delivery.

So if the deed be ſealed, or lying in a window, or on a table, and I uſe theſe, or the like words, there he is, take it as my deed; this is a good delivery, and perfects the deed; for as a deed may be delivered by words without deeds, ſo may it alſo be delivered by deeds without words. 9 Co. 137. Dyer 192, 167. Co. Litt. 36, 49. 35 Aſſ. pl. 6.

But if a man ſeals and acknowledges before a mayor or other officer appointed for that purpoſe a writing proved for a ſtatute or recognizance, the acknowledgment before ſuch an officer ſhall not amount to a delivery of the deed, ſo as to make it a good obligation if it happens not to be a good ſtatute or recognizance. Adjudged T. 37 Eliz. B. R.

If one ſeals and delivers a deed to L. to be delivered to the obligee, who refuſes it, but L. leaves it at the place, this is a good delivery, and a good deed. Anderſ. caſe 8. Dy. 1. 5 Co. 119.

De facto, A thing actually done, done in very deed. A King de facto is one that is in actual poſſeſſion of a crown, and hath no lawful right to the ſame; in which ſenſe it is oppoſed to a King de jure, who hath right to a crown, but is out of poſſeſſion. 3 Inſt. 7.

Defamation, Defamatio, Is when a man ſpeaks ſlanderous words of another man, of a court of juſtice, magiſtracy, or title of land; for which the party ſhall be puniſhed, according to the nature and quality of the offence; ſometimes by action upon the caſe for ſlander; at other times in the eccleſiaſtical courts; as if a man contrive any falſe lies againſt prelates, dukes, earls, &c. then an action de ſcandalis magnatum will lie by the ſtatute 2 R. 2. cap. 5. But for defamations in the ſpiritual courts to be determined, they ought to have three incidents. Firſt, To concern matters merely ſpiritual, there triable; as to call a man heretick, ſchiſmatick, adulterer, &c. Secondly, That it concern matter merely ſpiritual. Thirdly, That it is only for puniſhment of the fault, for the ſoul's health of him that offends. Cowell, edit. 1727. Default, (Fr. Defaut) Is commonly taken for non-appearance in court, at a day aſſigned; though it extends to any omiſſion of that which we ought to do. Bract. lib. 5. tract. 3. Co. Lit. 259. If a plaintiff makes default in appearance in a trial at law, he will be nonſuited; and where a defendant makes default, judgment ſhall be had againſt him by default. In action of debt upon bond, if the defendant pleads a releaſe, and iſſue is thereupon joined, if at the trial the defendant makes default, the plaintiff may pray judgment by default; becauſe by the plea the duty is confeſſed, and therefore no inqueſt need be taken by default: But if the defendant pleads non eſt factum, by that plea the duty is denied, and therefore if he make default, inqueſt muſt be taken by default. In treſpaſs, if the defendant plead a releaſe; and then make default, the plaintiff cannot pray judgment by default; but an inqueſt is to be taken, becauſe damages are incertain. 1 Salk. 216.

By default of a defendant, he is ſaid to be generally out of court to all purpoſes, but only that judgment may be given againſt him: And no judgment can be afterwards given for the defendant. Ibid. 628. When two are to recover a perſonal thing, the default of one is the default of the other: Contra, where they are to diſcharge themſelves of a perſonalty: there the default of the one is not the default of the other. 6 Rep. 25. 1 *Lil. Where the baron is to have a corporal puniſhment for default, there the default of the wife ſhall not be the default of the huſband: But otherwiſe it is where the huſband is not to have any corporal puniſhment by the default. Ibid. 472, 473. If a defendant imparl to another day in the ſame term, and make default at the day, this is a departure in deſpite of the court: And when the defendant after appearance, and being preſent in court, upon demand makes departure, it is in the deſpite of the court, and the entry is, Et præd. tenens, licet ſolemniter exactus, non revenit, ſed in contemptum curiæ receſſit, & defaltam fecit, &c. Co. Lit. 139. Before a verdict is taken by default, the cryer of the court calls the defendant three times; and if he doth not appear, the plaintiff's counſel prays, that the inqueſt may be taken by default: He is called three times, to ſhew if he hath any challenge to the jurors; and if he doth not appear upon the cryer's calling, then the Capiatur per defaltam is indorſed on the back of the pannel. 1 Lill. 425.

Defeaſance, (from the French Defaire, to undo, or defeat) Signifies a condition relating to a deed, as to a recognizance or ſtatute, which being performed by the recognizor, the deed is defeated, and made void, as if it never had been done. The difference between a proviſo, or a condition in a deed, and a defeaſance, is, that the condition is annexed to, or inſerted in the deed or grant; and a defeaſance is a deed by itſelf, concluded and agreed on between the parties, and having relation to another deed. 1 Inſt. 631. Weſt's Symb. lib. 2. ſ. 156.

Debt upon bond conditioned to pay ſeveral ſums on ſeveral days, the defendant pleaded payment of all the ſums due before ſuch a day, at which day the plaintiff per ſcriptum ſuum ſigned under his hand, which the defendant profert hic in curia, agreed to defer the payment of the reſidue till a farther day not yet come; and upon a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged ill, becauſe this action being founded on a deed, there cannot be a defeaſance made thereof without a deed, and ſcriptum ſuum manu doth not imply a deed. 3 Lev. 234. Trin. 1 Jac. 2. C. B. Blemerhaſſet v. Pierſon.

Where two deeds are made at the ſame time, and they have no reference the one to the other, they ſhall not be conſtrued as defeaſances. 12 Mod. 221. 10 Will. 3. Clayton v. Kinaſton.

Obligee reciting the bond, covenants to ſave obligor harmleſs; it is an abſolute defeaſance, and if it be to ſave him harmleſs on a contingency, it is a conditional defeaſance, becauſe it has an expreſs relation to the deed, but otherwiſe, where the deed is only to indemnify againſt all covenants heretofore made, or hereafter to be made, this does not deſtroy a deed made at the ſame time. 2. Salk. 574. Paſch. 13 Will. 3. B. R. Clayton v. Kinaſton.

A. and B. are jointly and ſeverally bound., to H; H. covenants with A. not to ſue A. this is no defeaſance as to B. but if A. only had been bound, ſuch covenant had been a defeaſance. 2 Salk. 575. in the caſe of Lacy v. Kinaſton.

If a defeaſance be to one of the parties, it is to all, for if ſeveral covenant jointly and ſeverally, a defeaſance to one of them is a defeaſance to all; and it is impoſſible to defeat as to one, without defeating as to all; and if a defeaſance works a releaſe and diſcharge, a defeaſance to one is a defeaſance to all, as a releaſe to one is a releaſe to all. 12 Mod. 550, 551. Trin. 13 Will. 3. Lacy v. Kinaſton.

B. acknowledged a ſtatute to S. and ſold lands in the county of H. to T. afterwards the land in H. in the hands of T. were extended by the ſtatute. B. brought audita querela on a defeaſance, viz. that if the land in H. ſhould be extended by the ſtatute, then the ſtatute ſhould be void. Adjudged that the defeaſance was good and not repugnant; for he might ſue execution of land in another county, or of his goods or perſon. Mo. 811. pl. 1097. Mich. 8 *Jac. in Canc. A record of a judgment is defeaſible by bond or deed, per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 229. 10 Will. 3. Anon'.

A. covenants with B. to pay him 300 l. for the uſe of A. only for her life; and convenant was brought upon this, and breach aſſigned, that there was ſo much of the 300 l. arrear, defendant pleads that there was another indenture between him and the plaintiff ſince the date, or delivery of the covenant-deed declared on, reciting the ſaid covenant and agreement for the payment of the 300 l. wherein it was covenanted and agreed, that ſo long as A. and his wife did cohabit, the payment of the 300 l. ſhould ceaſe, and avers that they did cohabit for the time the ſaid arrear became due, and pleads this in bar of the firſt agreement; and there are expreſs words that the payment ſhould ceaſe during the cohabitation; and there had been no great harm to conſtrue this as a releaſe of the arrearages during the cohabitation; but yet it being a ſum in groſs and the covenant temporary, and not perpetual, they held it no good bar. Per Holt Ch. J. 12 Mod. 552. Trin. 13 Will. 3. cites 2 Vent. 217. Gawden v. Draper.

In debt on an obligation, the defendant pleaded in bar, that it was given for compounding felony; on a demurrer it was inſiſted, that this was contrary to the import and condition of the bond; and after ſome doubts it was adjudged per. tot. cur. for the plaintiff; and by Forteſcue, a parol agreement can no more be ſet up againſt a bond, than a parol defeaſance can againſt a ſingle bill. Gibb. 75. Trin. 2 & 3 Geo. 2. C. B. Andrews v. Eaton.

Where a bond is made, and after a defeaſance is made thereof, if he pays a leſſer ſum, &c. there if he pleads the defeaſance and the tender of the leſſer ſum, he needs not ſay Tout temps priſt; for by the tender he was diſcharged of all. But otherwiſe of an obligation with condition to pay a leſs ſum. Cro. E. 755. pl. 16. Paſch. 42 Eliz. C. B. Cotton v. Clifton.

Where a proviſo goes by way of defeaſance of a covenant, it muſt be pleaded on the other ſide, otherwiſe, where by way of explanation, or reſtriction of the covenant; per Holt Ch. J. 2 Salk. 574. pl. 2. Hill. 10 Will. 3. B. R. Cleyton v. Kinaſton.

A. entered into a bond to B. conditioned for payment of 40 l. afterwards B. agreed and entered into a covenant, that if A. (the defendant) pay 5 s. in the pound for every 20 s. due to the plaintiff from the defendant, and ſo at the ſame rate, for every greater or leſſer ſum than 20 s. on or before the 25*th of* December, the plaintiff ſhould and would accept the ſame in diſcharge of all ſums, as then were, or on the 25*th of December ſhould be, due* from the defendant to the plaintiff. The Chief Juſtice delivered the opinion of the whole court for the defendant; that this is a defeaſance to this bond, and ſufficiently relates to it; for it is not neceſſary to recite the bond, no more than where a power of revocation is inſerted in a deed; a revocation by a ſubſequent deed is good, though it does not recite or mention the power, or in direct words refer to it. Comyn's Rep. 569, 570. Trin. 11 Geo. 2. C. B. Trevet v. Angus. See 7 Vin. Abr. tit. Defeaſance.

Defence, In a legal ſignification is applicable to a plea, and is that which the defendant ought to make immediately, after the count or declaration, viz. that he defends all the force, wrong and damages, where and when he ought, &c. And by defending the force and wrong, he excuſes himſelf of the wrong ſurmiſed againſt him, and makes himſelf party to the plea; and by defending the damage, he affirms the plaintiff able to be anſwered unto. For the reſidue of the defence, the defendant accepts the power of the court to hear and determine this matter; for if he will plead to the juriſdiction, he ought to omit in his defence the words, where and when he ought; and if he will ſhew any diſability in the plaintiff, and demand judgment if the party ſhall be anſwered unto, then he ought to omit the defence of the damage. Termes de la ley.

Aſſumpſit was brought againſt R. G. eſq; the defendant venit & defendit vim & injuriam quando, &c. and pleads that he is a gentleman, abſque hoc, that he is an eſquire, &c. Upon demurrer it was argued for the plaintiff, that the defendant by ſaying vim & injuriam quando, &c. has made a full defence, and after that he cannot plead in abatement; but it was anſwered on the other ſide that it is good either way; for this is not a full defence, but the moiety of a defence; for that a full defence is when the defendant proceeds and ſays, & damna & quicquid quod ipſe defendere debet, and cited Paſch. 3 & 4 Will & Ma. in B. R. Rot. 449. that the defendant after vim & injuriam quando, pleaded that the defendant was an alien enemy, and the court held that it was good the one way or the other. But per Powell J. quando, &c. amounts to a full defence, and damna & quicquid quod ipſe defendere debet is never put in. No judgment was given as to this point, but all agreed, that the miſnomor being pleaded in abatement by attorney is ill; and a reſpondeas ouſter awarded. Ld. Raym. Rep. 117. Mich. 8 W. 3. Britton v. Gradon.

In this defence there are three parts to be conſidered. Firſt, when he defends the wrong and the force, this has a double effect, viz. to make himſelf party to the matter; and and this is the reaſon, that the defendant in this and the like actions can plead no plea at all before he makes himſelf party by this part of the defence, as it appears here by Littleton, that if the defendant will plead in diſability of the perſon of the plaintiff, he muſt firſt make himſelf party by this firſt part of the defence; neither can be plead to the juriſdiction of the court without this part of the defence. Co. Litt. 127. b.

2dly, by the defence of the damages, he affirms that the plaintiff is able to ſue, and (upon juſt cauſe) to recover damages. Co. Litt. 127. b.

3dly, And by the laſt part, viz. And all that which he ought to defend, when and where he ought, he affirms the juriſdiction of the court. Et ſic de ſimilibus. And of ſuch neceſſity is it for the tenant or defendant to make a lawful defence as albeit he appears, and pleads a ſufficient bar without making defence, yet judgment ſhall be given againſt him. Co. Litt. 127. b.

In pleading excommunication in the plaintiff, Hole Ch. J. doubted, if defendant ought not to have made ſome kind of defence, though no full defence is to be made. Vent 222. Trin. 24 Car. 2. B. R. Jay v. Bond.

In aſſumpſit on a bill of exchange, the defendant pleaded in bar without defence, and upon a general demurrer this was objected, and the queſtion was, if this was matter of form, and ſo aided by the general demurrer. And prima facie the court was of opinion, that this was matter of ſubſtance; becauſe the defendant is not party to the action without defence; but after having conſulted the judges of B. where it has been a long time held matter of form, they agreed that it was aided by general demurrer, though at the ſame time they ſeemed to comply with that opinion, rather than to approve it with their own judgments, to the end that there might be a conformity between the two courts. Lord Raym. Rep. 282. Mich. 9 Will. 3. Bellaſis v. Heſter.

In ejectment the defendant venit & dicit, that the land is ancient demeſne, without making any defence; to this there was a ſpecial demurrer. Et per Holt Ch. J. The plaintiff might have refuſed the plea for want of defence; but if he receives the plea he admits a defence. If one plead outlawry, he ought to plead it ſub pede ſigilli, and if the does not ſo plead it, the plaintiff may refuſe it; but if he accepts the plea, he ſhall not demur for that cauſe; for it is well enough if he allows it. 1 Salk. 217. Paſch. 4 Will. & Mar. in B. R. Ferrer v. Miller.

Treſpaſs, aſſault and battery, the defendant venit & defendit vim & injuriam quando, &c. and pleads outlawry in abatement after imparlance; the plaintiff demurs; and adjudged that the defendant anſwer over, becauſe he cannot plead ſuch a plea after a full defence, by which he has admitted the plaintiff able to recover damages. Lord Raym. 117. arg. cites 35 Car. 2. B. R. Rot. 1528. Gawen v. Surby.

In treſpaſs, aſſault and mayhem, the defendant venit & defendit vim & injuriam quando, and pleaded another action depending for the ſame cauſe undetermined in abatement, and judgment, quod reſpondeat ulterius, for the ſame reaſon as before. Ld. Raym. Rep. 117. arg. cites Trin. 4 W. & M. in C. B. Meacock v. Farmer.

After the defendant has made a full defence in treſpaſs by adding the words quando, &c. to the venit & defendit vim & injuriam, he cannot plead in diſability, that the plaintiff is an alien born, &c. but he ought to omit the Quando, becauſe by that word the defendant hath admitted that the plaintiff hath capacity to ſue. Carth. 230. Paſch. 4 W. & M. in B. R. Jentreer v. Jenkins.

Defendant came and defendit vim & injuriam quando, and then would plead miſnomer; and ſaid he could not plead that after pleading defendit vim & injuriam; for that he had admitted himſelf by that name: Curia adviſare vult. 12 Mod. 235. Mich. 10 W. 3. Clark v. Butler. See 7 *Vin. Deforceor, Deforciator, (from the French forceur, expugnator) Signifies one that overcometh, and caſteth out by force: And differeth from diſſeiſor firſt in this, becauſe a man may diſſeiſe another without force: Which act is called ſimple diſſeiſin. Britton, cap. 53. Next, becauſe a man may deforce another that never was in poſſeſſion. As for example, if many have a right to lands as common heirs, and one entring keepeth out the reſt, the law ſaith, that he deforceth them, though he doth not diſſeiſe them. Old Nat. Brev. fol. 118. And Littleton in his chapter of Diſcontinuance, fol. 117. ſaith, That he who is enfeoffed by the tenant in tail, and put in poſſeſſion, by keeping out the heir of him in the reverſion, being dead, doth deforce him, though he did not diſſeiſe him, becauſe he entred when the tenant in tail was living, and the heir had no preſent right. And a deforceor differeth from an intruder, becauſe a man is made an intruder by a wrongful entry only into lands or tenements void of a poſſeſſor: and a deforceor alſo is, by holding out the right heir, as aboveſaid. Bracton, lib. 4. cap. 1. Degradation, (Degradatio,) Is an eccleſiaſtical cenſure, whereby a clergyman is deprived of his holy orders which formerly he had, as of prieſt or deacon. God. Rep. 309.

And by the Canon law, this may be done two ways: either ſummarily, as by word only; or ſolemnly, as by deveſting the party degraded of thoſe ornaments and rites, which were the enſigns of his order or degree. God. Rep. 309.

This ſolemn degradation was anciently performed in this manner, as is ſet forth in the ſixth book of the Decretals: If the offender was a perſon in inferior orders, then the biſhop of the dioceſe alone, if in higher orders as prieſt or deacon, then the biſhop of the dioceſe, together with a certain number of ôther biſhops, ſent for the party to come before them. He was brought in, having on his ſacred robes, and having in his hands a book, veſſel, or other inſtrument or ornament appertaining to his order, as if he were about to officiate in his function. Then the biſhop publickly took away from him, one by one, the ſaid inſtruments and veſtments belonging to his office, ſaying to this effect; This and this we take from thee, and do deprive thee of the honour of prieſthood; and, finally, in taking away the laſt ſacerdotal veſtment, ſaying thus; By the authority of God Amighty, the Father, tbe Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, and of us, we do take from thee the clerical habit, and be depoſe, degrade, deſpoil, and deprive thee of all order, benefit, and privilege of the clergy. Gibſ. 1066.

By Canon 122. Sentence againſt a miniſter, of depoſition from the miniſtry, ſhall be pronounced by the biſhop only, with the aſſiſtance of his chancellor and dean (if they may conveniently be had, and ſome of the prebendaries, if the court be kept near the cathedral church; or of the archdeacon, if he may be had conveniently, and two other at leaſt grave miniſters and preachers to be called by the biſhop, when the court is kept in other places.

There is likewiſe a degradation of a lord or a knight, &c. at Common law, when they are attainted of treaſon; as Hill. 18 Ed. 2. Andrew Harcla, Earl of Carliſle, who was alſo a knight, was degraded; and when judgment of treaſon was pronounced againſt him, his ſword was broken over his head, and his ſpurs hewn off his heels, &c. And there is a degrading by act of parliament; for by ſtat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 15. William Lord Monſon, Sir Henry Mildmay, and others, were degraded from all titles of honour, dignities, and pre-eminences, and none of them to bear or uſe the title of Lord, Knight, Eſquire, or Gentleman, or any coat of arms for ever after.

Demain or Demeſne, (Dominicum, Gallis Domanium, Italis Demanium) Is a French word otherwiſe written domaine, and ſignifieth Patrimonium domini, as Hottoman ſaith, In verbis feudalibus, verbo Dominicum, where by divers authorities he proveth thoſe lands to be dominicum, which a man holdeth originally of himſelf, and thoſe to be feodum which he holdeth of a ſuperior lord. And by the word domanium or demanium, are properly ſignified the King's lands in France, appertainiug to him in property. In like manner do we uſe it in England, although we have no land (that of the crown only excepted) which is not holden of a ſuperior, for all dependeth either mediately or immediately of the crown, wherefore no common perſon hath any demains ſimply underſtood; for when a man in pleading, would ſignify his land to be his own, he ſaith, that he is or was ſeiſed thereof in his demain, main as of fee, Litt. lib. 1. c. 1. whereby he meaneth, that although his land be to him and his heirs for ever, yet it is not true demain, but depending upon a ſuperior lord, and holding by ſervice, or rent in lieu of ſervice, and by both ſervice and rent; yet theſe words have been uſed in the King's right. 37 H. 8. c. 16. and 39 Eliz. c. 22. But the application of this ſppech to the King and crown land is crept in by error and ignorance of the word fee. Britton, c. 78. ſheweth, that this word demain is diverſly taken, ſometimes more largely, as of lands and tenements held for life, &c. and ſometimes more ſtrictly, as for ſuch only, as are generally held in fee. This word ſometimes is uſed for a diſtinction between thoſe lands, that the lord of a manor hath in his hands, or in the hands of his leſſee, demiſed upon a rent, for term of years or life, and ſuch other land appertaining to the ſaid manor, which belongeth to free or copyholders. Howbeit, the copyhold belonging to any manor, is alſo in the opinion of many good lawyers accounted demains. Bracton, lib. 4. tract. 3. c. 9. num. 5. ſaith, Eſt autem dominicum, quod quis habet ad menſam ſuam & proprie, ſicut ſunt Bordlands Anglice. Dominicum autem. And the reaſon why copyhold is accounted demains, is becauſe they who are tenants to it, are judged in law to have no other right, but at the will of the lord; ſo that it is reputed ſtill after a manner to be in the lord's hands. And yet in common ſpeech, that is ordinarily called demeans, that is neither free nor copy. And here note, that demain is ſometimes uſed in a more ſpecial ſignification, and is oppoſite to frank-fee. For example, thoſe lands which were in the poſſeſſion of Edward the Confeſſor, are called ancient demain, and others are called frank-fee. Kitchin, fol. 98. Demand (Fr. Demande, i. e. Poſtulatio) Signifies a calling upon a man for any thing due. It hath alſo a proper ſignification, diſtinguiſhed from plaint: For all civil actions are purſued either by demands or plaints; and the purſuer is called demandant or plaintiff, viz. demandant in actions real, and plaintiff in perſonal. And where the party purſuing is called demandant, the party purſued is called tenant; where plaintiff, there defendant. If a man releaſe to another all demands, this is the beſt releaſe the releaſee can have, and ſhall enure moſt to his advantage. Litt. fol. 117. a. There are two manner of demands; the one in deed, the other in law: In deed, as in every præcipe, there is an expreſs demand: In law, as in every entry in land, diſtreſs for rent, taking or ſeizing of goods, and ſuch like acts, which may be done without any words, are demands in law.

As a releaſe of ſuits is more large than of quarrels or actions; ſo a releaſe of demands is more large and beneficial that either of them. By a releaſe of all demands all executions and all freeholds and inheritances executory are releaſed: By a releaſe of demands to the diſſeiſor, the right of entry in the land, and all that is contained therein, is releaſed. And he that releaſeth all demands, excludes himſelf from all actions, entries, and ſeizures; but a releaſe of all demands is no bar in a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry. Coke, lib. 8. fol. 153, 154.

In debt upon a bill of 70 l. to be paid upon demand, it was inſiſted, that a demand was requiſite, ſo that a demand in law by bringing the action will not ſerve the turn; but adjudged well enough; for it is a duty preſently, and ſo needs no demand. *Cro. Demand (Fr. Demande, i. e. Poſtulatio) Signifies a calling upon a man for any thing due. It hath alſo a proper ſignification, diſtinguiſhed from plaint: For all civil actions are purſued either by demands or plaints; and the purſuer is called demandant or plaintiff, viz. demandant in actions real, and plaintiff in perſonal. And where the party purſuing is called demandant, the party purſued is called tenant; where plaintiff, there defendant. If a man releaſe to another all demands, this is the beſt releaſe the releaſee can have, and ſhall enure moſt to his advantage. Litt. fol. 117. a. There are two manner of demands; the one in deed, the other in law: In deed, as in every præcipe, there is an expreſs demand: In law, as in every entry in land, diſtreſs for rent, taking or ſeizing of goods, and ſuch like acts, which may be done without any words, are demands in law.

As a releaſe of ſuits is more large than of quarrels or actions; ſo a releaſe of demands is more large and beneficial that either of them. By a releaſe of all demands all executions and all freeholds and inheritances executory are releaſed: By a releaſe of demands to the diſſeiſor, the right of entry in the land, and all that is contained therein, is releaſed. And he that releaſeth all demands, excludes himſelf from all actions, entries, and ſeizures; but a releaſe of all demands is no bar in a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry. Coke, lib. 8. fol. 153, 154.

In debt upon a bill of 70 l. to be paid upon demand, it was inſiſted, that a demand was requiſite, ſo that a demand in law by bringing the action will not ſerve the turn; but adjudged well enough; for it is a duty preſently, and ſo needs no demand. *Cro. Where one is indebted to me ſeverally in ſeveral ſums of money to be paid upon requeſt, or demand made, and I go and ſay to him pay me what you owe me, this is not a ſufficient demand or requeſt. 3 Le. 206. pl. 166. Paſch. 30 *Eliz. A difference was taken by ſerjeant Jones, between a limitation which depends on the doing of ſome collateral act, which is to be done but once, and the payment of a rent iſſuing out of the land, which hath ſucceſſive acts; that in the laſt caſe there ought to be a demand, but not in the firſt. Freem. Rep. 24. Hill. 1671. pl. 32.

Debt upon a bill obligatory, scil', borrowed of J. S. 10 l. which I promise to pay upon demand; the plaintiff says, Quod licet sæpias requisitus he had not paid it, but does not lay any actual demand; and verdict being for the plaintiff, Baldwin moved in arrest of judgment, because no particular request in time and place is averred; and cited the case of Brown v. Durney, Hob. 208. But pur curiam, a request is not here necessary, it being for the payment of a debt, and between the parties; but if it had been upon a penalty, or a promise by a stranger, or for some collateral matter, there a request must be laid; but here it appears that a debt was due, and it being for the payment of money by the debtor, although it be said upon demand, yet the bringing of the action is a sufficient demand. *Freem. A. was indebted to B. and A. dies, and after B. comes to C. and demands the money, and C. in consideration that B. would forbear his debt, (or to sue,) did promise to pay him. Objection was made, that this being a collateral promise, and no debt due from the defendant, here ought to have been a request. But to that the court answered, that a request was not necessary, the promise being generally to pay, and not upon request. Freem. Rep. 439. pl. 595. Mich 1696. Anon'.

Debt for a rent reserved upon a lease for years, in which there was a proviso, that if the rent be behind and unpaid by the space of a month next after any or either of the days of payment, then the lease to be void. The plea was, that the rent was behind a month after a day, on which it was reserved to be paid, and so the lease is void; to which plea the plaintiff demurred, because the defendant did not say that the plaintiff demanded the rent; for though the rent be due without the demand, yet the interest shall not be determined without it, which must be expresly laid in the pleading; and of that opinion was the court, except justice Atkyns, who doubted. 2 Mod. 264. Trin. 29 Car. 2. *C. Demurrer, (from the Fr. demeurer, i. e. manere in aliquo loco, vel morari,) Is a kind of a pause or stop put to the proceedings of an action upon a point of difficulty, which must be determined by the court, before any further proceeding can be had therein: For in every action the controversy consists either in fact or in law; if in fact, that is tried by the jury; if in law, the case is either plain to the judge, or so hard and rare, as it breeds just doubt. We call that plain to the judge, wherein he is assured of the law, though perhaps the party and his counsel yield not to it. And in such case, the judge with his associates proceeds to judgment without more ado; but when it is doubtful, then stay is made, and a time taken, either for the court to consider further of it, and agree if they can, or else for all the judges to meet together in the Exchequer-Chamber; and upon hearing what counsel can say on both sides to determine what is law. And whatsoever they conclude stands firm, without any farther appeal. Smith de Repub. Angl. lib. 2. c. 13. This demurrer is in our records expressed in Latin by moratur in lege. At the Common law, the defendant sometimes demurreth to the plaintiff's count or declaration; and sometimes the plaintiff demurs to the defendant's plea, by averring that it is not a sufficient plea in law, &c. In Chancery, the defendant demurs to the plaintiff's bill, averring it is defective in such or such a point, and demands the judgment of the court thereupon, whether he shall be compelled to make any further or other answer thereunto, &c. Cowell, See Moratur in lege.

1. Demurrer in actions at law.
2. Demurrer in suits in equity.

1. Demurrer in actions at law.

A demurrer is admitting the matter of fact, since it refers the law arising on the fact to the judgment of the court; and therefore the fact is taken to be true on such demurrer, or otherwise the court has no foundation on which to make any judgment. Gilb. Hist. of C. B. 55.

A demurrer is a confession of all matters in fact, but not of matters in law; for by it they are put in judgment of the court. Pl. C. 85. a. Hill. 6 & 7 Ed. 6. by Mountague Ch. J. in the case of Partridge v. Strange and Coker.

If a thing be sufficiently alledged, it is confessed by the demurrer, but not otherwise; per Anderson Ch. J. Goldsh. 52. pl. 1.

Demurrer confesses nothing but what is materialy alledged. Arg. and seems admitted. 12 Mod. 578. Mich. 13 W. 3.

By stat. 27 El. c. 5. and 4 Ann. c. 16. sect. 1. Judgment shall be given on demurrer according to the right of the cause, without regarding form, unless the want of it be shewed for cause.

A demurrer in law, is never a confession of a thing against the record, but only of that which may stand with the record, for otherwise, his confession would be vain, and should not bind the court; per cur'. Cro. J. 12. Pasch. 1 Jac. B. R. in the case of Arundel v. Arundel.

As a demurrer at Common law did confess all matters formally pleaded; so now by the Statute, a general demurrer does confess all matters pleaded though unformally, according to the forms meant by the statute 27 Eliz. 5. for such forms are now not material, not being expressed in demurrer. Hob. 233. at the end of pl. 295. Mich. 12 Jac. in the case of Hoard v. Bakerville.

A general demurrer confesses not the matter; as if in debt upon a bill defendant pleads payment, and the plaintiff demurs, that demurrer does not confess the payment; per Warburton J. Arg. Hutt. 15. Trin. 13 Jac.

If count, plea, replication, &c. upon which the demurrer was, is good; then all the matter which is contained in the count or plea is confessed, but if the count or plea be vitious, then it is otherwise. 2 Roll. R. 22. Pasch. 16 Jac. B. R. in the case of Holford v. Platt, cited per cur. as a difference taken. 17 Ass. pl. 2. 31. H. 6. and 22 H. 6.

On a scire facias to repeal a patent to B. for a market to be held at C. reciting that there was an ancient market long before kept at R. within half a mile of C. and that there was an ad quod damnum taken out before the new patent; and the inquest thereupon taken found it not to be to the damage of any, and that it was executed by surprize and without notice; and that notwithstanding it was to the great damage of the former market, &c. to this ſcire facias B. demurred. But the lord Chancellor Finch (aſſiſted by North Ch. J. of C. B. and Jones J.) gave judgment for repealing of the patent; for the return of the writ of ad quod damnum was not concluſive, and here by the demurrer it is confeſſed to be to the damage of the former market. 2 Vent. 344. Hill. 31 & 32 Car. 2. in Canc. Sir Oliver Butler's caſe.

Indebitatus aſſumpſit for a horſe ſold for 20*l.* The defendant pleaded within age; the plaintiff replied, that he ſold him his horſe for conveniency to carry him about his neceſſary affairs; to which the defendant demurred. And the ſole queſtion was, whether an action would lie againſt an infant for money for a horſe ſold? It was urged on the defendant's part, that an infant was chargeable only for neceſſaries, as meat, drink, cloaths, lodging, and education, and cited 3 Cro. 175. 1 Cro. Ayliff v. Archbold. Latch 169. But the court were of a contrary opinion, for the plaintiff having averred, that he ſold him the horſe to ride about his neceſſary occaſions. and the defendant having confeſſed it by his demurrer, it muſt now be taken to be ſo; if the defendant had traverſed, then the jury muſt have judged of it, whether it were neceſſary or convenient or not, and ſo likewiſe of the price of the horſe, whether it was exceſſive or no. Jud. pro quer. Niſi. Freem. Rep. 541. pl. 715. Mich. 1680. Barber v. Vincent.

An action of the caſe brought upon an inland bill of exchange, in which the plaintiff declared upon a ſpecial cuſtom in London, for the bearer to bring the action, &c. and upon a demurrer to the declaration it was held, that the defendant having demurred, without traverſing the cuſtom, he had thereby confeſſed there was ſuch a cuſtom, though in truth there was not, and for that reaſon the plaintiff had judgment; for though the court takes notice of the law of merchants, as part of the law of England, yet they cannot take notice of the cuſtoms of particular places; and this cuſtom, as ſet forth in the declaration, being ſufficient to maintain the action, and the defendant confeſſing it by his demurrer, he has given judgment againſt himſelf. 3 Salk. 68, 69. pl. 5, Paſch. 5 W. 3. B. R. Hodges v. Steward.

If a thing be laid by way of preſcription, which does not lie in preſcription, and it be demurred unto, that does not confeſs it; for if this be a courſe of the court it is law, and if it be law we are to take notice of it. Per Holt Ch. J. obiter. 12 Mod. 573. Mich. 13 W. 3.

In treſpaſs, aſſault, and falſe impriſonment, the defendant juſtifies under a proceſs out of the ſheriff's court in London, quæ eſt eadem, &c. and traverſes being guilty aliter vel alio modo: To this the plaintiff demurs, and ſhews for cauſe, that the traverſe is idle, and unneceſſary. And upon argument the court were of opinion that this was ill on a ſpecial demurrer, the quæ eſt eadem being a ſufficient traverſe. Lutw. 1457. And ſo it was held in the caſe of Carvel v. Manby, where on a general demurrer it was allowed to be well enough; but the court ſaid if it had been a ſpecial demurrer, it would have been otherwiſe. Judicium pro querente. Stran. 694.

Debt upon a bond conditioned to indemnify the plaintiff. The defendant upon oyer pleaded generally, quod indempnem conſervavit, without ſhewing how. And on a general demurrer it was agreed the plea was ill before the act for amendment of the law, for that no iſſue could be joined upon it. 2 Cro. 165. Hob. 296. 2 Co. 4. 2 Cro. 363, 503, 634. But then it was objected, that this ſhould have been ſhewn for cauſe of demurrer. And of that opinion was the court, for the ſubſtance is the ſaving harmleſs, and how that was done, is but matter of form; ſo the plaintiff prayed leave to diſcontinue upon payment of coſts, which was granted accordingly. Stran. 681.

Scire facias againſt pledges in replevin, ſetting out a judgment for the avowant in C. B. prout per recordum ibidem jam reſidens: Quod quidem recordum coram nobis certis de cauſis venire fecimus, where the judgment was affirmed. The defendant demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that it was incongruous to ſay the record remains in C. B. and at the ſame time was removed to B. R. by writ of error.—Serjeant Branthwayte would have had it rejected as an unneceſſary averment, and then it would ſtand with only a right reference to the record remaining in B. R. Sed per curiam, You cannot ſay but it is informal; and that is enough upon a ſpecial demurrer. The defendant muſt have judgment. Stran. 611.

2. Demurrer in ſuits in equity.

Demurrer is an allegation of the defendant, which, admitting the matters of fact, or ſome of them, alledged by the defendant to be true, ſhews that, as they are ſet forth by the complainant himſelf, they are inſufficient for him to proceed upon, or to oblige the defendant to anſwer; and therefore demands the judgment of the court, whether the defendant ſhall be compelled to make anſwer to the plaintiff's bill, or to ſome certain part thereof. Pract. Reg. in C. 131.

The defendant put in a demurrer to the plaintiff's bill becauſe the plaintiff was outlawed at the ſuit of ſtrangers, yet ordered to anſwer. Toth. 137. cites Mich. 9 Jac. Skies v. Rawſon.——Ibid. 139. cites 10 Jac. Moris v. Owen.

Demurrer, becauſe excommunicated, over-ruled about 4 Car. Toth. 137. 4 C. Plumton v. Headlam.

It is allowed a good cauſe of demurrer in this court, that a bill is brought for part of a matter only, which is proper for one intire account, becauſe the plaintiff ſhall not ſplit cauſes and make a multiplicity of ſuits. Vern. 29. pl. 24. Hill. 1681. in caſe of Purefoy v. Purefoy.

Demurrer to ſcandalous matter ſuggeſted in a bill; per Sir J. Churchill, as amicus curiæ, the courſe of the court in ſuch a caſe is not to put the defendant to anſwer the ſcandalous matter, but to ſtrike out the word demurrer, and leave the plaintiff at liberty to prove it. Vern. R. 137. pl. 96. Mich. 1682. Page v. Neale.

Where a bill was exhibited to have an execution of an award, which was performed by neither party; and the defendant demurred, becauſe there was no precedent that a court of equity had ever carried ſuch awards into execution; and the demurrer was allowed. Abr. Equ. Caſ. 51 Mich. 1704. at the Rolls. Biſhop v. Webſter.

The defendant pleaded that there was a former bill depending, and brought by the ſame plaintiff, for the ſame matter as in this bill. And demurred, for that there was no equity in the bill, and that the ſame being two hundred ſheets of paper, was ſtuffed with repetitions, tautologies, and impertinences. It was inſiſted by the counſel for the plaintiff, that by reaſon of the demurrer, he could not procure a reference to the maſter, to examine whether there was a former ſuit depending or not. Thereupon the court over-ruled the demurrer with coſts, and referred it to the maſter to examine into the former and this bill, if he found it for the ſame matter, then to tax coſts for the defendant. Fin. R. 179. Mich. 26 Car. 2. Dumford v. Dumford.

Where a tort is laid to be done after the action brought, the defendant may take advantage of it on a ſpecial demurrer. Gilb. Hiſt. of C. B. 106.

An original bill was brought to explain a decree. The defendant demurred. The plaintiff inſiſted, that the demurrer confeſſed the matter of the bill, but the court allowed the demurrer good. 2 Freem. Rep. 179. pl. 242. 15 Car. 2. in Canc. Read v. Handby.

A bill of 20*l.* promiſed the wife if ſhe would procure a releaſe from her huſband for purchaſe money, which was part paid, and the reſt ſecured; defendant demurred for that it was no conſideration, becauſe the defendant was releaſed by law, by payment and ſecurity; and allowed. Per Lord Keeper Bridgman, 3 Ch. R. 70. July 24, 1671. Stuckly v. Cook

The plaintiff brought a bill againſt the defendant, as executor of the obligor, to diſcover aſſets, and to compel the payment of the debt. The defendant demurred, for that the plaintiff had brought an action againſt him at law, to which the defendant had pleaded Plene adminiſtravit. But the demurrer was over-ruled, and the defendant ordered to anſwer without payment of coſts. Nelſ. Rep. 127, 128. Anno 21 Car. 2. Pitt v. Scarlet.

Plaintiff

Plaintiff having obtained a decree againſt the defendants for money out of aſſets in their hands, they being executors, and they having denied aſſets, plaintiff brought a bill to diſcover aſſets. Defendants demurred, for it did not appear that the decree was ſigned and inrolled, or the defendant ſerved with any decree under ſeal. Demurrer allowed, and bill diſmiſſed. Fin. R. 33, 34. Mich. 25 Car. 2. Braithwaite v. Davis.

A bill was brought to baſtardize the iſſue, and ſet aſide and overthrow the marriage of his late father with the other defendant his mother. The defendant demurred, for that the validity of the marriage, and legitamacy of the defendant is properly triable at law, and that the defendant the mother, is not bound to diſcover upon oath that ſhe is guilty of ſuch a crime, as will ſubject her to the penalty of the ſtatutes, and laws of the realm, and that the bill was ſcandalous and impertinent; the demurrer was allowed, and the bill to be taken off the file and burnt. *Fin. In a bill by obligee againſt the heir of the obligor for payment of the debt out of aſſets alledged to be deſcended; if the bill does not alledge that the heir was bound by the bond, defendant may demur. Per North. K. Vern. 180. pl. 173. Trin. 1683. Croſſing v. Honor.

Defendant demurred, becauſe the bill was againſt ſeveral defendants, for ſeveral diſtinct matters, but was overruled, becauſe the plaintiff by his bill had charged the defendant with combination, which defendant had not denied in his anſwer. Vern. 416. pl. 395. Mich. 1686. Powell v. Arden and Chevall.

The bill was to examine witneſſes to preſerve their teſtimony touching the title of certain lands in the bill mentioned. The defendant demurred, becauſe there was no impediment that hindered the plaintiff from trying his right at law; and that he had not obtained any verdict in affirmation of his pretended title. Demurrer allowed. Vern. 441. pl. 415. Hill. 1686. Parry v. Rogers.

If an original bill be brought for matters, part of which are in a former bill and decree, and part new, or by way of ſupplemental bill; the court will on a demurrer, to ſo much as was contained in the former decree, ſend it to a maſter to ſee what was, and what was not in the firſt bill, and allow the demurrer accordingly. *G. Demurrer to evidence, Is where a queſtion of law doth ariſe thereupon: As if the plaintiff produces in evidence any records, deeds, writings, &c. upon which a queſtion of law ariſes, and the defendant offers to demur upon it; and then the plaintiff muſt join in demurrer, or waive his evidence. So if the plaintiff brings witneſſes to prove a fact, and a matter of law ariſeth upon it; if the defendant admits their teſtimony to be true, there alſo the defendant may demur in law: And ſo may the plaintiff demur upon the defendant's evidence. And in theſe caſes, the counſel for the plaintiff and defendant agree the matter of fact in diſpute; and the jury are diſcharged; and the matter of law is referred to the judges to determine. But where evidence is given for the King, in an information, or other ſuit, and the defendant offers to demur upon it, the King's counſel are not obliged to join therein; but the court ought to direct the jury to find the ſpecial matter. And indeed becauſe juries uſually find a doubtful matter ſpecially, demurrers upon evidence are now ſeldom uſed. 5 Rep. 104. 1 Inſt. 72. 2 Inſt. 426. See Exception.

Demurrer to indictments. If a criminal joins iſſue upon a point of law in an indictment or appeal, allowing the fact to be true, as laid therein, this is a demurrer in law: And if the indictment or appeal proves good in law, in the opinion of the judges, they proceed to judgment and execution, as if the party had been convicted by confeſſion or verdict. And though by the criminal's demurrer, he refuſeth to put himſelf upon trial by jury, yet he ſhall not, as in other caſes, be put under the pain fort & dure; for a demurrer is allowed to be tried by the judges, and not by the inqueſt. And he that is condemned on demmurrer, is ſaid to be convict; for whoever is adjudged, is convicted by law. 2 Inſt. 178. H. P. C. 243. S. P. C. 150. 1 Hawk. P. C. 14. Denelage, or Danelage, Denelagia, Is the law that the Danes made here in England, out of which, and Merchenlage and Weſt-Saxon-lage, the conqueror compounded certain ordinances for his ſubjects. Camd. Brit. p. 94 & 183.

Denizen, (from the French donaiſon, i. e. donatio,) Signifies in law an alien that is enfranchiſed by the King's charter, and enabled in all reſpects almoſt to do as the King's native ſubjects do, viz. to purchaſe and to poſſeſs lands, and to be capable of any office or dignity; yet it is ſhort of naturalization, becauſe a ſtranger naturalized, may inherit lands by deſcent, which a man made only a denizen, cannot. And in the charter, whereby a man is made denizen, there is commonly contained ſome one clauſe or other, that abridgeth him of that full benefit which natural ſubjects do enjoy. Dentrir, A fiſh with many teeth. Et ſint quieti de quibuſcunque priſis caponum, columbarum, dentricium Anguillarum & omnium aliorum piſcium. Charta H. 6. pro Monaſter. Rameſey.

Deodand, Deodandum, Is a thing given or rather forfeited, as it were, to God, for the pacification of his wrath, in caſe of miſadventure, whereby any chriſtian man cometh to a violent end, without the fault of any reaſonable creature. For example, If a horſe ſhould ſtrike his keeper, and ſo kill him: If a man in driving a cart, and ſeeking to redreſs any thing about it, ſhould ſo fall as the cart-wheel running over him, ſhould kill him: If one ſhould be felling a tree, and he give warning to company preſent, when the tree was near falling, to look to themſelves, and any of them ſhould be ſlain nevertheleſs by the fall of the tree: In the firſt of theſe caſes, the horſe; in the ſecond, the cart-weel, cart and horſes; and in the third, the tree, is a deodand and to be given to God; that is, to be ſold and diſtributed to the poor, by the King's almoner, for an expiation of that dreadful event, though effected by unreaſonable, yea ſenſeleſs and inanimate creatures. Staundf. pl. cor. lib. 1. c. 2. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 5. Britton, c. 17. and Weſt. Symbol. tit. Indictments, ſect. 49.

Fleta ſays, this deodand is to be ſold, and the price diſtributed to the poor, for the ſoul of the King, his anceſtors, and all faithful people departed this life. Lib. 1. c. 25. De ſubmerſis; which law ſeems to bear an imitation of that in Exodus, c. 21. Si cornu petierit bos virum vel mulierem, ita ut moriatur, lapidabitur bos neque comedetur caro ejus, ac dominus ejus erit innocens. This word is mentioned in the ſtat. De officio coronatoris, Anno 4 Ed. 1. See 3 part. Inſt. fol. 57. Since therefore by the Moſaical law the ox was to be ſtoned to death, it ſeems reaſonable that the price of the ox ſhould be beſtowed in pious and charitable uſes. Cowell, edit. 1727.

A deodand is that inſtrument which occaſions the death of a man, and is forfeited to the King, in order to be diſpoſed of in pious uſes by the King's almoner; this forfeiture of whatever procures the death of a man without the default of another was introduced to increaſe the terror and abhorrence of murder, ſo that nothing that occaſioned it ſhould ſeem to go unpuniſhed; alſo that weapon or inſtrument, whereby one man kills another is called a deodand. 3 Inſt. 57, 58. 5 Co. 110. H. P. C. 34. Pult. 125. Crom. 31. a.

To underſtand what things are forfeited as deodands, we muſt obſerve that it is laid down as a rule, that omnia quæ movent ad mortem ſunt deodanda; and therefore that wherever the thing which is the occaſion of a man's death is in motion at the time, not only that part thereof which immediately wounds him, but all things which move together with it, and help to make the wound more dangerous, are forfeited alſo. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66, 67.

As where a cart meeting a waggon loaded upon the road, and the cart endeavouring to paſs by the waggon, was driven upon a high bank, and overturned, and threw the perſon that was in the cart juſt before the wheels of the waggon, and the waggon run over the man and killed him, it was held that the cart, waggon, loading, and all the horſes were deodands, becauſe they all moved ad mortem. 1 Salk. 220.

But if a man, riding on the ſhafts of a waggon, fall to the ground, and break his neck, the horſes and waggon only are forfeited, but not the loading, becauſe it no way contributed to his death. 3 Inſt. 58. S. P. C. 20. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

So where a thing not in motion cauſes a man's death, that part thereof only which is the immediate cauſe is forfeited; as where one climbing upon the wheel of a cart while it ſtands ſtill falls from it, and dies of the fall, the wheel only is forfeited, but if he had been killed by a bruiſe from one of the wheels being in motion, the loading alſo would have been forfeited, becauſe the weight thereof made the hurt the greater. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

Alſo if a man riding on a horſe over a river is drowned through the violence of the ſtream, the horſe is not forfeited, becauſe not that, but the water cauſed his death. Cro. Jac. 483. 2 Rol. Rep. 23. Poph. 156. It is otherwiſe if the horſe had thrown him. 1 Salk. 220.

By the opinion of our ancient authors, things fixed to a freehold, as the wheel of a mill, a bell hanging in a ſteeple, &c. may be deodands; but by the later reſolutions they cannot, unleſs they were ſevered before the accident happened. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

Alſo it was formerly held, that this forfeiture did not extend to caſual deaths ariſing from the indiſcretion, of children or infants within the age of diſcretion, for that ſuch puniſhment of innocent owners by taking their goods would anſwer no good end of juſtice; beſides the misfortune in this caſe might ſeem rather owing to the indiſcretion of the infant than any default in the thing; but this diſtinction has not been allowed of late; for the law does not ground the forfeiture on any default in the things

Plaintiff having obtained a decree againſt the defendants for money out of aſſets in their hands, they being executors, and they having denied aſſets, plaintiff brought a bill to diſcover aſſets. Defendants demurred, for it did not appear that the decree was ſigned and inrolled, or the defendant ſerved with any decree under ſeal. Demurrer allowed, and bill diſmiſſed. *Fin. In a bill by obligee againſt the heir of the obligor for payment of the debt out of aſſets alledged to be deſcended; if the bill does not alledge that the heir was bound by the bond, defendant may demur. Per North. K. Vern. 180. pl. 173. Trin. 1683. Croſſing v. Honor.

Defendant demurred, becauſe the bill was againſt ſeveral defendants, for ſeveral diſtinct matters, but was overruled, becauſe the plaintiff by his bill had charged the defendant with combination, which defendant had not denied in his anſwer. Vern. 416. pl. 395. Mich. 1686. Powell v. Arden and Chevall.

The bill was to examine witneſſes to preſerve their teſtimony touching the title of certain lands in the bill mentioned. The defendant demurred, becauſe there was no impediment that hindered the plaintiff from trying his right at law; and that he had not obtained any verdict in affirmation of his pretended title. Demurrer allowed. Vern. 441. pl. 415. Hill. 1686. Parry v. Rogers.

If an original bill be brought for matters, part of which are in a former bill and decree, and part new, or by way of ſupplemental bill; the court will on a demurrer, to ſo much as was contained in the former decree, ſend it to a maſter to ſee what was, and what was not in the firſt bill, and allow the demurrer accordingly. *G. Demurrer to evidence, Is where a queſtion of law doth ariſe thereupon: As if the plaintiff produces in evidence any records, deeds, writings, &c. upon which a queſtion of law ariſes, and the defendant offers to demur upon it; and then the plaintiff muſt join in demurrer, or waive his evidence. So if the plaintiff brings witneſſes to prove a fact, and a matter of law ariſeth upon it; if the defendant admits their teſtimony to be true, there alſo the defendant may demur in law: And ſo may the plaintiff demur upon the defendant's evidence. And in theſe caſes, the counſel for the plaintiff and defendant agree the matter of fact in diſpute; and the jury are diſcharged; and the matter of law is referred to the judges to determine. But where evidence is given for the King, in an information, or other ſuit, and the defendant offers to demur upon it, the King's counſel are not obliged to join therein; but the court ought to direct the jury to find the ſpecial matter. Demurrer to indictments. If a criminal joins iſſue upon a point of law in an indictment or appeal, allowing the fact to be true, as laid therein, this is a demurrer in law: And if the indictment or appeal proves good in law, in the opinion of the judges, they proceed to judgment and execution, as if the party had been convicted by confeſſion or verdict. And though by the criminal's demurrer, he refuſeth to put himſelf upon trial by jury, yet he ſhall not, as in other caſes, be put under the pain fort & dure; for a demurrer is allowed to be tried by the judges, and not by the inqueſt. And he that is condemned on demmurrer, is ſaid to be convict; for whoever is adjudged, is convicted by law. 2 Inſt. 178. H. P. C. 243. S. P. C. 150. 1 Hawk. P. C. 14. Dentrit, A fiſh with many teeth. Et ſint quieti de quibuſcunque priſis caponum, columbarum, dentricium Anguillarum & omnium aliorum piſcium. Charta H. 6. pro Monaſter. Rameſey.

Deodand, Deodandum, Is a thing given or rather forfeited, as it were, to God, for the pacification of his wrath, in caſe of miſadventure, whereby any chriſtian man cometh to a violent end, without the fault of any reaſonable creature. For example, If a horſe ſhould ſtrike his keeper, and ſo kill him: If a man in driving a cart, and ſeeking to redreſs any thing about it, ſhould ſo fall as the cart-wheel running over him, ſhould kill him: If one ſhould be felling a tree, and he give warning to company preſent, when the tree was near falling, to look to themſelves, and any of them ſhould be ſlain nevertheleſs by the fall of the tree: In the firſt of theſe caſes, the horſe; in the ſecond, the cart-weel, cart and horſes; and in the third, the tree, is a deodand and to be given to God; that is, to be ſold and diſtributed to the poor, by the King's almoner, for an expiation of that dreadful event, though effected by unreaſonable, yea ſenſeleſs and inanimate creatures. Staundf. pl. cor. lib. 1. c. 2. Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 5. Britton, c. 17. and Weſt. Symbol. tit. Indictments, ſect. 49.

Fleta ſays, this deodand is to be ſold, and the price diſtributed to the poor, for the ſoul of the King, his anceſtors, and all faithful people departed this life. Lib. 1. c. 25. De ſubmerſis; which law ſeems to bear an imitation of that in Exodus, c. 21. Si cornu petierit bos virum vel mulierem, ita ut moriatur, lapidabitur bos neque comedetur caro ejus, ac dominus ejus erit innocens. This word is mentioned in the ſtat. De officio coronatoris, Anno 4 Ed. 1. See 3 part. Inſt. fol. 57. Since therefore by the Moſaical law the ox was to be ſtoned to death, it ſeems reaſonable that the price of the ox ſhould be beſtowed in pious and charitable uſes. Cowell, edit. 1727.

A deodand is that inſtrument which occaſions the death of a man, and is forfeited to the King, in order to be diſpoſed of in pious uſes by the King's almoner; this forfeiture of whatever procures the death of a man without the default of another was introduced to increaſe the terror and abhorrence of murder, ſo that nothing that occaſioned it ſhould ſeem to go unpuniſhed; alſo that weapon or inſtrument, whereby one man kills another is called a deodand. 3 Inſt. 57, 58. 5 Co. 110. H. P. C. 34. Pult. 125. Crom. 31. a.

To underſtand what things are forfeited as deodands, we muſt obſerve that it is laid down as a rule, that omnia quæ movent ad mortem ſunt deodanda; and therefore that wherever the thing which is the occaſion of a man's death is in motion at the time, not only that part thereof which immediately wounds him, but all things which move together with it, and help to make the wound more dangerous, are forfeited alſo. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66, 67.

As where a cart meeting a waggon loaded upon the road, and the cart endeavouring to paſs by the waggon, was driven upon a high bank, and overturned, and threw the perſon that was in the cart juſt before the wheels of the waggon, and the waggon run over the man and killed him, it was held that the cart, waggon, loading, and all the horſes were deodands, becauſe they all moved ad mortem. 1 Salk. 220.

But if a man, riding on the ſhafts of a waggon, fall to the ground, and break his neck, the horſes and waggon only are forfeited, but not the loading, becauſe it no way contributed to his death. 3 Inſt. 58. S. P. C. 20. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

So where a thing not in motion cauſes a man's death, that part thereof only which is the immediate cauſe is forfeited; as where one climbing upon the wheel of a cart while it ſtands ſtill falls from it, and dies of the fall, the wheel only is forfeited, but if he had been killed by a bruiſe from one of the wheels being in motion, the loading alſo would have been forfeited, becauſe the weight thereof made the hurt the greater. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

Alſo if a man riding on a horſe over a river is drowned through the violence of the ſtream, the horſe is not forfeited, becauſe not that, but the water cauſed his death. Cro. Jac. 483. 2 Rol. Rep. 23. Poph. 156. It is otherwiſe if the horſe had thrown him. 1 Salk. 220.

By the opinion of our ancient authors, things fixed to a freehold, as the wheel of a mill, a bell hanging in a ſteeple, &c. may be deodands; but by the later reſolutions they cannot, unleſs they were ſevered before the accident happened. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

Alſo it was formerly held, that this forfeiture did not extend to caſual deaths ariſing from the indiſcretion, of children or infants within the age of diſcretion, for that ſuch puniſhment of innocent owners by taking their goods would anſwer no good end of juſtice; beſides the miſfortune in this caſe might ſeem rather owing to the indiſcretion of the infant than any default in the thing; but this diſtinction has not been allowed of late; for the law does not ground the forfeiture on any default in the things forfeited, ſince it extends to things without life, to which it is plain that no manner of fault can be imputed. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

This forfeiture takes place at land only, and doth not extend to the ſeas, that are continually liable to ſtorms and tempeſts, and therefore a ſhip in ſalt water, whether in the open ſea, or within the body of a county, from which a man falls and is drowned, is not forfeited.

But a ſhip, by a fall from which a man is drowned in the freſh water, ſhall be forfeited, but not the merchandize therein, becauſe, they no way contributed to his death. 1 Hawk. P. C. 66.

In all theſe caſes, if the party wounded die not of his wounds within a year and a day after he received it, there ſhall be nothing forfeited; for the law does not look on ſuch as the cauſe a man's death, after which he lives ſo long; but if the party die within that time, the forfeiture ſhall have relation to the wound given, and cannot be ſaved by any alienation, or other act whatſoever in the mean time. 1 Hawk. P. C. 67.

However nothing can be forfeited as a deodand, nor ſeized as ſuch, till it be found by the coroner's inqueſt to have cauſed a man's death; but after ſuch inquiſition the ſheriff is anſwerable for the value of it, and may levy the ſame on the town where it fell; and therefore the inqueſt ought to find the value. 1 Hawk. P. C. 67.

Grants of deodands how to be inrolled, 3 & 4 Will. & Ma. c. 22. ſect. 1.

De deoneranda pro rata portionis, Is a writ that lieth where one is diſtrained for a rent that ought to be paid by others proportionably with him. For example, a man holds ten oxgangs of land by fealty, and 10*s.* rent of the King, and aliens one oxgang to one, another to another in fee; afterwards the ſheriff, or other officer, cometh and diſtraineth only one of them for the rent; he that is diſtrained may have this writ for his relief. *F. Departure, From a plea, or matter, is where a man pleads a plea in bar of an action, and being replied thereunto, doth in his rejoinder ſhew another matter contrary to his firſt plea, that is called a departure from his bar. Plowd. Com. f. 7, 8. Reginer and Fogaſſa's caſe. It may alſo be applied to a plaintiff, who in his replication ſhews new matter from his declaration. Co. 2. par. fo. 147, Bagſhaw's caſe.

A departure in pleading is ſaid to be when the ſecond plea contains matter not purſuant to his former, and which fortifies not the ſame, and thereupon it is called deceſſus, becauſe he departs from his former plea; and therefore whenſoever the rejoinder (taking one example for all) contains matter ſubſequent to the matter of the bar, and not fortifying the ſame, this is regularly a departure, becauſe it leaves the former and goes to another matter. Co. Lit. 304. a.

As if in an aſſiſe the tenant pleads a deſcent from his father, and gives a colour, the demandant intitles himſelf by a feoffment from the tenant himſelf; the plaintiff cannot ſay, that that feoffment was upon condition, and to ſhew the condition broken, for that would be a clear departure from the bar, becauſe it contains matter ſubſequent. Co. Lit. 304. a.

But in an aſſiſe, if the tenant pleads in bar that one J. S. was ſeiſed, and infeoffed him, &c. and the plaintiff ſhewed that he himſelf was ſeiſed in fee, until by J. S. diſſeiſed, who infeoffed the tenant, and he re-entred, the defendant may plead a releaſe of the plaintiff to J. S. for this does fortify the bar. Co. Lit. 304. a.

If a man pleads performance of covenants, and the plaintiff replies that he did not ſuch an act according to the covenant, the defendant ſays, that he offered to do it, and the plaintiff refuſed it, this is a departure, becauſe the matter is not purſuant; for it is one thing to do a thing, and another to offer to do it; and the other refuſed to do it, therefore that ſhould have been pleaded in the former plea. Co. Litt. 304. a.

Where a man in his former plea pleads an eſtate made by the Common law, in the ſecond plea regularly he ſhall not make it good by an act of parliament. So when in his former plea he intitles himſelf generally by the Common law, in his ſecond plea he ſhall not enable himſelf by a cuſtom, but ſhould have pleaded it firſt. Co Lit. 304. a.

In debt on a bond conditioned to perform an award, the defendant pleaded Nullum fecerunt arbitrium. The plaintiff replied, and ſhew'd an award. The defendant rejoin'd, that there were other things ſubmitted, and ſo no award. Adjudged on demurrer, that this is a departure; for the defendant ought to have pleaded this ſpecial matter in his plea at firſt. Sid. 180. pl. 16. Hill. 15 & 16 Car. 2. B. R. Morgan v. Man.

In aſſumſit for 5000 royals, the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of Limitations; the plaintiff replied, and tendred an iſſue as to parcel, and as to the reſidue, he ſaid, the defendant was indebted to him at Teneriffe in the Canary Iſlands, in warda de Cheap, &c. And upon a demurrer to this replication, it was objected, that it is a departure, becauſe the plaintiff had declared for a debt due in London, and in his replication he alledges it was at Teneriffe; but adjudged that it is no departure, becauſe it is a perſonal thing, for he who is indebted to me in *one place, is ſo in every place. Debt upon a bond. The condition was, to ſave a pariſh harmleſs from the charge of a baſtard child. The defendant pleaded Non damnificatus; the plaintiff replies, that the pariſh had laid out 3*l.* for keeping the child. The defendant rejoins, that he tendred the money; and the plaintiff paid it De injuria ſua propria; whereupon it was demurred. Twiſden ſaid, the rejoinder is a departure; you ſhould have pleaded thus, viz. that non fuit damnificat' till ſuch a time; and that then you offered to take care of the child, and tendred, &c. Judgment for the plaintiff, *niſi, &c. Debt upon bond for performance of covenants, the defendant in his plea ſet forth the indenture, which was to return all the effects of goods ſent to Barbadoes, and that he had perform'd all the covenants; the plaintiff replied, that ſuch goods were ſent, of which he had not returned the effects; the defendant rejoined, that he had no order to return them; and upon demurrer this was adjudged a departure, becauſe there was nothing of order mentioned in the covenants; but per Hale, If the covenant had been to return them on order, they had been good. The Reporter adds two quæries. 2 Lev. 67. Mich. 24 Car. 2. B. R. Wood v. Kirkham.

In debt on the recognizance of the bail, the defendant pleaded, that there was no capias ad ſatisfaciendum proſecuted and returned againſt the principal before the day of exhibiting the bill againſt the now defendant. The plaintiff replied, that a capias ad ſatisfaciendum was ſued out, and returned before the exhibiting this bill. Defendant rejoined, that the defendant in the firſt action brought a writ of error on the judgment before the ca. ſa. was proſecuted, returned and filed. Upon demurrer it was adjudged for the plaintiff, becauſe the rejoinder is a departure from the bar. 2 Ld. Raym. Rep. 1256. Paſch. 3 Ann. B. R. Parkins v. Wilſon.

In debt on bond conditioned that J. L. ſhould be a true priſoner without making any eſcape. The defendant pleads, that J. Larkin did remain a true priſoner without committing any eſcape, &c. Plaintiff aſſigns breach that 13*th of Jan. J. L. made an eſcape*; defendant rejoins, that J. L. went a little way out of the rules of the priſon, but being ſent for back by the plaintiff, he immediately returned with conſent of the plaintiff, was accepted as his priſoner, and ſo continued ever ſince; to which it was demurred; this is a departure; for if this would excuſe the eſcape, it ſhould have been pleaded at firſt; ſo judgment for the plaintiff. Comyns's Rep. 553, 554. pl. 230. Trin. 9 & 10 Geo. 2. in *C. Parker Ch. J. delivered the reſolution of the court.

This is an indebitatus aſſumſit, laid 16th of January 1706. The defendant has pleaded Actio non accrevit infra ſex annos. The plaintiff has replied a bill filed 23d of January 12 Ann. and that the cauſe of action aroſe within ſix years before. The defendant has demurred generally, generally, and it has been inſiſted on by his counſel, that the replication is a departure, there being ſeven years diſtance between the day in the declaration, and the filing the bill as ſet forth in the replication. But we are all of opinion notwithſtanding, that the plaintiff muſt have judgment; this being only a parol promiſe, the time alledged in the declaration is only matter of form, not of ſubſtance; and not being a departure in a material point, is only a defect in form of pleading, which not being ſhewn for cauſe of demurrer, purſuant to the act for the amendment of the law, the defendant cannot take advantage of it. If a verdict had found the promiſe, or the filing the bill to be another day, that would not have vitiated the proceedings. 1 Lev. 110. 1 Keb. 566, 578. Hob. 164, 199. If the day had been ſubſtance, it would have been a departure; and ſo it was adjudged in this court Paſ. 1 Geo. Stafford v. Forcer. That was upon a promiſſory note dated in 1704; the defendant pleaded actio non accrevit infra ſex annos; the plaintiff replied, a bill filed 12 Ann. and after a verdict the judgment was arreſted, becauſe in this caſe the day was material: if the day in this caſe ſhould be looked upon as ſuch, it would be in the defendant's power in almoſt all caſes to fix the time and place. As where the plaintiff brings an action of aſſault and battery in London, the defendant pleads he made the aſſault in Middleſex, and that afterwards the plaintiff releaſed all batteries except in London. By this he would make the place material, and the doctrine of bringing tranſitory actions where the plaintiff pleaſed, would fall to the ground, if the defendant ſhould be allowed by artificial pleading, to make the time and place matter of ſubſtance. Vide Co. Litt. 282. b. Yelv. 114. Stran. 21, 22.

Action upon the caſe upon ſeveral promiſes; the defendant pleads infancy; the plaintiff replies, it was for neceſſaries, and the defendant rejoins an account ſtated, quodque ſuperinde præd' querens exoneravit the defendant. And on demurrer judgment was given for the plaintiff, becauſe the rejoinder was a departure from the plea; or if not, yet exoneravit generally will not do, for the party muſt ſhew how he was diſcharged. Stran. 422. See 7 Vin. Abr. tit. Departure.

Departure in deſpight of the court, Is, when a tenant or defendant appears to an action, and hath a day over in the ſame term, or is called after, though he had no day given him, ſo that it be in the ſame term; if he do not appear, but make default, it is a departure in deſpight of the court, and therefore he ſhall be condemned. And here obſerve, that departure in deſpight of the court, is always on the part of the tenant or defendant, and the entry thereof is, Quod prædictus A. licet ſolemniter exactus non revenit, ſed in contemptum curiæ receſſit et defaltam fecit: And this is when in judgment of the law he is preſent in court, and being demanded departs in deſpight of the court; this amounts to a bar in reſpect of the deſpight and contempt of the court. See Co. lib. 8. fol. 62. and Default.

Depopulation. Depopulatio, Is the laying waſte, deſtroying and unpeopling of a place. Co. 12. Rep. fol. 30. This is now the apparent effect of incloſing lordſhips and manors, by which means ſeveral good old populous villages have been reduced from a great number of ſufficient farms, to a few cottages. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Depopulatores agrorum, Were great offenders by the Common law, as appears by the ſtatute 4 H. 4. 2. and were called Depopulatores agrorum, becauſe by proſtrating and ruining of houſes, they ſeemed to depopulate towns, that is, leave them without inhabitants. 3 Par. Inſt. f. 204. See alſo 13 Eliz. 10. and 14 El. 11.

Depoſition, (Depoſitio) Is the teſtimony of a witneſs, otherwiſe called a deponent, put down in writing by way of anſwer to interrogatories exhibited to that purpoſe in Chancery, &c. And when ſuch witneſs is examined in open court, he is ſaid to be examined viva voce. Depoſition is alſo uſed for death; as in Provin. Angl. lib. 2. tit. De feriis. Ordinamus quod feſtum depoſitionis Sancti Johannis de Beverlaco 7 die Maii, per provinciam noſtram antedictam perpetuis temporibus celebretur.

A witneſs was examined for the plaintiff, and to be croſs examined for the defendant, but before he could be croſs examined, died; yet this court ordered his depoſitions to ſtand, 2 Chanc. Rep. 18. 20 Car. 2. & 22 Car. 2. Moſely v. Maynard.

Proofs in an original cauſe were not allowed to be read on a bill of review. 2 Chanc. Rep. 18. 20 Car. 2. & 22 Car. 2. Moſely v. Maynard.

Depoſitions taken in either cauſe, ordered to be uſed in both, wich order was after publication in the firſt cauſe, wherein the proof was made, but before publication in the ſecond cauſe. Chanc. Caſes 236. Mich. 26 Car. 2. Norcliff v. Worſely.

Depoſitions taken in a former cauſe cannot be read in another cauſe againſt one that does not claim under the party againſt whom thoſe depoſitions were taken; but ſerjeant Phillips ſaid, that it is a common caſe, that if a legatee bring a bill againſt the executor, and proves aſſets, another legatee, though no party, may have the benefit of thoſe depoſitions. Vern. R. 413. Mich. 1686. Coke v. Fountain.

Creditors of L. obtain a decree for payment of their debts, and to ſet aſide conveyances got by fraud, and Sir H. J. and the legatees are defendants; the legatees having a bill againſt Sir H. J. the queſtion was if the depoſitions in the former cauſe could be read in this; per cur. The queſtion being the ſame in both cauſes, and Sir H. J's defence the ſame, they ought to be read. 2 Vern. R. 447 Mich. 1703. Nevil v. Johnſon.

Maſter examined one witneſs three times to the account; ordered that the depoſitions be ſuppreſſed. 2 Chan. Caſ. 79. Mich. 33 Car. 2. Anon'.

Depoſitions ſuppreſſed, becauſe the ſolicitor's clerk in the cauſe, did write as a clerk in the execution of the commiſſion. 2 Chanc. Rep. 393. 2 Jac. 2. Newte v. Foot.

A witneſs having committed a miſtake in his examination before commiſſioners, applied to them to rectify it, but the commiſſion being returned to London, he went there, made oath of it, and that he was ſurprized by an haſty examination; but the commiſſion not being opened, it was returned back to the commiſſioners with a ſpecial commiſſion to open it, and permit the witneſs to rectify his miſtake; the ſpecial commiſſion being executed and returned, it was moved to ſuppreſs the depoſitions as unduly taken, and that no ſuch ſpecial commiſſion ought to have been, and they were ſuppreſſed. N. C. R. 92. 15 Car. 2. Randall v. Richards.

The Lord Chancellor took notice of what dangerous conſequence it would be, that if after publication paſſed, and people ſeeing where a cauſe pinched, they ſhould then be at liberty to look out witneſſes to boulſter up the faulty part of the cauſe; the neceſſary conſequence would be perjury. Vern 47. Paſch. 1682. in caſe of Jones v. Purefoy.

After a witneſs is fully examined, the examinations are read over to him, and the witneſs is at liberty to alter, or amend any thing; after which he ſigns them, and then, and not before, the examinations are complete, and good evidence. Wm's Rep. 415. Paſch. 1718. by the reporter.

Therefore where a witneſs was examined, and before ſigning his examination died, the Maſter of the Rolls upon adviſing with a Maſter in Chancery then in court denied the making uſe of the depoſitions, as being not perfect. Wm's Rep. 414. Paſch. 1718. Copland v. Stanton.

But where after an order for publication, defendant examined a witneſs, and then perceiving the irregularity (it being after publication) the defendant on the uſual affidavit by himſelf, his clerk in court, and ſolicitor, that they had not, nor would ſee any of the depoſitions, got an order to re-examine this witneſs; but before re-examination the witneſs died; upon affidavit of this, Ld. C. Parker ordered, that the defendant might make uſe of the depoſitions, the re-examination of him being prevented by the act of God. Wm's Rep. 415. cites Mich. 1720. Debrox v. ——.

On a petition to amend the depoſition of a witneſs, who, being examined, ſwore only, that he was induced to believe, that he did expreſs himſelf in the manner the depoſition was taken, and was poſitive he did not intend or mean to ſwear as the examiner had taken it, but really as in the amendment deſired. Lord C. King ſaid that where it appears to the court, that either the examiner is miſtaken in the taking, or the witneſs in making, the depoſition, he thought it was for the advancement of truth and juſtice to amend it, and the ſooner the better, in regard of death or abſence, and it would be unjuſt to pin a witneſs down to a miſtake by denying to rectify it, and as to the amending it after publication, it could not be known before, and ordered it to be amended and the witneſs to ſwear it over again. 2 Wm's Rep. (646.) Mich. 1731. Griells v. Ganſell.

Deprivation, Deprivatio, Is a bereaving or taking away, as when a biſhop, parſon, vicar or prebend, is deprived, or depoſed from his preferment for any matter in fact or in law; as if a ſchiſmatick, or mere layman, be preſented, admitted, inſtituted and inducted; this is good cauſe of deprivation. See other cauſes of deprivation, in ſtat. 13 Eliz. c. 12. 21 H. 8. c. 13. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 20. Deprivation of biſhops and deans, ſtat. 39. Eliz. c. 8. See Eccleſiaſtical perſons, and Service and Sacraments.

Deprivatio a beneficio is when, for ſome great crime, a miniſter is wholly and for ever deprived of his living.

Deprivatio ab officio is when a miniſter is for ever deprived of his orders, which is alſo called depoſitio or degradatio, and is commonly for ſome henious crime meriting death, and performed by the biſhop in a ſolemn manner. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Deprivation, Is an eccleſiaſtical cenſure, whereby a clergyman is deprived of his parſonage, vicarage, or other ſpiritual promotion or dignity. Deg. p. 1. c. 9.

And the cauſes of ſuch deprivation are properly and naturally determinable by the eccleſiaſtical laws of this realm: But becauſe generally there are eſtates of freehold dependant upon theſe promotions and dignities, and annexed to them inſeparably, which reſt at the ſole determination of the Common law; the courts of Common law do ſometimes inſpect and regulate the proceedings of the eccleſiaſtical courts; and where they proceed againſt the rules of law, they frequently prohibit them: Eſpecially where ſuch ſentence for any offence is inflicted by act of parliament. Deg. pag. 1. c. 9.

In all cauſes of deprivation of a perſon actually poſſeſſed of a benefice, theſe things muſt concur: 1. A monition or citation of the party to appear. 2 A charge given him, to which he is to anſwer, called the libel. 3. A competent time aſſigned for the proofs and anſwers. 4. A liberty for counſel to defend his cauſe, and to except againſt the proofs and witneſſes. 5. A ſolemn ſentence after hearing all the proofs and anſwers. Theſe are the fundamentals of all judicial proceedings in the eccleſiaſtical courts, in order to a deprivation. And if theſe things be not obſerved, the party hath juſt cauſe of appeal, and may have a remedy by a ſuperior court. And theſe proceedings are agreeable to the common juſtice and reaſon of mankind; becauſe the party accuſed hath the liberty of defence, and the right of appeal. 1 Still. 323. Ayl. parerg. 209.

By Canon 122. ſentence againſt a miniſter, of deprivation from his living, ſhall be pronounced by the biſhop only, with the aſſiſtance of his chancellor and dean (if they may conveniently be had), and ſome of the prebendaries, if the court be kept near the cathedral church; or of the archdeacon, if he may be had conveniently, and two other at leaſt grave miniſters and preachers to be called by the biſhop when the court is kept in other places.

Deputy, Is he that exerciſes, in another man's right, either office or other things; and his forfeiture or miſdemeanor ſhall cauſe the officer, or him whoſe deputy he is, to loſe his office: But a man cannot make his deputy in all caſes, except the grant be ſo; as if it be with theſe, or ſuch like words, To exerciſe and uſe by himſelf, or his ſufficient deputy; or if the words go farther, to himſelf, or his deputy, or the deputy of his deputy; then he may make his deputy, and his deputy alſo may make a deputy, or elſe not. As if the office of a parkerſhip be granted to one, he cannot grant this over to another, becauſe it is an office of truſt and confidence, and ſhall not be forfeited, and there is great difference between a deputy and aſſignee of an office; for an aſſignee hath an intereſt in the office itſelf, and doth all things in his own name; for whom his grantor ſhall not anſwer, unleſs in ſpecial caſes. But a deputy hath not any intereſt in the office, but is only the ſhadow of the officer, in whoſe name he doth all things. And where an officer hath power to make aſſigns, he may implicitly make deputies for cui licit quod majus eſt, non debet quod minus eſt non licere. And a ſheriff may make a deputy, or under-ſheriff, although he have not ſuch expreſs words in his patent. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Deraign or Dereyn. (Deſrationare vel dirationare,) ſeems to come from the French deraigner or deranger, id eſt, confundere, to confound or to put in diſorder; or of the Norman word deſrene, which ſignifies nothing but a proof of the denial of a man's own fact. In our Common law it is uſed diverſly. Firſt generally, to prove, as Dirationabit jus ſuum hæres propinquior. Glanvile, lib. 2. cap. 6. And Habeo probos homines, qui hoc viderunt & audierunt & parati ſunt hoc dirationare. Id. lib. 4. cap. 6. And Dirationavit terram illam in curia mea. Id. lib. 2. cap. 20. he proved that land to be his own, &c. And Bracton uſeth it after the ſame ſort, in theſe words, Habeo ſufficientem diſratiocinationem & probationem. Lib. 4. tract, 6. cap. 16. And ſo he uſeth dirationare. Lib. 4. cap. 22. And ſo is Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. t. 32. And deraign the warranty. Old. Nat. Brev. fol. 146. And to deraign the warranty paramount. 31 Hen 8. c. 1. And dereigner le warranty in Plowden, Baſſet's caſe, in fine 2. partis, fol. 6, 7, 8. hath the ſame ſignification. So it is uſed, Weſt. 2. c. 5. 13 Ed. 1. in theſe words: And when the parſon of any church is diſturbed, to demand tithes in the next pariſh by a writ of indicavit; the patron of the parſon ſo diſturbed, ſhall have a writ to demand the advowſon of the tithes, being in demand; when it is deraigned, then ſhall the plea paſs in the court chriſtian as far as the ſame is deraigned in the King's court. Bract. alſo, lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 3. num. 1. ſpeaking of him that appealeth another for treaſon or felony, hath theſe words, Proponat accuſans appellum ſuum in hunc modum, ſc. debet dicere ſe interfuiſſe & vidiſſe certo loco, certo die, certa hora, & ſciviſſe ipſum accuſatum prælocutum fuiſſe mortem Regis vel ſeditionem ſuam, vel exercitus ſui, vel conſenſiſſe, vel auxilium & conſilium impendiſſe, vel ad hoc authoritatem præſtitiſſe, & hoc ego juxta conſiderationem curiæ diſrationare paratus ſum. He uſeth it likewiſe as the Normans uſe diſraiſniam, for him that offereth to juſtify his denial, as lib. 3. tract. 2. c. 28. num. 1. in theſe words, Rex conſilio epiſcoporum & bonorum miſit propter comitem, ut ſtatuto die veniret ad curiam, ad diſrationandum vel defendendum ſe ſi poſſit. Laſtly, in ſome places the ſubſtantive deraignment is found uſed in the very literal ſignification of the French deraigner or deranger, that is, turning out of courſe, as deraignment or departure out of religion, 31 H. 8. c. 6. And deraignment or diſcharge of theira profeſſion, 33 H. 8, c. 29. which is ſpoken of thoſe religious men which forſook their orders, or profeſſion; as alſo 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 13. So doth Kitchin uſe the word, fol. 152. ſaying, The leſſee entreth into religion, and afterwards is deraigned. And Britton hath theſe words, Semounſe diſrenable, for a ſummons that may be challenged as defective, or not lawfully made, c. 21. Of this you may read more in *Skene de Verb. Deſcent, Comes from the Latin word deſcendere, id eſt, ex loco ſuperiore in inferiorem movere; and in a legal underſtanding it is when land, &c. after the death of the anceſtor, is caſt by courſe of law upon the heir. Co. Litt. 237. a.

This is the nobleſt and worthieſt means whereby lands are derived from one to another, becauſe it is wrought and veſted by the act of law and right of blood, unto the worthieſt and next of blood and kindred of the anceſtor; and therefore it has not in the Common law altogether the ſame ſignification that it has in the Civil law; for the Civilians call him Hæredem, qui ex teſtamento ſuccedit in univerſum jus teſtatoris; but by the Common law he is only heir which ſucceeds by right of blood. And this agrees well with the etymology of the word heir to whom the laſt deſcend, for Hæres dicitur ab hærendo, quia qui hæres eſt hæret, hoc eſt, proximus eſt ſanguine illi cujus eſt hæres. So as he who is Hæres, ſanguinis eſt hæres, & hæres hæreditatis. Co. Litt. 237. b.

All poſſible hereditary ſucceſſions may be diſtinguiſhed into theſe there kinds, viz. either firſt, in the deſcending line, as from father to ſon or daughter, nephew or niece, i. e. grandſon or grandaughter. Or,

Secondly, in the collateral line, as from brother to brother or ſiſter, and ſo to brothers and ſiſters children. Or,

Thirdly, in an aſcending line, either direct, as from ſon to father or grandfather (which is not admitted by the law of England,) or in the tranſverſal line, as to the uncle or aunt, great uncle or great aunt, &c. And becauſe this line is again divided into the line of the father, or the line of the mother, this tranſverſe aſcending ſucceſſion is either in the line of the father, grandfather, &c. on the blood of the father; or in the line of the mother, grandmother, &c. on the blood of the mother; the former are called agnati, the latter cognati. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 223.

By the law uſed in England before, and at the time of the conqueſt, all the deſcendants of a perſon dying inteſtate had preference not only in perſonal, but alſo in real eſtates; for if a man had died having three ſons and a daughter, they all equally inherited his real eſtate; and this appears in Seld. Eadm. 184. Lamb. Saxon Law 68. Si quis inteſtat' deceſſerit liberi ejus hæreditatem æqualiter dividunto. But after the conqueſt, the kingdom and conſtitution were to be new modelled; and this alteration was made in the time of Henry 1. and daughters were excluded if there were males, and it was by the 36th. law of H. 1. See Lamb. 202, 203. and then the males did inherit all alike, eſpecially all the common ſocage men. But even then if one had died without iſſue, and had a father or mother, the land ſhould not go to any collateral, but to the father or mother; and this appears by the law of H. 1. Lamb. ubi ſupra. Si quis ſine liberis deceſſerit, pater & mater in hæreditatem ſuccedat, vel frater aut ſoror, ſi pater & mater deſit; ſo the collateral was not to come in but upon failure of father and mother. And though 1 Inſt. 11. a. this is taken notice of as an exploded opinion; yet Coke had not ſeen the laws of Hen. 1. then, and the Red Book in the Exchequer, that he contradicts, is very ancient, and of great authority in law. 12 Mod. 623. Hill. 13 Will. 3. B. R. in the caſe of Blackborough v. Davis.

But this law did not continue long, but was altered between the reigns of H. 1. and H. 2. and the father and mother altogether excluded, and then the law came to be adjudged as it is to this day, that the land ſhould not aſcend to father or mother but rather go to collaterals; and this appears by Glanvile, lib. 7. 1, 2, 3, 4. C.—— But this alteration was only as to real eſtates; and perſonal eſtates were left as they were. 12 Mod. 624. in the caſe of Blackborough v. Davis.

The feudal ſucceſſion came in this manner: The lords gave lands unto ſuch perſons as beheved themſelves well in the war, for their lives only; ſometimes they alſo married their daughters to them. Then by their feudal donations, they limited the lands to go not only to the feudary himſelf, but alſo to the iſſue of that marriage; and this brought in the notion of ſucceſſion among the northern nations that invaded the Roman empire. The lands therefore in the elder times went to the immediate deſcendants of ſuch marriage, and originally to none elſe; and firſt they went to males, as the moſt worthy of blood, and moſt capable of doing the ſervices annexed to ſuch donations; for want of males it went to females, and deſcendants of the ſame marriage. The feud was united in the eldeſt male, becauſe he was obliged to do the duty in the wars; and for every knight's fee, was to go out 40 days with his lord; ſo that the fued did not divide among the males, becauſe the duty could not be divided commodiouſly. Becauſe 2dly, the males were to keep up the grandeur of the family, therefore the inheritance was not ſhared nor broken. Hence it came to paſs, that among the males the eldeſt was preferred as the moſt worthy, ſince he was ſooneſt able to go to the wars, and do the duties of the tenure. Gilb. Treat. of Ten. 9.

Baſtards, or children born out of wedlock, were totally excluded from all feudal ſucceſſion, though their parents had afterwards intermarried, becauſe the lords would not be ſerved by any perſons that had that ſtain on their legitimation, nor ſuffer ſuch immoralities in their ſeveral clans, though the Civil law admitted them as adopted by the ſubſequent marriage; and ſo the Canon law, becauſe the matrimony wiped off the precedent guilt. Gilb. Treat. of Ten. 17.

The iſſue of the baſtard eigne not only gains a right of poſſeſſion, but a right of propriety by the enjoyment of his anceſtor. Such iſſues are held legitimated by the Civil law, becauſe they are adopted by the marriage of the mother; ſo by the Canon law, becauſe the matrimonium ſubſequens tollit reatum precedens; but by the feudal law there were excluded, becauſe ſuch a ſtain was thought to continue from the crime of the parents, that they could not do the feudal ſervice with honour to the feudal lords; therefore they were anciently excluded, niſi nominatim ad feuda legitimatum. But by our law, if they had any uninterrupted enjoyment during life, the iſſue for ever inherited; for ſince there was no objection to the legitimation during their lives, the perſonal defect muſt die with their perſon, inaſmuch as it were inhumanity to throw reproach on them after their deceaſe; and having done the feudal duties without objection, the objection comes too late when the perſonal diſhonour ceaſes and to the next perſon in poſſeſſion no reproach can ariſe. Gilb. Treat. of Ten. 26, 27.

When a feud eſcheated to the lord for felony, or for want of heirs, the lords uſed to reſtore it to the old family, or grant it out again to another family ut feudum antiquum, and then the deſcent was formed in ſuch new feud, as if it had been feudum antiquum. Hence the lineal ſucceſſion, or ſucceſſion of the father, was totally excluded, becauſe no caſe could happen where the aſcending line could be admitted in feudis antiquis; for the father took before the ſon under the firſt feudary in every ancient feudal donation; and all above ſuch donation were excluded, ſo that in ſuch donations the father could not claim as heir to the ſon; and this order of deſcent which excluded the father was the rather continued, becauſe the father was guardian to his ſon; and in thoſe barbarous times they would not truſt the father with any profit from the death of his own iſſue, and ſo the father was totally excluded. Gilb. Treat. Ten. 14.

But though the father cannot inherit his ſon, yet if a leaſe for life be made to the ſon, the remainder to his next of blood, the father ſhall take the remainder by purchaſe under the words of deſignation. Co. Lit. 10. b.

Alſo if the ſon purchaſe lands, and dies without iſſue, and without brothers and ſiſters of the whole blood, and the land deſcends to his uncle, the father may be heir to the uncle, if the uncle was in actual poſſeſſion, but he claims it as heir to his brother who was laſt ſeiſed, according to the rule Quod ſeiſina facit ſtirpem. Co. Lit. 11. b.

But here we muſt take notice, that if after ſuch deſcent to the uncle, the father has iſſue a ſon or a daughter, that iſſue ſhall enter upon the uncle, for the land deſcended originally upon the uncle, becauſe he was then the next heir; therefore if an heir nearer than him ſprings up, by the ſame rule that he ſucceeded to the land at firſt, that heir muſt now take place, and exclude him; and by the ſame rule, if a man hath iſſue a ſon and a daughter, and the ſon purchaſes lands in fee, and dies without iſſue, the daughter ſhall inherit; but if the father hath afterwards iſſue a ſon, this ſon ſhall enter into the land as heir to the brother, and if he hath iſſue a daughter, and no ſon, ſhe ſhall be coparcener with her ſiſter. Co. Lit. 11. b.

If a man purchaſed the feudum novum ut feudum antiquum, and died without iſſue, it went firſt to the father's ſide, becauſe the lords in ſuch feudal donations were preſumed to reſpect the father's ſide, who had been the ancient tenants of the manor; for where it was given ut feudum antiquum, it muſt be preſumed to be meant, as if it had been an ancient feud of that manor, and therefore it went to the father's ſide in infinitum, before it could go to any of the female blood; if the father's male line failed, it went to the female blood of the father; for the lords were preſumed rather to reſpect the female blood of their former tenants, than the blood of the mother who was newly introduced into the family of their feudary, becauſe the feud was given as an ancient one, and by conſequence the blood of the precedent tenant was preferred to any other; but the blood of his mother's ſide was preferred to the blood of his grandmother; becauſe being both female bloods, and both coming under the conſideration of ancient tenants, the nearer tenant's blood was preferred to the more remote; but if the father's ſide wholly failed, then the blood of the mother was admitted, to wit, firſt the male line, and then the female of ſuch blood, ſince the lord muſt be preſumed to introduce the blood of the mother, when he had given an indefinite right of repreſentation. Gilb. Treat. Ten. 16. Plowd. 444—449.

Agreeable to this ſcheme of deſcent upon the purchaſe of the feudum novum ut feudum antiquum, if a ſon purchaſe lands in fee ſimple, and die without iſſue, they of the blood of his father's ſide ſhall inherit as heirs to him before any of the blood of his mother's ſide, for the old rules, formerly ſettled for the directing of the deſcents of ſuch feuds as were purchaſed, ſtill prevail; and all new purchaſes made now of lands in fee ſhall be conſidered as the purchaſes formerly made of the feudum novum ut antiquum. Lit. ſect. 4.

If the ſon purchaſes land, and dies without iſſue, and it deſcends to any heir of the part of the father, and then the line of the father (after entry and poſſeſſion) fail, it ſhall never reſort to the line of the mother, though in the firſt inſtance, or firſt deſcent, from the ſon, it might have deſcended to the heir of the part of the mother; for now by this deſcent and ſeiſin, it is lodged in the father's line, to whom the heir of the part of the mother can never derive a title as heir, becauſe ſhe can never ſhew that he was heir to him that was laſt actually ſeiſed; which being a rule to be ſtrictly obſerved, he muſt intitle himſelf by it, otherwiſe be excluded. Lit. ſect. 4.

General rules concerning deſcents, or hereditary ſucceſſions of lands in fee-ſimple, with examples, reaſons, exceptions, obſervations, &c.

RULE 1. In deſcents, the law prefers the worthieſt in blood.

Example 1. In deſcents immediate, the male is preferred before the female, viz. the ſon before the daughter, the brother before the ſiſter, and the uncle before the aunt.

Example 2. In deſcents immediate, the deſcendants from males are preferred before thoſe from females; and hence it is, that the daughter of the eldeſt ſon (in deſcent from the father) is preferred before the ſon of the younger ſon; the daughter of the eldeſt brother, or uncle, before the ſon of the younger; and the uncle, nay, nay, the great uncle, or grandfather's brother, before the uncle of the mother's ſide. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 235.

RULE 2. The next of blood is preferred before the more remote, though equally or more worthy. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 235.

Example 1. The ſiſter of the whole blood, before the brother of the half blood. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 236.

Reaſon, She is more ſtrictly joined to the brother of the whole blood (viz. by father and mother) than the half brother, though otherwiſe he is the more worthy.

Example 2. The ſon or daughter, before the brother or ſiſter, and they before the uncle.

Reaſon, The ſon or daughter is nearer than the brother, and the brother or ſiſter than the uncle.

Exception, Yet the father, or grandfather, or mother, or grandmother, in a direct aſcending line ſhall not immediately ſucceed the ſon or grandchild: But the father's brothers (or ſiſters) ſhall be preferred before the father; and the grandfather's brothers (or ſiſters) before the grandfather: Although the father is nearer of blood to the ſon than the uncle, or the brother; for the brother is of the blood of the brother, becauſe both derived from the ſame parent, the common fountain of both their blood: And therefore the father is preferred in the adminiſtration of goods before the ſon's brother of the whole blood, and a remainder limited proximo de ſanguine of the ſon ſhall veſt in the father before the uncle.

RULE 3. No brother nor ſiſter of the half blood ſhall inherit to his brother or ſiſter, but as a child to his parents. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

Example 1. If a man have two wives, and by either wife a ſon, the eldeſt ſon over-living his father, is to be preferred. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

Example 2. But if the eldeſt ſon enters, and dies without a child, the brother ſhall not be his heir, but the uncle of the eldeſt brother or ſiſter of the whole blood. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

Reaſon, Becauſe the younger is only of the half blood to their elder brother. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

Example 3. Yet if the eldeſt brother dies, or has not entred in the life of the father, either by ſuch entry or conveyance, then the younger brother ſhall inherit the father's land, although he be a child by the ſecond wife, before any daughter by the firſt. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

RULE 4. The eldeſt ſon, or brother or uncle, excludes the younger, and ſhall ſolely inherit. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

Example 1. If there be three brethren, and the middle brother purchaſes lands in fee-ſimple, and dies without iſſue, the elder brother ſhall have the land by deſcent, and not the younger, &c. Lit. ſ. 5.

Example 2. Alſo if there be three brethren, and the youngeſt brother purchaſes land in fee-ſimple, and dies without iſſue, the eldeſt brother ſhall have the land by deſcent, and not the middle. Lit. ſ. 5.

Reaſon, For the eldeſt ſon is more worthy of blood. Lit. ſ. 5.

RULE 5. When females inherit, thoſe of an equal degree of nearneſs ſhall inherit altogether, as parceners. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

Reaſon, The law makes them but one heir to the anceſtor. Bac. L. Tracts 128.

Example 1. All the daughters, whether by the ſame or divers venters, do inherit together to the ſame father. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

Reaſon, Whether they be of the ſame or divers venters, they are of the whole blood to their father.

Example 2. All the ſiſters of the ſame venter do inherit to the brother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

Reaſon, Thoſe of the ſame venter are of the whole blood to the brother, but thoſe of another venter are only of the half blood.

Exception to this rule, But by a ſpecial cuſtom, deſcents to the females may be otherwiſe. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

RULE 6. All deſcendants from ſuch a perſon as might have been heir to another, hold the ſame right by repreſentation as that common root from whence they are derived. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 236, 237.

Reaſon, For they are in the ſame degree of worthineſs and proximity of blood, as their root that might have been heir was if he had been living. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 237.

Example 1. The ſon or grandchild (whether ſon or daughter) of the eldeſt ſon, ſucceeds before the younger ſon. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 237.

Example 2. The ſon or the grandchild of the eldeſt brother, before the younger brother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 237.

1. Obſervation, And ſo through all the degrees of ſucceſſion by the right of repreſentation, the right of proximity is transferred from the root to the branches, and gives them the ſame preference as the next and worthieſt of blood. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 237.

2. Obſervation, This right transferred by repreſentation is infinite and unlimited in the degrees of thoſe that deſcend from the repreſented; for the ſon, grandſon, great grandſon, and ſo in infinitum enjoy the ſame privilege of repreſentation, as thoſe from whom they derive their pedigree have, whether in deſcents lineal or tranſverſal. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 237.

Example 3. The great grandchild of the eldeſt brother (ſon or daughter) ſhall be preferred before the younger brother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 237.

Reaſon, Though the female be leſs worthy than the male, yet ſhe ſtands in right of repreſentation of the eldeſt brother, who was more worthy than the younger.

Example 4. If a man have two daughters, and the elder dies in the father's life, leaving ſix daughters, and then the father dies; the younger daughter ſhall have an equal ſhare with the ſix daughters. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 248.

Reaſon, Becauſe they ſtand in repreſentation, and ſtead of their mother, who could have had but a moiety. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

RULE 7. The laſt actual ſeiſin in any anceſtor, makes him as it were, the root of the deſcent equally to many intents as if he had been a purchaſer. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

Obſervation, Therefore he that cannot derive his ſucceſſion from him that was laſt actually ſeiſed, though he might have derived it from ſome precedent anceſtor, ſhall not inherit. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

Example 1. And hence it is, that where lands deſcend to the eldeſt ſon from the father, and the ſon enters, and dies without iſſue, his ſiſter of the whole blood ſhall inherit as heir to the brother, and not the younger ſon of the half blood. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

Reaſon, Becauſe he cannot be heir to the brother of the half blood. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238.

Example 2. If the eldeſt ſon had ſurvived the father, and died before entry, the youngeſt ſon ſhould inherit as heir to the father, and not the ſiſter. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 238, 239.

Reaſon, Becauſe heir to the father that was laſt actually ſeiſed. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 239.

Example 3. And hence it is, that though the uncle is preferred before the father in deſcents from the ſon; yet if the uncle enter after the death of the ſon, and die without iſſue, the father ſhall inherit to the uncle. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 239.

Reaſon, Quia ſeiſina facit ſtipitem.

RULE 8. And whoſoever derives a title to any land, muſt be of the blood to him that firſt purchaſed it. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 239.

Example 1. Therefore if a ſon purchaſes lands and dies without iſſue, it ſhall deſcend to the heirs of the part of the father; and if he has none, then to the heirs of the part of the mother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 239.

Reaſon, For though the ſon has both the blood of the father and of the mother in him, yet he is of the whole blood of the mother, and the conſanguinity of the mother are conſanguinei cognati of the ſon. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 239.

Example 2. If lands deſcend to the ſon from his father or mother, they ſhall go to that ſide only from whence they came. Bac. L. Tracts 129.

Exampel

Example 3. But if the father purchaſes lands, and they deſcend to the ſon, who dies without iſſue, and without any heir of the part of the father, it ſhall not deſcend to the line of the mother, but eſcheat. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 239.

Reaſon, For though the conſanguinei of the mother are the conſanguinei of the ſon, yet they are not of the conſanguinity to the father, who was the purchaſer. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 239.

Example 4. Yet if there be none of the blood of the grandfather, it may reſort to the line of the grandmother. Hiſt. Com. Law 239, 240.

Reaſon, Becauſe her conſanguinei are as well of the blood of the father, as the mother's conſanguinity is of the blood of the ſon. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 240.

Example 5. If the grandfather purchaſed lands, which deſcended to the father, and from him to the ſon; if the ſon entred and died without iſſue, his father's brothers or ſiſters, or their deſcendants; or, for want of them, his great grandfather's brothers or ſiſters, or their deſcendants; or, for want of them, any of the conſanguinity of the great grandfather, or brothers or ſiſters of the great grandmother, or their deſcendants, may inherit. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 204.

Reaſon, For the conſanguinity of the great grandmother is the conſanguinity of the grandfather. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 240.

Obſervation, But none of the line of the mother or grandmother, viz. the grandfather's wife, ſhall inherit; for they are not of the blood of the firſt purchaſer. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 240.

Note 1. The ſame rule è converſo holds in purchaſes in the line of the mother or grandmother, they ſhall always keep in the ſame line that the firſt purchaſer ſettled them in. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 240. See Example the ſecond of this rule.

Note 2. But it is not neceſſary, that he who inherits be always heir to the purchaſer; it is ſufficient if he be of his blood, and heir to him that was laſt ſeiſed; for if the father purchaſes lands which deſcend to the ſon, who dies without iſſue, they ſhall never deſcend to the heir of the part of the ſon's mother; but if the ſon's grandmother has a brother, and the ſon's great grandmother has a brother, and there is no other kindred, they ſhall deſcend to the grandmother's brother; and yet if the father had died without iſſue, his grandmother's brother ſhould have been preferred before his mother's brother, becauſe the former was heir of the part of his father, though a female, and the latter was only heir of the part of his mother. But where the ſon is once ſeiſed, and dies without iſſue, his grandmother's brother is to him heir of the part of his father, and being nearer than his grandmother's brother, is preferred in the deſcent. But this is always intended ſo long as the line of deſcent is not broken; for if the ſon alien the lands, and then repurchaſe them again in fee, now the rules of deſcent are to be obſerved, as if he were the original purchaſer, and as if it had been in the line of the father or mother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 240, 241.

RULE 9. In all ſucceſſions in the line deſcending, tranſverſal, or aſcending, the line that is firſt derived from the male root has always the preference. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 241.

Example in the deſcending line. A. has iſſue two ſons B. and C. B. has iſſue a ſon and a daughter D. and E. D. the ſon has iſſue a daughter F. and E. the daughter has iſſue a ſon G. neither C. nor any of his deſcendants ſhall inherit ſo long as there are any deſcendants from D. and E. and neither E. the daughter, nor any of her deſcendants, ſhall inherit ſo long as there are any deſcendants from D. the ſon, whether they be male or female. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 241.

2*dly*, In the collateral line, So in deſcents collateral, as brothers and ſiſters, the ſame inſtances as before applied thereto, evidence the ſame concluſions. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 242.

Particular Rules of tranſverſal aſcending ſucceſſion.

RULE 1. If a ſon purchaſes lands in fee-ſimple, and dies without iſſue, thoſe of the male line aſcending uſque infinitum ſhall be preferred in the deſcent, according to their proximity of degree to the ſon. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 242.

Example 1. The father's brothers and ſiſters, and their deſcendants, ſhall be preferred before the brothers of the grandfather and their deſcendants. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 242.

Example 2. If the father has no brothers nor ſiſters, the grandfather's brothers and their deſcendants ſhall be preferred. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 242.

Example 3. For want of grandfather's brothers, his ſiſters and their deſcendants ſhall be preferred before the brothers of the great grandfather. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 242.

Obſervation. For although the father or grandfather cannot immediately inherit to the ſon, yet the direction of the deſcent to the collateral aſcending line, is as much as if the father or grandfather had been by law inheritable, and therefore, as in caſe the father had been inheritable, and ſhould have inherited to the ſon before the grandfather, and the grandfather before the great grandfather; and conſequently, if the father had inherited, and died without iſſue, his eldeſt brother and his deſcendants ſhould have inherited before the younger brother and his deſcendants; and if he had no brothers, but ſiſters, the ſiſters and their deſcendants ſhould have inherited before his uncles, or the grandfather's brother and their deſcendants. So though the father is excluded from inheriting, yet the deſcent is directed as it ſhould have been, had the father inherited, viz. it lets in thoſe firſt that are in the next degree to him. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 242, 243.

RULE 2. The line of the part of the mother ſhall never inherit as long as there are any, though never ſo remote, of the line of the part of the father. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 243.

Example, If the mother has a brother, yet if the atavus, or atavia patris, (i. e. great great great grandfather, or great great great grandmother of the father) has a brother or ſiſter, he or ſhe ſhall be preferred, and exclude the mother's brother, though he is much nearer. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 243.

RULE 3. The male line of the part of the father aſcending ſhall in æternum exclude the female line of the part of the father aſcending. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 243.

Example, If a ſon purchaſes lands, and dies without iſſue, the ſiſter of the father's grandfather, or of his great grandfather, and ſo in infinitum, ſhall be preferred before the father's mother's brother, though the father's mother's brother be a male, and the father's grandfather, or great grandfather's ſiſter be a female, and more remote. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 244.

Reaſon, Becauſe ſhe is of the male line, which is more worthy than the female line, though the female line be alſo of the blood of the father. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law, 244.

RULE 4. As in the male line aſcending, the more near is preferred before the more remote; ſo in the female line deſcending, if it be of the blood of the father, the more near is alſo preferred before the more remote. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 244.

Example 1. If a ſon purchaſes lands, and dies without iſſue, and the father, grandfather, and great grandfather, and ſo upwards, all the male lines being dead, without any brother or ſiſter, or any deſcending from them; but the father's mother has a ſiſter or brother, and the father's grandmother has a brother, and the father's great grandmother has a brother, though all theſe are of the blood of the father; and though the remoteſt of them ſhall exclude the ſon's mother's brother; and though the great grandmother's blood has paſſed through more males of the father's blood, than the blood of the grandmother or mother of the father; yet the father's mother's ſiſter ſhall be preferred before the father's grandmother's brother, or the great grandmother's brother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 244, 245.

Reaſon, For they are all in the female line, viz. cognati, (and not agnati), and the father's mother's ſiſter is the neareſt; ſo ſhe ſhall have the preference as well as in the male line aſcending; the father's brother, or his ſiſter, ſhall be preferred before the grandfather's brother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 245.

Example 2. But yet in the laſt caſe, where the ſon purchaſes lands, and dies without iſſue, and without any heir on the part of the grandfather, the lands deſcended to the grandmother's brother or ſiſter, as heir on the part of his father. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 245.

Example 3. Yet if the father had purchaſed this land, and died, and it deſcended to his ſon, who died without iſſue, the lands ſhould have deſcended to the father's mother's brother or ſiſter.

Reaſon, For the reaſons before given upon the third rule.

Example 4. But for want of brothers or ſiſters of the grandfather's great grandfather, and ſo upwards in the male aſcending line, it ſhould deſcend to the father's grandmother's brother or ſiſter, which is his heir of the part of his father, who ſhould be preferred before the father's mother's brother, who is the heir of the part of the mother of the purchaſer, though the next heir of the part of the father of him that laſt died ſeiſed. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 245.

Example 5. And therefore, as if the father that was the purchaſer had died without iſſue, the heirs of the part of the father, whether of the male or female line, ſhould have been preferred before the heirs of the part of the mother; ſo the ſon, who ſtands now in the place of the father, and inherits to him primarily in his father's line, dying without iſſue, the ſame devolution and hereditary ſucceſſion, ſhould have been as if his father had immediately died without iſſue, which ſhould have been to his grandmother's brother, as heir of the part of the father, though by the female line, and not to his mother's brother, who was only heir of the part of his mother, and who is not to take till the father's line, both male and female, be ſpent. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 245, 246.

Rule. 5. If the ſon purchaſes lands, and dies without iſſue, and it deſcends to any heir of the part of the father, and then if the line of the father (after entry and poſſeſſion) fail; it ſhall never return to the line of the mother; though in the firſt inſtance, or firſt deſcent from the ſon, it might have deſcended to the heir of the part of the mother. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 246.

Reaſon, For now by this deſcent and ſeiſin, it is lodged in the father's line, to whom the heir of the part of the mother can never derive a title as heir, but it ſhall rather eſcheat.

Obſervation, But if the heir of the part of the father had not entred, then that line had failed, and it might have deſcended to the heir of the part of the mother, as heir to the ſon, to whom immediately, for want of heirs of the part of the father, it might have deſcended. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 246, 247.

Rule 6. And if it had once deſcended to the heir of the part of the father of the grandfather's line, and the heir had entred; it ſhould never deſcend to the heir of the part of the father of the grandmother's line. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 246.

Reaſon, Becauſe the line of the grandmother was not of the blood or conſanguinity of the line of the grandfather's ſide. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law. 247.

Rule 7. If for default of heirs of the purchaſer of the part of the father, the lands deſcend to the line of the mother, the heirs of the mother of the part of her father's ſide, ſhall be preferred in the ſucceſſion before her heirs of the part of her mother's ſide. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 247.

Reaſon, Becauſe they are the more worthy. Hale's Hiſt. Com. Law 247.

Thus lands in fee-ſimple will deſcend by the Common law, if there is no ſettlement to the contrary by deed or will, &c.

Deſcent of Crown lands. All the lands whereof the King is ſeiſed in jure coronæ, ſhall, ſecundum jus coronæ, attend upon and follow the Crown; ſo that to whomſoever the Crown deſcends, thoſe lands and poſſeſſions deſcended alſo. And if the heir to the Crown be attainted of treaſon, yet ſhall the Crown deſcend to him, and without any reverſal the attainder is avoided. Plowd. 247. Co. Litt. 15. The dignity of the Crown of England, for want of heirs male, is deſcendible immediately to the eldeſt daughter, and her poſterity; and ſo it has been declared by act of parliament: And by ſtat. 25 Hen. 8. cap. 22. Regnum non eſt diviſible. The eldeſt ſiſter of a King, as well as the eldeſt daughter, ſhall inherit all his fee-ſimple lands by deſcent: And half-blood is no impediment to the deſcent of lands of the Crown. Co. Litt. 15, 165. But a daughter of the whole blood ſhall not inherit where there is a ſon of the half blood; as where the King hath iſſue a ſon and a daughter by one venter, and a ſon by another venter, and purchaſes lands and dies; afterwards the eldeſt ſon enters and dies alſo without iſſue, the daughter ſhall not have theſe lands, or any other fee-ſimple lands of the Crown, but they ſhall deſcend to the younger brother. Plowd. 245. 34 Hen. 6. A perſon coming to be King by deſcent of the part of his mother, makes a purchaſe of land to him and his heirs, and dies without iſſue, this land ſhall deſcend to the heir on the part of the mother; contrary to the caſe of a ſubject, where the heir on the father's ſide ſhall enjoy it. Ibid. Co. Litt. 16. As the whole kingdom hath an intereſt in the deſcent of the Crown, the King cannot ſurrender or alien it, &c. See King.

Deſcent of dignities. A dignity alſo differs from common inheritances, and goes not according to the rules of the Common law; for it deſcends to the half blood, and there is no coparcenerſhip in it, but the eldeſt takes the whole. Co. Litt. 27. The dignity of peerage is perſonal, annexed to the blood, and ſo inſeparable that it cannot be transferred to any perſon, or ſurrendered even to the Crown; it can move neither forward or backward, but only downward to poſterity; and nothing but corruption of blood, as if the anceſtor be attainted of treaſon or felony, can hinder the deſcent to the right heir. Lex Conſtitutionis, pag. 85.

Deſcription, (Deſcriptio,) Is the act of deſcribing, marking, or making out any perſon or thing by mentioning its properties. Johnſ. Dict. In deeds and grants there muſt be a certain deſcription of the lands granted, the places where the lands lie, and of the perſons to whom granted, &c. to make them good. But wills are more favoured than grants as to thoſe deſcriptions; and a wrong deſcription of the perſon will not make a deviſe void, if there be otherwiſe a ſufficient certainty what perſon was intended by the teſtator. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 647.

In treſpaſs, the caſe was, Hartwell, Rode, and Aſhen were three vills in the pariſh of Rhode, and a grant was made of all tithes in the tenure of Richard Wake in Rhode and Aſhen, (but did not mention Hartwell) and all other tithes in Rhode, and at the time of the grant all the tithes in Hartwell and Rode were in the tenure of the ſaid Wake; the queſtion was, whether the tithes in Hartwell in the pariſh of Rhode did paſs or not? and adjudged in B. R. by the three judges againſt the opinion of the Ch. Juſtice, that the tithes in Hartwell did paſs; but upon a writ of error in the Exchequer Chamber, that judgment was reverſed, becauſe the tithes of Hartwell, being a vill, could not paſs by the name of the tithes in Rode and Aſhen, for Rode being likewiſe a vill, ſhall not be taken for the pariſh of Rode, and ſo to include Hartwell, for a vill and a pariſh are diſtinct and different things. 2 And. 124, Farmer's caſe.

The Duke of Northumberland being ſeiſed of ſeveral meſſuages in the pariſh of St. Sepulchre, London, bargained and ſold to the Lady Lea, all his tenements in the pariſh of St. Andrew in Holborn, in the occupation of W. R. to have to her for life, remainder to her daughter and her heirs; now, tho' it was true, that the meſſuages were in the occupation of W. R. yet becauſe the firſt allegation was falſe, viz. that they were in the pariſh of St. Andrew when they were in the pariſh of St. Sepulchre, the bargain and ſale was void. 3 Rep. 10. Dowty's caſe.

The teſtator deviſed all the profits of his houſes and lands lying in the pariſh of Billing, and in a ſtreet there, called Brook-ſtreet, to his wife for life, when in truth there was no ſuch pariſh as Billing, but the land, ſuppoſed to be deviſed, laid in Billing-ſtreet; adjudged, that the profits of that land paſſed by this deviſe. 1 Brownl. 131. Pacy verſus Knolls.

In ejectment, the caſe was, that J. S. being ſeiſed in fee, made an agreement with G. D. to ſell his lands to him, but before any actual conveyance was made to G. D. the ſaid G. D. ſold the lands to W. H. and he the ſaid W. H. deviſed the ſaid lands in theſe words, viz. I bequeath to my ſon R. H. all my lands which I purchaſed of G. D. when in truth he did not purchaſe them of G. D. but of W. H. but becauſe it was under the original agreement made between J. S. and the aforeſaid G. D. tho' no formal conveyance was made to him, it was adjudged, that the deviſe was good. Cro. El. 121. Thorp. v. Thompſon.

The teſtator deviſed a houſe wherein Henry Nichols dwelleth, called the White Swan; now Nichols had only the uſe of an entry and three upper rooms in the houſe, yet it was adjudged, and the whole houſe paſſed; the word houſe in the beginning of the ſentence, which is called the White Swan at the end of it, muſt neceſſarily refer to the whole houſe, but it can never be intended, that the houſe called the White Swan, extended only to the entry and three upper-rooms; but this ſentence might have another conſtruction, if the houſe only had been deviſed with the addition of the White Swan. Cro. Car. 122. Chamberlaine verſus Turner. Jones 195. S. C.

So where the teſtator deviſed his corner-houſe in Andover, in the tenure of Hitchcock, which was a miſtake, for the houſe was not in his tenure, but of one Benſon; 'tis true, the teſtator had another houſe adjoining, which was in the tenure of Hitchcock; adjudged, that houſe did not paſs, but the corner-houſe, becauſe that houſe was ſufficiently deſcribed by the name of the corner-houſe before, and the addition, that it was in the tenure of Hitchcock, is a plain miſtake, and ſurpluſage, and ſhall not make that ill which was well deſcribed before. Jones 379. Blake verſus Gold. Cro. Car. 447. S. C. See pl. 4.

The teſtator having two houſes, one called the upper-houſe, and the other called the lower-houſe, deviſed all his tenements for the payment of his debts, until his grandſon ſhould come of age, and afterwards he deviſed all his ſaid tenements, (viz.) two parts of the lower-houſe for raiſing 200 l. &c. the remainder to his grandſon and his heirs; the queſtion was, whether the (viz.) and the clauſe which immediately followed it, did reſtrain this deviſe to the lower-houſe only, or whether the whole paſſed to the grandſon by theſe words which went before, (viz.) all his ſaid tenements; and adjudged, that the whole did paſs by thoſe general words, and that the (viz.) was only directory, to whom part of it ſhould go. 4 Mod. 140. Bagnall verſus Abdett.

A wrong deſcription of the perſon will not make the deviſe void, if there is otherwiſe a ſufficient certainty what perſon was intended by the teſtator; as for inſtance, a deviſe to John Smith the eldeſt ſon of Thomas Smith, when in truth his name was not John, but Robert Smith, yet the will is good, becauſe there is a certainty of the perſon, by naming him to be the eldeſt ſon of Thomas Smith, for he can have but one eldeſt ſon. 3 Leon. 18. Owen 35. S. C.

Yet it hath been adjudged, that where there are ſeveral deſcriptions of one perſon, they muſt all meet at the time of the will executed, or the deviſe is void, (viz.) The teſtator deviſed his lands to J. S. in tail, remainder to the next of kin of his name; now the next of kin, which is one of the deſcriptions of the perſon was his brother's daughter, who was married, and by conſequence not of his name, which is the other deſcription of the perſon, for ſhe loſt his name by her marriage; adjudged, that the next heir male of his name ſhall have the land, but if ſhe had been a ſingle woman at the time of the death of the teſtator, though ſhe had afterwards married, the deviſe to her had been good. Cro. El. 532. Bon verſus Smith and 576. Jobſon's caſe, S. P. 1 And. 306. Brown verſus Peas, S. P. Cro. Eliz. 357. S. C. Owen 24. S. C.

The father had one ſon and a daughter, and ſhe had iſſue one daughter, and no more; the father deviſed, that his lands ſhould deſcend to his ſon, and if he died without iſſues of his body, then to the right heirs of his name, equally to be divided, part and part alike; his brother was of his name, but not his right heir, for the daughter of his daughter was his right heir, but ſhe was not of his name; adjudged, that the ſon had an eſtate-tail, but that the will was void as to the reverſion, after the eſtate-tail ſpent, for that deſcended to the ſon of the teſtator, who dying without iſſue, and his ſiſter being likewiſe dead, it muſt deſcend to her daughter, who was the grand daughter of the teſtator. Moor 860. Counden verſus Clerke. Hob. 29. S. C.

Deviſe to his wife for life, and after her death to her children unpreferred; now, tho' theſe are general words, yet they were adjudged a ſufficient deſcription, who ſhould take by this will. 1 And. 61. Amner verſus Loddington.

But where the teſtator had a ſon and a daughter, and deviſed his lands to his wife for life, and afterwards to his iſſue; this was adjudged void; becauſe the word iſſue being in the ſingular number, 'tis uncertain which iſſue he intended; 'tis true, Juſtice Crook was not of that opinion, for he held that it ſhall go to the ſon as moſt worthy; and the Lord Ch. Juſtice Hale was of the ſame opinion. 2 And. 134. Taylor verſus Sawyer. See 1 Ven. 229.

The teſtator being ſeiſed of the manors of Warners and Churchall, deviſed Warners to the eldeſt ſon of his couſin Richard Foſter in fee, and the manor of Churchall to one Waters, during her life, and that if after her death, any of his couſin Foſter's children ſhall be living, then he deviſed the manor of Churchall to him, that ſhould have the manor of Warners: The couſin Foſter had iſſue George and John, George entred on the manor of Warners, and died with iſſue, then John entred, and ſold it, afterwards Waters, who had the manor of Churchall died, John Foſter, who ſold Warners, being ſtill living; the queſtion was, whether he ſhould have Churchall; and adjudged, that he ſhould not, becauſe he was not a perſon deſcribed by the will to take it, for that muſt be the perſon who ſhould have Warners at the time of the death of Waters, which John Foſter had not, becauſe he ſold it. 1 And. 306. Brown verſus Peas.

De ſon tort demeſne, Are words of form, uſed in an action of treſpaſs by way of reply to the defendant's plea. For example; A. ſues B. in ſuch an action; B. anſwers for himſelf that he did that which A. calls a treſpaſs by the command of C. his maſter: A. ſaith again, that B. did it de ſon tort demeſne, ſans ceo que C. luy command, modo & forma, that is, B. did it of his own wrong without that, that C. commanded him, in ſuch form. &c. Cowell, edit. 1727.

De injuria ſua propria is no plea, where the defendant juſtifies by claiming an intereſt in the freehold to himſelf; but where one claims not any intereſt, but juſtifies by command, or authority derived from another, it is otherwiſe. Cro E. 539. pl. 2. Hill. 39 *El. When the defendant in his own right, or as ſervant to another, claims any intereſt in the land, or common or rent out of it, or way or paſſage upon it, there De injuria ſua propria propria generally is no plea. 8 Rep. 61. a. the ſecond reſolution, Mich. 6. Jac. Crogate's caſe.

But if the defendant juſtifies as ſervant, there De injuria ſua propria in the ſaid caſes, with a traverſe of the commandment is good, where the commandment is material; and this will reconcile the books. For the general plea De injuria ſua propria, &c. is properly when the defendant's plea conſiſts merely upon matter of excuſe, without any matter of intereſt whatſoever. And it is ſaid, De injuria ſua propria, becauſe the injuria properly in this ſenſe is to the perſon or his reputation, as battery or impriſonment to the perſon, or ſcandal to his fame; there if the defendant excuſes himſelf as upon ſon aſſault demeſne, or upon the levying hue and cry, there properly De injuria ſua propria generally is a good plea; for there the plea conſiſts only of matter of excuſe. Detiner. See Deher & detiner.

Detinue, Detinendo, Is a writ that lieth againſt him, who having goods or chattels delivered to him to keep, refuſeth to deliver them again. See of this F. N. B. fol. 138. to this is anſwerable in ſome ſort, actio depoſiti in the Civil law. And he taketh his action of detinue, that intendeth to recover the thing delivered, and not the damages ſuſtained by the detinue. Kitchin, fol. 176.

Detinue, Is an action that lies for the recovery of goods and chattels, though the party came to the poſſeſſion of them by lawful means, as by bailment, borrowing or pledging; and in this action the plaintiff is to recover the things in ſpecie or damages for the detainer. 2 Bac. Abr. 45. Co. Lit. 286. 1 Rol. Rep. 128.

But as in this action the defendant was allowed to wage his law, (for it was thought but reaſonable that the bailor, truſting to the bailee's honeſty and integrity at firſt, ſhould alſo truſt to his oath in a court of juſtice, ſince the reſtitution might have been ſecret); which being found exceeding inconvenient, it being often experienced, that thoſe, who were ſo diſhoneſt as to retain the goods of another, would generally purge themſelves on their oaths, occaſioned the ſubſtituting the action of trover and converſion in the place thereof, which is the action uſually made uſe of at this day in thoſe caſes. 2 Bac. Abr. 45, 46.

If a bailee deliver the goods to another, he ſhall have an action of detinue againſt him becauſe he hath his poſſeſſion, and undertakes for the cuſtody, and the original bailor may have his action againſt either of them, becauſe in him is the property, which both are bound to anſwer to him. 1 Rol. Abr. 607.

If A. takes the goods of C. and B. takes them from A. C. ſhall have his action againſt A. or B. at his election, becauſe both damnified C. in their taking. 1 Sid. 438.

If a man detains the goods of a feme covert which came to his hands before marriage, the huſband can only bring detinue, becauſe the law transfers the property to the huſband, but both ſhall join in the trover, becauſe the wrong was originally commenced at the time when the wife was ſole; and if ſuch injury be puniſhed, the wife herſelf, who received this injury, muſt be party to the action, and the wife's demand is ſufficient to prove a converſion in the defendant, but if the poſſeſſion be laid in both it is ill, becauſe if both were poſſeſſed, it is in the poſſeſſion of the huſband only. Sid. 172. 1 Keb. 641. Noy 70. Yelv. 165.

If A. delivers goods to B. to be delivered over to C. either A. or C. may have detinue againſt B. for the not delivering them over, according to the undertaking, is an injury done to each of them. 1 Rol. Abr. 606.

It has been held formerly that detinue will not lie for money, unleſs in a box or bag, nor for corn out of a ſack, becauſe theſe things have no mark whereby they may be known in order to be delivered to the plaintiff. 2 Back. Abr. 46.

It ſeems however clear that if a man lends a ſum of money to another, detinue does not lie for it, but he muſt bring debt on the confract. 1 Rol. Abr. 606.

So where a man comes to buy goods, and they agree upon a price, and a day for the payment, and the buyer takes them away, detinue does not lie, but an aſſumpſit for the money, becauſe the property was changed by a lawful bargain, and by that bargain the buyer was to convert the goods before the money was due; but if a man comes to buy goods, and they agree on a price for preſent money, and the buyer takes the goods away without payment, detinue lies becauſe the property is not altered; and therefore the taking away the goods without payment of the money is an injurious taking, for which the action lies; but if a man ſell goods on payment of money on a day to come, and the money be paid, and the goods not delivered, detinue lies becauſe the property is in the buyer. Cro. Eliz. 867.

Detinue lies for writings in a box, or for writings themſelves, though not in a box, and though the date be not mentioned, or the delivery of the writings, as a deed; and it lies for a huſband and wife, for a deed by which an annuity is granted to the wife; for every man that has a property in deeds may bring his action for the detaining them. 1 Rol. Abr. 606. Co. Lit. 286. See Trover.

Detinue of charters. A man may have detinue for deeds and charters concerning land; but if they concern the freehold, it muſt be in C. B. and no other court. Action of detinue lies for charters which make the title of lands; and the heir may have detinue of charters, although he hath not the land: If my father be diſſeiſed, and dieth, I ſhall have detinue for the charters, notwithſtanding I have not the land; but the executors ſhall not have the action for them. New Nat. Br. 138. If a man keep my charters from me, concerning the inheritance of my land, and I know the certainty of them, and the land; or if they be in a cheſt locked up, &c. and I know not their certainty, I may recover them by this writ: So where lands are given to me and J. S. and my heirs, and he dies; if another gets the deeds; and if tenant in tail give away the deed of intail, and then die, his iſſue may bring a writ of detinue of charters. Co. Litt. 286. 1 Rep. 2. F. N. B. 138. But if the tenant in fee-ſimple, do give away his deeds of the land, his heir may not have this action: And in caſe a woman great with child by her deceaſed huſband, keeps the charters from his daughter and heir that concern the land, during the time ſhe is with child; this writ will not lie againſt her. 41 Ed. 3. 11.

Detinue

Detinue was brought for a deed, and the plaintiff had a verdict, that the defendant detained the deed, and the jury gave 20*l.* damages, but did not find the value of the deed; and then there iſſued out a diſtringas to deliver the deed, or the value, and afterwards a writ of inquiry was awarded for the value; whereupon the jury found a different value from what the firſt verdict found; and it was adjudged good. Raym. 124. Nelſ. Abr. 649. In detinue of charters, if the iſſue be upon the detinue, and it is found that the defendant hath burnt the charters, the judgment ſhall not be to recover the charters, which it appears cannot be had; but 'tis ſaid it ſhall be for the plaintiff to recover the land in damages. 2 Rol. Abr. 101. 2 Danv. Abr. 511. For detaining of deeds and charters concerning the inheritance of lands, or an indenture of leaſe, the defendant ſhall not wage law; but in a common action of detinue he may do it. 1 Inſt. 295.

Devadiatus, Without ſureties or pledges.——Si homo in villa delinquit & devadiatus fuerit, nil inde habet præpoſitus Regis. Domeſday tit. Suderei.

Devaſtavit or Devaſtaverunt bona teſtatoris, Is a writ that lies againſt executors for paying legacies, and debts without ſpecialties, to the prejudice of the creditors that have ſpecialties, before the debts on the ſaid ſpecialties are due: For in this caſe the executors are as liable to action, as if they had waſted the goods of the teſtator riotouſly, or converted them to their own uſe; and are compellable to pay ſuch debts by ſpecialty out of their own goods, to the value of what they ſo paid illegally. Cowell.

A devaſtavit by an executor or an adminiſtrator, is by miſemploying the eſtate, or miſbehaving himſelf in the management thereof; and this may be done by ſeveral acts, and firſt by paying debts upon ſimple contract, before debts on bonds or judgments: but then he muſt have notice of the bond, which regularly is by an action commenced againſt him; for the law doth not oblige him to take notice of it himſelf, no nor of a judgment on record againſt his teſtator, becauſe he is not privy to acts done either by or againſt him. 1 Mod. 175. 3 Lev. 115. S. P. Moor 752. S. P.

Where an executor, &c. payeth legacies before debts, and hath not ſufficient to ſatisfy both, 'tis a devaſtavit, but legacies may be paid before the breach of any covenants entred into by the teſtator; for otherwiſe this inconvenience would neceſſarily enſue, viz. the performance of the will would be obſtructed; becauſe 'tis a certain and preſent miſchief not to pay legacies when they are actually due; and if an executor ſhould be compelled by the law to wait for a breach of a covenant, he may wait for ever; for it may happen that the covenant will never be broken. Allen 38, 39. Eales v. Lambert. Gold. 142. Woodcock v. Herne, S. P.

So where an executor ſells the teſtator's goods at an undervalue, if it was in a fraudulent manner 'tis a devaſtavit, but if more could not be had, 'tis otherwiſe: ſo where the ſheriff hath the teſtator's goods in execution, and ſells at an undervalue, or if they are ſold by an infant for leſs than they are worth, this ſhall not make the executor chargeable. Kelw. 59. a. 3 Leon. 143.

But 'tis to be obſerved, that if judgment is had againſt an executor, upon a demurrer, the ſheriff in ſuch caſe cannot return nulla bona teſtatoris, becauſe by the demurrer the executor hath confeſſed that he had goods, &c. Cro. Eliz. 102. See Executor.

Devenerunt, A writ heretofore directed to the eſcheator, when any tenant of the King, holding in capite, died; and when his ſon and heir, within age, and in the King's cuſtody, died; then this writ went forth, commanding the eſcheator that he, by the oath of good and lawful men, inquire what lands and tenements by the death of the tenant, came to the King. See Dyer, fol. 360. pl. 4. and Keilway's Rep. fol. 199. a. Though this writ, in the ſenſe aboveſaid, be diſuſed, yet a new uſe of it is preſcribed by act of parliament, 14 Car. 2. c. 11. intitled An act for preventing frauds, and regulating abuſes in his Majeſty's cuſtoms.

Deveſt, (Deveſtire,) Is contrary to inveſt; for as Inveſtire ſignifies poſſeſſionem tradere, to deliver poſſeſſion: ſo Deveſtire is poſſeſſionem auferre, to take away poſſeſſion. Feud. lib. 1. c. 7.

Deviſe, (from the Fr. deviſer, to ſpeak, as deviſer per ſon teſtament, is to ſpeak by his teſtament what his mind is to have done after his deceaſe) Is a diſpoſition of a real or perſonal eſtate, to take effect after the death of the deviſor. Co. Litt. 111. a.

1. What eſtate or intereſt may be deviſed.
2. Who may deviſe, and to whom.

1. What eſtate or intereſt may be deviſed.

By the Common law, no lands or tenements were deviſable, except by particular cuſtom; neither could they be transferred from one to another but by ſolemn livery and ſeiſin, or matter of record; the true reaſon hereof ſeems to be owing to the nature of the feudal tenures; for by theſe, tho' the lord had given lands to his tenant and his heirs, which were words of limitation, and appropriated to meaſure out the length and continuance of the eſtate; yet as they were underſtood the heirs of the preſent tenant who came in by the donation of the lord, the tenant could not deviſe them even to his own heir, thereby to make him a purchaſer, and ſo deprive the lord of the profits of wardſhips, marriage, and relief, which were incident to the feudal tenure; much leſs could he deviſe them to a ſtranger, who perhaps might not have ability of mind, or ſtrength of body, tho' the one was requiſite to aſſiſt his lord in his courts, and the other to defend his perſon in the field. Co. Lit. 111. Abr. Eq. 174.

But an eſtate for years might have been deviſed at Common law; for this, as now, was only conſidered as a chattel, and formerly was of very ſhort duration. 1 Rol. Abr. 608.

A conveyance by will was a privilege anciently allowed by the Civil law only to perſons in extremis, who had not time or aſſiſtance neceſſary to make a formal alienation, and was chiefly intended for military men, who were always ſuppoſed to be under thoſe circumſtances, and therefore the ceremonies and number of witneſſes required of others were diſpenſed with as to ſoldiers, though now the rules for military teſtaments are allowed in moſt caſes; but as to lands and houſes, our law gave no liberty of diſpoſing thereof by will, except in certain boroughs and places where ſuch cuſtom had obtained time out of mind. Show. P. Caſes 147. Sir Edward Hungerford v. Noſworthy.

The ſtatute of 32 Hen. 8. which firſt introduced the diſpoſition of lands by will, requires that the deviſor ſhould have a proper title and intereſt in them for that purpoſe; and therefore if a man deviſes lands, in which he has nothing, and after purchaſes them, ſuch a deviſe is void, not being within the ſtatute of Wills, for he is not a perſon having, as the ſtatute ſpeaks. Plow. 343.

So where a man deviſed to his wife all ſuch ſums of money, lands, tenements, and eſtate whatſoever, whereof at the time of his deceaſe he ſhould be poſſeſſed, and after the making of the will he purchaſed lands in gavelkind, and died without making any new publication, and it was held that thoſe new-purchaſed lands did not paſs; for they were not ſua at the time of making the will, and the conſtant form of pleading is, that the teſtator was ſeiſed, and that being ſo ſeiſed, &c. which at leaſt is an evidence of the law, and there is no difference as to lands deviſable by cuſtom, or by ſtatute, but ſuch deviſe of things perſonal is good, tho' the teſtator had them not at the time of making the will, becauſe they go to the executor, to whom the will is only directory. 1 Salk. 237.

A. agrees with B. for the purchaſe of copyhold lands, which were ſurrendred out of court to the uſe of A. but before admittance A. dies. A. was ſeiſed of other copyhold lands, and after the ſaid contract with B. had made his will, and deviſed all his copyhold lands to J. S. and it was ruled, that the copyhold lands agreed for, paſſed by the will, for after the agreement the purchaſer might in equity recover the land, and oblige B. to execute a conveyance, and till ſuch conveyance executed, the vender ſtood ſeiſed in truſt for the purchaſer as he ſhould appoint; and therefore if, after articles agreed on for a purchaſe, the purchaſer deviſes the lands, and dies before a conveyance executed, yet the land paſſeth in equity; for tho' according to the ſtrict notions of law, the deviſor has not lands within the ſtatute till a conveyance be executed, and he thereby becomes ſeiſed of them, yet after articles of purchaſe the purchaſer only is conſidered as maſter of the land, and therefore in equity, will be allowed to diſpoſe of them. 1 Chan. Ca. 39. 2 Chan. Ca. 144.

So where a treaty of marriage articles were entred into, whereby the ſum of 700 l. being the wife's portion, and 700 l. more added to it on the part of the huſband, in all 1400 l. was agreed to be laid out in the purchaſe of lands, to be ſettled on the huſband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to truſtees, to ſupport contingent remainders, &c. the marriage takes effect, the huſband dies without iſſue, and before any purchaſe made purſuant to the articles, having firſt deviſed all his perſonal eſtate to the defendant, who was his wife, and all his real eſtate to the plaintiffs, who were his nephews, and one of them his heir at law, and made his wife executrix; but took no manner of notice of the 1400 l. On a bill brought by the plaintiffs to have this 1400*l.* as they would have the land if the purchaſe had been made purſuant to the articles; for the wife took more by the deviſe than ſhe ſhould be intitled to under the ſettlement, had it been made; and therefore it was agreed, that if it were to be conſidered as lands, ſhe could not have both, the deviſe of the perſonal eſtate being more than equivalent, and therefore a ſatisfaction; and it was held by my Lord Chancellor, that as this caſe is, if a purchaſe had been made even after making the will, tho' at law ſuch lands would not paſs; yet in this court there could be no queſtion but the plaintiffs would have the benefit thereof by the relation to the articles; and tho' no purchaſe was made, yet by the agreement the 1400 l. is to be looked upon in a court of equity as a real eſtate, and as ſuch muſt go to the plaintiffs. Abr. Eq. 175.

A man ſeiſed in fee deviſed his lands in truſt, to ſell part for payment of his debts, and till his debts were paid, to pay 100 l. per annum to his natural daughter M. And after the debts paid, 300 l. for her life; and if ſhe have children, to convey ſucceſſively to thoſe children; but if ſhe die without iſſue, then to convey to the eldeſt ſon and heir of J. S. his nephew, and the heirs of his eldeſt ſon; but if he claim any thing during the life of M. then both father and ſon to be excluded from having any thing out of his eſtate; the eldeſt ſon of J. S. was A. who had two ſiſters B. and T. A. died, leaving iſſue T. who in the life of M. deviſed the lands in queſtion, to J. S. and died without iſſue, and after the death of M. without iſſue, the truſtee conveyed to the two ſiſters of A. and their heirs; and it was held, that this being but a mere poſſibility during the life of M. the deviſe was void, and the lands well conveyed to the ſiſters of B. 3 Lev. 427.

J. S. who was to have had a conſiderable advantage by a will, was drawn in by fraud and falſe ſuggeſtions to make a compoſition for his intereſt, and to give a releaſe; afterwards J. S. being ſenſible of the fraud, makes his will, and thereby (after other legacies) he deviſes all the reſt of his goods and chattels whatſoever to his wife, upon condition that ſhe paid all his debts, and made her ſole executrix; and it was held, that his right to ſet aſide the releaſe was deviſable, and the words proper for that purpoſe. Abr. Eq. 175.

2. Who may deviſe, and to whom.

The ſtatutes of 32 & 34 Hen. 8. c. 1 & 5. give the power of deviſing their lands to all perſons, except infants, ideots, feme coverts, and perſons of non ſane memory; and every perſon may be a deviſee within theſe ſtatutes, except bodies politick and corporate; and theſe were excepted becauſe they never anſwered the feudal ſervices, and were reſtrained from purchaſing any lands by the ſtatute of mortmain. 1 Rol. Abr. 608. 6 Co. 16. b.

Yet, ſince the ſtatute of Charitable Uſes, (43 Eliz. c. 4.) it has been held, that a deviſe to the Principal, fellows and ſcholars of Jeſus college in Oxford, and their ſucceſſors, for maintenance of a ſcholar, is good, though ſuch deviſe had been mortmain by the ſtatute of Wills. Hob. 136. 1 Lev. 284. S. P.

Altho' a wife, by reaſon of the ſubjection ſhe is under to her huſband, cannot make a will, yet a woman, whoſe huſband is baniſhed for his life by act of parliament, may make a will, and act in every thing as a feme ſole. 2 Vern. 104.

Alſo a huſband may bind himſelf by covenant or bond to permit his wife by will to diſpoſe of legacies, &c. and this will be ſuch an appointment as the huſband will be bound to perform. Cro. Eliz. 27. Cro. Car. 219, 376, 597.

A feme covert executrix cannot deviſe any of the goods, which ſhe hath as executrix, without the aſſent of the huſband, or his agreement after. 1 Rol. Abr. 608.

If a feme covert makes and publiſhes her will, and deviſes land by it, and her huſband dies, and then ſhe dies, the deviſe is void, becauſe the conſummation is founded upon the making and publiſhing, which are void acts. Plowd. 344.

A wife may be a deviſee, tho' not a grantee to the huſband, for as the grant had been void, becauſe the huſband and his wife are but one perſon in law, ſo the deviſe is good, becauſe it does not take effect till after the death of the huſband, and then they are no more one perſon. Co. Lit. 112. 1 Rol. Abr. 610.

An infant cannot deviſe his lands; and therefore if one under the age of 21 makes his will, and thereby deviſes his lands, and after attains the age of 21 years, and dies without making any new publication thereof, this deviſe is void. 1 Sid. 162.

If there be two jointenants of lands, and one of them deviſes that which belongs to him, and dies, this is a void deviſe, and the deviſee takes nothing, becauſe the deviſe does not take effect till after the death of the deviſor, and then the ſurviving jointenant takes the whole by a prior title, viz. from the firſt feoffment; but in this caſe, if the deviſor ſurvives the jointenant, then the deviſe is good for the whole, becauſe he being the ſurviving jointenant has the whole, by ſurvivorſhip, and then the words of the will are ſufficient to carry the whole eſtate; beſides at the time of making the will, though he was not ſole tenant, yet he was ſeiſed per my et per tout; and it is impoſſible to fix upon any particular part which he meant to deviſe, becauſe he could not then call one part of the land more his own then another, and the moſt genuine conſtruction ſeems to give the whole land, ſince he was ſeiſed per tout of it at the time of the deviſe. Lit. ſect. 287. Perk. ſect. 500.

It has been much doubted, whether a deviſe to an infant in ventre ſa mere be good, becauſe it is not in being to take at the time of the death of the deviſor, and ſince by the deviſe the perſon is to take immediately after the death of the deviſor, the freehold cannot be put in abeyance by the act of the parties. Dyer 303. Bro. Deviſe 32. 1 Salk. 231. Moor 637.

Others of as good authority hold, that ſuch deviſe is good, tho' the infant be not in eſſe at the death of the deviſor, and that the freehold ſhall not be in abeyance, but ſhall deſcend to the heir at law in the mean time. Moor 177. 1 Lev. 135. 1 Sid. 153. Raym. 163. 1 Keb. 851. 2 Bulſt. 273.

But all agree in this, that a deviſe to an infant, when he ſhall be born, or when God ſhall give him birth, is a good deviſe, and that the freehold ſhall deſcend to the heir at law in the mean time. 1 Sid. 153. 1 Lev. 135. S. C.

So it is out of doubt, that if land be deviſed for life, the remainder to a poſthumous child, that this is a good contingent remainder, becauſe there is a perſon in being to take the particular eſtate; and if the contingent remainder veſts during the continuance of the particular eſtate, or eo inſtanti that it determines, it is ſufficient. Moor 637. 3 Leo. 408. 4 Mod. 359. 1 Salk. 227. Carth. 309.

A deviſe to an alien, ſo to the heir of an alien, is void, becauſe an alien, according to the policy of our law, can have no heir, either to inherit or take by purchaſe. 1 Lev. 592.

Dicker or Decar, or Dicre of leather, is a quantity conſiſting of ten hides. The word probably comes from the Greek δεκας which ſignifies ten. Civitas Glouceſtriæ reddebat xxxvi dicras ferri, & Domeſday; i. e. 36 dickers of iron, 10 bars to the dicker. Gale's Hiſt. Brit. 766.

Dictores, and Dictum: The one is an arbitrator; the other is the arbitrament. Protulit dictum ſuum & ſententiam pro Rege Angliæ. Malmſ. pag. 384.

Dictum de Kenelworth, Was an edict or award between King Henry III. and all thoſe barons, and others, who had been in arms againſt him; and ſo called, becauſe it was made as Kenelworth-caſtle, in Warwickſhire, Ann. 51 H. 3. containing a compoſition of five years rent for the land and eſtates of thoſe who had forfeited them in that rebellion.

Diem clauſit extremum, Was a writ that iſſued out of Chancery to the eſcheator of the county, upon the death of any of the King's tenants in capite, to inquire by a jury of what lands he died ſeiſed, and of what value, and who was the next heir to him. Fitz. Nat. Br. fol. 251.

Dies, There are four ſorts of days, 1. A day natural, and ſo the ſcripture ſaith, The evening and the morning made the firſt day. 2. A day artificial, and that is a crepuſculo matutino uſque ad crepuſculum veſpertinum. 3. Dies aſtrologicus, an aſtrological day from ſun to ſun. 4. A legal day, and that is of two ſorts, 1. Dies juridicus; and 2. Dies non juridicus. Dies juridici are all days in bank, continuance, Eſſoin days, and other days given in term to the parties in court. Dies non juridici are all Sundays in the year; beſides, in the ſeveral terms particular days, as in Eaſter-term, Feſtum Aſcenſionis Domini; in Trinity-term, Feſtum Sancti Johannis Baptiſtæ; in Michaelmas-term, Feſtum Omnium Sanctorum, & Feſtum Omnium Animarum; and in Hilary-Term, Feſtum Purificationis Beatæ Mariæ Virginis. And this was the ancient law of England, and yet in uſe. 2 *part. Dies, one day's entertainment, farm, or reception. ——Reddebat unum diem de firma, & valebat 95. libr. & 6 denar. Domeſday. Where there are many other fee-farm rents, as we may call them, reſerved to the King in ſo many days or nights proviſion. Et reddebat dimidiam diem mellis, &c. et unam diem de firma; that is, as much honey as was ſufficient for the King's family for half a day; and as much proviſion as was enough for a whole day. Domeſday apud Spelman.

Dies datus, Is a day or time of reſpite, given to the tenant or defendant by the court. Broke, tit. Continuance.

Dies marchiæ, The day of congreſs or meeting between the Engliſh and Scotch, appointed annually to be held on the marches or borders, to adjuſt all differences, and preſerve the articles of peace.——Dux Lancaſtriæ— pro die marchiæ (prout moris eſt) tenenda inter Anglos & Scotos annis ſingulis, in partes conceſſerat boreales. Tho. Dieu ſon act, Theſe are words oftentimes uſed in our law; and it is a maxim, that the act of God ſhall prejudice no man: And therefore if a houſe be beaten down by tempeſt or other act of God, the leſſee for life or years ſhall not only be quit in an action of waſte brought againſt him, but hath by the law a ſpecial intereſt to take timber to build the houſe again, if he will, for his habitation. Co. lib. 4, 63. & lib. 11. 82. a. When the condition of an obligation conſiſts of two parts in the disjunctive, and both are poſſible at the time of the obligation made, and afterwards one of them becomes impoſſible by the act of God; the obligor is not bound to perform the other part, for the condition ſhall be taken beneficially for him. Co. lib. 5. 22.

Dignitaries, Dignitarii, Are ſuch as are advanced to any eccleſiaſtical promotion, as dean, archdeacon, prebendary, &c. 3 par. inſt. fol. 155.

Dignity, (Dignitas) Signifies honour and authority; reputation, &c. and dignity may be divided into ſuperior and inferior: As the titles of duke, earl, baron, &c. are the higheſt names of dignity; and thoſe of baronet, knight, ſerjeant at law, &c. the loweſt. Nobility only can give ſo high a name of dignity, as to ſupply the want of a ſurname in legal proceedings: And as the omiſſion of a name of dignity, may be pleaded in abatement of a writ, &c. So it may be where a peer who has more than one name of dignity, is not named by the moſt noble. 2 Hawk. P. C. 185, 239. No temporal dignity of any foreign nation can give a man a higher title here than that of eſquire. 2 Inſt. 667. See Addition and Degree of dignities.

Dignity Eccleſiaſtical (Dignitas Eccleſiaſtica) Is mentioned in the ſtat. 26 H. 8. cap. 31 & 32. ejuſdem, cap. 15. and is by the Canoniſts defined to be, Adminiſtratio cum juriſdictione & poteſtate aliqua conjuncta; whereof you may read examples in *Duarenus, de Sacris Eccleſ. Dikes, Broken down ſecretly, to be repaired by the towns adjoining. St. Weſt. 2. 13 Ed. 1. c. 46. 6 Geo. 1. c. 16.

Dilapidation, (Dilapidatio) Is where an incumbent on a church living, ſuffers the parſonage houſe or outhouſes to fall down, or be in decay for want of neceſſary reparations: Or it is the pulling down or deſtroying any of the houſes or buildings belonging to a ſpiritual living, or deſtroying of the woods, trees, &c. appertaining to the ſame; for it is ſaid to extend to the committing or ſuffering any wilful waſte, in or upon the inheritance of the church. Deg. Parſ. Counſ. 89.

A biſhop as ſoon as he is inſtalled, and a rector or vicar as ſoon as he is inducted, ought to procure workmen, as carpenters, maſons, tilers, and others ſkilful in building, to view the dilapidations, or whatſoever ſhall want repairing, and write down for what ſum a workman will or may build or repair the ſame, and ſet their hands to the ſame for a memorial thereof when they ſhall be called to be witneſſes thereto. For after this inſpection ſhall be made, ſuch biſhop, rector, or vicar may commence his ſuit for dilapidations when he pleaſeth. And ſuch workmen in ſupport of the action ought to prove, that ſuch decay cannot ſufficiently be repaired or amended for leſs than ſuch ſum, and that they themſelves would not do it for leſs. And that ſuch proof may be ſufficient, it is requiſite, that there be two witneſſes in every particular, and not one witneſs to one kind of work only, and another to another. Clarke, Tit. 124. 1 Ought. 253.

If the benefice hath been vacant for ſome time, as for three or four years; or if the incumbent hath not ſued for ſome time after his induction or inſtallation, nor cauſed the dilapidations to be viewed and eſtimated; he ſhall not be intitled to recover the whole ſum eſtimated for dilapidations, but conſideration ſhall be had of the time elapſed from the ceſſation of the laſt incumbency, and a proportionable deduction made for the decays which may reaſonably be ſuppoſed to have been during ſuch intermediate time. Clarke, Tit. 126. 1 Ought. 255.

If a biſhop, archdeacon, parſon, or the like, abates all the wood upon the land, he ſhall be dilapidator; per Thirwit; but per Thyrning there is no remedy for this by the Common law. Br. Depoſition, pl. 1. cites 2 Hen. 4. 3.

By ſtat. 13 Eliz. c. 10. If any eccleſiaſtical perſons, who are bound to repair the buildings whereof they are ſeiſed in right of their place or function ſuffer them to fall into decay for want of repair, and make fraudulent gifts of their perſonal eſtate with purpoſe to hinder their ſucceſſors from recovering dilapidations againſt their executors or adminiſtrators, in ſuch caſe the ſucceſſors ſhall have like remedy in the eccleſiaſtical court againſt the grantee of ſuch perſonal eſtate, as he might have againſt the executor or adminiſtrator of the predeceſſor.

14 Eliz. cap. 11. All monies recovered for dilapidations ſhall within two years be employed upon the buildings for which they were paid, in pain to forfeit to the Queen, &c. double ſo much as ſhall not be ſo employed.

Dilapidation of the houſe of the biſhoprick is good cauſe of deprivation. Roll. R. 86. pl. 34. Mich. 12 Jac. B. R. Stockman v. Wither.

If a biſhop cuts and ſells trees, and does not employ them for reparations, a prohibition ought to be granted out of B. R. to him. Roll. R. 86. pl. 34. Mich. 12 Jac. B. R. Stockman v. Whither.

A biſhop is only to fell timber for building, for fuel, and other neceſſary occaſions. The woods are called the dower of the church; per Coke Ch. J. 2 Bulſt. 279. Mich. 12 Jac. Anon'.

Coke Ch. J. ſaid he had ſeen a record 25 Ed. 1. where complaint was made in parliament of the biſhop of Durham for cutting down timber trees for his coal mines; and there it was agreed that in ſuch a caſe a prohibition did lie, and a prohibition was granted in B. R. 2 Bulſt. 279. Mich. 12 Jac. Anon'.

A vicar had cut ſeveral great timber trees, and did not repair the church with them, and on ſuggeſtion of this to the court, and that he would cut more trees in like manner, a prohibition was granted per cur. by the Common law. Roll. R. 335. pl. 44. Hill. 13 Jac. B. R. Knowle v. Harvy.

Any perſon may ſue out a prohibition againſt a parſon that is cutting down trees, and not repairing the church with them. Roll. R. 335. pl. 44. Hill. 13 Jac. Knowle v. Harvy.

Diminution, (Diminutio,) Is where the plaintiff or defendant in a writ of error alledges to the court that part of the record is omitted and remains in the inferior court not certified; whereupon he prays that it may be certified by certiorari. Co. Ent. 232, 242. Of courſe diminution is to be certified on a writ of error; though if iſſue be joined upon the errors aſſigned, and the matter is entred upon record, which is made a conſilium, in this caſe there muſt be a rule of court granted for a certiorari to certify diminution. 1 Lill. Abr. 245. Diminution cannot be alledged of a thing which is fully certified; but in ſomething that is wanting, as want of an original, or warrant of attorney, &c. 2 Lev. 256. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 658. And if on diminution alledged, the plaintiff in error certifies one original, &c. which is wrong; and the defendant in error certifies another that is true; the true one ſhall ſtand. Cro. Jac. 597. Cro. Car. 91. After a writ of error brought, and the defendant hath pleaded In nullo eſt erratum, he cannot afterwards allege diminution; becauſe by that plea he affirmeth or alloweth the record to be ſuch as is certified upon the writ of error. Godb. 266. But in ſome caſes diminution hath been alledged, after In nullo eſt erratum pleaded, ex gratia curiæ, though not ex rigore juris. Palm. 85. And there is an inſtance that the court in ſuch a caſe hath awarded a certiorari to inform their conſcience of the truth of the record in *C. Dimiſſory letters, (Literæ dimiſſoriæ) When a candidate for holy orders has a title in one dioceſe, and is to be ordain'd in another, the proper dioceſan gives letters dimiſſory to ſome other ordaining biſhop, giving leave that the bearer may be ordain'd to ſuch a cure within his diſtrict. Cowell.

Dioceſe, (Diœceſis,) Signifies the circuit of every biſhop's juriſdiction. For this realm hath two ſorts of diviſions; one into ſhires or counties, in reſpect of the temporal ſtate; and another into dioceſes, in regard to the eccleſiaſtical ſtate. Cowell. 1 Inſt. 94.

The bounds of dioceſes are to be determined by witneſſes and records, but more particularly by the adminiſtration of divine offices. To which purpoſe, there are two rules in the Canon law: In one caſe, upon a diſpute between two biſhops upon this head, the direction is, that they proceed in the buſineſs, by ancient books or writings, and alſo by witneſſes, reputation, and other ſufficient proof: In the other caſe, where the queſtion was, by whom a church built upon the confines of two dioceſes ſhould be conſecrated, the rule laid down is, that it ſhould be conſecrated by the biſhop of that city, who before it was founded, baptized the inhabitants, and adminiſtered to them other divine offices. Gibſ. 133.

The juriſdiction of the city is not included in the name of dioceſe, ſo ſaith the canon law: And accordingly, in citations to general viſitations, directed to the clergy, it is ordered to cite the clergy of the city and dioceſe. Gibſ. 133.

A biſhop may perform divine offices, and uſe his epiſcopal habit, in the dioceſe of another, without leave; but may not perform therein any act of juriſdiction, without permiſſion of the other biſhop. Gibſ. 133.

A clergyman dwelling in once dioceſe, and beneficed in another, and being guilty of a crime, may, in different reſpects, be puniſhed in both; that is, the biſhop in whoſe dioceſe he dwells, may proſecute him, but the ſentence, ſo far as it effects his benefice, muſt be carried into execution by the other biſhop. Gibſ. 134.

Diſability, (Diſabilitas,) Is, when a man is diſabled or made incapable to inherit or take a benefit which otherwiſe he might have done, which may happen four ways; by the act of the anceſtor, by the act of the party, by the act of law, and by the act of God. 1. Diſability by the act of the anceſtor; as if a man be attainted of treaſon or felony; by this attainder his blood is corrupt, and thereby himſelf and his children diſabled to inherit. 2. Diſability by the act of the party himſelf; as if one man make a feoffment to another who then is ſole, upon condition, that he ſhall enfeoff a third before marriage, and before the feoffment made, the feoffee takes a wife; he hath by that diſabled himſelf to perform the condition according to the truſt in him repoſed, and therefore the feoffer may enter, and ouſt him. Litt. ſect. 357. So if I bind myſelf, that upon ſurrender of a leaſe, I will grant a new eſtate to the leſſee, and afterwards I grant over my reverſion: In this caſe, though I afterwards purchaſe the reverſion, yet I have forfeited my obligation, becauſe I was once diſabled to perform it. Co. lib. 5. fol. 21. Alſo if a man be excommunicated, he cannot during that time ſue any action, but ſhall be thereby diſabled. Co. lib. 8. fol. 69. And ſo in other caſes. 3. Diſability by act of law, is properly when a man by the ſole act of the law is diſabled, and ſo is an alien born. And therefore if a man born out of the King's ligeance, will ſue an action, the tenant or defendant may ſay, that he was born in ſuch a country, out of the King's ligeance, and demand judgment if he ſhall be anſwered: for the law is our birth-right, to which an alien is a ſtranger, and therefore diſabled to take any benefit thereby. 4. Diſability by the act of God, as to be non compos mentis, or non ſanæ memoriæ, which ſo diſables him, that in all caſes where he gives or paſſes any thing or eſtate out of him, after his death it may be diſannulled and avoided. And here obſerve, That it is a maxim in our law, That a man of full age ſhall never be received to diſable his own perſon; and this incapacity to diſable himſelf, as to ſome, is perſonal, extending only to the party himſelf; but as to others it is not perſonal, yet ſhall bind them as privies. Now there are four manner of privities, viz. Privity in blood, as heir. Privity in repreſentation, as executors and adminiſtrators. Privies in eſtate, as donee in tail, the reverſion or remainder in fee, &c. And privies in tenure, as lord and tenant. Two of theſe may diſable a perſon deceaſed, who was non ſanæ memoriæ, &c. and ſhall avoid his grants or feoffments, viz. privies in blood may ſhew the diſability of the anceſtor, and privies in repreſentation the infirmity of their teſtator or inteſtate. Co. lib. 4. fo. 123, 124. See Lit. ſect. 405. and Co. lib. 8. fol. 43.

No man can take advantage of his own diſability; as no man can plead that he is a fool, or non compos mentis; but if a non compos is indicted, the judges muſt acquit him ex officio; for the King takes care of all ſuch perſons. But if a man is diſabled by judgment to bear an office, he is excuſed; for judicium redditur in invitum. But where he can remove the diſability, as in caſe of excommunication, he ſhall take no advantage of his diſability. 1 Salk. 168. Hill. 6. Will. & Mar. in B. R. per Holt Ch. J. and Eyre J. in the caſe of The King v. Larwood.

Matter of diſability which might have been pleaded to the action, is not pleadable to the ſci. fa. on judgment. 1 Salk. 2. pl. 5. Paſch. 1. Ann. B. R. Weſt v. Sutton.

After

After a leaſe granted, leſſor diſables himſelf (by a ſettlement by which he makes himſelf only tenant for life) to perform the covenants in the leaſe, as to grant a new leaſe with certain advantages to leſſee, yet this after ſettlement ſhall not prejudice leſſee, nor forejudge him of the benefit of any covenant in his life. 9 Mod. 59. Mich. 10 Geo. in Canc. Aſhton v. Bretland.

If a teſtator be under a diſability at the time of making his will, though that diſability be actually removed before his death, yet the will will be abſolutely void, becauſe he had no ability at that time. Per Holt Ch. J. Gibb. 226. in the caſe of Bunker v. Coke.

Debt upon an obligation; the defendant pleads, that at the time of the obligation made he was non ſanæ memoriæ, and it was therefore demurred, and adjudged to be no plea; for he cannot ſave himſelf by ſuch a plea, and the opinion of Fitzherbet held to be no law: wherefore it was adjudged for the plaintiff. Cro. E. 398. pl. 4. Trin. 37 Eliz. B. R. Stroud v. Marſhall.

So in caſe againſt an innkeeper upon the common cuſtom of the realm, for not keeping ſafely his gueſt's goods, he cannot diſable himſelf by pleading non ſanæ memoriæ, any more than in debt on an obligation. Cro. E. 622. pl. 13. Mich. 40 & 41 Eliz. B. R.

Diſclaimer, (from the French clamer, with the privative dis) Is a plea containing an expreſs denial, renouncing or diſclaiming; as, If the tenant ſue a replevin upon a diſtreſs taken by the lord, and the lord avow, ſaying, That he holds of him as of his lord, and that he diſtrained for rent not paid, or ſervice not performed; then the tenant, denying to hold of ſuch lord, is ſaid to diſclaim; and the lord proving the tenant to hold of him, the tenant loſeth his land. Alſo a man denying himſelf to be of the blood or kindred of another in his plea, is ſaid to diſclaim his blood. See Coke on Littl. fol. 102. and Fit. Nat. Brev. fol. 197. If a man arriagned of felony diſclaim goods, being cleared, he loſeth them. See Broke and New Book of Entries tit. Diſclaimer, and Staundf. Pl. Cor. fol 186. In Chancery, If a defendant by his anſwer diſclaim the having any intereſt in the thing in queſtion, this is alſo called a diſclaimer. Cowel, edit. 1727.

Leſſee for years is plaintiff in replevin, the defendant avows upon A. a ſtranger as his tenant, who comes and ſays, that he is A. the tenant, and that the plaintiff is his leſſee for years; reſolved by all the juſtices in England, that A. may join in aid gratis without proceſs, and that both may diſclaim, and that the plaintiff ſhall recover his damages, and the defendant ſhall be in miſericordia. In the caſe of tenant at will, where there is a joinder in aid to him in replevin, no diſclaimer lies for him in this caſe: for he loſes nothing. Jenk. 56. pl. 3.

Lord, meſne, and tenant in replevin, the meſne cannot diſclaim; for a writ of right, upon a diſclaimer, demands the land, and he has it not; and the lord has no benefit by diſclaimer; for the tenant cannot loſe his tenancy by the diſclaimer of the meſne, and the lord has not more or better, or other ſervices than before the diſclaimer. A writ of right of diſclaimer lies, where both meſne and tenant diſclaim; if the diſclaimer be in a court of record, a writ of right lies upon the diſclaimer. Jenk. 143. pl. 95.

A. grants an annuity to B. pro conſilio impendendo; upon a writ of annuity againſt A. A. may diſclaim to have counſel, and ſo extinguiſh the annuity; but it is otherwiſe if the annuity was granted pro conſilio impenſo & impendendo. Jenk. 236. pl. 14.

Diſcontinuance, (Diſcontinuatio,) (from the French diſcontinuer, that is, ceſſare) Signifieth in the Common law nothing elſe but an interruption, or breaking off, and it twofold, diſcontinuance of poſſeſſion, and diſcontinuance of proceſs: The effect of diſcontinuance of poſſeſſion is this, that that a man may not enter upon his own lands or tenements alienated, whatſoever his right be unto them, of his own ſelf, or by his own authority; but muſt bring his writ, and ſeek to recover poſſeſſion by law; as, if a man alien the lands he hath in right of his wife; or if tenant in tail make any feoffment, or leaſe for life, not warranted by the ſtatute 32 H. 8. by fine or livery of ſeiſin; ſuch alienations are called diſcontinuances; which are indeed impediments to any entry, whereby the true owner is left only to his action. Cowell. See Co. Rep. lib. 3. Caſe of Fines. fol. 85.

Diſcontinuance of an eſtate in lands, ſignifies ſuch an alienation of the poſſeſſion, whereby he, who has a right to the inheritance, cannot enter, but is driven to his action. Co. Lit. 325.

In ancient days abbots and prelates were ſuppoſed to be married to the church; and as huſbands and repreſentatives of the church were allowed to have a fee in right of the church, that they might maintain actions, and hold courts within their manors and precincts; therefore at Common law, a biſhop, abbot, or any other perſon ſeiſed in fee in right of his houſe or church, might have diſcontinued, and thereby put his ſucceſſor to his action to recover the right of poſſeſſion. Co. Lit. 325. b. Comp. Incumb. 484.

But as the right of property was in the church, the biſhop could not alien without the conſent of the chapter, who repreſented the clergy of the dioceſe; nor could the abbot alien without the conſent of his houſe. Co. Lit. 325.

And at this day, by the 1 & 13 Eliz. neither a biſhop, dean, maſter of an hoſpital, &c. can diſcontinue any of their poſſeſſions, or bar their ſucceſſors of the right of entry. Co. Lit. 325, 342. 1 Rol. Abr. 633.

As to parſons, vicars, prebends, and others who were preſentatives, they were conſidered only as having a qualified right, and their eſtates by the Common law only an eſtate for life, the fee being in obeyſance; and therefore could not diſcontinue, or do any other act to the prejudice of their ſucceſſors, tho' they could alien with the conſent of the patron and ordinary. Co. Lit. 341. a. Dyer 239. pl. 41. Hetl. 88.

If a biſhop leaſes a parcel of the demeſnes of a manor for life, not warranted by the ſtatute of 1 Eliz. and after leaſes the manor to another for life; the parcel ſo leaſed ſhall paſs with attornment of the firſt leſſee; for the ſaid leaſe did not make any diſcontinuance, but the reverſion thereof continued parcel of the manor. 2 Rol. Abr. 58.

If tenant in tail makes a feoffment in fee; this is a diſcontinuance, for he has the right of poſſeſſion inheritable in him; for altho' the ſtatute de donis preſerves the right of the inheritance to the iſſue; yet it does not preſerve the right of poſſeſſion, and therefore the iſſue is put to his action. Lit. ſect. 598.

So if tenant in tail, remainder to his right heirs, makes a feoffment in fee; this is a diſcontinuance. 1 Rol. Abr. 633. Cro. Car. 387, 405, 406.

If tenant in tail be diſſeiſed, and releaſes to the diſſeiſor all his right; this works no diſcontinuance; for a leaſe being a conveyance in ſecret cannot paſs the poſſeſſion; and therefore a conveyance, that cannot paſs the poſſeſſion, cannot paſs the right of poſſeſſion. Lit. ſect. 598, 599. 3 Co. 85. S. P.

But if tenant in tail be diſſeiſed, and releaſes all his right to the diſſeiſor, and binds himſelf and his heirs to warranty, and dies; and the warranty deſcends upon the iſſue in tail, this is a diſcontinuance, by reaſon of the warranty. Lit. ſect. 601. 3 Co. 85. S. P.

If tenant in tail leaſes for years, and after levies a fine this is a diſcontinuance, for a fine is a feoffment upon record, and the freehold paſſes. Co. Lit. 332. a. 1 Bulſt. 162. 2 Rol. Rep. 484.

But if tenant in tail leaſes for his own life, and after levies a fine, this is no diſcontinuance, becauſe the reverſion expectant upon an eſtate of freehold, which lies only in grant, paſſed thereby. Co. Lit. 332.

If tenant in tail leaſes for the life of the leſſee, by this the tail and reverſion thereupon is diſcontinued; and if the tenant in tail by deed grants his reverſion in fee to another, and the tenant for life attorns; and after the tenant for life dies, leaving the tenant in tail, &c. this is a diſcontinuance in fee. Lit. ſect. 620.

If tenant in tail leaſes for life, the remainder in fee, this is an abſolute diſcontinuance, though the remainder is not executed in the life of tenant in tail, becauſe all but one eſtate, and paſſeth by one livery. Co. Lit. 333. b.

But if tenant in tail leaſes for three lives, according to 32 H. 8. this is no diſcontinuance of the eſtate-tail, or of the reverſion, becauſe it is authoriſed by act of parliament, whereunto every man's conſent is involved. Co. Lit. 333. a.

If tenant in tail leaſes for life, and after diſſeiſes leſſee for life, and makes a feoffment in fee, and the leſſee dies, and then tenant in tail dies, though the fee was executed, yet becauſe it was not executed by lawful means, it is no diſcontinuance. Co. Lit. 333. b.

If there be tenant for life, remainder in tail, remainder in tail, &c. and tenant for life, and he in the firſt remainder in tail levy a fine, this is no diſcontinuance of either of the remainders, becauſe each of them paſſed only what he lawfully might. 1 Co. 79. a. Co. Lit. 302. b. Cro. Eliz. 827. Moor 634. Owen 129.

If tenant in tail enfeoffs the donor, this is not any diſcontinuance, becauſe the donor hath the immediate eſtate, and it operates as a ſurrender; it paſſes no more than it lawfully may paſs. Lit. ſ. 625. 1 Co. 140. S. P.

If the donee enfeoff the donor and a ſtranger, this is a diſcontinuance of the whole land. Co. Lit. 335. a.

If a man covenants to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to his wife for life; the remainder to the heirs males which he ſhall get on the body of his wife, remainder to his eldeſt ſon by a former wife, &c. and after the huſband and wife levy a fine with warranty, and die without iſſue, this is no diſcontinuance of the remainder, becauſe the eſtate-tail was not executed, by reaſon of the intervening eſtate limited to the wife, which eſtate is not drowned, but remains diſtinct. 1 Lev. 36. Raym. 36. S. C. 1 Sid. 83. S. C.

If a man has the right of poſſeſſion, and is not poſſeſſed by virtue of the intail, he cannot diſcontinue otherwiſe than by warranty. Lit. ſ. 637, 641. Carth. 110. S. P.

As if there be grandfather, father, and ſon, and the grandfather is ſeiſed in tail, and the father diſſeiſes the grandfather, and makes a feoffment in fee, and dies, this works no diſcontinuance, becauſe the father was not poſſeſſed of the intail, but of a fee-ſimple by diſſeiſin, which was ſubject to the entry of the tenant in tail; and conſequently the alienee is ſubject to the entry of the iſſue in tail, inaſmuch as the father, who made the alienation, had only the naked poſſeſſion by diſſeiſin, and not the right of poſſeſſion by virtue of the intail. Lit. ſect. 658. 1 Rol. Abr. 634. Raym. 37.

So if tenant in tail leaſes to one for life, and hath iſſue, and dies, and the reverſion deſcends to the iſſue, and the iſſue grants the reverſion to another in fee, and the tenant for life attorns, and dies, and the grantee enters, and is ſeiſed in fee in the life of the iſſue, and the iſſue in tail hath iſſue a ſon, and dies, this is no diſcontinuance; but the ſon may enter, &c. for that his father had never any thing in him by force of the intail. Lit. ſect. 638.

So if there be tenant for life, the remainder in tail, and he in remainder enters upon the leſſee, and diſſeiſes him, and makes a feoffment over, that is not any diſcontinuance, becauſe he never was ſeiſed by force of the intail. 1 Rol. Abr. 634.

But if there be leſſee for years, the remainder in tail to J. S. and J. S. enters upon the leſſee, and makes a leaſe for life, or feoffment in fee, this is a diſcontinuance, for he was ſeiſed by force of the intail at the time of the feoffment. 1 Rol. Abr. 634.

Nor by tenant in tail of the gift of the crown, 34 & 35 H. 8. c. 20.

Nor by tenant in tail of fee farm rents to bar the remainder veſted by the ſtatute, 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 24. ſ. 6.

Diſcontinuance of proceſs, Is when the opportunity of proſecution is loſt for that time; or the plaintiff is diſmiſſed the court, &c. and every ſuit, whether civil or criminal, and every proceſs therein, ought to be properly continued from day to day, &c. from its commencement to its concluſion; and the ſuffering any default or gap herein, is called a diſcontinuance: The continuance of the ſuit by improper proceſs, or by giving the party an illegal day, is properly a miſcontinuance 2 Hawk. 298. Where an action is long depending, and continued from one term to another, the continuances, muſt be all entered, otherwiſe there will be a diſcontinuance; whereupon a writ of error may be brought, &c. 1 Nelſ. Abr. 660. If the plaintiff in a ſuit doth nothing, it is a diſcontinuance, and he muſt begin his ſuit again: And where it is too late to amend a declaration, &c. or the plaintiff is adviſed to proſecute in another court, he is to diſcontinue his ſuit, and proceed de novo. Com. Law com. plac. 171. But diſcontinuance of an action, is not perfect till it is entred on the roll, when it is of record, Cro. Car. 236. the plaintiff cannot diſcontinue his action after a demurrer joined, and entered; or after a verdict, or a writ of inquiry, without leave of the court. Cro. Jac. 35. 1 Lill. Abr. 473. In actions of debt or covenant, after a demurrer joined, the court will give leave to diſcontinue, if there be an apparent cauſe; as if the plaintiff through his own negligence is in danger of loſing his debt: But if the demurrer be argued, then he ſhall not have leave to diſcontinue; nor where he brings another action for the ſame cauſe, and this is pleaded in abatement of the firſt action. Sid. 84. It has been ruled, upon a motion to diſcontinue, that the court may give leave after a ſpecial verdict; which is not complete and final; but never after a general verdict. 1 Salk. 178. 1 Nelſ. 663. An appeal may as well be diſcontinued by the defect of the proceſs as proceeding in it, as it may be by the inſufficiency of the original writ, &c. for by ſuch defect, the matter depending is as it were out of the court. 1 Lill. 423. A diſcontinuance or miſcontinuance, at Common law reverſes a judgment given by default; and diſcontinuance upon a demurrer is error; but a miſcontinuance after appearance is not ſo. 8 Rep. 150. 46 Ed. 3. 30. Diſcontinuance of proceſs is helped at Common law by appearance: And by ſtat. 32 H. 8. cap. 30. all diſcontinuances, miſcontinuances and negligences therein, of plaintiff or defendant, are cured after verdict. 2 Danvers 352.

Plaintiff, though an adminiſtrator, cannot diſcontinue without payment of coſts: per cur. 1 Barnes 110.

Plaintiff moved to diſcontinue upon payment of coſts after judgment given on demurrer for the plaintiff (but not entred upon record), and a writ of error brought, and bail put in thereupon; the court refuſed to make a rule to diſcontinue without payment of coſts on the writ of error. 1 Barnes 110.

Plaintiff obtained a rule to diſcontinue on payment of coſts. Defendant moved to diſcharge the rule upon affidavit that he had been a ſecond time arreſted for the ſame cauſe of action before the rule was obtained. The court refuſed to make any rule. Plaintiff may diſcontinue at any time. 1 Barn. 110.

Caſe in replevin, the avowant had juſtified under a diſtreſs for rent. Plaintiff demurred to the avowry, and upon argu ng the demurrer court gave judgment for the avowant. Eyre afterwards moved for plaintiff to diſcontinue; court denied the motion. The queſtion determined upon demurrer being upon the conſtruction of the act of parliament, which is the merits of the cauſe. 1 Barn. 111.

Plaintiff had obtained a rule to diſcontinue (which was drawn up in the following manner, (viz.) that plaintiff ſhall diſcontinue, and ſhall pay coſts, &c. upon an affidavit that defendant being indebted to plaintiff, a writ was iſſued againſt him; but defendant having paid the money before the arreſt, the Sheriff's officer to whom the warrant was delivered, was countermanded from proceeding, notwithdanding which he arreſted the defendant, who thereupon brought an action for falſe impriſonment in the court of King's Bench. The coſts upon the rule had been paid, but the diſcontinuance was not entred upon record. The court thought the rule not drawn up in common form, which is, that the plaintiff have leave or be at liberty to diſcontinue; and therefore diſcharged the rule. The action brought in the King's Bench appeared to be vexatious, and plantiff, by diſcharging his rule to diſcontinue, had an opportunity of pleading the action in this court ſtill depending, or juſtify under the capias, as he ſhould be adviſed. 1 Barn. 111, 112.

A ſci. fa. was ſued out by plaintiff to revive a judgment recovered by plaintiff's inteſtate. Defendant craved oyer of the letters of adminiſtration, which being defective, plaintiff dropped the proceeding on ſci. fa. and having procured ſufficient letters of adminiſtration, brought an action of debt on the judgment in the court of King's Bench. Defendant pleaded the writ of ſci. fa. pending in this court in abatement, and plaintiff replied a diſcontinuance (entred without leave of the court.) Defendant moved to ſet aſide the diſcontinuance, and the queſtion was, whether or no plaintiff could diſcontinue without leave of the court? The practice was variouſly reported; and it not appearing, whether the roll whereupon the diſcontinuance was entred was brought in before or after the plea in the King's Bench, the rule to ſhew cauſe why the diſcontinuance ſhould not be ſet aſide was diſcharged, plaintiff conſenting to pay coſts of the plea in abatement, and that defendant ſhould be at liberty to plead de novo. 1 Barn. 112, 113.

No ſuit ſhall be diſcontinued by the death of the King, or by the death, &c. of the juſtices, 1 Ed. 6. c. 7.

Diſcontinuance of plea, Is where divers things ſhould be pleaded to, and ſome are omitted; this is a diſcontinuance. 1. Nelſ. Abr. 660, 661. If a defendant's plea begin with an anſwer to part, and anſwers no more, it is a diſcontinuance; and the plaintiff may take judgment by nil dicit, for what is not anſwered: but if the plaintiff plead over, the whole action is diſcontinued. 1 Salk. 139. Debt upon bond of 500 l. the defendant as to 250 l. part of it pleads payment, &c. and upon demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged, that there being no anſwer to the reſidue, is a diſcontinuance as to that, for which the plaintiff ought to take judgment by nil dicit. 1 Salk. 180. Where no anſwer is given to one part, if the the plaintiff pleads thereto, he cannot have judgment according to his declaration, ; for which reaſon it may be a diſcontinuance of the whole. 1 Nelſ. 660. But this is helped after verdict by 32 H. 8. c. 30. See Amendment.

Diſcovert, Is uſed in the law for a woman unmarried, or a widow; one not within the bonds of matrimony. Law Fr. Dict.

Diſcovery, Is the act of revealing or diſcloſing any matter by defendant in his anſwer to a bill filed againſt him in the court of equity.

A man is not bound to diſcover what may ſubject him to the penalty of an act of parliament. Vern. 109. pl. 98. Mich. 1682. Bird. v. Hardwick.

Defendant ſhall not diſcover any thing againſt himſelf to charge himſelf with the penalty of a bond of arbitration. Chan. Rep. 142. 15 Car. 1 Biſhop v. Biſhop.

The huſband deviſed to his wife an eſtate and intereſt in ſeveral goods and things, to be held and enjoyed by her during her widowhood. On a bill brought againſt her to diſcover, whether married or not, in order to prove a forfeiture forfeiture of her eſtate, ſhe demurred, and the bill was diſmiſſed. 2 Chan. Rep. 68. 24 Car. 2. Monnings v. Monnings.

A bill was to diſcover, whether the defendant did not conceal the cuſtoms and exciſe upon 260 caſks of currans imported, and had endeavoured to corrupt the cuſtomhouſe officers by promiſing 40 l. reward to conceal it. On demurrer by the defendant, the court inclined to think he ſhould not be compelled to make a diſcovery, unleſs the Attorney general waived the proceeding for all forfeitures. Arg. Comyns's Rep. 664. cites Hard. 137, 138. (Hill. 1658. in Scacc.) The Attorney general v. Mico.

The difference is between cauſes criminal and civil; if an offender be once legally convicted of an offence, whereby he ought to forfeit his eſtate, then it is lawful and proper to prefer a bill to diſcover what eſtate in lands and goods he then had; as in caſe of an outlawry or attainder, &c. for that the effect of ſuch a bill is only to diſcover what is forfeited already, and not to diſcover a cauſe of forfeiture. Arg. Hard. 145. in the S. C.

A bill for tithes; defendant demurred becauſe he had not offered by his bill to accept of the ſingle value, and yet alledged in his bill that the defendant had carried away the corn, &c. without ſetting forth the tithes according to the ſtatute. It was urged for the defendant, that ſhould he anſwer, the plaintiff would preſently go to law, and give his anſwer in evidence, and recover the treble value of the tithes, and a court of equity ought not to aſſiſt in recovering a penalty, nor compel a diſcovery of a forfeiture; but over-ruled, the plaintiff in this caſe being only executor of a parſon, and not the parſon himſelf, and ſo not intitled to a forfeiture on the ſtatute. Vern. 60. pl. 57. Mich. 1682. Anon.'

Bill was brought to diſcover ſimony; defendants demurred, and the demurrer was allowed. Ch. Prec. 214. pl. 176. Hill. 1702. Attorney general for Hindley v. Sundell, Heaketh & al'.

Where ſeveral are partners in an unlawful or clandeſtine trade, and one of them brings a bill of diſcovery againſt the other, it is no good plea that their anſwer may ſubject them to the penalty of an act of parliament; for by their going on in ſuch trade, they ſeemed to have intirely waived that unlawfulneſs as between themſelves; ſo the plea was diſallowed, and they were ordered to anſwer. *G. In an action on the caſe a verdict paſſes againſt the plaintiff for want of being able to prove a letter wrote to him by the defendant; the plaintiff brings a bill to clear up this matter; defendant pleads the verdict, and that the effect of the letter was given in evidence at the trial, and demurred for want of equity, and plea and demurrer allowed. *Chan. Diſſeiſin. (Diſſeiſina,) Signifieth an unlawful diſpoſſeſſing a man of his land, tenement, or other immoveable or incorporeal right. Cowell. It is where a man enters into any lands or tenements, where his entry is not congeable, and ouſts him which hath the freehold; ſo that it differs from an abatement, which is the entrance of a ſtranger into lands, of which an anceſtor died ſeiſed before the heir has entered; ſo that there is not properly an actual ouſter committed of the perſon that was ſeiſed of the freehold, as there is in caſe of diſſeiſin; but the entry of the perſon who has the title to the freehold is prevented; in like manner a diſſeiſin differs from an intruſion, which is when an anceſtor dies ſeiſed of any eſtate of inheritance expectant on an eſtate for life, and then tenant for life dies; and between the death of the tenant and entry of the heir, a ſtranger interpoſes and intrudes, and ſo gets poſſeſſion of the freehold; ſo that it is rather a prevention of the heir's entry, than an actual ouſter of him of his freehold. Lit. ſect. 279. Co. Lit. 181, 277.

If huſband and wife purchaſe lands in fee, and then the huſband is attainted of felony, and the King ſeizes the land, and afterwards the lord of whom it is held, hath it upon ſuggeſtion delivered to him out of the hands of the King, as his proper eſcheat; this is a diſſeiſin of the wife who was jointenant with the huſband, for the lord got poſſeſſion of the freehold by his miſrepreſentation of the nature of the eſtate to the King; which being a manifeſt act of injuſtice and falſhood, the poſſeſſion acquired by it muſt be looked upon as an acquiſition of the ſame nature with a poſſeſſion gained by open and avowed violence; and ſo a diſſeiſin. 1 Rol. Abr. 658.

A man has a houſe, and locks it, and departs, and another comes to the houſe and takes the ring of the houſe in his hand, and ſays that he claims the houſe to himſelf in fee, without making any entry into it, this is a diſſeiſin of the houſe; for the claim he made upon taking the ring into his hand ſhews his intention in doing it to be a plain ſeiſin of the intire freehold, and conſequently a diſſeiſin of the true proprietor; and his non-entry into the houſe, upon his ſeiſing of it, will not qualify the intention of what he has done, ſince his ſeiſin of part, in the name of the whole, gives him whatſoever an entry could have done, and therefore ſuch an entry was not neceſſary. 1 Rol. Abr. 659.

A man has a mill, and A. turns the water that uſed to ſerve the mill, ſo that it cannot grind; this is a diſſeiſin of the mill, for which an aſſiſe lies againſt A. for to deprive a man of the means he has of obtaining the profits of his freehold, is in effect to diſſeiſe him of his freehold. Bro. Diſſeiſin 25.

If A. cuts trees in his ſoil, and B. who has common there, ſays, that the ſoil is his, and commands him not to cut there, whereupon A. departs out of the land, this is no diſſeiſin in B. for he who has no right to a freehold cannot be ſeiſed of it by bare words only, which are fleeting and tranſitory, and do not amount to ſuch an act of notoriety and ſolemnity, as is required in gaining poſſeſſion of a freehold, whereof ſtrangers are to take notice. 1 Rol. Abr. 659. Bro. Diſſeiſin 42.

If a man who has a right of entry into lands, in coming thither is diſturbed and hindred from entring, this is a diſſeiſin, ſuch hindrance of entry being equivalent to an actual ouſter of the freehold. 1 Rol. Abr. 659.

If the King be ſeiſed in fee of the manor of B. and a ſtranger erects a ſhop in a vacant plat of it, and takes the profit of it without paying any rent to the King, and after the King grants over the manor in fee, and the ſtranger continues in the ſhop, and occupies it as before, this is no diſſeiſin; for the firſt entry of the ſtranger was no diſſeiſin, but an intruſion on the King's poſſeſſion; for that the King's title appearing on record, the entry in pais, which is not an act of equal notoriety, will not deveſt it out of him; if then the King is not diſſeiſed, his conveyance of the freehold is good, and the grantee is ſeiſed by virtue of it, and conſequently cannot be ſaid to be diſſeiſed by the ſtranger who has made no entry upon him after the King's conveyance, but only continued the old intereſt which he had before the grant, and ſo remains an intruder ſtill, and liable to an action of treſpaſs or ejectment for it. 1 Rol. Abr. 659. Hob. 322. Bro. Diſſeiſin 4.

Baron and feme ſeiſed in tail, the baron goes out of the country, and in his abſence the feme infeoffs A. in fee, this is a diſſeiſin of the huſband by A. becauſe the feoffment by the feme covert was void, and ſo the entry under it tortious. Bro. tit. Diſſeiſin 24.

If a diſſeiſor makes a leaſe for years or at will, and the diſſeiſee enters upon him, and then the leſſee re-enters, claiming by virtue of his leaſe, though that was only a term for years, yet he is a diſſeiſor, becauſe he enters upon the proprietor of the ſoil, and ouſts him of his poſſeſſion, and that by virtue of a former diſſeiſin, ſo that the poſſeſſion of the freehold cannot be ſuppoſed to be left in the diſſeiſee; and therefore ſuch an entry muſt be equivalent to an avowed diſſeiſin. 1 Rol. Abr. 662.

If a man enters into my land, claiming a leaſe for years, or enters as tenant by ſtatute merchant, when he has no right, he is a diſſeiſor, the entry being unlawful, and the pretence of title unjuſt. 1 Rol. Abr. 662.

If a man who has a right of entry into lands, in coming thither is diſturbed and hindred from entring, this is a diſſeiſin, ſuch hindrance of entry being equivalent to an actual ouſter of the freehold. 1 Rol. Abr. 659.

If the King be ſeiſed in fee of the manor of B. and a ſtranger erects a ſhop in a vacant plat of it, and takes the profit of it without paying any rent to the King, and after the King grants over the manor in fee, and the ſtranger continues in the ſhop, and occupies it as before, this is no diſſeiſin; for the firſt entry of the ſtranger was no diſſeiſin, but an intruſion on the King's poſſeſſion; for that the King's title appearing on record, the entry in pais, which is not an act of equal notoriety, will not deveſt it out of him; if then the King is not diſſeiſed, his conveyance of the freehold is good, and the grantee is ſeiſed by virtue of it, and conſequently cannot be ſaid to be diſſeiſed by the ſtranger who has made no entry upon him after the King's conveyance, but only continued the old intereſt which he had before the grant, and ſo remains an intruder ſtill, and liable to an action of treſpaſs or ejectment for it. 1 Rol. Abr. 659. Hob. 322. Bro. Diſſeiſin 4.

Baron and feme ſeiſed in tail, the baron goes out of the country, and in his abſence the feme infeoffs A. in fee, this is a diſſeiſin of the huſband by A. becauſe the feoffment by the feme covert was void, and ſo the entry under it tortious. Bro. tit. Diſſeiſin 24.

If a diſſeiſor makes a leaſe for years or at will, and the diſſeiſee enters upon him, and then the leſſee re-enters, claiming by virtue of his leaſe, though that was only a term for years, yet he is a diſſeiſor, becauſe he enters upon the proprietor of the ſoil, and ouſts him of his poſſeſſion, and that by virtue of a former diſſeiſin, ſo that the poſſeſſion of the freehold cannot be ſuppoſed to be left in the diſſeiſee; and therefore ſuch an entry muſt be equivalent to an avowed diſſeiſin. 1 Rol. Abr. 662.

If a man enters into my land; claiming a leaſe for years, or enters as tenant by ſtatute merchant, when he has no right, he is a diſſeiſor, the entry being unlawful, and the pretence of title unjuſt. 1 Rol. Abr. 662.

A man makes a leaſe for years to another and his heirs, and the leſſee dies, and the heir claiming the term eſters, though the term being a chattle muſt go to the executors, and not to the heir; yet the heir is no diſſeiſor, becauſe he claimed only a term, and no freehold, and ſuch a term too as was in being, and actually limited to him; and therefore the heir in this caſe, that is named in the words of limitation, ſhall be only preſumed to enter on behalf of the executor, to continue the term that was in being, and not to commit a diſſeiſin on the freehold. 1 Rol. Abr. 662.

Diſtreſs is the thing which is taken and diſtrained upon any land for rent behind, or other duty, or for hurt done, although the property of the thing belongeth to a ſtranger. Termes de la Ley.

Diſtreſs, Signifies a compulſion in certain real actions, whereby to bring a man to appear in court, or to pay a debt or duty denied: The effect whereof moſt commonly is to drive the party diſtrained to replevy the diſtreſs, and ſo to take his action of treſpaſs againſt the diſtrainer, or elſe to compound neighbourly with him for the debt or duty for which the diſtreſs was made. Cowell.

Diſtreſs is by Briton, cap. 71. divided into perſonal and real. Diſtreſs perſonal is made by diſtraining a man's moveable goods, and ſeiſing all the profit of his lands and tenements, from the teſte or date of the writ, for the defendant's contempt, in not appearing to an action brought againſt him, after he was ſummoned or attached; and the iſſues ſo returned by the ſheriff are forfeited to the King, and eſtreated into the Exchequer. Diſtreſs real is made upon immoveable goods. This differs from an attachment, for that it cannot be taken by any common perſon without the compaſs of his own fee; except it be preſently after the cattle, or other thing, are driven off the ground, purpoſely to avoid the diſtreſs. Fitz. Nat. Brev. fol. 904. See Attach, and the ſtatute 17 Car 2. c. 7.

Diſtreſs is alſo divided into finite and infinite: Finite is that which is limited by law, how often it ſhall be made to bring the party to trial of the action, as once, twice, &c. Old Nat. Br. fol. 43. Diſtreſs infinite is without limitation, until the party come; as againſt a jury, which refuſeth to appear upon certificate of aſſiſe, the proceſs is venire facias, habeas corpora, and diſtreſs infinite. Old Nat. Br. f. 113. Then it is divided into a grand diſtreſs, (An. 52 H. 3. c. 7.) which Fitzherbert calls magnam diſtrictionem, and an ordinary diſtreſs. A grand diſtreſs is that which is made of all the goods and chattles that the party hath within the county. Briton, cap. 26. fol. 52. But ſee whether it be not ſometimes all one with a diſtreſs infinite. Idem, fol. 80. with whom alſo the ſtatute of Marlbridge ſeems to agree. An. 52 H. 3. cap. 7, 9, & 12. 1. Who may diſtrain, and what things may be diſtrained, for rent; and of carrying away goods to avoid diſtreſs.

2. Time and manner of diſtraining, and what is to be done with the diſtreſs.

3. Where the diſtreſs ſhall be deemed wrongful and exceſſive; and of diſtraining for fines and amercements.

1. Who may diſtrain, and what things may be diſtrained, for rent; and of carrying away goods to avoid diſtreſs.

If a man ſeiſed in fee makes a gift in tail, or a leaſe for life, years, or at will, ſaving the reverſion to himſelf, with a reſervation of rent, or other ſervices; the law gives the donor or leſſor, without any expreſs proviſion, a remedy for ſuch rent or ſervices by diſtreſs. See Lit. ſect. 214. Bro. tit. Diſtreſs 5, 15.

But if the donor or leſſor reſerve not the reverſion, he cannot diſtrain of common right, but he may reſerve to himſelf a power of diſtraining, or the reverſion may be good to bind the leſſee by way of contract, for the performance whereof the leſſor ſhall have an action of debt. Co. Lit. 47. a. 5 Co. 3. 2 Saund. 303.

A rent diſtrainable of common right, or by the Common law, cannot iſſue out of an incorporeal inheritance; as if I have a right of common in another man's foil, and I grant it to A. reſerving rent, if the rent be behind, I cannot diſtrain the beaſts of A. becauſe that the right of common which every man has, runs through the whole common. Co. Lit. 47. a. 142. a. 2 Rol. Abr. 446.

A rent granted for equality of partition by one coparcener to another, is good; ſo is a rent granted to a widow out of lands whereof ſhe is dowable, in lieu of her dower; the like law of a rent granted in lieu of lands upon an exchange; and for theſe the law gives a remedy by diſtreſs, without any proviſion of the parties, though though they have no reverſion. Co. Lit. 169. b. 3 Co. 22. b. Kelw. 104, 126.

If a termor grants all his term, rendering rent, he cannot diſtrain for it. Bro. Diſtreſs 7.

If a man ſeiſed of land in fee, and poſſeſſed of other land for years, grants a rent-charge for life out of both, with a power to diſtrain in both, if the rent be in arrear, the leaſehold as well as the lands of inheritance are ſubject to the diſtreſs, becauſe a man may oblige his chattles to the diſcharge of the rent; but the rent being a freehold ſhall iſſue only out of the inheritance, becauſe the leaſehold being only a temporary and periſhing intereſt, is not a fund commenſurate to the charge, and therefore the rent ſhall iſſue out of the inheritance, which for its duration is a more competent eſtate to ſupport the charge, and render the grant effectual; and hence it was adjudged, that though the grantee might diſtrain the leaſehold lands, yet he muſt avow for a rent iſſuing only out of the inheritance. 7 Co. 51. Co. Lit. 147. b. Cro. Jac. 390. 1 Rol. Rep. 330. Cro. Eliz. 607, 622.

The ſervices or rent, for which the lord or leſſor may diſtrain, muſt be certain, or ſuch as may be reduced to a certainty; for otherwiſe the lord cannot, in his avowry, recover damages for the non-performance or non-payment, when the jury cannot determine what injury he has ſuſtained; but if the tenant holds of his lord to ſheer all his ſheep feeding in ſuch a manor; this is certain enough, becauſe 'tis eaſy to compute the number within the precincts of the manor; and conſequently what expence the lord is at in imploying other hands to that work, and what damages he has ſuſtained by the omiſſion of his tenant. Co. Lit. 96. a.

If a man ſeiſed in fee, or for life, of a rent-charge, after arrearages incur, grants over the rent to another, he cannot diſtrain for theſe arrearages, becauſe they are by the grant divided from the freehold of the rent. 4 Co. 50. b. Vaugh. 40, 41.

If tenant pur auter vie, or tenant for years, held over, yet the leſſor could not diſtrain them for rent, that became due before the determination of their reſpective leaſes, though they continued in poſſeſſion of the lands afterwards; for when the leaſe was determined, the leſſor could not avow on them as his tenants, claiming under a leaſe, which was determined. 6 Co. 64. Co. Lit. 47. Cro. Jac. 442.

To remedy this, it is provided by the 8 Ann. "That whereas tenants pur auter vie, and leſſees for years, or at will, frequently hold over the tenements to them demiſed, after the determination of ſuch leaſes; and whereas after the determination of ſuch, or any other leaſes, no diſtreſſes can by law be made for any arrears of rent that grew due on ſuch reſpective leaſes, before the determination thereof; it is hereby further enacted, That from and after the firſt day of May 1710, it ſhall and may be lawful for any perſon or perſons, having any rent in arrear, or due upon any leaſe for life or lives, or for years, or at will, ended or determined, to diſtrain for ſuch arrears after the determination of the ſaid reſpective leaſes, in the ſame manner as they might have done, if ſuch leaſe or leaſes had not been ended or determined; provided that ſuch diſtreſs be made within the ſpace of ſix kalendar months, after the determination of ſuch leaſe, and during the continuance of ſuch landlord's title or intereſt, and during the poſſeſſion of the tenant from whom ſuch arrears became due."

There muſt be a valuable property in ſome body in the things diſtrained, therefore no diſtreſs can be of dogs, deer, conies, &c. which are feræ naturæ. Co. Lit. 47.

Things fixed to the freehold, or part of the freehold, as furnaces, cauldrons, doors, windows fixed to the freehold, or corn growing cannot be diſtrained. Co. Lit. 47. 2 Mod. 61.

No man can be diſtrained by the utenſils of his trade for a rent, as the ax of a carpenter, the books of a ſcholar, the materials for making cloth in a weaver's ſhop; for theſe the law protects under a preſumption that without them the tenant could neither be uſeful to others, nor gain a livelihood for himſelf. Co. Lit. 47.

Alſo for the benefit of trade and commerce, ſome things are privileged from being diſtrained, as a horſe in a ſmith's ſhop, a horſe in an inn, ſacks of corn or meal in a mill, cloth or garments in a taylor's ſhop, or ſacks of corn or meal in a market. Co. Lit. 47. 3 Bulſt. 270. 1 Rol. Abr. 668. Cro. Eliz. 569.

So if a horſe carries corn to a mill, and is tied to the mill-door, during the grinding of the corn, he ſhall not be diſtrained; but cattle driving to a market, and by the way put into a paſture, may be diſtrained. Cro. Eliz. 552. 2 Vent. 50.

And theſe things are privileged, tho' they continue there three or four days, or are retained never ſo long by the tenant for his ſatisfaction in ſome thing he has done about them. 1 Rol. Abr. 668.

If a man rides to a place, and is there taken ſick, by means whereof he is obliged to tarry there two or three days, his horſe cannot be diſtrained for rent. 1 Rol. Abr. 668.

Things diſtrained damage-feaſant cannot be diſtrained for rent, becauſe they are in the cuſtody of the law. Co. Lit. 47.

If a clothier having put his wool to ſpin comes with an horſe to carry it back, but becauſe there is no beam or weights at the ſpinner's houſe to weigh it, the clothier and ſpinner, with the leave of a neighbour, who had a beam and weights in his houſe, bring the horſe thither, and enter the houſe to weigh the yarn, the lord of the houſe, whilſt they are there, cannot diſtrain the horſe for ſervices. Cro. Eliz. 549, 596.

Things for which a replevin will not lie, ſo as to be known again, as money out of a bag, cannot be diſtrained for this reaſon; and alſo for the damages, that ſhocks of corn, hay, &c. might ſuſtain, it was held that they could not be diſtrained. 1 Rol. Abr. 667. Kelw. 145. 2 Inſt. 82.

Averia carucæ, or beaſts of the plough, or any thing belonging to it cannot by Common law be diſtrained, while there are other goods or beaſts (which Bracton calls Animalia otioſa) which may be diſtrained; alſo a covenable diſtreſs is not of armour or veſſel, or apparel, or jewels, ſo long as there are other ſufficient and covenable; nor of ſheep, ſaddle-horſes, poultry, or fiſh. Co. Lit. 47. 2 Inſt. 143.

By the ſtatute De diſtrictione ſcaccarii made 51 H. 3. "No man ſhall be diſtrained by the beaſts that gain his land, nor by his ſheep, but until another diſtreſs or chattels ſufficient be found, except for damage-feaſant."

It is agreed, that the cattle of a ſtranger eſcaping into his neighbour's grounds, and there being levant and couchant, may be diſtrained by the lord or leſſor of thoſe grounds for rent or ſervices due to him; for it ſhall be imputed the owner's folly that he did not provide againſt this miſchief by proper bounds and fences. 2 Inſt. 296. Co. Lit. 47.

Cattle which are in certain land by way of agiſtment may be diſtrained for rent. 1 Rol. Abr. 669.

If the tenant ought to incloſe againſt the highway by preſcription, and in driving my cattle by the way, by default of the incloſure they eſcape into the land of the tenant, the lord cannot diſtrain them; ſo if he ought to incloſe by preſcription againſt my land, and my cattle eſcape. 1 Rol. Abr. 668.

If A. and B. have two cloſes lying contiguous, and A. by preſcription is bound to repair the fences between both the ſaid cloſes, and A. leaſes his cloſes to C. for years, rendering rent; and the fences between the two cloſes being out of repair, the cattle of B. eſcape into the cloſe of A. he may diſtrain them for rent arrear, and it is not material whether they are levant or couchant or not; adjudged, and the judgment affirmed upon a writ of error, tho' objected that they eſcaped there through the default of A. who ought to have taken care that they were repaired: And by Sanders; nota, This was a hard caſe to maintain, there being a vaſt difference between the lord's taking a diſtreſs within his ſeigniory, and the leſſor's diſtraining for rent reſerved upon his own leaſe, for the lord hath nothing to do with the land or fences, and ſo it concerns not him whether they are in repair or not; otherwiſe of the leſſor, for he ought to repair them, elſe he will have advantage of his own wrong. 2 Saund. 289, 290.

If a man, that is driving his cattle to London to ſell, aſks leave of the leſſor to put his cattle into the ground for a night, and he giving him leave ſo to do, with the conſent of the leſſee, and the cattle are put in accordingly, the leſſor is not concluded by this licence, but that he may diſtrain them for rent; adjudged upon demurrer; and it not appearing by the pleading that the ground belonged to a common inn, it came not in queſtion whether in that caſe they might have been diſtrained. 2 Vent. 50. 3 Lev. 260, 261.

Stat. 11 Geo, 2 cap. 19. ſect. 1. In caſe any tenant or leſſee of lands or tenements, upon the demiſe whereof any rent is payable, ſhall fraudulently or clandeſtinely carry off his goods, to prevent the landlord from diſtraining; it ſhall be lawful for every landlord within England, Wales, or Berwick, or any perſon by him impowered, within thirty days next enſuing ſuch carrying off, to ſeize ſuch goods wherever the ſame ſhall be found, as a diſtreſs for the rent, and the ſame to ſell or diſpoſe of, as if the ſaid goods had been diſtrained upon ſuch premiſſes.

Sect. 2. Provided that no landlord ſhall ſeize goods ſold bona fide, and for a valuable conſideration, to any perſon not privy to ſuch fraud.

Sect. 3. If any ſuch tenant ſhall fraudulently remove his goods, or if any perſon ſhall knowingly aſſiſt ſuch tenant in fraudulently conveying away his goods, or in concealing the ſame, all perſons ſo offending ſhall forfeit to the landlord, from whoſe eſtate ſuch goods were carried off, double the value of the goods, to be recovered by action of debt in any of his Majeſty's courts at Weſtminſter, or in the courts of ſeſſion in the counties palatine, or in the courts of grand ſeſſions in Wales.

Sect. 4. Where the goods carried off ſhall not exceed the value of 50 l. it ſhall be lawful for the landlord, his bailiff, ſervant or agent, to exhibit a complaint in writing againſt ſuch offenders before two juſtices of peace reſiding near the place, not being intereſted in the tenements; who may ſummon the parties, examine the fact, and all witneſſes upon oath, or if quakers, upon affirmation; and in a ſummary way determine whether ſuch perſon be guilty of the offence, and inquire of the value of the goods by them fraudulently carried off or concealed; and upon proof of the offence, by order of the ſaid juſtices, may judge the offenders to pay double the value of the goods to ſuch landlord, his bailiff, ſervant or agent, as the juſtices ſhall appoint; and in caſe the offenders having notice of ſuch order ſhall neglect ſo to do, ſhall by warrant levy the ſame by diſtreſs and ſale of goods; and for want of diſtreſs may commit the offenders to the houſe of correction, to be kept to hard labour for ſix months, unleſs the money be ſooner ſatisfied.

Sect. 5. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon aggrieved by ſuch order of the two juſtices to appeal to the next quarter ſeſſions, who ſhall hear and determine ſuch appeal, and give coſts to either party.

Sect. 6. Where the party appealing ſhall enter into a recognizance with ſurety in double the ſum ordered, with condition to appear at ſuch quarter-ſeſſions, the order of the two juſtices ſhall not be executed in the mean time.

Sect. 7 Where any goods fraudulently carried away by any teneant, his ſervant or agent, or other perſon aſſiſting, ſhall be put in any place locked up or ſecured, ſo as to prevent ſuch goods from being ſeized for rent, it ſhall be lawful for the landlord, his ſteward, bailiff, or other perſon impowered to ſeize for rent ſuch goods, (firſt calling to his aſſiſtance the conſtable, headborough, borſholder, or other peace officer, of the place where the ſame ſhall be ſuſpected to be concealed, who are required to aſſiſt; and in caſe of a dwelling houſe, oath being alſo made before ſome juſtice of peace of a reaſonable ground to ſuſpect that ſuch goods are there) in the daytime to break open ſuch houſe, &c. and ſeize ſuch goods for the rent, as they might have done if ſuch goods had been put in any open place.

Sect. 8. It ſhall be lawful for every landlord, his ſteward, bailiff, receiver or other perſon impowered by him, to ſeize, as a diſtreſs for rent, any cattle or ſtock of their tenants feeding upon any common appendant, or appurtenant to any part of the premiſſes demiſed, and alſo to ſeize corn and graſs, hops, roots, fruits or other product, growing on the eſtate demiſed, as diſtreſs for rent; and the ſame to cut, gather and lay up, when ripe, in the barn or other proper place on the premiſſes; and in caſe there ſhall be no proper place, then in any other barn, or proper place which ſuch landlord ſhall procure as near as may be to the premiſſes; and in convenient time to appraiſe, ſell or diſpoſe of the ſame, toward ſatisfaction of the rent, in the ſame manner as other goods may be ſeized and diſpoſed of, the appraiſement to be taken when gathered and made.

Sect. 9. Provided, that notice of the place where the goods ſhall be lodged, ſhall within one week be given to ſuch tenant, or left at his laſt place of abode; and if after any diſtreſs for rent ſo taken, of corn, graſs or other product growing, and before the ſame ſhall be ripe and cut, the tenant, his executors, adminiſtators or aſſigns, ſhall pay to the landlord, or to the ſteward, or other perſon imployed to receive the rents, the whole rent in arrear, together with coſts, ſuch diſtreſs ſhall ceaſe, and the corn, graſs or other product diſtrained, ſhall be delivered up to the tenant, &c.

Sect. 19. Where any diſtreſs ſhall be made for rent due, and any irregularity or unlawful act ſhall be afterwards done by the party diſtraining or his agents, the diſtreſs ſhall not be therefore deemed unlawful, nor the party a treſpaſſer ab initio; but the party grieved ſhall recover ſatisfaction for the ſpecial damages ſuſtained thereby, and no more, in an action of treſpaſs, or on the caſe; the plaintiff to recover full coſts.

By ſtat. 2 Will. & M. c. 5. ſect. 3. Any perſon, having rent arrear, may ſeize and ſecure any ſheaves or cocks of corn, or corn looſe, or in the ſtraw, or hay in any barn or granary, or upon an hovel, ſtack or rick, or upon any part of the land charged with ſuch rent, or to lock up or detain the ſame in the place where the ſame ſhall be found, in the nature of a diſtreſs, till the ſame ſhall be replevied, upon ſuch ſecurity to be given as aforeſaid; and in default of replevying the ſame within the time aforeſaid, to ſell the ſame after ſuch appraiſement thereof to be made, ſo as ſuch corn, grain, or hay, be not removed by the perſon diſtraining, to the damage of the owner thereof, out of the place where the ſame ſhall be found and ſeized; but be kept there as impounded, till the ſame ſhall be replevied or ſold as aforeſaid.

2. Time and manner of diſtraining, and what is to be done with the diſtreſs.

A diſtreſs for a rent-ſervice or rent-charge cannot be in the night, but one may diſtrain cattle damage feaſant in the night, otherwiſe they may be gone before morning. Co. Lit. 142. 7 Co. 7. a. 9 Co. 66. Latch 211. 4 Leon. 218.

By the ſtatute of Marlbridge, made 52 H. 3. c. 2. "None ſhall diſtrain any to come to his court, which is not of his fee, or upon whom he has no juriſdiction, by reaſon of a hundred or bailiwick, nor take diſtreſſes out of the fee or place where he hath juriſdiction."

By the ſame ſtatute, cap. 15. it is enacted, "That from thenceforth it ſhall be lawful for no man for any manner of cauſe to take diſtreſſes out of his fee, or in the King's highway, or in the common ſtreet, but only to the King and his officers, having ſpecial authority ſo to do."

If the lord coming to diſtrain hath the view of the beaſts within his fee, and before he can diſtrain them the tenant chaſes them into the highway, the lord, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of Marlbridge, cap. 15. may diſtrain them there. 2 Inſt. 132.

A diſtreſs for rent may be taken in a houſe, if the doors be open; ſo it may be taken out of a window. 1 Rol. Abr. 671.

By

By the Common law, a man might have driven a diſtreſs whither he pleaſed, which was very miſchievous, Firſt, Becauſe the tenant was bound to give the beaſts ſuſtenance, if impounded in an open pound, and being driven into another county, he could not by intendment of law know where they were. Secondly, He could not tell where to have a replevy. 2 Inſt. 106. But now by the ſtatute of Marlbridge, made 52 H. 3. c. 4. none ſhall cauſe a diſtreſs to be driven out of the county where taken, on pain of fine, &c.

Alſo by the ſtatute of the 1 & 2 Ph. & Mary, cap. 12. "No diſtreſs ſhall be driven out of the hundred, rape, wapentake, or lathe, where taken, except to a pound overt within the ſame ſhire, not above three miles diſtant from the place where taken, and no diſtreſs ſhall be impounded in ſeveral places whereby the owner ſhall be conſtrained to ſue ſeveral replevies; upon pain that every perſon offending ſhall forfeit to the party grieved 5 l. and treble damages.

If a man diſtrains dead goods, as utenſils of a houſe, or ſuch like, which may take damage by wet or weather, and the like, he ought to impound them in an houſe or other pound covert within three miles in the ſame county; for if he impounds them in a pound overt he ought to anſwer for them. Co. Lit. 47.

If a man diſtrains cattle, and puts them in a pound overt, the owner ought to keep them at his peril, for it is lawful for him to come there for this purpoſe; but if he puts the cattle in a pound covert or cloſe, there he ought to keep them at his peril, and yet he ſhall not have any ſatisfaction for it. Co. Lit. 47. 2 Inſt. 106. S. P.

He who diſtrains cannot make uſe of the diſtreſs, ſo as to work a horſe, &c. for he hath no property but a bare power by act of law to take it: So if a man hath a return irrepleviſable, yet he cannot work it, for the judgment is to remit it to the pound ibidem manſur', &c. Own 124. Dyer 280.

If a man takes a cow for a diſtreſs, he cannot milk her; for tho' the cow be the better for this, yet he ought not to do good to the owner without his conſent, and perhaps the owner would have come before any damage came by this to the cow; and if it periſh by this, yet he who took the diſtreſs may diſtrain again. 1 Rol. Abr. 648, 879. Noy 119. Cro. Jac. 147. Yelv. 96.

If a man diſtrains a horſe, and impounds him, and the horſe leaps three times over the pound, which is as high as it uſed to be, and therefore he who diſtrained ties the horſe to a poſt in the pound, by reaſon whereof he ſtrangles himſelf, the owner may have an action of treſpaſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 673.

Diſtreſſes for rent being in nature of pledges, and no power to ſell or diſpoſe of them, in the perſon diſtraining, they oftentimes proved of little or no benefit towards haſtening the payment of the rent; for remedy whereof it has been enacted by ſtat. 2 Will. & M. c. 5. ſect. 2. That where any goods or chattels ſhall be diſtrained for any rent, reſerved and due upon any demiſe, leaſe, or contract whatſoever, and the tenant or owner of the goods ſo diſtrained ſhall not within five days next after ſuch diſtreſs taken, and notice thereof (with the cauſe of ſuch taking) left at the chief manſion-houſe, or other moſt notorious place on the premiſſes, charged with the rent diſtrained for, replevy the ſame with ſufficient ſurety to be given to the ſheriff according to law; that then after ſuch diſtreſs and notice as aforeſaid, and expiration of the ſaid five days, the perſon diſtraining ſhall and may with the ſheriff, or under-ſheriff of the county, or with the conſtable of the hundred, pariſh, or place where ſuch diſtreſs ſhall be taken (who are hereby required to be aiding and aſſiſting therein) cauſe the goods and chattels ſo diſtrained to be appraiſed by two ſworn appraiſers (whom ſuch ſheriff, under ſheriff, or conſtable, are thereby impowered to ſwear) to appraiſe the ſame truly, according to the beſt of their underſtanding; and after ſuch appraiſment ſhall and may lawfully ſell the goods and chattels ſo diſtrained, for the beſt price that can be gotten for the ſame, towards ſatisfaction of the rent for which the ſaid goods and chattels ſhall be diſtrained, and of the charges of ſuch diſtreſs, appraiſement and ſale, leaving the overplus (if any) in the hands of the ſheriff, under-ſheriff, or conſtable, for the owner's uſe.

Sect. 4. And upon any pound-breach or reſcous of goods or chattels diſtrained for rent, the perſon or perſons grieved thereby ſhall, in a ſpecial action upon the caſe, for the wrong thereby ſuſtained, recover treble damages and coſts of ſuit againſt the offender or offenders in any ſuch reſcous or pound-breach, any or either of them, or againſt the owners of the ſaid goods diſtrained, in caſe the ſame be afterwards found to have come to his uſe or poſſeſſion.

Sect. 5. Provided, that in caſe any ſuch diſtreſs and ſale be made by virtue or colour of this act, for rent pretended to be arrear and due, where in truth no rent is arrear, or due to the perſon or perſons diſtraining, or to him or them in whoſe name or names, or right, ſuch diſtreſs ſhall be taken; that then the owner of ſuch goods or chattels diſtrained, and ſold as aforeſaid, his executors or adminiſtrators ſhall and may, by action of treſpaſs, or upon the caſe, to be brought againſt the perſon or perſons ſo diſtraining, any or either of them, his, or their executors or adminiſtrators, recover double the value of the goods or chattels ſo diſtrained and ſold, together with full coſts of ſuit.

By ſtat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſect. 10. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon lawfully taking any diſtreſs for rent, to impound or ſecure the diſtreſs on ſuch part of the premiſſes chargeable with the rent as ſhall be moſt convenient, and to appraiſe, ſell and diſpoſe of the ſame upon the premiſſes, as any perſon may now do off the premiſſes, by virtue of 2 W. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 5. or of 4 Geo. 2. cap. 28. and it ſhall be lawful for any perſon to come and go to and from ſuch part of the premiſſes, to view, appraiſe and buy, and alſo to carry off the ſame on account of the purchaſer; and if any pound-breach or reſcous be made of goods diſtrained for rent ſecured by virtue of this act, the perſon aggrieved ſhall have like remedy as in caſes of pound-breach or reſcous by the ſaid ſtatute.

3. Where the diſtreſs ſhall be deemed wrongful and exceſſive; and of diſtraining for fines and amercements.

By the ſtatute of Marlbridge, diſtreſſes muſt be reaſonable, and not too great.

If forty ſheep be taken for 2 d. and ſixteen oxen for 9 d. this is exceſſive. 1 Rol. Abr. 674.

So if two oxen are diſtrained for four pair of gloves, ten ſheep for one pair, and ten for another, it is an exceſſive diſtreſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 674.

But if a man takes five horſes joined in a cart for 3 d. rent, this is not exceſſive for the intirety. 8 Hen. 4. 15. 1 Vent. 183. S. C.

So if the lord diſtrain an ox or an horſe for a penny, if there were no other diſtreſs upon the land holden, the diſtreſs is not exceſſive; but if there were ſheep or ſwine, &c. then the taking of the ox or horſe is exceſſive, becauſe he might have taken a beaſt of leſs value. 2 Inſt. 107.

If for ten pound rent due at one day, a man diſtrains goods of the value of 40 s. only, and at the time of taking the diſtreſs there are goods of a ſufficient value upon the premiſſes, he cannot, for the ſame rent, diſtrain again; for it was his folly, that at the firſt he diſtrained no more; but if there be rent in arrear at ſeveral days, a diſtreſs may be taken for what was due at the other days. Moor 7. pl. 26. Cro. Eliz. 13. Cro. Diſtreſs, 98.

If a diſtreſs be taken of goods without cauſe, the owner may reſcue them. Co. Lit. 47.

But if a diſtreſs be taken without cauſe, and put into a pound, the owner cannot break the pound and take them out, becauſe they are in the cuſtody of the law. Co. Lit. 47. b. 1 And. 31,

If the lord, or another that has a rent, diſtrains ſeveral times for his ſervice or rent, where none is in arrear, the tenant may by the common law have an aſſiſe de ſovent diſtreſs. F. N. B. 178.

or not; otherwiſe of the leſſor, for he ought to repair them, elſe he will have advantage of his own wrong. 2 Saund. 289, 290.

If a man, that is driving his cattle to London to ſell, aſks leave of the leſſor to put his cattle into the ground for a night, and he giving him leave ſo to do, with the conſent of the leſſee, and the cattle are put in accordingly, the leſſor is not concluded by this licence, but that he may diſtrain them for rent; adjudged upon demurrer; and it not appearing by the pleading that the ground belonged to a common inn, it came not in queſtion whether in that caſe they might have been diſtrained. 2 Vent. 50. 3 Lev. 260, 261.

Stat. 11 Geo, 2 cap. 19. ſect. 1. In caſe any tenant or leſſee of lands or tenements, upon the demiſe whereof any rent is payable, ſhall fraudulently or clandeſtinely carry off his goods, to prevent the landlord from diſtraining; it ſhall be lawful for every landlord within England, Wales, or Berwick, or any perſon by him impowered, within thirty days next enſuing ſuch carrying off, to ſeize ſuch goods wherever the ſame ſhall be found, as a diſtreſs for the rent, and the ſame to ſell or diſpoſe of, as if the ſaid goods had been diſtrained upon ſuch premiſſes.

Sect. 2. Provided that no landlord ſhall ſeize goods ſold bona fide, and for a valuable conſideration, to any perſon not privy to ſuch fraud.

Sect. 3. If any ſuch tenant ſhall fraudulently remove his goods, or if any perſon ſhall knowingly aſſiſt ſuch tenant in fraudulently conveying away his goods, or in concealing the ſame, all perſons ſo offending ſhall forfeit to the landlord, from whoſe eſtate ſuch goods were carried off, double the value of the goods, to be recovered by action of debt in any of his Majeſty's courts at Weſtminſter, or in the courts of ſeſſion in the counties palatine, or in the courts of grand ſeſſions in Wales.

Sect. 4. Where the goods carried off ſhall not exceed the value of 50 l. it ſhall be lawful for the landlord, his bailiff, ſervant or agent, to exhibit a complaint in writing againſt ſuch offenders before two juſtices of peace reſiding near the place, not being intereſted in the tenements; who may ſummon the parties, examine the fact, and all witneſſes upon oath, or if quakers, upon affirmation; and in a ſummary way determine whether ſuch perſon be guilty of the offence, and inquire of the value of the goods by them fraudulently carried off or concealed; and upon proof of the offence, by order of the ſaid juſtices, may judge the offenders to pay double the value of the goods to ſuch landlord, his bailiff, ſervant or agent, as the juſtices ſhall appoint; and in caſe the offenders having notice of ſuch order ſhall neglect ſo to do, ſhall by warrant levy the ſame by diſtreſs and ſale of goods; and for want of diſtreſs may commit the offenders to the houſe of correction, to be kept to hard labour for ſix months, unleſs the money be ſooner ſatisfied.

Sect. 5. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon aggrieved by ſuch order of the two juſtices to appeal to the next quarter ſeſſions, who ſhall hear and determine ſuch appeal, and give coſts to either party.

Sect. 6. Where the party appealing ſhall enter into a recognizance with ſurety in double the ſum ordered, with condition to appear at ſuch quarter-ſeſſions, the order of the two juſtices ſhall not be executed in the mean time.

Sect. 7 Where any goods fraudulently carried away by any teneant, his ſervant or agent, or other perſon aſſiſting, ſhall be put in any place locked up or ſecured, ſo as to prevent ſuch goods from being ſeized for rent, it ſhall be lawful for the landlord, his ſteward, bailiff, or other perſon impowered to ſeize for rent ſuch goods, (firſt calling to his aſſiſtance the conſtable, headborough, borſholder, or other peace officer, of the place where the ſame ſhall be ſuſpected to be concealed, who are required to aſſiſt; and in caſe of a dwelling houſe, oath being alſo made before ſome juſtice of peace of a reaſonable ground to ſuſpect that ſuch goods are there) in the daytime to break open ſuch houſe, &c. and ſeize ſuch goods for the rent, as they might have done if ſuch goods had been put in any open place.

Sect. 8. It ſhall be lawful for every landlord, his ſteward, bailiff, receiver or other perſon impowered by him, to ſeize, as a diſtreſs for rent, any cattle or ſtock of their tenants feeding upon any common appendant, or appurtenant to any part of the premiſſes demiſed, and alſo to ſeize corn and graſs, hops, roots, fruits or other product, growing on the eſtate demiſed, as diſtreſs for rent; and the ſame to cut, gather and lay up, when ripe, in the barn or other proper place on the premiſſes; and in caſe there ſhall be no proper place, then in any other barn, or proper place which ſuch landlord ſhall procure as near as may be to the premiſſes; and in convenient time to appraiſe, ſell or diſpoſe of the ſame, toward ſatisfaction of the rent, in the ſame manner as other goods may be ſeized and diſpoſed of, the appraiſement to be taken when gathered and made.

Sect. 9. Provided, that notice of the place where the goods ſhall be lodged, ſhall within one week be given to ſuch tenant, or left at his laſt place of abode; and if after any diſtreſs for rent ſo taken, of corn, graſs or other product growing, and before the ſame ſhall be ripe and cut, the tenant, his executors, adminiſtators or aſſigns, ſhall pay to the landlord, or to the ſteward, or other perſon imployed to receive the rents, the whole rent in arrear, together with coſts, ſuch diſtreſs ſhall ceaſe, and the corn, graſs or other product diſtrained, ſhall be delivered up to the tenant, &c.

Sect. 19. Where any diſtreſs ſhall be made for rent due, and any irregularity or unlawful act ſhall be afterwards done by the party diſtraining or his agents, the diſtreſs ſhall not be therefore deemed unlawful, nor the party a treſpaſſer ab initio; but the party grieved ſhall recover ſatisfaction for the ſpecial damages ſuſtained thereby, and no more, in an action of treſpaſs, or on the caſe; the plaintiff to recover full coſts.

By ſtat. 2 Will. & M. c. 5. ſect. 3. Any perſon, having rent arrear, may ſeize and ſecure any ſheaves or cocks of corn, or corn looſe, or in the ſtraw, or hay in any barn or granary, or upon an hovel, ſtack or rick, or upon any part of the land charged with ſuch rent, or to lock up or detain the ſame in the place where the ſame ſhall be found, in the nature of a diſtreſs, till the ſame ſhall be replevied, upon ſuch ſecurity to be given as aforeſaid; and in default of replevying the ſame within the time aforeſaid, to ſell the ſame after ſuch appraiſement thereof to be made, ſo as ſuch corn, grain, or hay, be not removed by the perſon diſtraining, to the damage of the owner thereof, out of the place where the ſame ſhall be found and ſeized; but be kept there as impounded, till the ſame ſhall be replevied or ſold as aforeſaid.

2. Time and manner of diſtraining, and what is to be done with the diſtreſs.

A diſtreſs for a rent-ſervice or rent-charge cannot be in the night, but one may diſtrain cattle damage feaſant in the night, otherwiſe they may be gone before morning. Co. Lit. 142. 7 Co. 7. a. 9 Co. 66. Latch 211. 4 Leon. 218.

By the ſame ſtatute, cap. 15. it is enacted, "That from thenceforth it ſhall be lawful for no man for any manner of cauſe to take diſtreſſes out of his fee, or in the King's highway, or in the common ſtreet, but only to the King and his officers, having ſpecial authority ſo to do."

If the lord coming to diſtrain hath the view of the beaſts within his fee, and before he can diſtrain them the tenant chaſes them into the highway, the lord, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of Marlbridge, cap. 15. may diſtrain them there. 2 Inſt. 132.

A diſtreſs for rent may be taken in a houſe, if the doors be open; ſo it may be taken out of a window. 1 Rol. Abr. 671.

By the Common law, a man might have driven a diſtreſs whither he pleaſed, which was very miſchievous, Firſt, Becauſe the tenant was bound to give the beaſts ſuſtenance, if impounded in an open pound, and being driven into another county, he could not by intendment of law know where they were. Secondly, He could not tell where to have a replevy. 2 Inſt. 106. But now by the ſtatute of Marlbridge, made 52 H. 3. c. 4. none ſhall cauſe a diſtreſs to be driven out of the county where taken, on pain of fine, &c.

Alſo by the ſtatute of the 1 & 2 Ph. & Mary, cap. 12. "No diſtreſs ſhall be driven out of the hundred, rape, wapentake, or lathe, where taken, except to a pound overt within the ſame ſhire, not above three miles diſtant from the place where taken, and no diſtreſs ſhall be impounded in ſeveral places whereby the owner ſhall be conſtrained to ſue ſeveral replevies; upon pain that every perſon offending ſhall forfeit to the party grieved 5 l. and treble damages.

Diſtreſſes for rent being in nature of pledges, and no power to ſell or diſpoſe of them, in the perſon diſtraining, they oftentimes proved of little or no benefit towards haſtening the payment of the rent; for remedy whereof it has been enacted by ſtat. 2 Will. & M. c. 5. ſect. 2. That where any goods or chattels ſhall be diſtrained for any rent, reſerved and due upon any demiſe, leaſe, or contract whatſoever, and the tenant or owner of the goods ſo diſtrained ſhall not within five days next after ſuch diſtreſs taken, and notice thereof (with the cauſe of ſuch taking) left at the chief manſion-houſe, or other moſt notorious place on the premiſſes, charged with the rent diſtrained for, replevy the ſame with ſufficient ſurety to be given to the ſheriff according to law; that then after ſuch diſtreſs and notice as aforeſaid, and expiration of the ſaid five days, the perſon diſtraining ſhall and may with the ſheriff, or under-ſheriff of the county, or with the conſtable of the hundred, pariſh, or place where ſuch diſtreſs ſhall be taken (who are hereby required to be aiding and aſſiſting therein) cauſe the goods and chattels ſo diſtrained to be appraiſed by two ſworn appraiſers (whom ſuch ſheriff, under ſheriff, or conſtable, are thereby impowered to ſwear) to appraiſe the ſame truly, according to the beſt of their underſtanding; and after ſuch appraiſment ſhall and may lawfully ſell the goods and chattels ſo diſtrained, for the beſt price that can be gotten for the ſame, towards ſatisfaction of the rent for which the ſaid goods and chattels ſhall be diſtrained, and of the charges of ſuch diſtreſs, appraiſement and ſale, leaving the overplus (if any) in the hands of the ſheriff, under-ſheriff, or conſtable, for the owner's uſe.

Sect. 4. And upon any pound-breach or reſcous of goods or chattels diſtrained for rent, the perſon or perſons grieved thereby ſhall, in a ſpecial action upon the caſe, for the wrong thereby ſuſtained, recover treble damages and coſts of ſuit againſt the offender or offenders in any ſuch reſcous or pound-breach, any or either of them, or againſt the owners of the ſaid goods diſtrained, in caſe the ſame be afterwards found to have come to his uſe or poſſeſſion.

Sect. 5. Provided, that in caſe any ſuch diſtreſs and ſale be made by virtue or colour of this act, for rent pretended to be arrear and due, where in truth no rent is arrear, or due to the perſon or perſons diſtraining, or to him or them in whoſe name or names, or right, ſuch diſtreſs ſhall be taken; that then the owner of ſuch goods or chattels diſtrained, and ſold as aforeſaid, his executors or adminiſtrators ſhall and may, by action of treſpaſs, or upon the caſe, to be brought againſt the perſon or perſons ſo diſtraining, any or either of them, his, or their executors or adminiſtrators, recover double the value of the goods or chattels ſo diſtrained and ſold, together with full coſts of ſuit.

By ſtat. 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. ſect. 10. It ſhall be lawful for any perſon lawfully taking any diſtreſs for rent, to impound or ſecure the diſtreſs on ſuch part of the premiſſes chargeable with the rent as ſhall be moſt convenient, and to appraiſe, ſell and diſpoſe of the ſame upon the premiſſes, as any perſon may now do off the premiſſes, by virtue of 2 W. & Mar. ſtat. 1. cap. 5. or of 4 Geo. 2. cap. 28. and it ſhall be lawful for any perſon to come and go to and from ſuch part of the premiſſes, to view, appraiſe and buy, and alſo to carry off the ſame on account of the purchaſer; and if any pound-breach or reſcous be made of goods diſtrained for rent ſecured by virtue of this act, the perſon aggrieved ſhall have like remedy as in caſes of pound-breach or reſcous by the ſaid ſtatute.

3. Where the diſtreſs ſhall be deemed wrongful and exceſſive; and of diſtraining for fines and amercements.

By the ſtatute of Marlbridge, diſtreſſes muſt be reaſonable, and not too great.

If forty ſheep be taken for 2 d. and ſixteen oxen for 9 d. this is exceſſive. 1 Rol. Abr. 674.

So if two oxen are diſtrained for four pair of gloves, ten ſheep for one pair, and ten for another, it is an exceſſive diſtreſs. 1 Rol. Abr. 674.

But if a man takes five horſes joined in a cart for 3 d. rent, this is not exceſſive for the intirety. 8 Hen. 4. 15. 1 Vent. 183. S. C.

So if the lord diſtrain an ox or an horſe for a penny, if there were no other diſtreſs upon the land holden, the diſtreſs is not exceſſive; but if there were ſheep or ſwine, &c. then the taking of the ox or horſe is exceſſive, becauſe he might have taken a beaſt of leſs value. 2 Inſt. 107.

If for ten pound rent due at one day, a man diſtrains goods of the value of 40 s. only, and at the time of taking the diſtreſs there are goods of a ſufficient value upon the premiſſes, he cannot, for the ſame rent, diſtrain again; for it was his folly, that at the firſt he diſtrained no more; but if there be rent in arrear at ſeveral days, a diſtreſs may be taken for what was due at the other days. Moor 7. pl. 26. Cro. Eliz. 13. Cro. Diſtreſs, 98.

If a diſtreſs be taken of goods without cauſe, the owner may reſcue them. Co. Lit. 47.

But if a diſtreſs be taken without cauſe, and put into a pound, the owner cannot break the pound and take them out, becauſe they are in the cuſtody of the law. Co. Lit. 47. b. 1 And. 31,

If the lord, or another that has a rent, diſtrains ſeveral times for his ſervice or rent, where none is in arrear, the tenant may by the common law have an aſſiſe de ſovent diſtreſs. F. N. B. 178.

This action lay at Common law, in which the writ is general and count special, that the lord distrained, &c. and judgment, not that the demandant recuperet seisinam, for he hath that, but quod teneat absque multiplici districtione. 8 Co. 50. a. b.

Of common right, a distress is incident to every fine and amercement in the sheriff's torn or court leet, whether the same belong to the King or to a subject; if the offence, for which they were imposed, be of common right incident to the jurisdiction of such courts. 1 Rol. Abr. 665. 11 Co. 45. a. 1 Co. 41. Cro. Jac. 382.

But if such offences were only the neglect of a duty created by custom, it is questionable whether it doth not require the like custom for a distress, tho' the duty be of a publick nature; as if there be a leet belonging to the manor of A. and by custom, time out of mind, the inhabitants of B. have used to send a constable to the said leet, and they make default, upon which they are fined by the steward; and whether a distress could be taken for this fine, without a special custom to distrain, was doubted; and the case adjourned, no special custom to distrain being alledged. 1 Vent. 105. Raym. 204. 2 Keb. 701, 739, 745.

But if it be for the private benefit of a subject, no distress is incident to it without a special custom. 1 Rol. Rep. 76. 11 Co. 44. b. 2 Hawk. P. C. 60.

The sheriff or lord of a leet may, for such fines or amercements, distrain the goods of the offender in any lands within the county or precinct of the leet, of whomsoever they shall be holden, except only in such lands which shall be in the King's hands; these being wholly out of the jurisdiction of such courts. 1 Rol. Abr. 670.

And such a distress may be taken in the highway, for the statute of Marlbridge, cap. 5. which prohibits the taking of a distress there, is to be intended only of distresses taken for services due by way of tenure of lands. 2 Inst. 131.

Such fines and amercements being for a personal offence, no stranger's beast can lawfully be distrained for them, though they have been Levant and Couchant on the lands of the offender. Bro. Distress 3. F. N. B. 100. Owen 146.

It seems to be agreed, that where any such court is in the King's hands, the goods distrained for such fines and amercements may lawfully be sold, after they have been kept a reasonable time, as the space of sixteen days; and it seems the better opinion, that where any such court is in the hands of a common person, if the goods were distrained for an offence of a publick nature, they may be sold of common right, without any special custom for that purpose. 8 Co. 41. b. 1 Rol. Rep. 76. Noy 17. 1 Bulst. 53.

No bailiff can lawfully distrain for any such fine or amercement, without a special warrant for so doing; which must be set forth by him in an avowry or justification of such distress. 8 Co. 50. a. b.

Distress for penalties. By stat. 27 Geo. 2. cap. 20. sect. 1. In all cases where any justice of the peace is or shall be required or impowered by any act of parliament to issue a warrant of distress for the levying any penalty inflicted, or any sum of money directed to be paid by such act; it shall be lawful for the justice granting such warrant, therein to order and direct the goods and chattels so to be distrained, to be sold and disposed of within a certain time to be limitted in such warrant, so as such time be not less than four days, nor more than eight days, unless the penalty, or sum of money for which such distress shall be made, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping such distress, be sooner paid.

Sect. 2. And the officer making such distress, shall and may deduct the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling such distress, and the overplus (if any) after such charges, and also the said penalty, or sum of money, shall be satisfied and paid, shall be returned on demand, to the owner of the goods so distrained; and the officer executing such warrant, if required, shall shew the same to the person whose goods are distrained, and shall suffer a copy thereof to be taken.

Sect. 3. But this shall not extend to alter any provisions relating to distresses to be made for the payment of tithes and church rates by the people called quakers, contained in the acts of the 7 & 8 Will. 3. cap. 34. and the 1 Geo. 1 stat. 2. cap. 6.

Distress of the King. By the Common law no subject can distrain out of his fee or seignory; unless cattle are driven to a place out of the fee, to hinder the lord's distress, &c. But the King may distrain for rent-service, or fee-farm, in all the lands of the tenant wheresoever they be; not only on lands held of himself, but of others; where his tenant is in actual possession, and the land manured with his own beasts, &c. 2 Inst. 132. 2 Danv. Abr. 643.

Distress of a town. If a town be assessed to a certain sum, a distress may be taken in any part, subject to the whole duty. 2 Danv. 643.

Distribution of intestates estates, According to the 22 & 23 Car. 2 may be sued for as well in the Chancery, as in the Ecclesiastical court: And if the persons appointed to have it, die before a distribution made, their shares go to their executors, &c. 2 Chanc. Rep. 374. where the remainder or surplus of an estate, not disposed of by will, shall go and remain to the next of kin, by the statute of distributions. 2 Vern. 361, 676. See Administrator, Executor. and Intestates.

District (Districtus) A territory or place of jurisdiction; the place in which a man hath the power of distraining, or the circuit or territory wherein one may be compelled to appear. Briton, cap. 120. where we say, Hors de son fee; others say, Extra districtum suum.

Districiones, Distraints, or goods distrained, or distresses, kept in custody till payment and full satisfaction be made.——Possunt nos & successores nostros & prædictas omnes terras——distringere ad solutionem memoratam, & districtiones retinere quosque plenarie fuerit satisfactum. Paroch. Antiq. p. 344.

Distringas, Is a writ directed to the sheriff, or any other officer, commanding him to distrain one for debt to the King, &c. or for his non-appearance at a day. See great diversity of this writ in the Table of Register Judic. verbo Distringas. This was sometimes of old called constringas, as appears by this writ, Lib. Ramis. sect. 227. Henricus Rex Angliæ hominibus abbatis de Rameſia salutem. Præcipio quod cito & juste reddatis abbati domino vestro, quicquid ei debetis in censu, & firma, & debitis, & placitis, sicut juste monstrare poterit quod ei debeatis. Quod si nolueritis, ipse vos inde constringat per pecuniam vestram. Teste Chancellar. apud Glouceſter. By pecuniam vestram, in those days, was understood bona & catalla. Cowell, edit. 1727.

Distringas juratores, Is a writ directed to the sheriff, to distrain upon a jury to appear; and return issues on their lands, &c. for non-appearance. Where an issue in fact is joined to be tried by a jury, which is returned by the sheriff in a panel upon a venire facias for that purpose; thereupon there goes forth a writ of distringas jurator', to the sheriff, commanding him to have their bodies in court, &c. at the return of the writ. 1 Lill. Abr. 483. And the writ of distringas jurat' ought to be to the sheriff so timely, that he may warn the jury to appear four days before the writ is returnable, if the jurors live within forty miles of the place of trial; and eight days if they live farther off. Ibid. 484. There may be an alias, or pluries distringas jur. where the jury doth not appear.
